LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

DEBATES AND PROCEEDINGS

OF THE

FOURTH SESSION OF THE TWENTY-FOURTH LEGISLATURE OF THE PROVINCE OF ONTARIO, CONVENED ON THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1954, AT THREE O'CLOCK P.M.

MR. ALEX LEWIS, CLERK

Thursday, the eleventh day of February, 1954, being the first day of the Fourth Session of the Twenty-fourth Legislature of the Province of Ontario for the Despatch of Business pursuant to a Proclamation of the Honourable Louis O. Breithaupt, Lieutenant-Governor, of the Province.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1954

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met,

The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province then entered the House and, being seated on the Throne, was pleased to open the Session by the following gracious Speech.

HON. L. O. BREITHAUPT
(Lieutenant-Governor): Mr. Speaker, and Members of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario:

It is with special pleasure that I welcome you today as you resume your duties in this Fourth Session of the Twenty-fourth Legislature of the Province of Ontario. Since we were last gathered here, the Coronation of our beloved Queen, Elizabeth the Second, inaugurated the second Elizabethan Age, amid the rejoicing of her subjects in our own Province and across her wide realm.

We meet today under conditions which we hope assure the lessening of international tension. After protracted negotiations, a truce has finally been achieved in Korea, from which we all hope will come an enduring peace. Meanwhile it is a source of thankfulness that so many families in Ontario have welcomed back to their homes members of the armed forces who so valiantly served and fought to defeat aggression. We are proud of the contribution Canadians have made to this demonstration that the free nations of the world can, and will, unite and make sacrifices in a collective endeavour to prevent the subjugation of a people by force of arms. We trust that in the days to come we shall be able to devote our talents and resources to the ways of peace.

In a year marked by notable developments throughout Canada, the Province of Ontario has continued its spectacular economic growth and progress. Expansion has continued in nearly all phases of economic activity and in almost all parts of the province. New capital investment has been at the highest level ever reached in Ontario. Much new productive capacity has been brought into operation. Advances have been made in the modernization of equipment and in the application of scientific methods which have endowed our industry with great diversity and strength. Population has continued to grow at an unusually high rate, adding substantially to the size of both our labour force and our domestic market. The growth and development of Ontario have brought in their train many problems which will engage your consideration.

The impending construction of the St. Lawrence River power project, the last obstacles to which we are quite sure will shortly be cleared, will require legislation to give effect to plans now being prepared. The low-cost hydro-electric power which can be developed from this project will greatly augment our power resources and facilitate our economic expansion. Since the last meeting of this Legislature, great progress has been made towards the construction of a natural gas pipe line from Alberta and the western provinces to Ontario and other parts of central Canada. Legislation enabling the province to deal with the new problems which will arise from the importation of this new source of fuel and power will be introduced. The development of the St. Lawrence and the gas resources of the Canadian West will create new employment opportunities and fortify our long-term economic development.

Last year, faced with demands for new highways resulting from our ever-increasing highway traffic, and requirements for other public projects, the Government undertook a major expansion of its capital construction programme. That programme will be continued in many phases—highways, public buildings, hospitals, including the new Cancer Institute, and conservation projects.

During your deliberations here, you will be asked to consider and approve a legislative and financial programme for the social and economic betterment of the people.

New proposals will be made for amending the province's welfare legislation. It is gratifying to know that the pensions for disabled persons, in effect in Ontario in the last two years, are to be extended by Federal action across Canada. The Ontario Disabled Persons' Allowances Act, passed here at the 1952 Session, pioneered a new advance in welfare in Canada and is serving as a model for a nation-wide plan. Legislation will be introduced to consolidate in one act The Children's Protection Act, The Adoption Act and The Children of Unmarried Parents Act. This will bring Ontario's child welfare legislation into conformity with the best in modern practice.

The House will be asked to approve a new provincial parks policy, which will increase the number of parks and afford to our people fresh opportunities for relaxation and enjoyment among the natural beauties of the Province. This measure will assure that the people of Ontario, through a public parks system, will have reserved for them now and in the future the means of enjoying the beauties of our countryside.

Many advances have been made in the field of health, as is evidenced in the reduction in the incidence of tuberculosis and other infectious diseases and the steadily rising longevity of our people. You will be asked to consider measures providing for advances on many fronts in the health programme, particularly in the battles against cancer and poliomyelitis. Further assistance will be given to our hospitals. You will be asked to give attention to means for eradicating noxious weeds which cause such discomfort, loss of efficiency and absence from work to sufferers from hay fever. New rehabilitation measures will be recommended, and as one of the steps it is proposed to appoint a co-ordinator who will work with the Departments of Health, Welfare, Education and Labour with respect to those services best suited for re-establishing in positions of useful employment men and women who have some physical handicap and require special assistance.

The work of the committees of the Assembly will be extended in conformity with the procedure introduced at the beginning of the Twenty-fourth Legislature. Very important matters will be submitted to the Committee on Agriculture for its consideration. Among these, will be an act for the stabilization of the Dairy Industry. This Act will embody features of The Milk Control Act, The Dairy Products Act, The Milk and Cream Act and sections of The Farm Products Marketing Act. Provisions will also be submitted for the over-all management and co-ordination of all activities relating to dairy producers. As these proposals involve major changes in present legislation, they will be submitted to the Committee on Agriculture for the most thorough consideration.

The work commenced under The Rural Telephone Systems Act of 1951 to improve telephone services for the people of the rural parts of Ontario is now entering a new and important phase of its operations. In order that this work will be further advanced, legislation will be introduced establishing the Ontario Telephone Authority. Steps will be taken to continue the great progress made in supplying electric power to our rural people. In excess of eighty-five per cent. of all rural dwellers in Ontario are now supplied with electric power. This places our Province in the forefront of the world in rural electrification—a service which has contributed so vitally to the betterment of the standard of living and the way of life of our people.

With the completion of the forest inventory over a vast section of Ontario, we are now entering the second stage of a sound forest management policy based on sustained yield. This policy embraces the processing of our provincial resources in Ontario, the elimination of indiscriminate cutting, the integration of operations to secure the maximum value from sawlogs and pulpwood, and the provision of roads which will not only strengthen our forest protection and conservation services, but make possible the commercial utilization of mature or over-mature stands which are at present inaccessible. A White Paper on forestry, setting out long-term aims and objectives, will be submitted for your consideration. It represents the long-range thinking of recognized authorities on this important subject and will be referred to the Committee on Lands and Forests for study. Amendments will be introduced to The Crown Timber Act, 1952, designed to effect the regeneration of suitable species on cut-over areas of Crown Lands. Other amendments will be introduced to the several acts relating to conservation of forest, fish and wild life, and will be referred to the appropriate committees.

Owing to the increase in the population of the Province, a measure for redistribution affecting the membership of the House will be submitted for your consideration.

At the last Session of the Legislature, Select Committees of the House were set up dealing with The Companies Act, Election laws, Indian affairs, The Cemeteries Act, Boundary Lake and Water Levels, and Reform Institutions. Gratitude is expressed to the members of these Committees for the diligent manner in which they have devoted themselves to their important tasks. Reports will be received from these Committees and action taken. Procedures in the House will be revised to enable the convening of the Committees of the House at a much earlier date than heretofore, so that the Members may have time for consideration of the matters referred to them for review.

Legislation covering a wide field of other subjects of great interest and concern to our people will be introduced. This legislation will include the consolidation into three Acts of eleven Acts relating to education. These three new Acts will be The Department of Education Act, The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act and The Schools Administration Act. Part one of The Municipal Act will be revised. Amendments will be introduced to The Assessment Act, The Labour Relations Act, The Building Trades Protection Act, The Agricultural Societies Act, The Bees Act, The Conservation Act, The Community Centres Act, The Mental Hospitals Act, The Mental Health Act, The Public Hospitals Act, The Public Health Amendment Act, The Cemeteries Act, The Pharmacy Act, The Charitable Institutions Act, The Hydro-Electric Power Commission Act, The Trees Act, The Wolf and Bear Bounty Act, The Mining Act, The Mining Tax Act, The Planning Act, The Housing Development Act, The Corporation Act, and The Provincial Aid to Drainage Act.

The Public Accounts for the last completed fiscal year will be submitted to you for your study and consideration. It is gratifying to know that the financial position of the province is strong, and that the confidence which is reflected in the strength of the province's credit enables us to meet our requirements in the future; sure in the knowledge that we have the ability to carry them out.

At this time in referring to you your important duties may I express the hope that your deliberations and decisions will be guided by Divine Providence.

The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor was then pleased to retire from the Chamber.

Prayers.

3.20 O'CLOCK P.M.

MR. SPEAKER: I have obtained a copy of His Honour's Speech, which in order to prevent mistakes, I will read (Dispensed with).

THE TERRITORIAL DIVISIONS ACT

Hon. Mr. Dunbar moved first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Territorial Divisions Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

Hon. L. M. Frost (Premier) moved that the Speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor to this House be taken into consideration tomorrow.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, there are some matters to which I would like to refer, and I know that my good friend, the Leader of the Opposition, would like to join with me, and have something to say with regard to these matters.

We are met here today with two very familiar faces missing from this House, one is John Duncan McPhee, the hon. member for East Simcoe, who has passed into the Great Beyond.

Doctor McPhee was born of a pioneer family at the historic Narrows near Orillia, my native town, and I have always claimed Doctor McPhee as a fellow townsman, in addition to being a great friend during my lifetime.

He served his day and generation well, as a physician and healer of the ill, as Councillor and Reeve of his municipality, of Port McNicoll, and for some ten years or more, as a member of this Assembly for East Simcoe.

He served with great ability and had great qualities of heart and mind. We knew him as a quiet and self-effacing man, a good friend, a wise counsellor, one who served all classes and creeds and kinds of people to the best of his great abilities.

Doctor McPhee was a physician. He and his lovely wife knew his condition and his ailment, yet his zeal for service in his profession and in his public capacity led him to live fearlessly. On one of the last occasions on which we saw him, my wife and I were with Doctor McPhee and his wife in St. Paul's Cathedral in London, at the time of the Coronation of Her Majesty.

In reference to his determination to live his life, and to live it well, and to live it fearlessly, I am reminded of Browning's thought that "the last is the best," and of Kipling, who said:

"If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew

To serve your turn long after they are gone,

And so hold on when there is nothing in you

Except the Will which says to them
'Hold on!'"

That was John Duncan McPhee, our good friend from East Simcoe and Port McNicoll, who is very much missed in the House today.

His fine personality has left a blank which will be very, very difficult to fill.

Another familiar face which will be missed is that of William Limburg Houck, who, for nearly twenty years, with some short intermissions, was the hon. member for Niagara Falls in this House. He resigned last year to become a member of the Federal Parliament, I may say, a different but not a higher service than here, because I believe that services, municipal, provincial and federal, are all on the same level of importance, but Mr. Houck felt his services could be given best to his country in the Federal Parliament, and he is there today.

I would like to acknowledge the distinguished service which he performed for his province, and as a member, for his constituency. For some years, he was the Vice-Chairman of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission, a man of genial presence, and engaging personality, who always made his contribution here, and he will be missed, quite aside from any party or other connection or affiliation, because of his great qualities of friendship and understanding.

Today, we may refer to him more formally, but we all had the highest regard for "Bill" Houck.

At the openings of the Legislature, it is always a very great pleasure to have with us former Premiers of this province, and today we have all five of the surviving Premiers of Ontario—five in number. I think this is the first occasion in history, insofar as the recollection of those here which goes back very many years indeed, when all of the former Premiers of this province have been present at the opening of Parliament.

I well remember—as many of you will—some four years ago, when we had all but two. At that time, the hon. Mr. Hepburn and the hon. Mr. Drew were unable to be present with us.

As a matter of interest, there have been fifteen former Prime Ministers since Confederation. That, of course, does not refer to the days between the first Parliament of Upper Canada, which met on the banks of the Niagara River on the 17th of September, 1792, up to the Confederation year of 1867. Since that time, 1867, when Ontario became the Ontario of today, and one of the provinces of Canada, we have had fifteen Premiers. I shall refer to those who have passed on.

The first was John Sandfield Macdonald, 1867-1871, the member for the Seat now represented by the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley), and, as a matter of fact, leading at that time a type of coalition government.

He was followed by Edward Blake,

1871-1872. He was a very brilliant man indeed. He remained in office only for a short time, leaving to become a member of the Federal House, where he served for many years, and was afterwards in the British Parliament. Mr. Blake's brother, S. H. Blake, was a well-known figure in the city thirty or thirty-five years ago.

He was followed by a very great person, Sir Oliver Mowat, 1872-1896. Sir Oliver was the Premier of this province for twenty-four years, and also the Attorney-General during that period. He fought many constitutional cases before the Privy Council, and in his day, wrote many of the basic statutes of Ontario.

He was followed by Arthur Sturgis Hardy, 1896-1899.

Then came Sir George Ross, 1899-1905, Sir James Pliny Whitney, 1905-1914, Sir William Hearst, 1914-1919, George Howard Ferguson, 1923-1930,—I am not giving them now in the order of the periods during which they held office—who is also deceased, who was Premier from 1923 to 1930.

Gordon Daniel Conant, 1942-1943.

I am very glad to say that the remaining five are here today. Seated in front of the treasury benches we have three of these distinguished citizens, and we are privileged to also have two sitting in the House.

They are, in order of office, Ernest Charles Drury, who was the Premier some 35 years ago. Mr. Drury is here today. He is still serving his country in his community as the sheriff of that great county of Simcoe, and as the local registrar, and county court clerk. Despite the passage of time, he still has the vigour to carry on these offices.

Mr. Speaker, Mr. Drury comes, of course, from the grand county of Simcoe, a resident of the old township of Oro, one of the historic townships of this province, closely connected with things which are dear to our hearts, one of which is the abolition of discrimination on the grounds of race, colour or creed, because old Oro township was one of the stations of the underground railway in the days of the Civil War, and to this township came many of those fine people who escaped from slavery in the South, and settled in the township of Oro, from which fact it was given its name.

Mr. Drury was the first Premier of Ontario to come from Simcoe County, and his father before him was a member of the House and was one of Ontario's Ministers of Agriculture. So, in the Drury family we have had some grand citizens, who have left a fine impression on this province.

Then we have one who is well known to all of us. He was my desk mate in other years, Charles Stewart Henry, who was Premier some 20 years ago. Mr. Henry in his day and generation made a great contribution to the welfare of the province. Some ten years ago he retired to the position of Country Squire, living out in Oriole, and he tells me his peace is disturbed by the ever-increasing roar of expanding Metropolitan Toronto.

Then we have George Alexander Drew, who is the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition in Ottawa. It is nice to see Mr. Drew here today. In less formal times, I would say "George." We are happy to see you here today looking younger, and I think more vigorous than in the days when you displayed such great vigour standing where I am standing today. It is a great pleasure to have him here.

Then we have seated in this House, another very distinguished citizen, in the person of Harry Corwin Nixon, the hon. member for Brant.

Mr. Nixon is the dean of this House, as his first appearance here was away back in 1919, even though his youthful appearance today belies that statement. He came into the House as a contemporary of Mr. Drury, who was his Leader at that time. Mr. Nixon was a member of Mr. Drury's Cabinet, going back 35 years. We all know Mr. Nixon, and all I can say is, that he is just like Old Man River, he rolls along, and it is a pleasure to see him here today, and see him looking as youthful as he did the first time I saw him many years ago.

Then the fifth, in order of succession, is my grand old friend, who sits on my right, Thomas Laird Kennedy, who has served the province in many capacities, including being the Premier at one time. Perhaps his most distinguishing feature is the fact that for all these years he has been the hon. member for Peel. You all know Colonel Kennedy, and there is very little I need to say about him.

We all know the five gentlemen I have mentioned, but I think of all the members of the House, Colonel Kennedy is the most youthful. A short time ago, I met some friends who said they had seen Colonel Kennedy and his wife in Mexico, walking around very briskly, and taking part in the affairs down there.

It is a very great pleasure on this occasion to have the privilege of honouring all these gentlemen who have served the province well in their day and generation, according to the lights of things as they saw them.

I am very glad indeed to make reference to them at this opening of the Fourth Session of the Twenty-fourth Legislature.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would join at once with the hon. Premier in paying a tribute to the life of Doctor John McPhee, who was a member of this Legislature for some ten years.

Doctor McPhee, as we knew him, was a friend to all of us; he was a humanitarian in every respect; he belonged to that group of learned, yet practical men, the medical practitioners of this province, the men who have carved a niche for themselves in the very fabric of this province of ours.

We share with the hon. Premier the tribute to this Parliamentarian who has gone on, and left us in this Chamber.

In reference to my colleague, and my friend, Mr. Houck, the former member for Niagara Falls, who now has gone to a wider if not higher field in the Federal arena, I want to say, with the hon. Premier, that we are all of us aware of the great contributions which Mr. Houck has made to the political life of this province, and all of us, on both sides of the House, have had the opportunity and pleasure of sharing his friendship over a long number of years.

Mr. Speaker, when the hon. Premier speaks of the five honoured guests we have in the House this afternoon, may I say it is indeed a unique occasion when at the opening of a legislative meeting we can have five former Premiers with us, looking very fit and well indeed.

Reference was made to the first on the list, Mr. Drury, from the County of Simcoe. Mr. Drury was elected Premier in 1919, in what was considered at that time to be a novel experiment in politics in this province and having consideration for the difficulties which were attached to that experiment, all of us in this House and in this province generally, have a very high regard for the capabilities Mr. Drury manifested, and which he has carried on into his administration at this time.

As the hon. Premier has correctly said, Mr. Drury has not actually retired from active community life of this province; he is carrying on in the office of Sheriff in Barrie, and the other offices attached thereto, and I think it bears repetition that he is making a contribution to the cause of conservation in this province, perhaps equalled by no other single person. I think all of us are cognizant of the great work Mr. Drury has done along the lines of conservation, which, in my judgment, and I think in the judgment of many of us here, is a very important matter.

When I come to our old friend, Mr. Henry, may I say that he has been a friend of many of us over a long number of years. He brought to this Legislature a very wide experience in municipal life. He brought to the House as well, an intimate, keen knowledge of agricultural problems; he was, in turn, the Minister of Agriculture and the Minister of Highways, and he gave great service to the people of this province during the tenure of his membership in this Legislative Assembly.

When it comes to my friend, Mr. Drew, I have, of necessity, to be more cautious in my appraisal, because he belongs with the other three I have mentioned, in that he is still actively engaged in the political life of this province and this country.

These gentlemen have made great contributions to the political life of this province and this country, and are actively engaged in adding to those contributions, as the years go on. It can be said, Mr. Speaker, that they have "bulted better than they knew," and it can also be said that the people of this province and of this country are the benefactors of the great services we recognize in this Chamber today.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the hon. Premier and the hon. Leader of the Official Opposition, in offering our condolences to the family of the late Doctor McPhee.

As correctly stated by the hon. Premier, Doctor McPhee was a quiet, self-effacing man; he went quietly about his job in the House, and did his work, and those who met him knew him as a genial and quiet friend. I am sure he will be missed by all of us, and to look across at the purple-draped seat so recently occupied by the hon. member, reminds us that he will no longer be with us in this House.

As regards "Bill" Houck, who has gone on to Ottawa; I know I will miss him, because he was my desk mate, occupying the seat now occupied by the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand). "Bill" and I got to be good friends, as I know he was a friend of all in the House. We will all miss "Bill" in the debates in the House.

As for the former Premiers of this province, I am glad to see these fine, old gentlemen—of course, not all of them are "old gentlemen," and probably George Drew would not like being so referred to—but when I say that, I am looking particularly at Mr. Drury and Mr. Henry, men whom we have greeted here on many occasions. I am very glad to see them here, and I hope they will be with us on many more occasions, as also our two former Premiers sitting in the House, and we would be glad to have their advice and counsel for many more years.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, since none of the others have spoken for me, I want to take this liberty and opportunity, with your permission, to also express my sympathy to the family of the late Doctor McPhee, and to the government, and to the Party to which he belonged.

During the years I have had the privilege of being in this House, and serving with him, I acquired a great respect for his sincerity, for his interest in public affairs, and I am sure that although the Party to which he belonged has unfortunately regained the seat so quickly, with all due regard to the hon. member who will replace him, I am sure Doctor McPhee will be missed, and we will all be aware of his absence.

Mr. Speaker, insofar as the gentlemen who have headed the governments in the past; I cannot, like some of those who have spoken before me, indulge in memories and reminiscences, and even if I could, perhaps it would be wiser to refrain from so doing. I can only say I am very glad they are all with us. It is true that I did not always see eye to eye with them. That, of course, is not unnatural. What surprised me from time to time was that they did not see eye to eye with me. That was surprising.

I am glad they are active, each in his own way, and I am glad, year after year, to see, if not all of them, some of them present here, some of those who have given up hope of heading governments, but have undoubtedly pieces of legislation they can look back upon with pride, and whose names are associated with legislation which sections of the population look upon as being an advance in the realm of life.

To those who are aspiring, all I can say is may they serve the people well, and also have the opportunity of contributing toward such legislation as will be of lasting benefit to a majority of the people.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House. In the past, we have usually adjourned until two o'clock on Friday, but that will not be the case on our first adjournment. We will meet at three o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and I will arrange for the motion for two o'clock later on.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 3.55 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I beg to inform the House that I have received during the recess of the House notification of vacancies which have occurred in the Membership of the House by reason of the resignation of William L. Houck, Member for the Electoral District of Niagara Falls, and the death of John Duncan McPhee, Member for the Electoral District of Simcoe East, and have issued my Warrant to the Chief Election Officer for the issue of writs for the election of Members to serve in the present Legislature for the following Electoral Districts:

The Electoral District of Niagara Falls.

The Electoral District of Simcoe East.

I beg to inform the House that the Clerk has received from the Chief Election Officer and laid upon the Table a certificate of the result of a by-election held since the last Session of the House:

Electoral District of Niagara Falls—
Mr. Arthur C. Jolley.

Hon. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I beg your permission to leave the Chamber, accompanied by the hon. member for Essex South (Mr. Murdoch) to escort the member-elect for the riding of Niagara Falls, to the Chamber.

Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present Mr. Arthur C. Jolley, member-elect for the riding of Niagara Falls, who has taken the Oaths, signed the Roll, and now claims his right to a seat in this Assembly.

MR. SPEAKER: Let the hon. member take his seat.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by Committees.

Motions.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Moves that during the present Session of the Legislative Assembly provision be made for the taking and printing of reports of debates and speeches and to that end that Mr. Speaker be authorized to employ an editor of debates and speeches and the necessary stenographers at such rates of compensation as may be agreed to by him; also that Mr. Speaker be authorized to arrange for the printing of the reports in the amount of eight hundred copies daily, copies of such printed reports to be supplied to the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor, to Mr. Speaker, to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly, to the Legislative Library, to each Member of the Assembly, to the Reference Libraries of the Province, to the Press Gallery, to the newspapers of the Province as approved by Mr. Speaker, and the balance to be distributed by the Clerk of the Assembly as directed by Mr. Speaker.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say, in connection with this motion, that the motion introduced today is different in wording, and purport, in relation to printing, than the motion I very violently argued, for some years.

This matter was referred to the Committee on Printing who overruled my point of view. So I very gladly bow to that; I accept that, and I trust that those who sometimes criticize me, will never again say that I would flout the wishes of a majority of this House in any way. I am very glad to accept the finding of the Committee, and I hope this will settle this issue for all time.

MR. FARQUHAR OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I naturally rush to compliment the government and the hon. Prime Minister upon their return to sanity in relation to this particular matter and also to say to the hon. Prime Minister that I recall last year, when opposing the thing he now supports in the Legislature, he said it was a matter to him, as Provincial Treasurer, of dollars and cents. If my recollection is accurate, I believe he said that the former mode of recording the speeches by the hon. members cost somewhere between $10,000 and $15,000, and that he felt that any innovation such as we have approved today, would cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of from $50,000 to $100,000.

For the information of the hon. members, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister what an analysis of the situation has revealed in respect to the financial aspect of this problem? Is it going to cost $100,000? What is the relation between the cost of the former method and the one which is proposed today?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, first of all, may I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that I am quite sure that the reference to "$50,000 or $100,000" was a figure that he himself blew up. I do not think I was ever guilty of saying that. If I am wrong, I stand to be corrected.

The Standing Committee looked at this. I think the old method cost us about $20,000. Under the new method, the cost will be somewhere between $32,000 and $35,000 a year.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I hesitate to congratulate the government on taking this step forward, because they took it so reluctantly, and we had to badger them for years, for the sake of only $15,000, less than it costs to fill a hole in some secondary highway. I am sorry I mentioned that; I did not mean anything about highways; I was just using it as an illustration.

One of the arguments mentioned by the hon. Prime Minister was that it would cost between $40,000 and $50,000; now we find it will cost much less. I am sure all hon. members of the House are happy now, but I would like to ask the hon. Prime Minister whether he would consent to make some re-arrangement for the re-organization of Hansard of past years, so that we can handle them? At the present time, they are unwieldy; they are in enormous volume; we cannot move them, nor keep them in our libraries, nor private studies, nor at our homes. If they were necessary at the time, then I think they should be put into some form which is manageable.

I would most respectfully suggest—I do not want to appeal again to the government—that they spend a few thousand dollars to provide at least permanent copies of a size which hon. members, the Legislative Library, and other institutions can have a proper record of the proceedings of the Legislatures of the past years. I am not even emphasizing they be printed; there may be other forms which can be used at less expense, and at the same time, in a manner which will enable us to move Hansard without endangering our health, and becoming a patient in a hospital, for a special type of operation usually found necessary after lifting a terrific load. I hope the hon. Prime Minister will give this some thought and some consideration.

HON. MR. FROST: In connection with the cost, I forgot to say that the Committee of the House recommended 800 copies, and that is in the motion. At the time I intervened some years ago, copies were being printed in the thousands, and it amounted to a great bill.

One of the things which convinces me there is merit in the recommendation of the Committee, is the fact that they limited it to 800 copies, and in these matters, I have tried to be reasonable.

In response to the question by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg)—a very long, double-barreled question—my answer is in the negative.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I am not exactly in the same position as the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) who hesitated to compliment the government and then giving an explanation of why he was so inhibited.

I do not hesitate to compliment the government—which I do forthwith, on the step they have taken. I think it will be of benefit to have Hansard in a form easily carried around, easily referred to, and easy to store away.

Coming now to the question of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) to whom the hon. Prime Minister has given an answer, may I suggest that perhaps we could go back over the years 1950, 1951, 1952 and 1953, and bring the Hansard forward in a less bulky form, perhaps taking one set each year.

In 1949, we had very fine volumes of Hansard, and we are starting again in 1954. I think as time goes by, we could do one set per year, and we then need not be too much concerned with the cost, and eventually we would have a complete set from the time we started printing Hansard.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) nearly overwhelms me with his logic, and I will refer it to the Committee on Printing.

MR. OLIVER: I am now quoting from the remarks by the hon. Prime Minister as found at page 80 of Hansard last year, where he is quoted as having said:

"It is so easy to start something which at the beginning costs $10,000 or $15,000 and then suddenly goes up to $100,000."

HON. MR. FROST: I agree.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Frost moved, that Standing Committees of this House, for the present Session, be appointed for the following purposes: 1. On Privileges and Elections; 2. On Education; 3. On Private Bills; 4. On Standing Orders; 5. On Public Accounts; 6. On Printing; 7. On Municipal Law; 8. On Legal Bills; 9. On Agriculture; 10. On Game and Fish; 11. On Labour; 12. On Mining; 13. On Government Commissions; 14. On Lands and Forests; 15. On Travel and Publicity; 16. On Health; 17. On Conservation.

Which said Committees shall severally be empowered to examine and enquire into all such matters and things as shall be referred to them by the House, and to report from time to time their observations and opinions thereon, with power to send for persons, papers and records.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Prime Minister if Number 17 referring to Conservation will be the only new committee to be set up?

HON. MR. FROST: That is the only new committee. The committees are the same as we have had in previous years, with the addition, as I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will recollect, two or three years ago, of a committee on Government Commissions. There probably have also been other committees added, but that is the same list as last year, with the addition of the Committee on Conservation.

Motion agreed to.

Hon. Mr. Frost moves, that a Select Committee of eleven Members be appointed to prepare and report with all convenient despatch lists of the members to compose the Standing Committees ordered by the House, such Committee to be composed as follows:—

Messrs. Allan (Haldimand-Norfolk),

Allen (Middlesex South), Chartrand, Collings, Cowling, Grummett, Kerr, Mackenzie, Pringle, Pryde and Robson.

The quorum of the said Committee to consist of four members.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, my reason for introducing this motion this afternoon is that I am anxious this Committee be convened and report to this House on Monday afternoon.

The purpose is that we have, as I think is evident from the Speech from the Throne, a heavy committee programme and I am most anxious the committees of the House should be convened early, so they may meet for organization, and they should have ample time to consider all matters which will be referred to them.

Last year, I regretted that the committee on Government Commissions apparently was convened quite late, and there was, perhaps, little opportunity for the members themselves to ask questions and discuss matters which were raised. That was not intentional. Profiting from that, I have asked that the committees be constituted and convened early, so that the members should have, in every case, ample time to discuss the matters which are referred to them, for consideration.

I am a believer in committees of the House dealing with matters of government. I am most anxious that the talents and abilities and views of the hon. members of the House should be reflected in the action that is here taken, and I do not know of any better opportunity to do that than in the more informal atmosphere which prevails in the committee. I quite realize that sometimes it is difficult in a House such as this with its strict procedure, even in discussions in the Committee of the Whole House, to discuss the pros and cons of matters, and I think much of that difficulty could be overcome by committee procedure.

I do not think that we have ever had in the history of the Province of Ontario, a duplication of the committee idea to the extent we have today, and I am most anxious they should proceed this year, and that these committees will be constituted and convened early. Therefore, I would ask, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. members composing this Committee, with the Clerk of the House, meet before the sitting on Monday and name the memberships of these committees.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): If I am not too much out of order, I would like to ask if it is the intention to deal with the Redistribution Bill by a Select or Standing Committee?

HON. MR. FROST: I will deal with that at an early date. A Standing Committee, I think, has been the custom in the past in regard to other redistributions. I will give that consideration and advise the House at a very early date.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves, that Mr. T. R. Dent, the hon. member for the electoral district of Oxford, be appointed Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House for the present Session.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, perhaps I may be out of order, I know the motion has been carried, but perhaps in view of the present situation we might retreat a little.

May I be permitted to say that it is a very great pleasure to propose the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Dent) as Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House. I would like to say, also, before he ascends the rostrum that he has been a member of this House for eleven years this coming August. He is a very popular, worthy member of the House.

We all regret the fact that poliomyelitis has struck his household and we hope that his son may be afforded early and complete recovery.

The hon. member represents a very great county, a riding which I might have mentioned yesterday in referring to one of the former Prime Ministers, Sir Oliver Mowat, who belonged to a different party than the Government in office today. However, although his Government and his administration were great, it was no more progressive in its legislation than that which is introduced in these days.

The hon. member came from that county as well. I would also like to say that the hon. member is not only the representative of a great riding, but the representative of a great industry, that of agriculture. It is a pleasure indeed for me to propose this motion.

Deputy Speaker in the Chair.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Deputy Speaker, I wanted to say to you that so long as the system prevails which seems to indicate the government has the choice of the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House. I do not know that we could be more pleased than to have that appointment go to yourself, and I would like to say we feel your ingrained sense of fairness will ensure impartiality to all who come under your direction.

Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of Bills.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): I beg leave to present to the House the following:

(1) The Public Accounts for the Province of Ontario, for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1953;

(2) The Report of the Provincial Auditor, 1952-53;

(3) The Twenty-seventh Report of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, for the twelve-months' fiscal year ending 31st of March, 1953;

(4) The Seventh Report of the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario, for the twelve-months' fiscal period ending March 31st, 1953.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Moves first reading of a Bill intituled, "The Department of Education Act 1954."

Motion agreed to.

MR. OLIVER: Will the hon. Minister of Education give some intimation of what this Bill contains.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Speaker, I should like to inform the House that this is "over-all project," if you might call it such, consolidating twelve Education Acts, that is, twelve Acts affecting the Department of Education, into three. This is the first of that consolidation.

The three Acts which are being consolidated in this one now put forward, are the old The Department of Education Act, The Schools for the Deaf and Blind Act, and the Vocational Education Act. There are some sections in those three Acts which have become obsolete, and are not at all suitable for practise at the present day. Therefore, we have gone ahead with the idea of bringing all of those up to date.

May I assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that there is no new policy involved, no new principle introduced, but it is simply a consolidation and bringing up-to-date of those twelve Acts. This is the first one. There will be two more, I hope.

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of a Bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Administration of Justice Expenses Act."

Motion agreed to, first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill covers two points. In the first place, it repeals a section concerning the agreements which may be made between a county council and the clerk of the peace, for payments in lieu of fees. That is now being dealt with in the Crown Attorneys Act in a somewhat slightly different form. Secondly, it provides that the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto shall be deemed to be a city for the purposes of this Act.

I might say that this Bill, and the others which I propose to introduce today, will be referred to the Legal Bills Committee in due course.

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to Amend the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages Act."

Motion agreed to, first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill makes a change in the section of the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages Act which provide that the renewal statement must be filed annually to keep the chattel mortgage alive. Under the present Statute, the statement must contain a complete itemized list of the payments of principal and interest which have been made during the year.

This amendment simply provides that a lump sum may be inserted as to the amount of money paid during the year, and should add very much to the convenience of carrying out transactions of this kind.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that all these bills will go to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE CORONERS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Coroners Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill confirms by Statute arrangements which have been made where the Chief Coroner of a city is also the Supervising Coroner, and the corporation of the city has appointed or appoints a secretary for him, the corporation shall be reimbursed quarterly out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund to the extent of one-third of the salary and the cost-of-living bonus, if any, of such a secretary, and one-third of the amount, if any, paid by the corporation under the Civic Pension Fund or plan in respect of such secretary.

THE COUNTY COURTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The County Courts Act".

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: The section repealed provides that the clerk of the peace shall, ex officio, be clerk of the county court, registrar of the surrogate court or local registrar when there is a vacancy. The provisions are now dealt with in The Judicature Act.

THE DESERTED WIVES AND MAINTENANCE ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Deserted Wives and Maintenance Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is an amendment which authorizes judges of juvenile courts to try cases of husbands who have deserted their wives, and the jurisdiction in all cases will be given to the juvenile and family courts, and where there are no such courts, the cases are to be tried by a magistrate.

THE CROWN ATTORNEYS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Crown Attorneys Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill covers in a more complete way the section which is to be repealed from the Administration of Justice Expenses Act, which has been introduced. It is considered this a more appropriate place for dealing with the provision for agreement between the crown attorney and a county for the computation of fees.

THE DIVISION COURTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Division Courts Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill provides that the cost of all books, forms, stationery and supplies, with respect to the division courts having jurisdiction in the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto, shall be repaid by the clerk of the Metropolitan area, upon certification by an inspector.

THE EVIDENCE ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Evidence Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill is recommended by the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada in an effort to bring about uniformity of law across Canada in the fields covered by these two sections.

Section 40 contains no new principles. It replaces the provisions repealed by section 2 of the bill and brings the terminology into line with the National Defence Act (Canada).

Section 41 replaces sections 40 and 41 of the present Act. It sets out the instances in which affidavits may be taken outside Ontario for use within Ontario. These instances are basically unchanged but are expressed in more appropriate language.

THE INSURANCE ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Insurance Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in the first place, this Bill amends The Insurance Act with reference to certain exclusions which may be made in an insurance policy by an endorsement approved by the Superintendent.

In the second place, it deals with cases where there may be more than one motor vehicle policy of insurance insuring a person named therein, and that person also is insured under another motor vehicle policy.

Section 11: The amendment provides that an insurer shall not be liable under an owner's policy or a driver's policy for loss or damage as set out in clause "g" where the coverage is expressly excluded by an endorsement approved by the Superintendent.

Section 2: Where more than one motor vehicle liability policy insures a person named therein and that person is also insured under another motor vehicle liability policy as an unnamed insured, the effect of the present provisions is that the driver's policy is primary insurance and the owner's policy is excess insurance. The amendment reverses this order and provides that the owner's policy shall be primary insurance and the driver's policy excess insurance.

There might be two policies which cover the same damage, and if there is a claim for five thousand dollars, and there are two policies, each for five thousand dollars, then the owner's policy will be the one which pays. If a claim is for six thousand dollars, the owner's policy pays the five thousand dollars, and the other policy, the excess of one thousand dollars.

This does not affect in any way the rights of the insured; it simply affects the rights of certain insurance companies. This amendment has been asked for by the insurance companies.

THE JUDICATURE ACT

He said: The first amendment of The Judicature Act contained in this Bill provides that where the Chief Justice of the High Court is absent or for any reason is unable to act, his power shall be exercised and his duties performed by the Senior Judge of the High Court able to act in his stead.

Secondly, the Court of Appeals which may now sit in two divisions may come under this amendment, sit in one division or two or more divisions as the Chief Justice of Ontario may direct from time to time.

Then, finally, this Bill provides for the uniform provision dealing with the absence of or vacancy in the office of local registrars, county court clerks and surrogate registrars.

THE JURORS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Jurors Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Under the present law, a juror who serves is not exempt from further service within any particular time after that occasion. A juror may possibly—and in many cases does—become liable to serve, even though he may have served within a year.

The Coroners' jurors differ, in that there is a three-year period of exemption, and they cannot be compelled to serve on a jury within that time.

This amendment extends the provision to all jurors. There will be a three-year exemption in all cases.

THE MAGISTRATES ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Magistrates Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in the first place this Bill provides that all magistrates have jurisdiction throughout Ontario, and, in the second place, every judge and deputy judge of a juvenile and family court be ex officio a magistrate in and for the area served by his court.

THE MECHANICS' LIEN ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Mechanics' Lien Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, under The Mechanics' Lien Act, as it is now framed, a workman who earns $10 a day or less cannot waive the benefits of the Act by agreement or otherwise, but if his wages are more than $10 a day, he may do so.

At one time the figure was $3, which prevailed until 1910; then it was raised to $5 and continued until 1923. It is now $10, and it is considered that $10 is too little, under present-day circumstances, and that the figure should be raised to $15, so than any workman who earns $15 a day or less cannot waive the benefits of The Mechanics' Lien Act.

THE MINORS' PROTECTION ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Minors' Protection Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the effect of this amendment is to give jurisdiction in cases under this Act to juvenile and family courts, and where there are no such courts, the cases will be tried in a magistrate's court.

THE SURROGATE COURTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Surrogate Courts Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the surrogate court judges are appointed by the province, whereas, of course, the county court judges and the high court judges are appointed by the federal government.

Heretofore, the county judges have almost invariably been appointed also as surrogate court judges by the province, and provision is made in the Act for the payment of their salaries for their services as Surrogate Judges. However, there is one case in particular which has arisen where one who is not a county court judge was appointed as a Surrogate Court Judge, and this provides that there be authority to pay for his services in that capacity.

THE WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Warehouse Receipts Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, The Warehouse Receipts Act is an Act which deals with the warehouse receipts given by warehousemen when they store goods for people. The receipt under the Act became almost a negotiable instrument in that the ownership of goods in storage could be changed by passing the receipt from hand to hand.

There is one provision in the Act which says it may be extended to cover certain other concerns, such as departmental stores, dyers and cleaners, which store garments, furs, and so forth, for people who secure this type of business from the ordinary warehousemen.

This section of the Act has never become effective, because it was provided that it would only come into force upon proclamation. That section has never been proclaimed, and it is considered it is not advisable nor necessary to proclaim it, and this Bill would repeal that section.

THE WILLS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Wills Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this Bill is another which was recommended by the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada, and also recommended by a number of eminent authorities on wills, for instance, by Dean Falconbridge, who was formerly a Dean of the Law School.

The section of this Act deals with the formalities required for the execution of wills, when made outside the jurisdiction of Ontario.

It is quite an involved matter, and has given rise to a great deal of judicial comment, and these sections have been prepared after prolonged studies by the authorities I have mentioned, for the purpose of improving the procedure as it now stands.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I believe that completes the business for today. As the hon. members know, it takes time to become organized, to have bills introduced and printed, and to bring other matters of business into consideration.

On Wednesday, there has been an invitation extended by the Toronto Transit Commission to the hon. members of this House, and I think to the hon. members of Parliament, the gentlemen of the Senate, and other bodies, to attend a reception and view the new subway development in Toronto.

Some days ago — indeed it may be some weeks ago — the Commission asked if it would be possible on the 17th of February for the House to adjourn a little earlier, to permit the members to accept the invitation.

It seemed to me perhaps the best way of handling that would be to have the House meet on the 17th of February at two o'clock in the afternoon, which would permit of adjournment perhaps before four o'clock, which is the time set for the function.

It is not very often we are asked to do anything of this kind, but, on the other hand, it is not very often a subway is about to be opened in Canada. In fact, I think this is the first time it has happened in our country, and I am sure it would be a very fine thing to enable the hon. members to see that very unique work, and take the trip which is planned by the Toronto Transit Commission.

I would like to advise the House that on Tuesday I will probably move the House meet at two o'clock, instead of three, but that again, Mr. Speaker, depends, of course, on the amount of business on the Order Paper. As a matter of fact, in the first days of the Session, the Order Paper is usually light, but if it is necessary to call the House at two o'clock, I will advise the members on Tuesday.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Prime Minister if he intends to proceed with the moving and seconding of the Address on Tuesday?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, sir, the mover and seconder will deliver their addresses on Tuesday.

I noticed in the paper there was a mistake in that it said that the hon. member for Russell (Mr. Nault) would second the motion. As a matter of fact, the motion will be seconded by the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Nodeu). That was, I suppose, due to a similarity in the pronunciation of their names.

Mr. Speaker: I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.02 p.m.

The quorum of the said Committee to consist of five members.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before you put the motion, may I say that the membership of all those Committees can be added to or subtracted from if any of the hon. members of the House desire changes. I think the Committees are substantially the same as they were last year.

The Committee work this Session is, I think, going to be quite heavy. We have purposely taken steps to constitute the Committees so that the work may proceed without delay. Last year, I think some of the Committees met very late in the Session, with the result that they did not have the opportunity to go as fully into the matters referred to as they would have liked to do. The cure for that is to begin early. I wish the Clerk of the House and the others having to do with the organization of these Committees would see that they are called promptly. I would suggest that this start tomorrow morning, so the Chairmen of the Committees can be appointed after which the Committees will be ready to go ahead and function.

There is a matter to which I should like to refer particularly, but if the motion is put, I will have to refer to it before the Orders of the Day. However, I will bow to Your Honour's ruling if I am out of order.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, with reference to the hon. Prime Minister's suggestion that other names could be added to the Committees, I noticed in regard to one Committee, at least, the Public Accounts Committee, I had asked that the name of Mr. Wren be included, but I do not think it was so included.

HON. MR. FROST: I will be very glad to arrange that at once.

MR. OLIVER: It will be a very interesting Committee and I would not want him to miss whatever may come before it.

HON. MR. FROST: The motion can be changed to add Mr. Wren's name, and if there are any further changes in the Committees, I would like to know. I want to add something else as soon as Mr. Speaker puts the motion.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Regarding the motion, I do not want to start a fight over it, but I do want to utilize this opportunity of registering my extreme dissatisfaction with the way I have been placed on Committees in the last couple of years.

I am confident the hon. Prime Minister will agree, as he has indicated on a previous occasion, to discuss this matter with me privately, and see that justice is done.

There are certain Committees which I have asked to be placed upon, both last year and this year, and I do not know the reason why I was not placed on those Committees.

There are some Committees on which I served in the past, but I have been dropped from them because in each instance, I raised questions in a manner that evidently did not please certain people. I think, Mr. Speaker, that is no reason for punishing a member.

For instance, regarding the humble Committee on Printing, I did not ask originally to be placed on that, but I was, and I served on that Committee, and tried to serve conscientiously. Because I insisted on two occasions, at two Sessions, that the Queen's Printer be called before that Committee to answer questions, I was dropped from that Committee. I think that is poor business, and I do not think it is conducive to the proper conduct of the business of this House.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member is referring to something which happened in the twenty-third Parliament, but if he will let me know of his complaints, I will try to deal justly with them.

MR. SALSBERG: I could mention the names of a few Committees on which I have served, I think, with distinction, such as the Committee on Arts. The only time that Committee departed from the moth-eaten policy which prevailed for a long time was when I served on that Committee, Mr. Speaker, and we departed from the "do nothing" policy and chartered a new course when we decided to buy works of art from artists of our province and to build up an important collection of works of art throughout the province.

For having done such a revolutionary thing, a former Prime Minister, not the present one, decided it would be too dangerous to have me continue on the Committee, and I was dropped.

I will not pursue the matter further. I have done enough by eliciting the statement from the hon. Prime Minister that he will privately lend his good offices to see I serve on Committees on which I may make a contribution to the welfare of the province. I will avail myself of the suggestion of the hon. Prime Minister and will see him privately, and with his suggestion made earlier, that names can be added, it will make it possible for my name to be added to some of those Committees. Otherwise, I shall be obliged to raise it again when somebody else's name is added and the matter will be before the House on a resolution.

MR. SPEAKER: I am afraid you have been a little out of order. Mr. Pringle has presented the report on Standing Committees and moved its adoption.

HON. MR. FROST: Before you put the motion, it will be in order, I think, to say a few words. I have noticed you have not put the motion, and I should like to say that today initial steps are being taken to organize the Committees of the House. These Committees will organize and start to work, I hope, tomorrow, as I have mentioned, which is much in advance of the procedure of other years.

This is in conformity with the Government's policy of extending and developing the Committee form of consideration of governmental problems covering practically every phase of administration. The purpose is twofold: namely, to use the great talents and capabilities of the hon. members of the House, and, secondly, to translate these ideas and views of the various hon. members of the Legislature into action, and to improve procedures and methods of government.

That, sir, I think is in line of improving the form of Parliamentary government. I think we have taken very great steps indeed here in that regard, in the last few years.

Amongst the Committees of the House is the Public Accounts Committee, mentioned by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). This Committee has very broad powers of enquiry, and may enquire into expenditures which are contained in or referred to in the Public Accounts.

In the past, this Committee has been used to enquire into items which an hon. member or members wanted to scrutinize.

I would suggest to the hon. members of the House, if they have not already done so, that they read the very able report by the Provincial Auditor, in which he referred to matters brought forward in the fiscal year 1952-1953.

Certainly irregularities have taken place in the Fort William Division of the Department of Highways, and I will have something further to say about this matter in the course of a day or so.

As a result of these irregularities, criminal action has been instituted, which does not, however, preclude civil action in civil courts if the evidence so indicates. For this reason, payments have been withheld from certain contractors, and the province is in a position to take civil action.

May I, at this time, speak in the highest terms of the work of the Provincial Auditor, Mr. Harvey Cotnam, F.C.A., who is a servant of this Legislature, and not of the government. I would ask the hon. members of the Legislature to read the Act relating to the Provincial Auditor, which was revised some three or four years ago.

For some months, the Auditor, with his staff, and a staff of engineers, have been conducting a most painstaking investigation into the matters involved. In addition to this, Messrs. J. D. Woods and Gordon, Limited, have been given an unlimited commission to investigate and recommend. The Provincial Auditor quite properly asked that investigations should not be hampered by the disclosure of information which might prejudice the position of the province.

Undoubtedly, this has led to conjecture which could not possibly be accurate. Nevertheless, the Provincial Auditor and legal counsel have advised that the interest of the province should be protected and safeguarded, as it has been, for the following reasons:

1. The investigations are intricate, involving the services of both auditors and engineers. The premature disclosure of evidence might prejudice the investigations which have been so painstakingly conducted.

2. The auditor advises that these matters would without doubt result in court action, and in fact some matters are already before the Court. There the evidence can be presented fairly and impartially.

3. That not only criminal action is involved, but arising from this might be civil action as already stated.

On these grounds it was, therefore, decided that to safeguard provincial interests and rights, disclosures should be made only in court.

At this point, Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the hon. members of this House that there is no desire to limit the powers of enquiry of the Public Accounts Committee, and the matter will be left entirely with that Committee, and I am quite sure it will be agreed that this course is the proper one to take. These matters can be considered by the Public Accounts Committee itself, a Committee constituted by this House, with very wide powers, and the matters to which I have referred in the interest of the province can be discussed by the Committee when it convenes.

The commission, which has been given to J. B. Woods and Gordon Limited, is a very far-reaching one. It extends not only to the investigation of alleged irregularities in the Fort William Division, but it includes applying every lesson to be learned to departmental methods, and providing for the greatest efficiency. No lesson to be learned in this matter will be overlooked.

The Department of Highways will be faced with an immense task within the next few years—how great, the hon. members here can appraise themselves.

We are faced in the Department of Highways with meeting the tremendous traffic problem of today, and with facing up to the great growth in that Department, and in its expenditures, and if it should be that works are required in this province because of economic conditions, it may be that the Department will again have to be extended. That is the situation.

With such an extension of business and problems, the revision of methods and procedures should always be regarded as capable of betterment. Lessons which can be learned from any matter must never be disregarded if they will contribute to the efficiency of the conduct of business. That is the attitude of the government, and that is the purpose of the commission given to Messrs. J. B. Woods and Gordon Limited, which is a highly competent and experienced firm.

Our objective will be to ensure for the Department of Highways, the very best that can be devised in the way of organization, administration and procedures.

I, by no means, come to this House and say that the Departmental methods are the best. I do say if there are lessons to be learned in connection with the Fort William situation, the hon. members of this House can rest assured that we will see they are applied in the interest of better administration in this province. That is all I have to say, with reference to the Committee.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister if he is now saying to the House that all matters relating to the Fort William irregularities may be discussed by the Public Accounts Committee?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I stated the problem. I say that, for myself, I would very much have preferred to have said things more specifically than I did. I was met with very considerable embarrassment in the by-election which was held recently, by reason of the fact that I could not refer to things specifically. In the interest of the province, I thought it better to say nothing.

Now, I say again that I have no desire to limit the powers of enquiry of the Public Accounts Committee in matters relating to this whole problem, which will be left with them to decide in their good judgment as to how to treat them, in view of the enquiries which are being made.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, may I ask one more question, if the hon. Prime Minister does not mind? To what extent are these matters sub judice by reason of the fact that they are before the courts?

HON. MR. FROST: I think perhaps the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) could perhaps better answer that question than I, but perhaps I may be allowed to answer it.

I think the situation is this: questions which are sub judice before the courts, I think by all the rules, bar references outside of this House. Matters which are before a court, if referred to in public, in an address or otherwise, such reference may be considered to be in contempt of court. Whether that extends to the House, where we are privileged, is another question. I would like to reserve the answer to that question.

I rather take the view that perhaps it might not be sub judice if referred to a Committee of the House. Then it comes down to a question of good sense and good judgment, as to whether any investigation would be prejudicial to the trial of any individual.

MR. OLIVER: May I just add this, Mr. Speaker; what will happen if the Public Accounts Committee is called, and we immediately start the investigation by questioning anything relating to the acts allegedly committed by those who are now before the courts? It would not be competent for the Committee, I suggest, to deal with those matters. So the hon. Prime Minister, by referring this to the Public Accounts Committee has handicapped the Committee before it starts. There is no question about that.

HON. MR. FROST: I did not say that at all.

MR. OLIVER: I say it.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not want you to put words into my mouth.

MR. OLIVER: I may not be as good a lawyer as the hon. Prime Minister, but I think I can see what is coming, and the hon. Prime Minister knows it quite well.

I want to argue that point for a moment or two. Not only will the Committee be handicapped, but this was indeed an astute political move on the part of the government. I say "astute," and it comes rather badly from the hon. Prime Minister—and this is not used as a derogatory term at all. It is a smart political move.

We have a list of 17 Committees, which will be sitting simultaneously throughout the Session of the House, and we will not be able to give the attention that this whole matter deserves before the Public Accounts Committee.

More than that, there is a preponderance of government members on the Committee, who will be able at all times to overpower and to overrule whatever may be brought up in the Committee itself.

I suggest to the hon. Prime Minister—and I think even he should see wisdom in this—that it would be better to appoint a Select Committee of the House to sit in between Sessions.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I want to point out the fact that the Public Accounts Committee has powers and rights does not subtract from the fact that we may take any action we want to.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows that, because when he suggested the desire to have the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) added to that Committee, he said it will be an interesting Committee.

MR. OLIVER: It can be interesting quite apart from the question under discussion. This is not the only thing which may be involved before the Public Accounts.

I remember a few years ago, when the Highways Department was under investigation, when the present hon. Minister of Highway (Mr. Doucett) and the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) were asking questions on behalf of the Opposition, but in that particular case, Mr. Speaker, there was a very great difference. In that case, there was nobody charged before the courts; there was nothing sub judice before the Committee, and my hon. friends had every right to go into everything which pertained to the matter under discussion.

If we go before the Public Accounts Committee now, and these facts are before the courts, anything relating to the acts alleged to have been committed will be declared sub judice by the Committee. You cannot escape that. If it is true outside, it is true in this Legislature. We have certain rights in the Legislature, I will admit, but I doubt if they are rights which can transcend the rights of a person charged before a court.

I suggest if the hon. Prime Minister wants to do the job in a business-like way, he will agree to the appointment of a Select Committee of the Legislature, which can sit after the court actions are completed, when there will be tranquility, as far as the persons appearing before the courts are concerned, and there will be unlimited time as far as dealing with this matter is concerned.

I suggest he is pulling the wool over our eyes by his suggestion this afternoon, and he is putting through a smart political move by which he will successfully smother the work before the Committee, and will prevent the Committee from doing the job it is appointed to do.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Leader of the Opposition talks about a "smart political move." He suggests that after these cases have been tried in court, and disposed of, a Select Committee of the House be set up in peace, quiet and tranquility, to consider the matters.

Mr. Speaker, these cases which we consider are very important cases, may go to the Supreme Court of Canada, and be heard a long time from now.

Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition, for one moment, want to argue that as Prime Minister of this province, I desire to stand here and withhold information from the people of this province until these cases have gone through the courts? I certainly do not.

For myself and my colleagues, and the government members here, may I say that we want to meet this thing head on, and deal with it in a business-like way.

I am rather surprised at the hon. Leader of the Opposition. At a time when he is going around this country talking about "disclosures," and saying a number of things which I can assure him will bear a great deal of correction, I am surprised that he would come today and ask us to do nothing about this matter until the courts have passed on it. It might conceivably be several years from now, before it gets through the Supreme Court of Canada. I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition has a very poor opinion of the representatives of the people and of the people they represent.

Our position has been this: this matter was brought to light by officials—very able and trusted officials—of the government itself. The investigation has been conducted without fear nor favour, and it will continue to be without fear nor favour.

It is our desire to clean up not only this matter, but if it is shown that there are other weaknesses in the practices which have grown up over many years, then let us correct them, and give our people and our province the very best there is. That is the situation.

In discussing this matter, I naturally mentioned the Fort William situation, because obviously, the hon. members opposite have been referring to it, but the Committee can deal with all sorts of public accounts. This Committee has broad powers of enquiry, and may enquire into any expenditures which are contained in or referred to in the Public Accounts. Any hon. member, after this Committee has been appointed, may enquire into any item of expenditure, which an hon. member or members may particularly want to scrutinize. It is in no way limited to the Fort William matter, or any other matter. It is wide open for any hon. member of this House to enquire into any expenditure in the province, and that is the way we want it to remain.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I was not in the House when the argument first started on this point, but I would like to ask the hon. Prime Minister that this House, including the hon. members of the Opposition, be assured without delay, just how far we can go in speaking to this matter in the House, or before the Public Accounts Committee. If you are going to declare this matter sub judice, then we are handicapped in the House.

Perhaps it may be that we will be able to speak about these matters to a certain extent inside the House, but when we go before the Public Accounts Committee, we will be told, "That is 'out'; you cannot talk any more about that subject."

What good would a meeting of the Public Accounts Committee be if we found that to be the fact? I think the government owes it to the House and to the Opposition particularly to let us know without delay just how far we can go in discussing these matters in the House and before the Committee on Public Accounts.

MR. OLIVER: On that very point, may I say, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. Prime Minister, that it is hardly fair for him to bring up the motion to refer these matters to the Public Accounts Committee, when in one breath, he is saying "You will have the widest possible opportunity to examine," and in the next breath, he says there is doubt as to whether we may examine at all or not. I do not think the hon. Prime Minister is on solid ground in that regard.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know whether the hon. Leader of the Opposition is even on the ground. I think he is still up in the air. This matter came up in a very proper way. The Committee has been constituted in the House, and the hon. Leader of the Opposition's interest is apparently in the Public Accounts. I made my statement in relation to the powers of the Committee, and I suggest he get Hansard and read carefully what I said. He will find that not only is there no attempt to restrict anything in any way, shape or form; but on the contrary, there is a desire to give the House the most complete information.

I never mentioned "sub judice" at all; that was mentioned by the hon. members opposite. But I do point out that there is a situation in which the Crown and the province could be prejudiced at the present time in connection with the disclosure of premature information.

That was the case when this matter was put before a jury of the people just a week ago today.

I went into East Simcoe, but I was most careful not to refer to these matters, because of the restrictions which had been placed upon me by very trusted officers, the Provincial Auditor and others.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question of the hon. Prime Minister, and I want to preface the question with the statement that it seems to me to be necessary for the Leader of the Official Opposition to seek all the safeguards he is trying to obtain, there is something, at the same time, in what the hon. Prime Minister said about procedure. So it seems to me, as one who has no special interest except to get to the bottom of things, and have the facts revealed.

It does seem reasonable for the hon. Prime Minister to say that the suggestion about appointing a Select Committee, to act after the matter will have been cleared through the courts, is rather a poor suggestion. It may take years, and it may be, there will be no Conservative Government in the province by that time and perhaps even some people now in Opposition, will no longer be in the House, and it would, therefore, I think, be a wrong procedure to follow.

Now, agreeing with the hon. Prime Minister, I want to ask whether his policy of referring the matter to the Public Accounts Committee will prevent this House from deciding on any other course during this Session, such as the appointment of a Royal Commission, or the appointment of a Select Committee, or any other step which the House may consider advisable in dealing with this matter?

That is the question, Mr. Speaker, which I will repeat. Does this action rule out any of the other methods I have suggested? If it does, then I would be strenuously opposed to the suggestion of the government that the Public Accounts Committee will be the only channel through which this matter may be cleared or processed.

If, on the other hand, the action of the government does not preclude the possibility of this House resorting to other means of dealing with the matter, such as a Royal Commission, or a Select Committee, or any other means, then, of course, it remains before the House, and we shall be able to return to it and refer to it, and make proposals, motions, or any other suggestions we may think necessary.

I think that is important when dealing with this matter now.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say that the hon. Leader of the Opposition on Thursday will probably argue for a Royal Commission. He has asked for it before, but I think the course I have suggested is the best course to take to protect the people of this province.

MR. OLIVER: It may be that I will argue for a Royal Commission, and it is a very smart move on the part of the government to take such action as will make that argument wholly useless.

What the hon. Prime Minister has done is to put this before the Public Accounts Committee, where he knows it cannot be properly argued; where he knows the facts cannot be properly adduced, and where it will provide an umbrella under which the government can proceed in temporary immunity. That is all.

MR. GRUMMETT: I think the government owes it to the Opposition to let us know where we are going. The hon. Prime Minister was unnecessarily sharp with the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

HON. MR. FROST: He accused me of "pulling the wool over the eyes of the people," and that is perhaps why I was a bit sharp.

MR. OLIVER: You cannot be too sharp. Go right ahead.

MR. GRUMMETT: If a Select Committee cannot do anything, as suggested by the hon. Prime Minister, then what is the Public Accounts Committee going to do?

MR. OLIVER: Nothing.

MR. GRUMMETT: Absolutely nothing. It means that we in the Opposition are completely stymied, and during all this Session, we can only sit here and wait for a magistrate or other court to deal with the matter at the Head of the Lakes.

I understand a preliminary enquiry has not yet been held. This matter was brought to the attention of the officials some considerable time ago, and still no legal steps have been taken to expedite the matter in the courts.

HON. MR. FROST: You are wrong there.

MR. GRUMMETT: The matter is dragging in the courts, and it will be some time before the preliminary enquiry will be undertaken and the case proceeded with.

HON. MR. FROST: The government is very anxious to get ahead with these cases.

MR. GRUMMETT: I believe that the time lapse since the charges were first laid up to the preliminary hearing is too long, and it creates doubt in the minds of each hon. member of the Opposition as to the reason for this delay. If this delay can be prolonged until this House adjourns, and we cannot discuss it in the Public Accounts Committee, nor in the House, what can we do? The whole matter can be washed out, and no one get to the bottom of it.

HON. MR. FROST: This matter, in the mind of the Leader of the Opposition, is so beset with doubt, that there is nothing I can do. However, I will do my best, and I think you will be satisfied.

MR. GRUMMETT: The Opposition is curious on many points.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister did not answer my question. Will the referring of this matter to the Public Accounts Committee be interpreted as meaning the exclusion of any other method of procedure.

HON. MR. FROST: No, it will not.

MR. SALSBERG: May I finish? Does that signify the government has closed its mind, such as it has, and is going to limit itself only to a procedure which we on this side of the House question very, very seriously? Does that mean the government has come to a conclusion?

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member has asked a question. May I answer it? First of all, he refers to "such mind as the government has." We have sufficient mind, that at least we can make it up, and that is more than the hon. member can do.

Let me assure the hon. member that the fact that the Provincial Auditor, and his Department, and Messrs. J. D. Wood and Gordon Co. are engaged in this matter, does not preclude any other action whatever, nor does the consideration of this question, in whole or in part, by the Public Accounts Committee preclude any other action.

I have endeavoured to assure the hon. member that the only thing which will affect it, will be what is in the best interests of the people of this province, and in the best interests of good government in the province.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, after the hon. Prime Minister's remarks, I would take it that as long as questions from the Opposition in the Public Accounts Committee do not concern the Fort William area, they will be quite proper, but insofar as the Department of Highways is concerned, they will be sub judice?

There is one more point I would like to have clarified. In my view, it would be within the function of this Committee to call witnesses. To what extent will the Opposition be squelched by the suggestion of the possible cost of bringing down from the north important witnesses, who may give valuable evidence to this Committee? Will we have a free hand in calling witnesses before this Committee?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I suggest to the hon. member that he carefully read what I have said this afternoon to the House. It will be in Hansard. I think it is perfectly plain. I suggest he read it over.

I would also remind him that the government has not had since the commencement of this matter some months ago, the slightest intention of holding back anything.

MR. OLIVER: Until now.

HON. MR. FROST: Not now, either. I will say to the hon. member he will find this matter will be probed to the bottom in the fullest and most complete way.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. Prime Minister knows quite well that cannot be done.

MR. SPEAKER: I am afraid we have broken a good many of the rules of the House this afternoon, and I can assure you, you will not have the amount of liberty you have had today, for instance, in having spoken three or four times on one subject.

Motion agreed to.

HON. A. G. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following:

(1) The report of the Minister of Education for the calendar year, 1952.

(2) The Annual Report of the Teachers' Superannuation Commission for the year ended October 31st, 1953.

(3) The Annual Report of the Ontario College of Art, for the fiscal year ended March 31st, 1953.

(4) The Report of the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto, for the year ended June 30th, 1953.

(5) The Forty-fifth Annual Report of The Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, for the year ended December 31st, 1952.

(6) Seventh Annual Report of the Research Council of Ontario for the year ended March 31st, 1953.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of Bills.

THE TELEPHONE ACT, 1954

Hon. George H. Challies (Minister Without Portfolio) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "The Telephone Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

He said: This Bill establishes a Telephone Authority, along the lines recommended by the Commission dealing with this problem, together with certain rights which are now under the authority of the Ontario Municipal Board, which will be transferred to the new Telephone Authority.

The Bill, while it is a long one, is comparatively simple. The only right now under the Ontario Municipal Board which will not be transferred to the new Authority is the question of the approval of the issuance of bonds.

THE LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

Mr. T. D. Thomas (Ontario) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Labour Relations Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day are called, I desire to make reference to the passing of Miss Agnes Campbell MacPhail, for a number of years an hon. member of this House.

Before coming to this Chamber, I was advised by Your Honour that the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) might not be here, and he had asked that any reference to Miss MacPhail be postponed until tomorrow. In the meantime, the Hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has advised that he is going to Priceville to attend her funeral tomorrow, and might not be here, so I think we might refer to this matter today, and pay our tribute of respect to her memory which is honoured by the flag flying at half mast over this building.

The funeral service is tomorrow at Priceville, and representatives from the government, the Opposition, and other hon. members, including those of her party, will be represented.

Miss MacPhail was well-known to a great many of us here, having sat in this House from 1943, for a time, and then following the election of 1948, she again sat in this House. She was the first to achieve the distinction of becoming a member of the Canadian House of Commons at Ottawa.

Miss MacPhail was elected, according to my recollection, in the election of 1921, as the federal member for one of the ridings taking in part of the County of Grey. I am not sure of the political designation of the riding, but I believe it was South East Grey.

Votes for women had just come into effect some four years before in a rather limited way, in the election of 1917, but it became fully effective in the election of 1921, and at that time Miss MacPhail was the first woman to be elected to Parliament in Canada, and, indeed, it may be in the Commonwealth, although I am not sure on that point. Certainly, she was the first woman to be elected in Canada.

Miss MacPhail remained a very distinguished member of the House of Commons for some nineteen years until 1940. Then she added to her great record by being one of the first women elected in the 1943 election. There were two women elected at that time, and Miss MacPhail was one of them. She certainly was the first woman to be elected both to the Parliament of Canada and to this Legislature. That is a very great record indeed.

In all those days she contributed, in her own colourful way, to the issues of the day both at Ottawa and here in Toronto. I would say of Miss MacPhail that she was militant; she was able, and she always had an abiding interest, as a woman, in the betterment of men, women and children. Indeed, in her great profession of school teaching that was exemplified long before she became a member of these Houses of Parliament.

I referred last Thursday to the passing of Doctor MacPhee, and I mentioned the fearless way in which he met the inevitable. Miss MacPhail was in the same position. She knew her grave condition, and she faced it bravely.

I remember reading in the press this morning that in 1938, nearly sixteen years ago, the doctors told Miss MacPhail she should take it easy, and she said, "So I will not live long? I will live what is left, and do what I want to do." She was indeed one of the fearless women who faced life bravely, and did not allow herself to be depressed by the fact that because of her ailment her time was limited.

That was in 1938. Since that time, to my knowledge, she has run in at least five elections. She was militant, and placed her views before the people, and advocated what she thought was right.

I think we are the poorer here in Ontario today, and in Canada, by the passing of this very great Canadian woman, for whom we all had such a very great regard.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I might say it is with a very deep sense of regret that we, here in this House, received the news of the passing of Miss Agnes MacPhail, a woman who accomplished much for her own sex in Canada, and whose interest was the betterment of all mankind as ably stated by the hon. Prime Minister. I must say, Mr. Speaker, it is difficult to follow the hon. Prime Minister in a matter of this kind. He is so expressive and covers the subject so very fully that it is difficult to add to what he has said.

As he stated, Agnes MacPhail devoted her life to a principle. Also, no matter where she went, her friends were not only those of her own party. I know, that she had a very deep regard and a very deep friendship for many of the hon. members sitting on the Treasury Benches. She regarded them as her friends. Party politics did not exclude her personal interest in the people she met in political life.

Agnes MacPhail served nineteen years in the Federal House, nineteen years pioneering ideals; ideals which bore fruit. We have seen many pieces of legislation go on the Statute books of the Federal House which Agnes MacPhail helped to formulate long before they were accepted, and there are many pieces of legislation which will be accepted and go on the books of this House in the future which she helped to formulate. Her influence will be felt for a long time. She was an outstanding woman, a woman who pioneered the cause of womanhood, and in this day and age we need many like her. In this day and age when many of our ideals are being torn down, we need women like Agnes MacPhail, with patriotism, integrity and respect, and I am sure that all of us here in the House regret the passing of this able and brilliant woman.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, not only as Leader of the Opposition, but as a firm political and personal friend of Miss MacPhail over a long period of time, I want to join with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and with the hon. member for South Cochrane (Mr. Grummett) in expressing a tribute to her memory here today.

I think one of the outstanding traits of Miss MacPhail was—and she was very proud of it—the fact that she was a pioneer, a pioneer not only in that she was the first woman member of the Federal Parliament and the first woman, as the hon. Prime Minister quite aptly said, to sit in both Federal and Provincial Houses at subsequent times.

Miss MacPhail pioneered in ideals and in new things. She wanted to move forward. She was ever restless and she was ever moving forward from one accomplishment to a new field of endeavour, which served to protect and to enhance the interests of the ordinary person in this country of ours.

She was very fond of people. She was a humanitarian in every sense of the word. She was a firm friend and a mighty advocate in high places for people of humble means.

I think one of the things which can be said about Miss MacPhail at this time is that she was without doubt, in my mind at least, the ablest woman speaker in Canada of her time. She had a sound logic, a very quick wit, and she employed both to serve the people of this country.

I think we can say today, as we mourn her passing, that there will be thousands of people in this country who will mourn the passing of Agnes MacPhail, and this province and this country will be the richer because she passed this way.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, the occasion we mark at present is really unusual, in that we are paying respect to an unusual person. Everything which has been said, Mr. Speaker, about the late Miss MacPhail is unquestionably true, but what perhaps should also be added is that she symbolized in many ways the profound changes which have taken place in the country in the last half century, the passing from a predominately agricultural society to one which is predominately industrial.

Miss MacPhail expressed the upsurge among the farmers and the city workmen against the new conditions, the new difficulties and new hardships which were placed upon them.

She, perhaps more than any other person, will remain identified with that upsurge. It was not a revolutionary movement of which she was a prophetess, it was in the main a middle-class reaction to the new conditions, but she remained identified with it. I say this with all respect and with the highest regard for all who were associated with her in earlier times but who for their own good reasons have gone in another direction to bring about the results which they set out to achieve originally with her. She remained identified with the farm movement, independent and apart from what we call "the old line parties."

She was a person who could have chosen a path which would have brought her a great deal of security and personal well-being, she could not obviously follow any course but the one in her mind, was necessary to be followed, to bring about the betterment of conditions for the common folk. She was one of the founders of the new movement with which I do not see eye to eye very often, but she perhaps, as I said before, more than anyone else remained steadfast to the new cause she embarked upon immediately after the First World War.

She recognized the need of farmers and city workers joining hands for their common protection and well-being. It is in that role that she will forever retain a unique position in the history of the political life of this province and this country. There is no question in my mind, Mr. Speaker, but that there will be areas named after her, schools named to commemorate her name, and there will be clubs and organizations which will want to bear the name of Miss MacPhail.

Her life was rich and her activities and experiences, I think, will bear studying by all of us who are interested in the advancement of the well-being of the common folk.

In conclusion, I want to say that I, like everyone else, found her a very warm, friendly and encouraging person. Regardless of her differences with me as well as with others of other groups. I found Miss MacPhail always very sympathetic, very encouraging, very humane. We can say of her that she was not only a fighter for the good of the people and that she fought as she saw the light, and as she understood that fight, but that she had also a great personality. A great person has passed from our midst in the death of Miss MacPhail and I join with all others in honouring her memory.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, there are a number of Bills on the Order Paper which I believe should go to the various Committees, and I would like to advance them with that end in view.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DUNLOP (Minister of Education) moves second reading of Bill No. 33, "The Department of Education Act, 1954."

He said: On first reading I explained in some detail the purpose of this Bill which is to consolidate three existing Acts known as "The Department of Education Act," "The Schools for the Deaf and the Blind Act," and "The Vocational Education Act, Part II." I suggest this Bill be referred to the Committee on Education.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

HON. MR. FROST: If there are any Orders here which hon. members desire held, we will not proceed with them.

MR. OLIVER: Are they all going to the various Committees?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, they are all going to various Committees.

MR. OLIVER: That is satisfactory.

HON. MR. FROST: This is only for the purpose of advancing Committee work.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Prime Minister one question. It is customary in the House to debate a Bill on second reading; that is, any general remarks made on the Bill and any general debate takes place on the second reading. Can we be assured when the Bill comes before the House in Committee the same procedure may be followed, that we will be given the greatest latitude in presenting any general remarks on the Bills?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. Mr. Speaker, if any hon. members of the House desire to ask the sponsor of the Bill any questions or feel an explanation is necessary today, I will be very glad to have it given. It was only for the purpose of getting these matters advanced so that the Bills could go to the Committee dealing with them. If any hon. member would like any Bill held for debate, we will hold it over and give the explanation at some other time.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE EXPENSES ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moved second reading of Bill No. 34, "An Act to amend the Administration of Justice Expenses Act."

He said: This Bill and the Bills contained in Orders from Number 4 to Number 20, I propose to refer to the Legal Bills Committee.

I have explained each of these Bills in a general way on first reading and I will not make any further explanation unless some definite question arises.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

BILLS OF SALE AND CHATTEL MORTGAGES ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moved second reading of Bill No. 35, "An Act to amend The Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages Act."

MR. SALSBERG: That Bill is not even before us. It is not printed.

HON. MR. PORTER: According to the Order Paper, it is.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not in my book in front of me. It is bad enough to allow Bills to go on before we have a chance of properly reading them. It is understandable if they are going to Committee, but they are not in the book.

HON. MR. PORTER: It will go back. Do you want me to explain it? I explained it on first reading.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not want to make a fuss about it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Do you want it held out, or do you want it to go on?

MR. SALSBERG: It is not printed, it should not go on.

HON. MR. PORTER: We will hold it out.

HON. MR. FROST: If it is not in the book, we will hold it back automatically. These are marked "Printed" here, but if they are not, we will hold them back.

THE CORONERS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moved second reading of Bill No. 36, "An Act to amend The Coroners Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

THE COUNTY COURTS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moved second reading of Bill No. 37, "An Act to amend The County Courts Act."

MR. SALSBERG: Is that going to the Legal Bills Committee?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

THE DESERTED WIVES' AND CHILDREN'S MAINTENANCE ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moved second reading of Bill No. 38, "An Act to amend The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act."

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): That is not printed.

MR. SPEAKER: We should consider those not printed as not moved.

HON. MR. PORTER: We will hold that.

THE CROWN ATTORNEYS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves second reading of Bill No. 39, "An Act to amend The Crown Attorneys Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

THE INSURANCE ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves second reading of Bill No. 42, "An Act to amend The Insurance Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

THE JURORS ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves second reading of Bill No. 44, "An Act to amend The Jurors Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

THE MAGISTRATES ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves second reading of Bill No. 45, "An Act to amend The Magistrates Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

THE MECHANICS' LIEN ACT

Hon. Mr. Porter moves second reading of Bill No. 46, "An Act to amend The Mechanics' Lien Act."

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask whether the hon. Attorney-General would care to refer this Bill to the Labour Committee. It may sound odd at first glance, but I think it is quite properly a Bill which should be sent to the Labour Committee. It is for the protection of mechanics.

HON. MR. FROST: It will go to the Legal Bills Committee.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the Bill.

HON. MR. FROST: I think that concludes our deliberations for this afternoon. In moving the adjournment of the House, I would remind the hon. members that tomorrow is the day for moving and seconding the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

I move the adjournment of the House, Mr. Speaker.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.35 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 16, 1954

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

The Deputy Speaker in the Chair.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving reports by Committees.

MR. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the First Report of the Standing Committee on Standing Orders and move its adoption.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: Mr. Dempsey from the Standing Committee on Standing Orders presents the Committee's First Report as follows:

Your Committee has carefully examined the following Petitions and finds the Notices as published in each case sufficient.

Petition of the Corporation of the County of Frontenac praying that an Act may pass authorizing The Frontenac High School Board to present its annual estimates to the Council of the County of Frontenac only; and for other purposes.

Petition of The Toronto East General and Orthopaedic Hospital praying that an Act may pass authorizing an increase in the number of elected governors from 12 to 30.

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Fergus praying that an Act may pass changing the name of "Groves Memorial Hospital" to "The Groves Memorial Community Hospital" and establishing "The Groves Memorial Community Hospital Commission."

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Mimico praying that an Act may pass authorizing payment of pensions to employees of the Corporation; and for other purposes.

Petition of the Corporation of the Sao Paulo Light and Power Company, Limited, praying that an Act may pass authorizing the transfer of the Company to the City of Sao Paulo in the State of Sao Paulo, United States of Brazil; and for other purposes.

Petition of Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec praying that an Act may pass respecting the power of the Boards of the Convention to hold real and personal property.

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Palmerston praying that an Act may pass increasing the membership in The Palmerston Hospital Commission.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

THE DEPUTY SPEAKER: Motions.

HON. MR. FROST: (Prime Minister): Moves that the names of the hon. members for Kenora (Mr. Wren) and the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) be added to the list of names composing the Committee on Public Accounts.

Motion agreed to.

He said: I think there are some others. I will look into the matter in the course of the next day or two, but the names I have mentioned should be added at this time. I promised I would enter their names but I have not had time to look at any other requests.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I want to state that I have, as a result of the suggestion of yesterday, communicated with the hon. Prime Minister and provided him with the names of some of the Committees upon which I feel I could make a contribution, if I were to become a member. One of them is the Committee on Public Accounts. I note the hon. Prime Minister's statement that he has other names which he has not yet had a chance to consider and give the necessary attention.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I will be quite content to add the hon. member's (Mr. Salsberg) name to the Committee on Public Accounts right now. If the motion can be changed and the name of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) can be added, I will do it right now.

MR. SALSBERG: That will be very much appreciated. I wanted to keep the records straight.

Motion agreed to.

Introduction of Bills.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. MR. FROST moves that when this House adjourns the present sitting thereof it will stand adjourned until two of the clock tomorrow afternoon and for the remainder of the week and that the provisions of rule 2 of the Assembly be suspended so far as they may apply to this motion.

He said: That is somewhat unusual. I gave notice, I think, on Friday, that tomorrow at four o'clock there have been arrangements made for a visit of the hon. members of this House, the hon. members of Parliament, and the gentlemen of the Senate, to the new subway construction here in Toronto.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), who is absent today attending the funeral of Miss MacPhail, has a very important meeting, I believe, in Ottawa on Thursday, and he asked me if it would be possible to adjourn the debate to enable him to attend. We arrived at this arrangement: that we would meet Thursday at two o'clock to enable the hon. Leader of the Opposition to take myself and my colleagues to task for many things, and by so doing it would enable him, I think, to have pretty well concluded his address by the time he has to catch his plane for Ottawa.

On Friday, Mr. Speaker, ordinarily we meet at two o'clock in order that the hon. members may catch their trains, so I am making the arrangement for those three days. If there are any objections from any of the hon. members opposite, I will be very glad to consider them.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. WELSH: (Provincial Secretary): I beg leave to present to the House the following:

(1) The Sixty-seventh Annual Report of the Niagara Parks Commission for the fiscal year ending October 31, 1953;

(2) The Report Relating to the Registration of Births, Marriages and Deaths for the Province of Ontario for the year ending December 31, 1951;

(3) The Report of the Commission on Agriculture Loans for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1953;

(4) The Financial Statement of the Settlers' Loan Commission for the year ending March 31, 1953, and copies of Orders in Council under the Northern Development Act.

MR. DEPUTY SPEAKER: Introduction of Bills.

THE TORONTO EAST GENERAL AND ORTHOPAEDIC HOSPITAL ACT

Mr. Nickle (Kingston) in the absence of Mr. Macaulay, moves first reading of a Bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Toronto East General and Orthopaedic Hospital."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

THE BAPTIST CONVENTION OF ONTARIO AND QUEBEC ACT

Mr. Nixon (Brant) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

SAO PAULO LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY, LIMITED

Mr. Roberts (St. Patrick) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act respecting Sao Paulo Light and Power Company, Limited."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

THE TOWN OF FERGUS

Mr. Root (Wellington North) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Town of Fergus."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

THE TOWN OF PALMERSTON

Mr. Edwards (Perth) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Town of Palmerston."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

THE TOWN OF MIMICO

Mr. Brandon (York West) moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Town of Mimico."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

THE FRONTENAC HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT

Mr. Edwards in the absence of Mr. Pringle, moves first reading of Bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Frontenac High School District."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the Bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the Day.

HON. MR. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Before the Orders of the Day I would like to make a statement regarding the investigation relating to the Trans-Canada Highway contracts. In the Huntsville Division Number 11 of the Ontario Department of Highways, certain irregularities appear to be indicated. The circumstances are such that we feel that the Division Engineer, Mr. D. S. Patterson should be suspended pending a full investigation of the contract.

I wish to make it very clear that we are not pre-judging this case, but the circumstances indicate that in the interests of the Department of Highways this suspension should take place. May I say the investigation will be full, fair and impartial.

MR. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Before the Orders of the Day I would like to direct a question to the government on a matter of great importance.

As is generally known there are tens of thousands of citizens around Toronto who are unemployed, due to no fault of their own, and they are suffering extreme hardship as a result of that enforced unemployment.

As is unquestionably known to the government, there are in the City of Toronto alone, hundreds of single men, who are sleeping on floors of various missions and in other less protected places, such as around steam pipes leading to big buildings, and so on.

MR. SPEAKER: May I advise the hon. member there is a question which I allowed him to ask, but I am not going to allow a speech to be made in asking the question. May I suggest the hon. member state his question clearly and specifically.

MR. SALSBERG: I need your guidance. I am just trying to make clear what the government should do.

MR. SPEAKER: We have a great deal of business to do this afternoon. May we have the question?

MR. SALSBERG: The question concerns perhaps one of the most important items of business at this time. The question is: Is the government of this province fully aware—as I am sure it is—of these horrible circumstances afflicting so many citizens and their families in this province? Is the government prepared to take some immediate action to remedy these circumstances by either providing cash relief for those who are not in receipt of any form of unemployment insurance, or assistance or calling a special conference between the Federal, Provincial and Municipal levels of government to find a way to help the municipalities to meet the obligation which they cannot obviously escape since they are closest to the people?

My question is as outlined and I think that not only the hon. members of the House, but scores of municipal councils are anxiously awaiting a reply from the government.

MR. SPEAKER: I am very sorry to interrupt. I endeavour to be fair, and I expect fairness on the part of those who are allowed the privilege of the House. We are not having a debate, but a question, and the hon. member knows that as well as anybody else. The question has been asked, and it is entirely in the hands of the government to reply.

MR. SALSBERG: Just for the sake of the record, I thought I was only asking a question. If I was not, in your opinion, I am sorry.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the question has been raised by the hon. member, and I think the answer or answers are really well-known to himself.

First of all, may I point out the situation which exists. Back in the early 1940's there were certain arrangements made with the Federal Government. One was in relation to Unemployment Insurance. At that time some of us who are here today were in the House, including the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

The provision concerning Unemployment Insurance carried with it the right of the Federal Government to institute a plan which they did, and an obligation was placed upon the Legislature at that time, and indeed the attitude of the government of that day, the Hepburn administration, of which the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) was a member, was that the problem of unemployment, as such, was really a problem for the Federal Government.

To that extent the provision for unemployed relief for unemployed employables was removed from the Statute.

That left the province with their segment of the problem, of providing for relief assistance for the unemployables. That plan was followed then, and it has been followed ever since.

Concerning the unemployment situation; may I point out that not only myself, but my colleagues, and I am sure the hon. members of this House, recognize there is unemployment in this country. As to whether it is seasonal unemployment or unemployment found in certain industries, of course, is the question. I read in the newspapers—as I presume most of the hon. members here did also—a comment by Rt. hon. Mr. Howe, relative to the implement industry, in which he stated, in his opinion, that industry would not be able to support the degree of employment which it formerly did, and there would have to be adjustments. I think I am quoting correctly what Rt. hon. Mr. Howe said.

There was something relating to the textile industry, which was hitting some of the communities rather badly. Because of this condition matters relating to tariffs, to agreements with other nations, and other things which the Government of Canada in its wisdom feels should be carried on for the good of Canada, are completely beyond the capacity of this House to deal with.

The best indication we get from Ottawa is their expressed opinion 1954 is going to be a year of high employment. According to the Ottawa authorities, as they assess the problem, there will be cases of spotty unemployment, which seems to be the feeling of the Federal Government and its experts. However, after all, we are a province and a part of Canada, and we have to take the assessment made by the government at Ottawa in relation to these things, and their expectation is that 1954 is going to be a year of high employment, despite the fact that there are some points at which there will be some unemployment, which will require adjustments.

Of course, these things always have their pressures and their impacts. I am sure everybody here must be sympathetic to those who are affected by these trends. Nevertheless, due to action taken by the government many years ago, there is unemployment insurance which is designed to make somewhat easier those particular problems.

That, I think, is the situation, as I would give it to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg).

Mr. Speaker, concerning this province, and what this province would do; may I point out we have in Ontario today—not designed because of conditions of recession or levelling off—a tremendous works programme, so tremendous that it taxes some of our Departments to take care of it. That is something to which I referred yesterday. I referred to the fact that it is our aim and design to strengthen our Departments in every way possible to provide, if the necessity should arise, for increased public works to be conducted on a plane of the highest efficiency, in order to provide employment, if that should be so indicated by the Ottawa government.

I do not say our works programme should be indicated nor dictated by any other government, but again I say we are Canadians and we try to follow the trends which are indicated by the Federal Government, which has control of these matters.

It was only four years ago at this time that I stood in this House in connection with a similar problem. In 1950—at this time of the year—we had some recession, and some levelling off. At that time, there was a demand from the hon. members opposite that there should be the issuance of cash relief, and for us to go into various things for which our province is neither constitutionally responsible, nor are the municipalities in this province fiscally capable of doing. At that time, the same answer was given by this government, and by the Ottawa government. As a matter of fact, we have continued from that time up to the present with perhaps the highest level of employment the country has ever seen. I am not a prophet, and I do not fore-cast anything, but I do say that the indications from the same people who made the fore-cast at that time, are that 1954 will be a period of very high employment.

Concerning our capacity to carry on public works; already, in this province, we have the greatest public-works programme ever engaged in by any government, in Hydro, roads and public buildings. It has been fore-cast there will be between 40,000 and 50,000 houses started in this province this coming year—an all-time high.

Mr. Speaker, the Federal Government has indicated they are not going to engage in any additional public work at the present time—and again I think I am quoting them correctly—but if it is necessary, the credit of this province and our fiscal position are such that if the Federal Government indicates it is necessary for the provinces to enter into a public-works programme, we are prepared to do so.

That is the line we have followed for years and that is why we have established on a sound basis the credit position of the province, to enable us to meet this situation.

I think that answers the question.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: First order, consideration of the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the Session.

Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. SPEAKER: Mr. Jolley moves that we, Her Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects of the Legislative Assembly of the Province of Ontario, now assembled, beg leave to thank Your Honour for the gracious speech Your Honour has addressed to us.

He said: I am sure that I voice the sentiments of this House when I suggest that our deep sympathy goes out to the members of the Royal Family in the death of our late Queen Mary. She personified all the attributes which we like to associate with royalty. She was a well beloved member of a close-knit and affectionate family circle. To the end of her long and eventful life she maintained the love and respect of the family circle and the people of the Commonwealth. The Empire is the poorer because of her departure from the scene wherein she had been such an impressive figure for so long a time.

It is fitting that I should make a brief reference to the magnificent ceremonies of the year just past which culminated in the Coronation of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II. It was my very great privilege to be in London on that occasion and to mingle with the scores of thousands who had gathered in that mighty and historic city to glimpse something of one of the greatest pageants of history. When on a former occasion as Princess Elizabeth, Her Majesty with her distinguished husband visited our nation, I had the honour, in common with other thousands of her subjects, of meeting the Royal couple. I am sure that every member of this House joins me in congratulations to Her Majesty on the occasion of her formal Coronation. We wish for her and for her distinguished and valiant husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, long life and all happiness. We trust that Her Majesty may enjoy a long and peaceful and prosperous reign. Our thoughts go with the Royal couple as they visit at this time the other Dominions of the Commonwealth. We wish them a safe and pleasant journey and a safe return to their home-land.

I am sure it was a source of satisfaction to all of us that the Hon. the Prime Minister was able to attend the Coronation ceremonies as an honoured guest; also that a number of his colleagues in this House enjoyed a similar privilege. I am sure they all returned to this province with a new love and respect for the Monarchy and an added faith in the future of Britain and the Commonwealth.

As a new member of this hon. House I appreciate most deeply the honour bestowed upon me by being permitted to move the adoption of the address presented by His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. I know my constituents also will appreciate the nature of this occasion which is, shall I say, a compliment to my riding rather than in the direction of my own humble efforts.

NIAGARA FALLS BY-ELECTION

I am grateful to the people of Niagara Falls Riding for their vote of confidence of October last which now permits me to participate in the work of this Assembly. My predecessor (Mr. Houck) I believe represented the riding in this House for nineteen years, or thereabouts, with the exception of one term. He decided last year to seek promotion to the House of Commons, an ambition which he achieved in August of last year. Our political views are along divergent lines but this does not affect a long and valued personal friendship. I know also that he enjoys many friendships among all parties in this Assembly. I am sure we all hope that he may be happy in his new field of public service.

I am fortunate indeed in having very many good friends in my home community. I am grateful not only for their support, but for their overwhelming support in the by-election of October last. But in supporting me I feel that they were showing their appreciation of the good government we are getting under this Administration. In the campaign I was anxious to have our people extend a vote of thanks and approval to the hon. the Prime Minister and his colleagues. This ambition was realized and on October 26th, last, the people of Niagara Falls Riding confirmed the all-Ontario verdict of a couple of years ago. It was a great honour to me to be elected to this House by my own people. It is an added pleasure to be able to render some small public service under the leadership of a Prime Minister who enjoys the respect and confidence of this whole great province.

It is an added pleasure to be able to congratulate the hon. the Prime Minister and his Administration on the outstanding victory attained in the Riding of Simcoe East on Monday, February 8th. It will shortly be our privilege to welcome the member-elect from this historic riding as he takes his seat in this House.

Since the people of Ontario entrusted the management of their affairs to a Progressive Conservative Government, it has been necessary to call seven by-elections. In each and every instance the by-election has been called without delay, which formerly was not always the case. In each and every instance a supporter of this Administration has been elected. May I say that we on this side of the House deeply appreciate these repeated evidences of the confidence of our people. If indeed the average by-election constitutes a reflection of democratic sentiment—and usually it is so interpreted—then I suggest that the hon. the Prime Minister and his colleagues of the Cabinet are justifiably heartened in the performance of their tasks by these repeated evidences of the esteem of our people.

THE MEMBERS

Every member of this House will join me, I am sure, in expressing regret at the recent passing of the hon. the member for Simcoe East (Mr. McPhee). It was not my privilege to know the late member who represented Simcoe East but I have heard him spoken of on all sides as a kindly, diligent and efficient member of this Assembly. Our sympathies go out to his family and to his very large circle of friends. Our province has lost an experienced and faithful public servant.

It is regretted by all of us that the hon. the Minister of Lands and Forests, (Mr. Gemmell) has suffered severe illness in recent months. His department is a large and important one and his post is charged with heavy responsibilities. We all rejoice that in degree he has been able to resume his duties, and I sincerely trust that he will be able to make his always worthy contribution to our debates in this Assembly.

Likewise, we all regret the prolonged illness of the hon. the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas). His long and specialized training and his many estimable qualities of mind and heart fit him for the very heavy duties of his department. His absence, though temporary, is a great loss to this House and to Ontario Agriculture. May I express the sincere hope that he will soon be with us again.

The membership of this hon. House includes representatives from very many walks of life. Most of the hon. members, I think, have enjoyed experience in our municipal councils—a valuable experience in relation to their later duties in this Assembly.

I think the hon. the Prime Minister is to be congratulated on taking advantage of the energy and experience of the private members of this House by the organization of select committees to study and to report upon numerous matters related to the public welfare.

Among other committees I might mention that appointed to review the status of Indians, the committee to study lake levels, the Cemeteries Committee, and the committee on Reform Institutions. These committees have all approached their respective tasks in a non-partisan spirit. Their members have endeavoured to find workable solutions for the many problems which they have reviewed. I am certain that this House and our people generally, await the tabling of their reports with great interest. As a private member myself—a very new private member—it is a good feeling to realize that we of the back benches have work to do which may result in a contribution of some real worth.

NIAGARA INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

I am glad to be able to report that the community I have the honour to represent is keeping pace with the rest of Ontario in the industrial development which is a heartening, indeed amazing factor in our economic life. I scarcely need say that Hydro developments are on a mammoth scale. Of this, I shall speak in some detail a little later on.

We have in the Niagara area five sizeable projects relating to new industrial establishments. Noranda Mines, Ltd., for example, is constructing a four-million-dollar processing plant, a huge affair of major importance. Four or five other major concerns are expanding their existing establishments. Three of our leading banks have constructed new branch offices and a number of other bank premises have been remodelled and generally improved.

For 1954 the erection of five hundred new houses is anticipated and this will involve additional school accommodation. Summing up the current programme in the Niagara area, may I say it involves about Six Million Dollars in new capital investment. It means about seven hundred and fifty new jobs—which in turn means new livelihoods for three thousand to four thousand people. The increase in industrial wages, not including construction payrolls, is estimated at two million dollars a year. At Niagara Falls we are especially well located as to power and transportation facilities, but, in greater or less degree, we see the same type of development over almost all Ontario. It is a healthy sign. It shows that our best financial and industrial brains are not selling Ontario short. The long view seems to indicate that Ontario is certain to be one of the world's very greatest industrial areas, and indeed, we have already moved a long way in that direction.

NIAGARA PARKS COMMISSION

I should like to say a word about the job being done by the Niagara Parks Commission under the chairmanship of my hon. friend, the Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley). The work of the Commission was commenced many years ago; it has taken many forms; essentially, it has guaranteed the continuing existence of a beautiful setting for one of the world's great scenic wonders. Its domain embraces the whole Niagara frontier from Fort Erie to Queenston and beyond.

The park authority maintains many miles of roads and drives. It operates, and operates well, many facilities to attract and to serve the enormous influx of tourists. The late Mr. Mather contributed generously toward the striking memorial and park at the Peace Bridge. The late Sir Harry Oakes contributed the beautiful gardens which bear his name. The Ontario Department of Highways made a notable contribution as to the Queen Elizabeth Highway entrance and the related structures around the Rainbow Bridge. The horticultural school is performing a notable work in training boys and young men in landscape work, horticulture and so on.

As most of you know, plans are already in operation to ensure the continued beauty of the waterfall. The Canadian Falls, in particular, tends toward rapid erosion. Here, Hydro, in co-operation with the American authorities, is undertaking remedial works which will, I think I may say, guarantee in perpetuity the continued existence of the Falls in all their natural beauty. This is but one of many engineering triumphs added to the long record of Hydro successes.

It is many years since the first power development took form at the Falls, and it was not so long afterward that alarm began to be expressed as to the ultimate fate of the cataract. Naturally, the more water there is drawn off for power development in the section of river above the Falls, the less there is to go over the crest. The destruction of the waterfall as a scenic spectacle is something which would never be tolerated.

It was left to engineers of the Canadian Government, the Ontario Hydro and the United States Army Corps of Engineers to develop a remedial scheme, approved by all interested parties on July 22nd, last. This scheme saw actual start of construction in December, 1953. The United States and Canada participate in the plan according to recommendations of the International Joint Commission. In brief, the remedial works will create a more uniform flow in the Niagara River, especially over the twenty-six hundred foot crest line of the Horseshoe Falls which are eroding at the centre. A fifteen hundred and fifty-foot dam is to be installed at Grass Island Pool to control certain water levels. Channels on the Goat Island flank and the Canadian flank of the Horseshoe Falls will aid in producing an unbroken crest line and effect a pre-determined distribution of flow. Earth and rock fill will be used at the ends of the Horseshoe Falls to eliminate what is known as incidental flow at the extremities.

Here I should mention that Hydro's scale model of the Niagara River played an important part in working out details of the remedial scheme. This model, ninety-five feet long and thirty-seven feet wide, depicts five miles of river, from the tip of Grand Island to the Rainbow Bridge. This model was of the greatest assistance to the engineers who worked out the details of the important remedial project.

HYDRO

During the ensuing session of this House, I have no doubt the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) Vice-Chairman of the Hydro enterprise, will review for us the mammoth developments which have marked the Hydro field. Let me point out a few facts rather briefly. Hydro's big post-war expansion programme began in 1945. At this time there were 21,569 miles of rural line with 156,560 rural customers. Eight years later rural lines totalled 41,376 miles, serving 366,091 rural customers.

The big Hydro expansion programme, launched just eight days after V-J Day, has raised its dependable peak capacity to 4,807,100 horse-power, an 85.1 per cent. increase over the 1945 figure. By December 31, 1956, the increase will be 144 per cent. and it will have involved 15 new power sources, hydraulic and steam.

The developments at Niagara at this time are among the most impressive in the whole history of Hydro. With the installation of the pumped storage reservoir, the Sir Adam Beck No. 2 project will have an ultimate installed capacity of 1,828,000 horse-power. For purposes of comparison, I might add that Ontario's share of the St. Lawrence Development will be 1,100,000 horse-power.

The pumped-storage plan is of itself a remarkable, indeed an outstanding project. The reservoir will cover about 700 acres and will contain 650 million cubic feet of water. During off-peak hours, that is to say when demand for current is relatively low, pumps will lift water into the reservoir. Then, when demand is high, the pumps will operate in reverse, driven by the accumulated storage water. They will then be acting as turbo-generators, developing 228,000 horse-power.

I shall not attempt to review the enormous scope of Hydro expansion—the immense developments on the Ottawa River—in Eastern Ontario at Stewartville—the huge steam plants in Toronto and at Windsor. The fact remains that the danger of a power shortage is by no means over. Also the fact remains that this is the result of Ontario's astonishing growth. The next big development is the St. Lawrence project.

Here, the St. Lawrence project has finally been approved by the United States Senate. What the House of Representatives—Congress—will do, remains to be seen. There are evidences that the U.S.A. is becoming fairly well seized with the necessity for immediate action. The New York State Power Authority has been named by President Eisenhower as the official U.S. Agency to work with Hydro and there is real hope that actual construction will commence in the spring of this year. My information in short is that in the meantime Hydro is taking every preliminary step which can be taken so that there will be no delay in making a start once international and legal obstacles are cleared away.

I think the Hydro Commission deserves warm commendation for another recent measure of great importance. Arrangements have been made between the Ontario Hydro and the Detroit-Edison Company for an interchange of power through lines between Windsor and Detroit and again across the St. Clair River between Sarnia and Marysville, Mich. This arrangement makes for free interchange of electric energy up to 400,000 horse-power.

Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

We shall certainly have a more complete picture of the power situation as our debates proceed. It is, of course, a very live subject with us at Niagara. An abundance of cheap and dependable power, an ample and skilled labour force, excellent transportation systems, and huge, nearby markets, guarantee for Niagara Falls and indeed the whole peninsula a great and still greater industrial future. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that our community appreciates to the full the vision, the courage and the enterprise of this Administration and of the Hydro Commission in expanding the Hydro establishment. The evidence is every day before their eyes and more and more is the vital importance of all these Hydro projects being appreciated by all our people.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT

I have dwelt perhaps longer than I intended on the subject of Hydro. It is of itself a huge subject. But there are many other fields wherein the Administration has shown a very real awareness of current problems.

It is an elementary principle today that the state in an increasing degree assumes more and more responsibility for those permanently or temporarily unable to care for themselves. We do not expect the state to do everything for us. Far from it. We are not that kind of people. The Canadian people find little to attract them in the serfdom of Socialism or the slavery of Communism. But Ontario shows, I think, the most commendable progress in the quantity and quality of assistance rendered to the young, the old, the ill and the indigent.

We have, I believe, about the lowest tubercular death rate in Canada. The use of mass X-ray fostered by the Health Department is an aid in wiping out this scourge. In 1942, there were 60,000 cases examined in this way. By 1953, the figure had risen to more than 300,000.

Maintenance grants to Sanatoria had risen from $2,200,000 in 1943, to $5,500,000 in 1953. There are 15 sanatoria located in Ontario with a nominal capacity of 4,375 patients. Then there are 600 beds for the tuberculous mentally ill at the Ontario Hospital at Woodstock. In 1947, the average waiting list related to Sanatoria contained about 400 names, in 1949, about 200; today waiting lists are about eliminated.

Or turn to our general hospitals. Here, maintenance grants were just over a Million Dollars a year in 1942 while today they total more than Nine and a Half Millions, to say nothing of capital grants for new construction and also very large rehabilitation grants. Capital grants are aiding in adding more than 16,000 new beds to Ontario's hospital establishment.

As to mental hospitals, nearly 19,000 patients are treated in these huge institutions. They are cared for by a staff of more than 5,300 people, a staff which has doubled in the past ten years.

This year there will be completed at Smiths Falls a completely new hospital of 2,400 beds—new—modern—up to the minute in every respect. Here we have it—the former government, 60 beds—just 60—this Administration 3,000 beds—to meet an urgent problem. Believe me, actions speak louder than words.

An addition at Brockville is adding about 600 beds; another addition is being made at Kingston; still another is being added at Toronto.

I should add that psychiatric units are being added at 12 general hospitals. These involve in the present programme 317 beds and the provincial grant here is $8,500 per bed. Grants already approved total nearly $2,700,000.

For 1953, all provincial grants to our general hospitals will total about Twenty-two Million Dollars. They were less than a Million ten years ago. In 1943 our hospital at Niagara Falls received a provincial grant of $2,500; in 1951 it was $49,000; in 1953 it was $131,000. The Douglas Memorial Hospital at Fort Erie received $500 in 1943; $7,000 in 1951 and $83,000 in 1953. Generous capital grants have helped or are available to help in expansion and rehabilitation programmes here and elsewhere in our whole hospital establishment.

As time proceeds I hope to hear the detail of his stewardship from the hon. the Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips). I congratulate him most sincerely on the energy, ability and vision he has shown in administering the affairs of a most important department.

WELFARE

The Department of Public Welfare is in a measure a partner of the Department of Health in assisting with the care of those unable in greater or less degree to care for themselves. Until recent years the care of the aged, unable to maintain themselves with their own resources or with the help of the family circle, devolved largely on the municipalities. To the present Administration goes the credit for a bold, a helpful and a forthright step. I think the hon. the Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is to be congratulated on the assumption, provincially, through his department, of one half of the cost of constructing, extending and maintaining Homes for the Aged. Many of our municipalities have built new homes on very modern lines wherein aged citizens are maintained in care and comfort throughout their declining years. Generally, the standards relating to these homes have been raised.

It should also be noted that through the same department the province has accepted responsibility for 25 per cent. of costs related to Children's Aid Societies. These societies are essentially local organizations. Like the general hospitals they maintain a very large measure of local autonomy, which is as it should be. I think it is a desirable principle to observe, namely that institutions serving in the main local interests should retain a maximum degree of local management. Generally speaking,

I think it is a truism that governments, and I might add, managements, do the best job when living rather closely to the people they serve.

Inauguration of pensions for totally disabled persons is another sound measure. It was this government which introduced this plan, and I am sure that we are glad to see that the Federal Government appears to be about ready to emulate our good example in a national way. Our participation in the old age pension scheme for the 65-69 age group where need is shown is another achievement in the welfare field. It also evidences the ability of our governments here to co-operate with the Federal Government where such co-operation is indicated in the field of both those policies and administration.

I think the hon. the Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is to be congratulated as to his most effective efforts in the fields of both policy and administration.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

In saying a word about municipal affairs I think first I should say something about taxation in general. The Federal Government has—and uses—almost unlimited taxation powers. Enormous sums are flowing into the Federal Treasury—from income tax—from corporation taxes—from succession duties—from customs and excise taxes. As to corporation taxes, any corporation making any real money hands over about 50 cents of its profit for each 50 cents it keeps for itself and its shareholder. The amount of money collected by the national government just about staggers the imagination.

The municipalities have access to real estate taxation. There is where they get their revenues. This government has led the way in a new departure by making provincially owned properties subject to local taxation. Real estate taxation is a big field, but the demands on municipal treasuries are very heavy indeed.

The province has relatively limited taxation fields, unless indeed new taxes are to be imposed. We have gasoline tax, succession duties, tax field rentals, lands and forests revenue, something from the race tracks, and the liquor revenue. Now without imposing new types of taxes this government has been able to increase its grant to the municipalities from less than Twenty Million Dollars a year to more than One Hundred and Twenty-five Millions a year. In other words about one-third of provincial revenues are paid out to the municipalities.

This does not mean that the municipal problem is at the point of solution. Far from it. But it does mean that provincially, municipally and federally where taxation is concerned we need a new deck and a new deal. Review the enormous demands made on municipal and provincial governments — hospitals — health — education — streets, roads and highways — water supply and sewage disposal — police and fire protection — parks — welfare activities and so on. Then consider this. Out of every Canadian tax dollar more than 78 cents goes to Ottawa and the provinces and the municipalities have to struggle along on less than 22 cents. Things are out of balance. I wonder if we can justify spending three-quarters of a million dollars a year for entertainment in Canadian embassies abroad when we have thousands of level railway crossings which should be eliminated. Municipal taxes on some modest farms around Toronto run to $900 a year—$1,000 a year. Sometimes I wonder if we actually own our homes and farms or whether we just rent them. Sometimes I think we are actually paying a substantial annual rent for occupancy. This is not the fault of the provinces. It is not the fault of the municipalities. It is the fault of the unbalanced division of the tax dollar.

This government has co-operated with Ottawa on every possible occasion for the national and the provincial good. We need, we sorely need, a readjustment of governmental revenues all along the line. I do not mean to be unduly critical of the federal authority and if the provinces tackle the problem, I think they can get some much needed and long overdue adjustments. I do, however, sincerely congratulate the hon. the Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) on his very realistic assistance to our municipal governments. I also hope that he, along with the other provincial leaders may presently succeed in bringing about some of the readjustments I have mentioned.

I cannot leave the subject of municipal affairs without saying a word of congratulation to the hon. the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar). He received a sound schooling in municipal affairs when he lived and worked almost under the shadow of the House of Commons in our national capital. He has given long years of faithful and useful service in this House and in various departments of government. I hope to know him better as time goes on. In years he is perhaps senior to all of us; however, his energy of mind and spirit are as youthful as ever. I hope he will be with us for many more years of vigorous and effective public service.

Before leaving the subject of municipal affairs, I should like to say a word about rent control. Our housing shortage was in large measure a by-product of the war. Federal rent control was introduced and retained as an emergency measure. In the fulness of time it was dumped in the laps of the provinces. The scarcity of rental housing remains acute in certain metropolitan areas. In other areas the housing problem has diminished. As I understand it, the matter of further rent control now passes into municipal hands. The general principle is that it will be retained in those centres where it still appears to be necessary. The danger most feared is the possibility of gouging on the part of certain landlords. I would suggest, therefore that at this session careful consideration should be given the subject, including provision for local tribunals which will be in a position to see that even-handed justice applies to landlord and tenant alike.

It is not my intention to weary the House in trying to detail something of the activities of every department. There are, however, one or two matters I should like to mention briefly before concluding.

We have an excellent body of men serving with the Ontario Provincial Police. I am sure we are gratified to know that substantial progress has been and is being made toward the provision of adequate local headquarters, along with housing for members of the staff. These men are moved from time to time; housing often poses a difficult problem. I should like to look forward, therefore, to the time when ample modern housing will constitute an integral part of the whole police establishment. Again, while salaries in the Civil Service are being considered, I think there should be something of a general upward revision in the schedules as related to the police. This will help in securing and maintaining a high standard of personnel. I also venture to suggest that the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) might give some thought to a revision of the system as related to highway traffic patrol. I must congratulate the hon. the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in his unflagging efforts along the line of traffic safety education. This is a valuable effort. It naturally is a continuing task. But I venture to suggest that thorough policing is the only method of appealing to a certain type of motorist, and I think the accident toll indicates the need of added facilities in this direction.

LAND USE—FIRE PROTECTION

There is a considerable and growing quantity of literature in relation to the world food supply. It is hard to realize the fact here in Ontario, but actually there are hundreds of millions of people in the world today subsisting on a substandard diet. Faulty distribution has something to do with it, as witness our huge supply of unmarketed wheat. Faulty land use plays its part. Overpopulation in many countries aggravates the problem. But this I should like to point out. Right here in Ontario, indeed all across Canada, thousands of acres of our best farm land are sacrificed for housing, for the expansion of industry, for airports, for public institutions of one kind or another. Down at Ajax 2,500 acres of very rich land went out of production as a site for a shell filling plant. An establishment like Malton Airport consumes hundreds of acres of good farm land. I suggest that governments in general, federal, provincial and municipal, should go easy in taking over good farm land for various projects. Perhaps the hon. the Minister of Planning and Development could give us some enlightenment on the subject a little later on. I do sincerely think this—that as to government projects necessary for a given area, there should be a bit of shopping around to see whether marginal or sub-marginal land might not be available, rather than to put out of use one or two or half a dozen good farms. The subject is worth much more than passing thought.

Speaking of farms and farm land brings up another subject. One of the greatest disasters which can overtake a farmer is loss of his buildings by fire. I think I may say that the average farmer has little or no fire protection. Fire is difficult enough to handle where a well equipped fire brigade is available. But in the country a fire burns itself out. There is little to be done except to save what can be saved. I wonder if the Ontario Research Foundation, co-operating perhaps with Hydro, with the Fire Marshal and with the Department of Lands and Forests, could not devise some inexpensive, efficient and workable devices for installation in farm buildings so that the farmer might have some reasonable chance of nipping a blaze in its early stages. It might involve installation of a farm pond as a water supply. It might be some sort of chemical installation. There are many good chemical extinguishers on the market but they are fairly expensive and are not generally in evidence except around public buildings. I sincerely believe that if some such equipment could be devised and merchandised to the point where it became as commonplace as a rural telephone or a rural Hydro installation, it would be a great asset to all our rural dwellers.

Mr. Speaker, as I said before, it is a great honour to me to move the adoption of the address of His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. While I am a new member of this hon. House, I know something of the fairness and dignity which has always marked your incumbency of the high office which you hold. It is a great privilege to me to participate in this debate, and to lend my humble support to a leader who enjoys the affection and respect of the people of Ontario.

MR. W. G. NODEN (Rainy River) : Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to second the motion of the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) for the adoption of the address presented to this House by His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. I am deeply appreciative of the honour thus extended to me and to the constituency which it is my privilege to represent in this House.

It is scarcely necessary for me or for any other hon. member of this Assembly to reiterate our continued loyalty to the Crown and our respect for the Monarchy. Our regard for the Monarchy and our devotion to Her Majesty are accepted and enduring factors in our provincial and indeed, our national fabric. During the past year our Royal Family have experienced deep sorrow and abounding joy. In the death of our late Queen Mary they suffered the loss of one near and dear to them. The coronation of Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth II was the highlight of a pageant on which were focused the eyes of the Commonwealth and indeed of the whole democratic world. It is gratifying to us that the hon. the Prime Minister and his charming wife along with a number of his colleagues were among the honoured guests at one of the great ceremonial occasions of British history. The good wishes of this Assembly accompany Her Gracious Majesty and her distinguished husband as they visit Commonwealth nations on the other side of the world. We wish them good health, a happy journey and a safe return. Long may they reign!

It is, a matter of the most profound regret that one of the able and popular members of this House who had given freely of his time and talents over many years has been taken from among us. The late member from Simcoe East (Dr. McPhee) was a kindly and capable old school gentleman. His death is a loss to this House and to his constituents. We all extend our sincere sympathy to the members of his family.

I should extend my best wishes to two of my colleagues who have been overtaken in recent months by serious and prolonged illness. As you doubtless know, I refer to the hon. the Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) who I am happy to see in his place today and the hon. the Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas). We all join in our wishes for their speedy and complete recovery. Both the hon. ministers I have mentioned are charged with the direction of very important departments. Their return to their respective posts will be a matter of gratification to the hon. the Prime Minister and his colleagues.

Here, I should like to extend a word of hearty congratulation to my friend, the hon. member for Niagara Falls. In the by-election of October 26th, last, the hon. member turned an adverse majority of more than 3,000 into a victory in which he himself attained a similar majority. The voters of Niagara Falls Riding have insured themselves of able representation for the duration of the life of this Assembly. More than this, they have given the Administration a well deserved vote of approval. I am sure that members of all parties will extend a hearty welcome to our friend from Niagara Falls, and I am equally sure that he will give a good account of himself.

In due course it will be an added pleasure to welcome to our ranks the member-elect for Simcoe East whose decisive victory of a few days ago undoubtedly constitutes a further whole-hearted endorsement of the Administration.

I would like to say a brief word of appreciation on behalf of the hon. the Prime Minister. His devotion to the heavy duties of his office, his sterling character and his broad experience are appreciated by the people of Ontario. Without his fine qualities of leadership there could not have been the enormous expansion of government services that we witness all around us. His ability to co-operate with other governments is a most valuable factor—for Ontario—for the Dominion—and for the municipalities. My thoughts in this matter are well expressed in an editorial appearing in the Toronto Daily Star for January 21st last, and I quote:

Mr. Frost has submerged divergent political views in order to foster the good understanding that should prevail between his administration and the federal government. The friendly relations that have resulted between the two governments and their ministers are paying off handsomely in terms of progress for Ontario and Canada. (End of quotation.)

I am mindful of the many kindnesses and courtesies extended to me by the hon. the Prime Minister on many occasions, and I am sure that my own feelings of warm appreciation will be echoed by every member of this House.

The constituency which I have the honour to represent (Rainy River) some 1,100 miles away is one of the two most Westerly Districts, and is a large segment of that great empire which we know as Northern Ontario. It contains many elements of pioneer progress. Our people are students in the school of hard work on the farm, in the forests, in the mining industry, in the lumber, pulp and paper mills, the ever-expanding tourist industry, and generally in all those phases of activity which feature a community of the North which is and which will be for many years in the development stage. If in the North, more especially in the Northwestern part of Ontario where our lot is cast — I say that if in that part of Ontario we lack the sky-scrapers, the huge and diverse industries, the television stations, and indeed many of the features which in the South are commonplaces, we have our compensations. We have great resources of rich land, of mineral and of forest and most important, of water. Some of these resources are well developed. Others are in process of development. Still others constitute our great natural storehouses against the future.

As to Northern Ontario we have passed well out of the period of exploitation of our natural resources. We are well into the period of ordered development, and in addition we have entered definitely into the period of conservation and replacement. These latter terms mean much more than planting trees. They involve the construction, repair and replacement of dams to conserve our water supply for the future. They include supervised cutting of timber. They mean efficient fire protection. Indeed they include education and leadership with our governments and our people becoming conservation-minded.

It would be fair to state that our forests are our greatest natural asset. Modern methods of harvesting timber are such, that coupled with demand, natural propagation is not sufficient to provide replacement. Cutting, also, is not the only means of depletion; fire, disease and over-maturity all take their toll.

Good forest administration is a necessity to preserve the beauty and utility of our forests, but neither governments nor individuals can do all that is required. Industry must do its part, and indeed is doing a commendable job today. For instance, the establishment of a new pulp and paper mill involves an investment running into many millions. The investment is today so extremely large that a permanent supply of raw material must be maintained. Hence we find our large forest industries not only using improved cutting methods but also planting millions of seedlings to grow into trees for future use.

During a tour of Northeastern Ontario many members of this House visited a nursery farm at Kapuskasing. This farm is owned and operated by the large forest industry which has its mills in that thriving town. From here, seedlings are transplanted into cut-over areas where they will eventually grow into merchantable spruce. Policies such as these show an awareness of future needs, and they are followed in one way or another by many of our big operators.

I should like to commend the hon. the Minister of Lands and Forests with respect to his very large and extremely efficient fire protection service. The use of planes, of fire-towers, of numerous types of special vehicles, of gasoline-operated fire pumps and many other special items of equipment is a huge story in itself. It is to the credit of the Department that its officials are credited with the design of one of the most useful types of aircraft ever evolved for special work. I believe that the use of the Beaver airplane became more or less general in the Korean war, which says a lot for its utility and performance under abnormal conditions.

I must commend most warmly the staff of the Fish and Wildlife Division of the Department for their work. Here again man is taking more of natural resources of fish and game than nature is able to propagate. The Division of Fish and Wildlife is planning and finding ways to help nature in meeting the demands of the public for better fishing and hunting. They are helping the tourist industry. They are aiding the commercial fisherman. Their educational campaign is an excellent one. They are one and all keenly interested in the maintenance of our fish and wild life for this and for coming generations.

Just here, I should like to mention the importance of water supply. We saw in recent years, and even now, a water famine on the Ottawa River which threatened to curtail the power output of the great Hydro developments in that area. In some places wells are failing; out here in Scarboro Township many suburbanites are forced to have water delivered in tank wagons because their wells have gone dry. There is talk of supplying towns in Southwestern Ontario with water from Lake Huron, this involving large and expensive pumping and piping operations. We hear a good many stories of falling water tables. This is a common experience in many areas. Down around Los Angeles, for example, even the artesian wells have failed or are failing.

I mention this matter for more than one reason. Up in the North we have an abundant forest cover in most areas so that we do not experience a quick runoff. In past years many lumber operators, many now out of existence, built dams, establishing new levels in many lakes and streams. Latterly, it has fallen on the provincial government to repair or rebuild many of these structures. Were it not for water our Ontario Hydro generating plants could not turn a wheel, thereby causing the complete breakdown not alone of our industrial factories but also our present way of life. Again, I know of one paper mill which requires 90 million gallons of water every 24 hours in order to maintain a 60 million dollar investment. Thus water conservation is a work of importance which I hope will be a permanent part of government policy and administration.

Again, here in the South are numerous conservation authorities. They are fine examples of governmental co-operation and partnership. They involve endless negotiation, patience, planning, time and a big investment. But they will pay off. They already are doing so. The great dams on the Grand River and the Thames; the reforestation plans and accomplishments; the development of modern measures of land use — all these things will pay big dividends for the future. They will lessen or prevent floods; they will restore forest wealth for future generations; they will help restore local forest industry. As I said, they require time, patience, money, planning and co-operation, but we cannot repair in a year the depletion of decades. In a young country — I should say in pioneer days — the bitter struggle for survival meant the loss of much that should best have been preserved. This, however, is a part of the price of progress.

Just here, I should like to mention the new northern towns of Terrace Bay and Marathon. These, among others are bright, thriving and self-contained communities. They are based on brains, capital, enterprise, forest wealth and finally the sound policies of this government.

It will be recalled that in the final months of 1937 a former government—by secret agreement—without competition—disposed of huge areas of virgin pulpwood forest. No mills were built, notwithstanding conditions in the agreements—but a huge export programme was announced. More than this, it was put into operation. Now it was one of the first acts of the incoming government to call a halt to this most improvident programme. As a result of this halt we now have two new and flourishing towns founded upon and built around big industries which will be a permanent feature of Northern Ontario.

For more than fifty years our statutes have stressed home manufacture of our forest wealth. It was left to this government to translate these statutes into action. The transition from wholesale export to a maximum of home manufacture is still being affected with a minimum of upset. Perhaps it involves some measure of local hardship, but generally, the programme is in the interests of our province. I am sure the hon. the Minister of Lands and Forests will amplify my brief remarks.

Our mines rank alongside our timber as one of our greatest northern assets. It is often said, perhaps truly said, that we have only scratched the surface of our mineral wealth. Here is a rather startling instance of what has happened in recent years.

Ten years ago or thereabouts Ontario produced no iron ore at all. Yet in 1953, Steep Rock Iron Ore Mines which is in the Rainy River District alone produced more than One-and-a-half Million Tons of ore and the Algoma Ore properties produced nearly One Million Tons—that is nearly Two and one-half Million Tons in one year. Then stripping is going forward on proven deposits down at Marmora. What this third proven deposit may produce remains to be seen, but there is commercial ore and in huge quantity.

Up at Steep Rock my information indicates that the Caland Ore Company is spending $25,000,000 to remove silt from the lake bed. When a strong and capable company spends—yes, it will represent near $50 Million before one ton of ore is mined on preparatory work, then the possible production simply staggers the imagination.

Now we hear a lot from some of the hon. members opposite about home manufacture of this ore. Naturally, all of us are anxious for just as much home manufacture of our natural resources as we can manage. But there are other factors. First, it is necessary to mix other ores with our Ontario product to get the various qualities of iron and steel which the trade demands. Second, as almost anyone knows, the standard practice in the interests of economy is to haul iron ore to the coal supply rather than to haul coal to the iron ore supply. So it follows if we do not export ore we would have an uneconomic operation, and you may be sure our American friends might not be too willing to ship us too much of their coal. I am not in a position to argue all the economic factors. That I leave to the experts, but I do say this.

America is the greatest single arsenal of democracy. In the United States the Mesabi deposits in the Minnesota area are wearing fairly thin. We—and I include the United States—must have steel and plenty of it to survive. Therefore, I say that our iron developments in this province are nothing less than a modern miracle that may well be a big factor in the survival of our democratic way of life. We maintain our British heritage. We value our Commonwealth connection. None the less we must be realists, and as such we must be alive to our relations, and especially our economic relations, with the United States.

I am glad indeed that industrial peace is in a fair way to be restored in our gold mining industry. It is not my intention to discuss the turmoil which over a prolonged period caused so much loss and so much distress. I shall content myself with extending my congratulations to the hon. the Minister of Labour, who, in this, as in many other industrial disputes has given of his energy, understanding and ability to help bring about a reasonable settlement. I suggest that the hard and conscientious work of the hon. the Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and his staff represent a most valuable contribution to labour, to management, and indeed to Ontario.

In the North the development of local and provincial highway or road systems presents special problems—much rough country—great distances—a sparse population. We have some settlements which are isolated islands so far as highway transportation is concerned. This particular situation arose at Atikokan, site of the Steep Rock Iron Ore enterprise. Here, there are some 4,500 people, but with the advent of the Inland Steel Corporation and other powerful industrial concerns we look forward to a population of 25,000. I think the government under the guidance of the hon. the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) deserves credit for building the Atikokan Highway from Shebandewan on the Trans-Canada to Atikokan, giving the citizens of that area the opportunity of using Ontario's modern highways. This highway traverses 72 miles of forest, rock, swamp, muskeg and crosses innumerable lakes and streams. This same highway, I suggest, should be extended in the near future on to Fort Frances completing another important link in our provincial highway system. At the extreme westerly boundary of Ontario there should be given consideration to building another International bridge at Rainy River to eliminate the present congestion of motor traffic during the summer season into Northwestern Ontario from the United States. This highway will make more fully available to our people the beauties and the facilities of Quetico Provincial Park. May I say here that this great, unspoiled playground with its magnificent forests and its wealth of fish and wild life is the envy of our American friends across the line. They wish indeed, as so many of them have expressed to me, that this 1,700 square miles of unspoiled nature could be a part of their country.

I should mention that our Northwestern Associated Chamber of Commerce has set up a committee to study ideas related to the future development of this great Quetico area. Their views have been transmitted to the government and I know they will receive the earnest consideration of the various departments involved.

I do not like to single out various departments, but I must say that the demands of today on such departments as Health, Highways, Public Welfare, Education and the Treasury constitute a vast challenge. The Health Department today in relation to the maintenance grants to general hospitals is paying out $12 a year where ten years ago it paid out $1. The Education Department pays out about $60 today as against $12 ten years ago. The Highways Department pays out more than $30 millions a year in municipal road grants as against $3,600,000 a year a few years ago. The Department of Public Welfare under the capable guidance of the hon. the Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) has brought in good welfare legislation, coupled with sound and humane administrative practices. The assumption by the Department of fifty per cent. of all costs related to homes for the aged affords a welcome measure of relief to the municipalities. Up in our district we now have an excellent home for the aged. It is filled to capacity, which affords ample proof of the need. Our people recognize this home as filling a long-felt want.

Throughout the province the story is the same. Here, as elsewhere, the Treasury Department finds the necessary funds. The same Department guarantees the huge and necessary borrowings of Hydro. At the same time Ontario's credit never stood higher in the great money markets of this continent.

Here let me say just a word about the hon. the Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop). He was kind enough during the latter part of May to visit my riding. We called at eleven different schools in the Rainy River District. We saw pupils at work in 43 different classrooms as I recall it. I know that my home folks deeply appreciated the honour done them by a busy and an able public servant. I think it speaks well for this government when a senior minister in such a practical manner displays such an interest in those of us who live in that remote part of Ontario which I am proud to call my home.

I sincerely hope that the hon. the Minister of Agriculture may soon be in his accustomed place. His long experience—as a practical farmer—as an Agricultural Representative—as a member of this House—as a member of the government in another department—this experience gained by few of us, seemed to fit him exactly for his present portfolio. I should like to say this about agriculture in the Rainy River area.

We have some of the best farm land in Ontario. Settlers are coming in, and I should especially mention the influx of Dutch settlers. These fine people fit into our Ontario way of life very easily and I hope we shall see more and more of them enter our province. Our farm markets are good and they will be better still. The growth of such communities as Atikokan is of immense benefit to our farm community.

I should like to say a word of appreciation on behalf of the hon. the Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Warrender). Under his direction and with the co-operation of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the people of Atikokan are receiving the benefits of a new deal in housing.

Up to date the governmental partnership has acquired about 200 building lots which have been serviced, that is with streets, sewers and water supply. About 400 more such lots are included in a further subdivision. The subdivisions, one is called Dunbar Heights after the hon. Minister, are surveyed and laid out along lines indicated by modern community planning. The costs involved are charged partly against the individual lots and partly against the municipality. The purchaser gets his building site at cost—as a matter of fact he gets a serviced lot for $200 or $250—and he doesn't have any worry about digging a well, installing a septic tank or getting a path to his door. This programme breaks new ground for a mining town. It is something which commends itself to me as being practical, sensible and worthy of wide general application.

The expansion of Hydro is of great importance to us in the North. Hydro marches apace with the development of our forest and mining industries. The St. Lawrence development is not only of vital importance to Hydro. It will have a very great bearing on the development of our iron deposits, for the completion of the waterway will widen greatly our markets for our ores. I think we all echo the recent demand of the hon. the Prime Minister that the United States after all these years should get out of the way and let us get on with the job alone. No doubt we shall hear much more of these matters as our debates proceed. There are many other subjects which I should like to interject into my remarks but I must content myself with dealing with one in particular. I refer to the Ontario Civil Service.

Like all other hon. members of this House, I find it necessary to come to the Parliament Buildings from time to time to iron out the various problems of my constituents. The care, efficiency and the courtesy which I receive at the hands of the members of the Civil Service always evoke in me the warmest feelings of gratitude.

In recent days I have noted the announcement of the hon. the Prime Minister to the effect that a modest general salary increase has been afforded the members of the service. This latest measure will be of real assistance to our efficient and conscientious civil service, a body of men and women whose daily task is to keep turning the wheels of the immense machinery of government. I feel sure that all members of this House will join me in expressing the warmest approval of the consideration extended to the employees of our government.

Commerce and industry today are competing for men and women of ability and training. They offer good salaries, opportunity for advancement, paid holidays, and all sorts of fringe benefits as they are freely termed. Men and women who have achieved reasonable skill and experience are today drawing salaries which would have seemed fabulous a few years ago. A boss machine tender in a pulp mill, a skilled man of course, will draw perhaps $6,900 a year and the next in line, if my information is correct, will draw perhaps $6,500.

Speaking very frankly, I think the government, always in the light of its resources, should scrutinize its salary schedules. I think it would be found that salaries of senior executives are often out of line in many instances with their responsibilities.

What I am getting at is this. There is real competition today for brains, industry and technical skill. I think the Administration must maintain working conditions, including salaries, which will enable it to attract the best available people into the ranks of the public service. We have a good service today but we must not falter in the job of meeting modern employment conditions as they exist.

I am sure the government will agree with me when I suggest we must have good salaries and good working conditions for our public servants. They need not be overpaid. They must be well paid. And they must have available to them the security and the opportunity for advancement which is generally available in the better fields of private employment.

I am grateful for the opportunity of making these comments on the conduct of our affairs as I see them. I believe that the hon. the Prime Minister and hon. members of his Administration hold the confidence of our people. I believe their constant endeavour is as the hon. the Prime Minister has so often said, to continue the job of giving good government to the great Province of Ontario.

There is one other thought I would like to leave with the hon. members of this Legislature. We who represent the Northern part of Ontario, hope that when you look towards the North and the Northwest you do not allow your attention to dwell on the bush only. By this I mean do not allow your vision to be fogged by daily happenings — look at what lies beyond — the vast timber resources, the mineral wealth, the fish and wild life and the abundance of water. The natural resources of Northern Ontario will play an increasingly important part in the future greatness of this grand old Province of Ontario.

The confidence of our people was given in full measure on November 22nd, 1951, just a little more than two years ago. I believe the verdict will be repeated when next our electors rally to the polls to exercise their democratic rights.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in moving the adjournment of the House, may I say that tomorrow we will go ahead with second readings. I should like to call first of all Order No. 12 on the present Order Paper, "The Telephone Act, 1954," so that it may be considered, debated, and sent forward to committee.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.51 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1954

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: The following petition has been received:

Of the Corporation of the Town of Fort Erie praying that an Act may pass validating an agreement between the Corporation, Canadian National Railway Company and The International Bridge Company.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting reports by committees.

MR. W. E. BRANDON (York West): I beg leave to present the first report of the Standing Committee on Education and move its adoption.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: Mr. Brandon from the Standing Committee on Education presents the committee's first report, as follows:

"Your Committee begs to report the following bill without amendment.

Bill No. 33, The Department of Education Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, yesterday I moved that due to certain circumstances the House would meet today, tomorrow, and on Friday at 2 o'clock. The reason for meeting at 2 o'clock tomorrow was to meet the convenience of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) who had, at that time, an important engagement, and would be very much inconvenienced if the House met at 2 o'clock.

Since that reason has abated somewhat, I understand, and he has since advised me, it will not be necessary, so far as he is concerned, to meet at 2 o'clock, I should like, therefore, to revert to the former time and convene tomorrow at 3 o'clock instead of 2 o'clock.

I present that motion now, which I have not committed to writing, although I believe it will be in a moment; but I should like to move now that the motion I made yesterday relative to the times of meeting should be altered, and revert to the ordinary time of 3 o'clock for tomorrow afternoon, and that the motion passed by this House should be amended accordingly.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day, there is a matter which I would like to bring to your attention and to the attention of the hon. members of this House.

I have here a clipping from one of the metropolitan newspapers of this area purporting to contain some remarks made by the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren).

In these remarks, the hon. member charged that the government was refusing to pay a staff that any Opposition should have. He pointed out that Mr. Drew at Ottawa has the status and receives the salary of a Cabinet Minister, but at Queen's Park, he pointed out, assistants had to be hired in the Opposition office and paid for out of the hon. members' indemnity.

As you know, that statement is very far indeed from the facts. For the seven members who constitute the Official Opposition, the government allows a regular staff of one man and one girl, full-time for twelve months. In addition to that, two extra stenographers who are hired for the session, are allocated to the office of the Leader of the Opposition. We have in all sixty-five members. The proportion is as follows: Two stenographers for the Official Liberal Opposition, which means that there is one girl for every seven members of the Opposition and one girl serving half-time.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): His arithmetic is wrong, Mr. Speaker.

HON. MR. WELSH: May I finish please? There is one girl in addition who assists the Secretary of the Opposition. One girl serves the Labour Progressive Party, half-time, and one girl is allotted full-time to the CCF.

In proportion, therefore, the Opposition is much better served than the government members. If you want to reduce it to dollars and cents, for every dollar that is paid for stenographic help for the government members, $2.00 is paid for the Liberal, $4.50 for the CCF, and $4.50 for the Labour Progressive Party.

The reason I bring this matter up is that I do not think a statement of that kind should be allowed to stand without correction.

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, according to the remarks of the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh), may I point out that the comparisons he has made are just a bit ridiculous. It is certainly not comparable to use the comparison of the number of stenographers and office help, and of dollars and cents per member, because one must admit, if we are going to be fair about these things, that the government benches have unlimited staff and an unlimited amount of money at their disposal to present their particular case, or to develop any research on any particular subject.

It is the duty of the Opposition in the House—and a duty we fully expect to perform—to examine the activities of each and every department of government, and it is absolutely impossible to do a proper and thorough job of examining each department with the limited staff we have.

I repeat that the ordinary hon. members on the government side of the House, do not have to do the research we have the responsibility of doing, because the cabinet ministers and the many members of staff who support those members, provide them with the facilities for the research which is consistent with the job they have to do. I submit, as I submitted in my remarks in an address I made the other day, that the Opposition offices are inadequately staffed. The hon. Prime Minister was made aware of our attitude on that subject last session, and I re-submit that we cannot, for the good of Ontario, properly examine the work of all the departments of this government with the staff which we have at our disposal. I repeat, and I reiterate, that the salary and status of the hon. Leader of the Opposition should be proportionately equal to that enjoyed by the Federal Leader of the National Progressive Conservative Party at Ottawa.

HON. MR. FROST: In reply, Mr. Speaker, may I say that I have always been most sympathetic to the problems facing any Opposition, large or small, in relation to their staff, stenographic and otherwise.

I say that for this reason: I was an Opposition member myself for many years. When I was in Opposition, the government of that day—which was not very far removed from the front benches of the Opposition—gave us one stenographer during the session, and that was little Miss Drew, who died some two or three years ago. They allowed her the sum of $1,000, and we put up the balance ourselves.

I do not complain about that because with that slight help we turned a government out of office. I may say I am most anxious to see that the Opposition receives every help—not to turn us out of office, but to make us stronger in office—because I am anxious that people who wish to criticize us should have the opportunity to do so.

I assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition that it has never been my desire to do anything but get the full views of all the people.

As regards his salary; while the hon. Leader of the Opposition did not bring this up himself, I would like to give the House this picture. It used to be that the allowances, both for salary and expenses for the Leader of the Opposition were much less than they are today. As a matter of fact, the official revision came, I think, about 1945.

MR. OLIVER: In company with a general revision.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. The Leader of the Opposition was treated no differently than anyone else. There was one revision during the time Mr. Jolliffe was Leader of the Opposition, which was recommended by a Select Committee on which, I think, the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) sat. Later on that was reviewed again by a Select Committee which met in 1950. The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) sat on that committee also. At that time, the Select Committee, after a most thorough consideration, recommended adjustments in the indemnity or salary of the hon. Leader of the Opposition, indemnities of the hon. members of the House, salaries of cabinet ministers, and so on.

That report was accepted by this House without any objection whatsoever. I may have sympathized with the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) but I think the objection he took at that time was that it should have been implemented at once, whereas I took the position I did not want to implement it until after a general election. That is what we did. However, the position taken by the hon. member for Cochrane South was a most honourable position and indeed he had very many arguments on his side for making that suggestion.

The salary, expenses and allowances of the hon. Leader of the Opposition were agreed to by the Select Committee of the House and were accepted without any amendment whatever. I am most anxious the hon. Leader of the Opposition should receive the emoluments, and the expenses to which he is entitled.

These are different days than those of many years ago. It is quite correct to say the hon. Leader of the Opposition at Ottawa was allowed the salary of a minister, the recent salary adjustment. Although I am not familiar with the amounts, but I understand that is the case.

I am perfectly prepared to appoint a Select Committee of the House to review the salary and allowances of the hon. Leader of the Opposition. I will agree to that at once, and I will arrange for such a Select Committee to deal with that problem forthwith. If my friend feels that should be done, I will be delighted to do it.

May I say, in all fairness to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, that I recognize the burdens on the hon. Leader of the Opposition in this House, and I would not want it to be said or felt that we would do anything which would restrict, nor hinder the functioning of the Opposition.

I have the greatest respect for what was done at Ottawa, in connection with the treatment of the hon. Leader of the Opposition there as regards salary and expenses, and I would say that what we have done was based on the recommendation of a Select Committee of the House which was representative of all parties. I am perfectly prepared to have that matter reviewed.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, any remarks on the subject under discussion have been rather thrust upon me. I had no idea this was coming up today.

I just want to say with reference to the salary of the hon. Leader of the Opposition, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) was quite accurate in his analysis of the situation up to a point. I think he will recall, and agree with me, that when the last revision of salaries was made there was no change in the salary allowed the Leader of the Opposition. I think that is a statement of fact. I am not complaining of it, at the moment, but what I do complain about—and I think the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) has a point there that perhaps the hon. Prime Minister has missed—the salary of the Leader of the Opposition would be perhaps ample, Mr. Speaker, if he were allowed to retain all of it. However, I have found in my experience that in order to get the type and number of personnel which we feel we require in the office, that the Leader of the Opposition has had in the past, is doing now, and perhaps will in the future, have to “dig down” into his own pocket to pay for this additional help.

That is the crux of the whole matter. I agree with the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) that in this day and age, when the revenue of this province is such as it is, and with the wide variety of subjects with which we deal, and the complex character of those subjects, that if the Opposition is to do the job, it is its to do, it should have in the office, an outstanding man in the research field.

It is not a question of stenographic help, as my hon. friend says, but it is a question of experienced help of a character which can get to the bottom of these things, search them out, and come to decision, for our perusal. That is the difficulty in the office now, as the hon. Prime Minister well knows.

We made representations to him last year, in his capacity as Provincial Treasurer, in the hope that he would allot the Opposition office sufficient funds with which we could hire an outstanding man to do such research work as is needed.

I have no idea at the present time—indeed, it is farthest from my mind—of pressing for additional salary for the Leader of the Opposition, but I do think there is great need for additional high-calibred help in that office.

Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh) that in his remarks, I think he was a little unfair. He took the number of Opposition assistants, and then those of the government, and worked out a sort of arithmetical table about them.

We are the Opposition, irrespective of the numbers in that office, and the smaller the number in the Opposition office, the more imperative it is we have outstanding people to advise us and help us; I think the hon. Prime Minister will see that.

HON. MR. FROST: Without attempting to prolong this any further, may I just make reference to the latter point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker.

He spoke in reference to a sum which could be used by the Opposition for research work. The difficulties are twofold, and I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition, as well as the hon. members of this House, will recognize that fact.

First of all, to pay a man for research work would require that he be treated as a civil servant. I think most of the hon. Leader of the Opposition's assistants are treated as civil servants, and are paid as such, and are eligible for superannuation. This would mean bringing in a person, and putting him on the Civil Service list, as a research man, and would really, in many ways, be tantamount to paying for a political organization. I think the hon. members can see that.

I have considered that matter. I have had investigations made of the various practices in Canada, in all parliaments—Ottawa and the provinces—and I could find nothing parallel with this.

The other point, of course, is could an amount be voted—say a sum of $5,000 or $10,000—which would be at the discretion of the hon. Leader of the Opposition? I am sure the hon. members can recognize that difficulty. That matter would come under the Department of Mr. Speaker. Would there be any responsibility there from the standpoint of Mr. Speaker administering that section of the Department, in connection with the uses to which the hon. Leader of the Opposition would put these sums? In other words, would it not be tantamount to voting a large sum of money which might be regarded as a political fund, because, as a matter of fact, any Leader of the Opposition would be using the fund for purposes which he felt would provide him with the political facts and figures, he might desire to use.

MR. OLIVER: What is the matter with that?

HON. MR. FROST: I do not say there is anything the matter with it—except this; I was unable to find any place where that practice had been indulged in.

However, I am perfectly prepared to look that matter over again. I would say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that in the matter of stenographic and secretarial assistance, he can count on it that I will do everything I can. But his problem is somewhat different; it is to set up an organization paid for out of public funds, which would have to do with the briefing of the Opposition members in relation to matters of government. That question is quite unique, and, as I say, I have not been able to find any parallel practice of that sort.

I am most willing and anxious to discuss the matter further with the hon. Leader of the Opposition. I will make available to him the investigations which have been made and the facts as I have them, and I will give them consideration, on that basis.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the Day: I know the hon. members of this House were very greatly disturbed last night, as was I, when reading of the effect of the flash floods in this province, due to the facts that the uplands of Ontario are quite heavily covered with snow, and, to the remarkable changes in the weather, ranging to as high as 60 degrees, and the recent amount of rain which has been experienced, and I went to bed last night feeling very greatly disturbed over the possibility of damage, as I am sure many of the hon. members did.

I am very glad to say that the reports we have today are encouraging. There have been some bad cases in the province. Fortunately, they are in comparatively small areas, and from the reports received, it would appear the floods are subsiding with the coming of colder weather.

Perhaps the situation where the greatest damage might have occurred was in the city of London. I do not want the hon. members of this House to feel that my affections are confined to Orillia and Lindsay. My mother was born in the city of London, 89 years ago, so I have always had a warm feeling in my heart for that city.

In my childhood, I was very often told stories by my mother of her early days in that city, when floods used to cause heavy damage at certain times. I received a communication from His Worship, Mayor Rush, of the city of London, this morning, in which he said that all was clear on the north and south branches, and the gauges showed the water was falling, and in the opinion of experts, the critical stage has passed. He stated that sand bags on the south branch of the river had helped to meet the situation, and he spoke in the highest terms of the Civil Defence organization in the city of London, and of the very good job they did in that situation.

There is something in which we are all interested, and that is the Fanshaw Dam which was opened within the past year. From reports I have noticed in the London Free Press, and also word from His Worship, the Mayor, the Dam assisted greatly in saving the situation, and that the areas which had been considered critical ones in past years, had suffered no damage from flood on this occasion, and the Dam could have taken care of the storage water for a further fifteen hours, without being opened. I think that is something about which we can all feel very gratified.

I remember at the time we made the arrangement with the Federal Government for the erection of that Dam, in conjunction with the River Authority there, one of the points discussed by the people of the city of London as well as by ourselves, was that it would help in such a situation with which we have been confronted at the present time, and I am very glad to say that such has been the case.

MR. OLIVER: Have we received any requests from municipalities for financial aid?

HON. MR. FROST: Not that I know of. We are keeping in touch with the situation.

THE TELEPHONE ACT OF 1954

Hon. Mr. Challies moved second reading of Bill No. 51, "The Telephone Act, 1954."

He said: Mr. Speaker, at this point, it may be rather interesting if I were to review, rather hurriedly, the highlights of events leading up to the bringing down in this House of Bill No. 51, "The Telephone Act, 1954."

I think the initiation of the movement started with our hon. Prime Minister when Minister of Mines and Provincial Treasurer in 1947. He called together in his office, a small group representing a few of the branches of government interested, and a few from other organizations which should be, and are, interested in the question of the telephone.

At that meeting, there was present, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) and some of the representatives of Hydro, and Mr. MacDonald, who was, and still is, the Superintendent of Telephones, and is still with the Department of Municipal Affairs.

There was also present Brigadier General Smythe, who is a consulting engineer, and who, over a number of years, has been very interested in the telephone systems in the rural areas of the province of Ontario. This meeting was held December 2nd, 1947.

At that time, it was understood that a great deal of the work in connection with the telephone situation in the province of Ontario was handled by the Department of Municipal Affairs, such problems as requests from various companies relating to changes of rates, the question of sales or amalgamations, the extension of franchises, and approval of agreements, but great difficulty was experienced through this channel, because, after all, the Department of Municipal Affairs, did not have the technical staff, outside of Mr. MacDonald, to go into all the ramifications of the problems, and the difficulties of the small and large independent telephone companies. It was agreed that the province required adequate service, but that very few of the independent systems—excepting perhaps some of the larger ones—were giving adequate service.

It was also mentioned there were different departments of government interested, such as the Department of Lands and Forests, The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission and The Ontario Northland Railway, all of whom, to some extent, have telephone systems in their Departments, and it was considered desirable that rural areas should have a reasonably high standard of telephones, and something should be done in order to assist in bringing this about.

Mr. MacDonald reported that the agreements, changes of rates, by-laws, and certain other features, came under the Department of the Ontario Municipal Board.

At that time, there were some 125 independent telephone companies, ranging from 5 subscribers up to probably 200 or 300.

As the result of the discussion at this meeting, it was decided that Mr. MacDonald and Brigadier General Smythe should review the whole situation, and bring in a report. A report was brought in, which was dated February 12th, 1948. It covered the whole field of rural telephones, and independent telephone organizations in the province, in very large detail, because it was understood it was an interim report, and an interim report only, but it gave the government sufficient information to indicate that the whole problem of independent rural telephones should be enquired into.

Then, for a period of a couple of years, much research was done in connection with this problem. The Rural Telephone Act was introduced in 1951, which gave The Hydro-Electric Power Commission the responsibility of investigating and bringing in a report on this whole problem.

The commission gathered together a small body of men who knew the problem, and were interested in its solution, and the following composed the personnel of that committee.

Mr. B. W. Smith, representing the more successful independent telephones in the province; Mr. H. A. Rogers, O.B.E., the Executive Secretary of the Canadian Independent Telephone Association, and Mr. R. E. Smythe—Brigadier General Smythe—who was a consulting engineer in the province.

They secured the loan from the Bell Telephone of two of their experts, a Mr. Howard B. Blecker, and Mr. Warren G. Lloyd.

This man brought to the committee technical information it was very difficult to get from any other source and also maps and details of the lines, and all that sort of thing. In the report, it was felt proper to express our thanks and appreciation to the Bell Telephone Company for its generosity in making these men available to the committee.

That report is a very excellent one, and I may say, just in passing, that the recommendations in that report have been carried out in this present bill.

The report is dated March, 1953, and a copy was sent to each hon. member of the House.

In order that the House may have a hurried glance at what this committee has been doing since it was organized in 1953, may I just give you rapidly, some examples of their activities.

They arranged for the amalgamation or sales of three large companies, some to other companies, and one or two to the Bell Telephone Company.

In others, amalgamation or sales are pending. Naturally, I cannot give the names at the present time, because it might prejudice some of the activities, but in most of them you will find that engineering studies have been made in order to assist the different companies as regards their value, and their assets, and what is the best way for them to proceed, either by amalgamation, or by sale.

Four of the systems, totalling 1,139 telephones are presently under study, and it is possible that amalgamation may be arranged.

These studies were undertaken upon the request of these four companies. Similar studies are anticipated in two other sections of western Ontario.

A serious problem is in the northeast section of northern Ontario, where there is a very large lumber industry, and in the summer, a large tourist trade. That was to ascertain the best method of getting telephone communication out to the larger centres. To do that at present, they have to pass seven different independent systems. Some of them are indifferent, and it takes hours to get a telephone message through.

This is probably one of the most difficult problems they have tackled, but the committee's engineering reports will be brought in, and we hope they will be able to solve the problem, and to help the people in that area.

One of the outcomes of this particular case is that the authority is taking over wide power, in order to make it compulsory for some of these smaller indifferent companies to co-operate with the other companies, and give a better and more adequate service. There are areas in one or two townships where there are five small independent telephone systems, and it is the feeling they should be encouraged to amalgamate, and in so doing, be able to reduce the number of their centrals, and give a much better service to their subscribers.

There are many consultations being held and studies being made in different parts of the province. They are studying the rural areas surrounding one of the largest cities in the north. In that particular case, there is a municipal system, and there are about 240 farmers in that very excellent farming area. They nearly all require Hydro, but the municipalities themselves, because of the financial difficulties, are rather indifferent about attacking the extensions into the rural areas. We feel that by our officials visiting the authorities in the municipalities, they will see their way clear to extend their lines to take in these farms surrounding that quite large centre.

There are many other sections of the province where the feeling is the present committee can give assistance and help, but, so far, the committee feels the primary duty, and the matter of most concern, is to assist those independent companies to help themselves, and to enable them to get together with other independent companies in the same area, and amalgamate.

In most cases, it is not a lack of a desire to do so, but it is a question of somebody who knows the problems meeting with these different companies, and giving them leadership, whether that leadership be in engineering or organization, or whatever the case may be.

The committee, through this authority, and its officials, are making a large number of contacts. There is one case where the committee has met with five different telephone companies in an area, and it is not in that one only, but all over the province, where they are making a large number of visits and contacts. It may be interesting to remember that although the committee has only been in operation since November, it is doing a very excellent job.

I think we should express, on behalf of this House, our appreciation and thanks to the committee which, in the initial stages, has brought this movement as far forward as it has.

Their work has been done at considerable sacrifice on the part of those engaged in it, but these men are keenly interested in solving the problem for the benefit of the people of the province.

Perhaps I should give you the personnel of the present authority.

Mr. H. A. Rogers, O.B.E., who is on the original committee, is the chairman. Mr. R. E. Smythe, is vice-chairman; Mr. V. B. W. Flynn, is a member of the committee.

They also have a Director of Engineering, in the person of Mr. Smith; Mr. James MacDonald, who is now the Superintendent of Telephones in the Ontario Municipal Board, if this bill goes through, and the new authority is set up, will be transferred to this new authority. He is doing an excellent job, and the province is very fortunate in having available the long years of experience of this public servant in telephone problems, and it is to be congratulated on his being able to give his services to the new organization.

Then they have Mr. Thomas Grindley, associate director of the commercial department. The authority is very fortunate in being able to obtain a man trained in this field of telephone.

They have two field men, who will visit the districts, answer enquiries, and give all the municipalities any information which the authority has in connection with this work.

Under the new Act, the authority is given very wide powers of governing, and will administer the whole questions of rural telephones, under this Act.

Their duties, which were primarily—and are now—those now under the Ontario Municipal Board will be transferred to the new Telephone Authority, except those matters which have to do with the issuing of bonds or financing by municipalities of new systems, or the extension of systems, and that sort of thing.

You will find, in going through the Act, that most of the powers are just a transferral from the Municipal Board, with some changes in phraseology, which had been mostly for clarification purposes.

So the Act is the compilation of the duties and authority under the Municipal Board, which will be transferred to the new authority.

The duties, obligations and rights, under the authority are well outlined, and perhaps I should take but a moment to refer to them.

The authority, subject to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may make regulations, to regulate and control the business practices and accounting practices of telephone systems. That will be of immeasurable value to a great many telephone companies, because one of the weaknesses in their systems is the fact that their system of accounting and rates and so forth, is not on a proper business basis. It will be able to give considerable help to them in that regard.

They will prescribe the forms, books, accounts, and records, to be kept by the telephone systems, and regulate and control the type of construction, and the plans of the different systems, and give them all technical assistance in regard to the type of plan they should use, and to regulate the maintenance of the operating practices of the telephone systems.

Perhaps the greatest contribution this authority can make after amalgamation is to see that they can set up a proper maintenance crew to look after the systems and keep them in excellent working order.

- (e) Prescribing rules of practice and procedure applicable to proceedings before the authority;
- (f) Prescribing fees applicable to proceedings before the authority and for certified copies of orders and other documents made or issued by the authority;

- (g) Prescribing the form of and the particulars to be contained in tariffs of rates and tolls and the manner and form in which tariffs of rates and tolls shall be published and kept open for public inspection;
- (h) Prescribing the form and the particulars to be contained in the annual returns to be made by telephone systems to the authority;

In other words, to get a uniform system of bookkeeping so that the authority will be able to know what is going on in the different independent municipal telephone systems in the province.

- (i) Respecting any other matter necessary or advisable to carry out effectively the intent and purpose of this Act.

Mr. Speaker, as I say, this Act which I recommend to the hon. members of the House is, in principle, in order to give the people of the Province of Ontario the best telephone system of any province or any state in any jurisdiction.

As with rural Hydro, rural telephones are playing a most important part in helping not only the people in the rural areas, but our young people, in order to keep them there by giving them the comforts which a few years ago were only enjoyed by people who lived in the urban centres.

Upon behalf of the government, I want to thank, with a sense of keen appreciation, those who now constitute the Telephone Authority, for their splendid effort, as they have been responsible from the beginning for clarifying what the problems were, and now providing by this new Act, the machinery for solving them.

MR. OLIVER: Did the hon. Minister say this was going to committee?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: That is understood, is it?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: It is going to committee.

MR. CHARLES E. JANES (Lambton East): Mr. Speaker, I have been interested in rural-telephone work for about twenty-five years, and I would like to take some part in this discussion on the new Act. As it is going to the Municipal Law Committee, I will not discuss the Act in detail, but I have two or three suggestions or remarks to make, and certain thoughts I wish to express. I want first to congratulate the government on their action in appointing this rural telephone authority. It is something which has long been needed. Up until that date, we were the only province in Canada which had not taken some action to assist in rural telephone service.

I also want to congratulate them on the fact that they have used such good judgment in going to the governors of the independent rural telephone associations for advice and help, and have chosen from amongst the Governors of the Independent Telephone Association, one to be chairman of the committee investigating the rural telephone situation.

That was a very wise action in more ways than one. They chose a man who has spent years and years as Secretary of the Independent Telephone Association and knows their difficulties and troubles, and knows the different members of the association, and has their confidence, which is very important in any new committee of this kind. The result is that from the first the independent companies will be behind this authority, and without that, it would have been almost impossible to carry it through and have the success it has today.

The government made a very thorough investigation a number of years ago, as the hon. Minister has stated and actually brought in the bill in 1951, but they were still not satisfied, and investigated for two more years before they brought in the amendment, and brought in the authority with power to act in many important issues.

It means now that they have consulted with these companies, and they really know what they can do for them. I have great hope in what they are going to do.

The hon. Minister made some remarks regarding the personnel of that committee and gave you their names. The chairman, Mr. H. A. Rogers, as I stated, has been secretary of that independent association for ten or eleven years. He did a wonderful job there. He was able to show leadership to that group, and it has been my pleasure to have been at the conventions every year for quite a number of years. As a matter of fact, I am quite proud of the fact I was once invited to become a governor of that association, but declined because I had so many other duties.

I have watched them over the years and have been very much pleased with the fact that their understanding of the situation over the province is improving every year, and we find men who know the telephone business coming forward and assisting in the discussions. Mr. Rogers and his board of governors were picking out these men as they came along and doing an excellent job, so I look for a great future for this new authority.

The vice-chairman will be Mr. Smythe. That is a very interesting situation. During the last war, Mr. Rogers was a buck private and Mr. Smythe was a brigadier. The situation is changed now, the brigadier is a "buck private" and Mr. Rogers is commander-in-chief, but they are greatly interested in telephone work and I know they are going to turn in a good report.

I have known Mr. Flynn for years. He has been a very successful manager of the Noisy River Telephone Company. I was interested in the name, "The Noisy River Telephone Company." None of us want noisy telephones. However, Mr. Flynn is showing wonderful ability meeting in these independent companies over the province and working with them, discussing their troubles. He is a chap who came up from the bottom and took over a company which was in difficulty and made a very great success of it, and is showing a very active interest and a very fertile mind, I am told, in working out schemes to keep the companies together. After all, in my opinion, and I think in the opinion of this authority, the very great need is to try to amalgamate these companies and get them together.

The great difficulty right now is that we have 497 independent telephone companies, 168 of which have 50 phones or less, and 38 have 100 phones or less. No company with that small number of phones can give adequate service. After all, our rural people require the same type of telephone service as the urban people require. Never forget this situation, that they are all connected with the Bell Telephone Company, and the Bell Telephone Company cannot complete a message to any rural subscriber unless the rural telephone system is in a condition so that the message can get through. For that reason, the Bell Telephone Company is aware of, and rightly interested in the situation.

I think I might clarify the telephone situation a bit if I went over the different types of companies. If you look in the Act, you will see about four or five different sections referring to different types of companies. One type of telephone system is where we have the smallest number of public utilities. There are about ten of these in the province. Only in the urban municipalities like Port Arthur, Fort William, Kenora and similar places do we have public-utility telephones.

Then we have the private company which really must be considered a co-operative company. That is the type of company which I have worked with for a long time. In this company where practically all the phone holders are shareholders, it makes a very secure type of company, because in times of depression you do not lose telephones. The people are all shareholders; they have bought their shares and they have their telephone, and the result is they stay with the company. It has been necessary for our company to secure permission to use that type of phone because of a certain transient population who do not have shares.

In describing that type of company, I will tell you something about my own—at least the company of which I have been a director for a number of years, and go back into the history of the company to show where and when it was organized.

In 1900, the need for telephone service arose. Up until that time the only service we had throughout the country had been a private line run through some of the local towns by a doctor or where there was a post office. That situation continued for two or three years until the people realized they should have telephone service.

In about 1903 or 1904, twenty men got together in the town of Forest to try to interest the people in organizing a telephone company. They did not know where they would get the money, but finally conceived the idea of putting up notes at the bank for $50 each. The bank agreed to loan them $1,000, if they got twenty notes of $50 each. They scoured around the country and got nineteen men to sign a note, but they could not get any more, so the bank manager signed the other note to give them twenty notes of $50 each.

They started doing business and had not gone very far until one of the twenty wanted his note back and said, there was too much politics in the business and he would not stay in it. He got his note back, leaving nineteen.

It is very interesting to note that two of the original men are still alive and voted at the last annual meeting this year. They had their ups and downs and had just got started, and had the trunk line up, when there was a terrific storm which blew it all down and they had to rebuild it.

The present difficulty of so many companies with less than 50 phones dates back to those days. They organized a central in the town, bought a switchboard, and every person who wanted a phone had to build their own line out.

At that time my father and one other man built a line eighteen miles long, and put a phone in. This happened in every direction from central.

In a few years they decided that was not a very good way to do business, and they turned the line over to the company. That is the way they did business. In other companies they kept them and did not turn them over, and as a result we have some telephone companies with only 8 or 9 phones on them.

The great hazard with the rural telephone people is the weather. This year, our company had a $10,000 loss through storms, wind and ice, but fortunately we had sufficient money to pay for it, but this is a hazardous business with rural telephone companies. I will say more about that later.

I have a few figures here which I thought might be interesting to the hon. members, and which certainly will be to the general Telephone Authority regarding the prices of telephones fifty years ago. One item here shown a contract for 250 tamarack poles, 25 feet in length and 6 inch tops, fifteen cents. Another shows where they hired a lineman for $1 a day. They got a coin box for a pay phone which cost them $4. Today, the same phone costs $120. The price for tools and everything else all the way through are on the same ratio.

However, through it all, we have managed to have good telephone service. We have served our locality and have given them excellent service, so much so that each year the Bell Telephone Company has been sending an inspector, a public relations man around the province, and in every instance he has given us a clean sheet, stating that our company was in excellent condition and our service was good, which we are very proud of.

Among the private companies, we have another company which has organized one line and built it. They are still trying to operate, with the result that in no instance do they have enough revenue to hire a lineman to operate it. The most regrettable part is they became a service station company connected with central, owned by another company, and it is impossible in that situation to give good service.

We have another type of company that has given excellent service, our municipal company. These municipal companies are organized in a municipality. Where ten people are on the assessment roll, they can file a petition with council asking them to organize a company. That company is to a great extent co-operative. It is handled in this way. They go down the road and people sign to take a telephone. In each case, they must sign what amounts to a mortgage on their farm for 20 years, that they will pay so much each year to cover the cost of installing that phone. Also, they give them permission to put this money on the tax roll, and in that way that telephone company is the best situated of any company. Their tolls are all included on their tax roll.

There is one great weakness. In most instances these municipal companies are service station companies, and as I said before, it is impossible to give the best of service by a service station company, because of the fact someone else owns central, generally the Bell Telephone Company, and no purely rural telephone company can operate, because there is not enough revenue unless their rates are abnormally high. After all, it is the toll lines which pay the way and make it possible for a company to operate at reasonable rates and give good service.

I have some interesting figures here. In our western provinces where they believe very greatly in socialism, they went into the telephone business a number of years ago. In Alberta, in 1922, legislation was passed and they went into the rural telephone business. They sold it out in 1936, by organizing municipal telephone companies. Up to that time, the government had lost $10 million besides many hundreds of thousands of dollars they could not collect.

Saskatchewan had about the same experience. They started in the telephone business to supply telephone service to the rural people. They built these lines and put a tax on each farm whether they had a telephone or not. It did not matter whether they had a telephone or not, they paid taxes. They also paid rent if they had a telephone. They did that for a while and lost so much money they got out of it.

Then they built toll lines and by using the toll lines they were able to subsidize the rural lines in Saskatchewan and keep them going.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: What about Manitoba?

MR. JANES: Manitoba subsidizes the rural lines all the time to keep them going.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): What about British Columbia?

MR. JANES: In British Columbia they own the whole thing and they subsidize their own lines. Do not get the idea that I am going to suggest that we should subsidize rural lines. I do not support that course at all. I am convinced that when our committee gets to working and these companies amalgamate into larger groups of up to 800 or 1,000 telephones, and establishes rates, by creating goodwill and good public relations and working with the Bell Telephone Company, either try to arrange with the Bell Telephone Company to buy the line out and operate it, or that the rural company buy out the central from the Bell Telephone Company and operate it. Either way should be satisfactory. Indeed it is the only way it can be possible to operate with its own finances.

Any telephone company which has 800 to 1,000 subscribers and has the proper rate set can borrow all the money it wants anywhere. Our company have never had any trouble borrowing money, the bank will supply us with all the money we want any time we want it, and I know that is the case with any independent telephone company in Ontario.

In a few years after this authority has been working and has these companies organized and amalgamated, there might be a reason to assist one of the companies to extend a line into an area where they have no telephone service, but that is several years ahead, in my view, and I certainly would not be happy at all to have the government do any financing of any telephone company at the present time.

Another point in which I am interested is, there is only one reason for giving a charter to a company to operate a telephone company and that is to give service to the people. I am not interested in any company which has a charter; I am only interested in the people who want the service, and I hope that when the authority begins operating if at any time they find a company that is not giving service, they will cancel its charter and give it some other company which will give service.

People who live in the rural areas do face some difficulties and have to do without certain things. Probably they get a considerable number of other things to compensate them for the things they miss, but the fact remains that they have a perfect right to a telephone service and that must be given without making the rates too high in the rural section; as where a local town is hooked in with it and they have reasonable toll rates, it can be operated, and will operate and carry itself quite easily.

The hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) gave a fairly good report of what our committee has been doing. As he said, we do not want to mention the names of telephone companies with which we are working, because it might prejudice the situation, but they have been doing a very fine job. We hear criticism every once in a while about the Bell Telephone Company. May I say, Mr. Speaker, that in my experience over the last 25 years with the telephone companies and the years I have spent coming to conventions of the Independent Telephone Association in Toronto, the Bell Telephone Company is not interested in any rural telephone company. It is not interested in any small company except for one reason, that is to complete their contract, as I said before, with their subscribers. If they get a long distance call in Toronto and they want to deliver that message some place in Lambton County, they want the rural company to be in a position to deliver that message. That is the only interest the Bell Telephone has in the local company, and they have gone out of their way to advise and assist those smaller companies. I feel there is a certain jealousy which dates away back 40 or 50 years ago. We had trouble in our area where at one time the Bell refused to accept any calls from our company, which had to go to the Railway Board in Toronto to compel them to accept those calls. But those days are gone, Mr. Speaker, and now the Bell is co-operating in a very efficient manner.

I would like to mention the Ontario Hydro. As hon. members know, this committee has been working under the Ontario Hydro this last few years. They have been very co-operative and it is really amazing what they have done. Do you realize, Mr. Speaker, that since this bill came in, in 1951—and this committee has been working only the last few months—the Hydro people have had 700 requests to put telephone lines on their poles in joint use. These requests have all been taken care of but two. I think that does show co-operation.

There are many instances of Hydro poles where it is not economical to run telephone lines, it is far better to keep away from them. The cost of equipping a high tension line to carry a telephone line is almost prohibitive, it is much cheaper to build a telephone line by itself and to keep away from the Hydro line; but where any of these Hydro lines are running through the country supplying power to the farmers, if it is only 2 horse-power or 3 horse-power, it makes a perfect connection to run lines on the same pole.

You will probably hear complaints along the line of the Hydro costs. One of the governors of the telephone company was telling me the other day that he inquired what it would cost to put his telephone line on the Hydro line and they figured out that it was going to cost him $700, a perfectly just charge because they had to take their line down and put in new higher poles in order to get the transformers higher up and do away with interference on the line. He estimated he could build his own line for $300, and that is what he did. We must face that situation.

Another point that may be of interest is that since conversion from 25 to 60 cycle in Hydro, interference is much greater and the telephone line must be kept further away and must be more protected in order to have a quiet service. We were the "guinea pigs" in our company when conversion came along. At the time conversion was completed in our district, we could not hear over our phones at all. Nobody knew what was wrong. I came down to the Hydro people and told them the situation, they said they did not know what was wrong but they would send engineers. By the time I got home there were four engineers there and they were in there every week for a long time trying to figure out what was wrong. They finally came to the conclusion that 60-cycle current moved faster and went out further from the wires and was causing interference, and by putting certain protection on our telephone wires they were able to get over the difficulty. I want to commend the Hydro for the very fine assistance they gave us all the way through.

There are several situations in Ontario where the committee have been called in to insist on better service. The hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) suggested that he did not think we should mention any names, but in one case I have asked the chairman of the Telephone Authority to bring the map to the municipal committee when they are going over the Act and just show them the situation that is developing in this particular place where they have seven telephone companies for the message to pass through, a few miles on one company's wire, which is not very well protected; then a few miles on the next company's wire, also not very well protected, then it comes to a central where they close up about 8 o'clock at night and go home, and any long distance message definitely has to pass through that central.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I hope that is not in Eastern Ontario.

MR. JANES: That is where it is. I am not going to mention the name. Mr. Speaker. However, he tells me he is getting quite promising co-operation from them and that he hopes in a very short time to have one company operating all those exchanges. There is one good company among them, but all those messages must go through some of these poor companies whose lines are falling down and who will not take proper precautions.

I do not want to take any more time, Mr. Speaker. I have a few figures here which I thought might be interesting.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, may I suggest the hon. member (Mr. Janes) should not restrict his remarks. There is lots of time yet and he is making a very interesting speech.

MR. JANES: I have a few figures here which were taken from the U.S. Telephone Blue Book. There are 85,000,000 telephones in the world. The average calls per home for 1953 over the world were 153; there were 382 in the United States and there were 389 in Canada, so we do more talking than anyone else in the world.

In the United States there are 53,000 independent telephone companies. In Canada there are 950. This is interesting when you look at our new Act. Michigan is the only state where there is a penalty for listening on the telephone. Our new Act recommends a penalty for so listening.

HON. MR. FROST: Not for listening, for repeating. Mr. Speaker, that is in the old Act, I do not think it is a new provision, is it?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No, it is in the present Act.

MR. JANES: I was over at our new rural Telephone Authority at No. 7 Queen's Park this morning. It is a very nice office. We are going to be very well situated and if any hon. members have any complaints from any of their constituents about the telephone service, go over and "unload the whole thing" onto the shoulders of "Hal" Rogers. He is looking for work.

I do not think I should take too much time, Mr. Speaker. It is very necessary that engineering service be supplied to our rural telephone companies. Practically all the telephone engineers in Ontario are employees of the Bell Telephone Company, and as I remarked before, there is a certain jealousy, particularly among the smaller companies. The larger, successful companies are not being bothered by that jealousy, but the smaller companies are what one might call afraid of the Bell. In most cases the Bell would not touch them with a ten-foot pole because they are money losers no matter who has them. However, there can be a very great service given to those companies by supplying engineering service to them, by discussing their troubles with the manufacturing companies and by giving them a proper accounting system, because no company of any kind can operate without a proper accounting and auditing system. An auditor who understands the telephone business, in going over the books of the telephone company can tell them exactly the rates they should have to operate that company. Any company must be set up on rates that will pay their current expenses and any bonds they may have.

To my mind, to amalgamate these companies is probably the most important and most immediate thing this authority can do, and it is really surprising to me the response they are getting from these companies. The sad thing, though, is that the companies so far which need the assistance most are not coming forward for it, but when this Act is passed, authority will be given to go to these people and tell them they must do something.

I think I will not take any more time. I want once more to say that I am very happy in the fact that we have established this authority. We should have had it long ago. Quebec long ago gave assistance to their independent companies and I see a great future for this Telephone Authority.

MR. J. ROOT (Wellington North): Mr. Speaker, after listening to the very interesting and enlightening remarks by the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) and the hon. member for Lambton East (Mr. Janes) it is not my intention to speak at great length on Bill 51, "The Telephone Act, 1954," but I would like to support the principle of this bill and to congratulate the government on the leadership it has given in this, as in other matters.

It is known to informed people that the problem of municipal and independent telephone systems was under study by the government for a number of years. In 1947 a conference was called in the hon. Prime Minister's office, to discuss this problem. This conference asked Mr. R. E. Smythe, consulting engineer, to prepare a report. Mr. Smythe presented an interim report in 1948. In 1951 legislation was introduced and passed, "The Rural Systems Telephone Act, 1951," which gave the Hydro Commission power to make a further study and give assistance to municipal and independent telephone companies. This Act was amended in 1952 and again in 1953, and today we are debating "The Telephone Act, 1954."

Mr. Speaker, what I have said and am pointing out, is that this government has given advanced leadership in the study of this problem. They have developed legislation and now present this bill which has benefited and will benefit and assist many of our people living in the smaller centres.

I mention particularly clause 66 of the present bill, which provides:

Every telephone system shall furnish continuous telephone service that adequately and efficiently meets the needs of the public in the territory in which it operates.

I draw attention also to clause 89 of the bill that provides:

Every person who, when using a telephone instrument or conversing over a telephone line, whether the telephone instrument or line is owned by a telephone system under the jurisdiction of the Legislature or not, refuses to give up or permit the use of the line when requested to do by the operator or any other person in case of a fire, accident, sickness or similar emergency, is guilty of an offence and on summary conviction is liable to a penalty of not more than $50 or to imprisonment for a term of not more than 30 days or to both.

Clause 101 of the new Act sets out as some of the duties of the authority, among which are:

to study the communication needs of Ontario, both immediate and future, and plan adequate communication facilities;

to supply telephone systems, municipalities and persons with engineering, accounting, legal and other technical advice and assistance pertaining to telephone problems;

to encourage and assist in the formation of larger and more efficient telephone systems by rendering engineering, legal and other assistance in the amalgamation, purchase, sale or other disposition of telephone systems or parts of systems; to encourage and assist telephone systems to improve telephone service and to extend such service to unserved areas;

to establish and conduct schools for the training of construction, installation and maintenance employees and the operating staffs of telephone systems.

These and many other clauses in the bill will make it possible to provide an improved communications' system for many parts of Ontario and, in particular, the rural parts.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure that everyone interested in the welfare of the people and in particular, the rural people, will give their support to this bill, as I intend to give mine.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I want to add my congratulations to the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) and hon. members who have preceded me, in extolling the virtues of this new telephone bill.

My great interest in it is more or less personal. I have a phone in my house in the Township of Macintyre, 2 miles outside of the city of Port Arthur, which has not rung once in the last two years. Mr. Speaker, I do not think that is because nobody wants to talk to me, it is just a case of one of these systems which went into bankruptcy two years ago and has never worked since.

This bill is designed chiefly to help situations such as that. As the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) explained, some year and a half ago he figured that a good telephone service should be given to all the people of Ontario and, with that forward-looking idea of his, he immediately asked the Hydro-Electric Power Commission to form this committee and investigate and bring in a report on what the possibilities were for giving good telephone service to all the citizens of Ontario. I understand they sent out questionnaires to different areas and visited telephone companies throughout the province, and they have now brought in this bill for our consideration and passage.

The hon. member for Wellington North (Mr. Root) who preceded me, mentioned several things in the bill which strike me as the most significant items in it.

Page 26, part VI, provides that there shall be a body known as the "Ontario Telephone Authority" and the members shall be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor; the staff of the authority shall consist of a secretary, a commercial director, an engineering director and such other officers as employees as may be deemed necessary.

That really constitutes an authority which is worthwhile in connection with our rural telephone situation.

The sittings of the authority may be either private or open to the public, but any complaint made to the authority shall, on the application of any party thereto, be heard publicly.

That is another excellent point. Then the hon. member for Wellington North (Mr. Root) mentioned the duty of the authority to study the communication needs of Ontario both immediate and future and plan adequate communication facilities.

Mr. Speaker, I think we are all aware that for the past 32 years Mr. MacDonald has been struggling, many times greatly frustrated in his efforts, to keep rural telephone systems going throughout this province. This Act is going to be of great assistance to him and I know he will be of inestimable value to the committee. In my own municipality, Mr. Speaker, we have a great many railroad workers who have found it most difficult to carry on their vocations and who live outside the city, and due to lack of telephone service, very often they have to go so far as to hire taxi cabs at $2.50 a journey, to notify them when they are needed for railroad duties.

These are some of the things we are up against.

Now, we have managed to get the city of Port Arthur Commission to extend their lines into our municipality, at a cost of $4.75 per month, and a down-payment of $15.00 at the time they take their 'phone. The charge is high, but at the same time, we feel it is a great service, and we also feel that this bill will help not only the small communities, but the larger ones, to get the service we have been so long denied.

There are a couple of other points, Mr. Speaker, I would like to mention, which I think are important. One is on page 28, section "f" which reads:

to encourage and assist in the co-ordination and joint use of power and telephone plant, including the improvement of the appearance, efficiency and safety of such plants, and to assist telephone systems to reach agreement with power systems for such purpose.

In our own locality, the Hydro-Electric have made available to us, the use of the poles, which was a very great saving to our municipality in the telephone use, and I think that section of the Act is most important.

I also like this item on page 28, subparagraph (b), to encourage the telephone systems to establish pensions and other benefit plans for employees.

That will mean a continuity of staff, which will ensure better telephone service for the users, which are available at all times, and they will be people who have been trained in their work. This will benefit the rural municipalities, Mr. Speaker, instead of as previously, where the board came to their assistance only in case of emergency, or for any adjudication to be heard by the board. Under this authority, they will have this trained staff to render constant assistance to telephone companies and help them improve their systems. They will be able to render engineering advice, and supply telephone systems with detailed maps, showing what should be possible to be done, and then be able to send in field men to give actual instructions. I understand that schools will be set up to train men in the different municipalities in proper telephone operation. This will be of benefit to the whole telephone situation in Ontario.

There are so many unserved areas, and some which are poorly served, and this authority will assist in improving these conditions.

May I say in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, something which I have always believed, that this is but another price of forward-looking legislation which has always been emblematical of the Frost administration.

MR. S. J. HUNT (Renfrew North):
Mr. Speaker, representing a different part of rural Ontario than the other hon. members who have spoken, that is, Renfrew County in eastern Ontario, I think perhaps there the telephone problem is more acute than in the western part of the province, and I would like to commend the government for bringing in Bill No. 51. I think it is a sincere attempt to render assistance and direction to some of our small companies, to help themselves to provide better telephone service in rural Ontario, in their attempt to provide rural telephone service, where we have no service at the present time, and we have a great many people in that category in Renfrew County.

In our county, we have four distinct types of telephone service at the present time: we have the Bell Telephone, which has taken over certain small companies during the last few years and is at present providing a very good telephone service, but, I must say, at a considerably higher rate than was paid to those prior to their being taken over.

We have one large system operating in our county, which provides a very passable telephone service to its subscribers.

Then we have dozens of small, independent companies, or mutual companies. These companies have anywhere from 40 subscribers upward, and in each case the subscribers are shareholders in the company.

These companies date back 30 or 40 years, when they were granted a charter, when the municipality gave them the right to build a line along concession lines, and they have provided services for the people in these townships. There are a great many who are perhaps a quarter or a half-mile off the telephone lines, who were never able to get service, because in many instances we have telephone lines on one side of the road, and Hydro lines on the other, and it was impossible to build a third line, so nothing has been done to provide service for these people.

Then we have several government lines, such as the Department of Lands and Forests, and the Hydro, which provide telephone service for themselves, and in some cases, for private parties.

We have, as the vice-chairman of the Hydro remarked earlier, a great many summer resorts which are in the backward parts of our county, where no telephone service is provided. These people live in the most remote parts of the county, and it is those of whom I speak at the present time.

I think the direction which can be given by the Telephone Authority, through its engineers, to our smaller companies, can be of very great value, and perhaps bring about a solution of the problem of the many people who are unable to secure telephone service at the present time.

These small companies, to which I made reference a short time ago, built their lines 30 or 40 years ago, and provided a reasonably adequate telephone service at that time. In fact, in many of our rural sections today, the telephone service is not as satisfactory nor as adequate as it was 25 or 30 years ago, when the lines were comparatively new.

These lines have fallen into disrepair, and the poles have rotted, and in many cases, have almost fallen down. The metallic surfaces have been corroded, and are not giving as good a service as they did when the lines were new. Because of the limited cash invested by these companies, they cannot provide such amounts needed to provide services to which these people are, I think, entitled.

I think the Telephone Authority to be set up can render very valuable assistance in getting these small companies together and to amalgamate, and cooperate, to provide better service for a great many people who are doing without it at the present time.

I do not know that Bill 51 is a "cure-all" for all our difficulties. I have been looking over some of the sections, and can visualize running into some difficulties, particularly in the section where it says:

In a case where the revenue derived from the operations of a telephone system is insufficient to carry the cost, a special rate may be imposed by the municipality upon all rateable property in the municipality.

In our county, where some are already under the Bell system, for which we think we are paying a sufficiently high rate, there will be objection if a rate is levied on them, to help provide telephone service for other rate payers in the municipality.

I understand this bill is to go to the committee, and some of these little difficulties may be ironed out there.

I am sure this is an attempt to correct a situation which is bad at the present time, and is a measure which is long overdue.

MR. W. MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, although the riding of Essex South is serviced, in the most part, by the Bell Telephone Company, the residents of Pelee Island are operating a municipal telephone system. This has worked very well in the past, but from time to time, there have been interruptions in communications to the main land on account of the cables being disturbed by ice, or by dragging anchors of ships in the ship channel of Lake Erie.

However, a few years ago, connection was made by radio, and it has been used very effectively ever since.

However, the point I wish to make is this—which may not be properly in order—but the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission has rendered good, co-operative service to the rural systems throughout the province, and this has been done through legislation introduced by this government.

On Pelee Island, we have a well-maintained telephone system, and on behalf of the residents of the island, I wish to state that they would like to reciprocate with the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission, and will be very glad to offer all their telephone poles at any time the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission is ready to supply them with Hydro service.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to prolong the debate on this bill, but I do wish to make one or two observations.

In the first place, I think the government has taken the proper step in setting up the authority, and that this authority will take over many duties from the Ontario Municipal Board.

The work which has been done by the board heretofore was simply the control, taking the telephones as a whole, and I am very pleased indeed to see that Mr. James MacDonald, a very faithful employee of the board, has been retained and his services are going to be used by the authority. I think that was an excellent move, as Mr. MacDonald is one of the finest telephone officials in the province of Ontario.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Hunt) that I think he is unduly apprehensive when he made his remark about the assessment. The special assessment is only made as against subscribers in a municipal telephone system, where the subscribers have subscribed to the establishment of a municipal organization. Then the special assessment may be placed on their property. The hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Hunt) evidently thought that such companies as the Bell Telephone might ask for his assessment.

I have gone over the sections of the bill rather hurriedly, but I believe it is an excellent bill, and will fulfill a much-needed want. There are, however, one or two things of which I am fearful. I see there is one section which says "continuous service" must be given. Now, "continuous service" is undoubtedly necessary, but it will mean the limitation of the operations of many of the smaller companies. In the smaller areas, many of the smaller companies have closed down their operations at a certain hour of the night, or evening, and have not re-opened again until the early hours of the following morning. If these companies have to give continuous service, it will mean increasing their overhead expenditures, but I think they can get around that by amalgamating small groups together. I am sure all hon. members of this House want to see these small companies survive, and not be "gobbled up" by such a large, monopolistic system as the Bell. I would hate to see the Bell take over the telephone services of the province completely. I want to see the smaller companies continue, if they can give proper service, and I would like to see an extension of the municipal systems. I think therein lies the answer; let the municipalities take over these systems, and operate them.

For nearly thirty years, I was a director in a stock company which owned and operated a telephone system in the north. About three years ago, the municipality gave notice they were going to take it over and they did so. They took over our system. At the time our company lost control, we had 185 telephone services in the settlement of Ansonville; today, they have somewhere between 600 and 700, which shows what a municipal system can do, when they take over the operations of the telephone systems.

All in all, I think the bill is a very good one. There may be one or two questions which will have to be ironed out, but that may be done in the Committee on Municipal Law, or in Committee of the Whole House, which will be the proper place to bring up these problems.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I was hoping the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) would make it unnecessary for me to make even the few brief remarks I had not intended making, but now I am compelled to make them because he has not created the condition which would have made them unnecessary. This has been what you might call a government field day. I do not suggest the government organized this extensive debate. I think it was very interesting, and the subject matter of the bill does deserve the discussion given to it. I have learned quite a bit from the discussion but inevitably it was almost a symphony of praise of the government. It will, I am sure, find its way into the columns of the weekly papers of this province and they in turn will spread far and wide that this government is always on guard for the telephone users.

I do not want to create dissonance at this late hour but I am obligated to say that while I agree with the principle of the bill I still feel that the bill does not go far enough, and that should be stated. The bill, Mr. Speaker, points up a few very important things that should be noted on this occasion. First that the Bell Telephone Company, which has a monopoly in a very decisive field of human communications, is falling down on the job and steps in usually when it is profitable for them to step in, but leaves the pioneering work to the rural person, to the farmer and to those who open mines. Is not that true?

It is a truth of which we should take note that here is a monopoly which boasts of the fact that it has paid dividends uninterruptedly since it came into being—and so it has. It tops the list of big corporations which have never failed their bondholders. Yet this company lets the farmer and the bush man struggle it out and create the local telephone systems, and then comes in much later.

Indeed I think Mr. Speaker, that while the bill will help the small companies—and to that extent should be supported, as I am sure it will be supported from all sides of the House—what would be necessary in my humble opinion would be that we utilize this occasion for embarking on a new policy, a policy that would ultimately lead to a provincially-operated public utility of all telephones in the province. That is what we need. There are some local telephone companies which have done pretty well. At the Head of the Lakes I understand there is a publicly-owned telephone system which has done so well that I hear its treasury was raided on a couple of occasions by the municipal treasurer in order to keep the tax rate down.

Here is a telephone system operated by the municipality and they find it very profitable, and I am sure we would find it profitable to operate the Ontario telephone system and we could perhaps now begin to regroup and amalgamate all these companies into an Ontario system which ultimately would blanket the whole province.

One of the greatest accomplishments of Hydro is its ability to come here year after year and boast of the extension of services in the rural areas, which until now, did not have the benefits of electricity. I, like everyone else, am happy Hydro is doing that. If we had the telephone system operating as a publicly-owned utility we could extend it into the remotest areas of this province, open up new areas and relieve the burden on struggling farm communities or communities which open up virgin forest land. I think we would really "go to town." I think we would give service cheaper than is now given by the Bell or the struggling small local systems because we could borrow money at interest far below what the Bell is paying its bondholders. I have not looked up their bond interest rates but I think they are paying now between 5 and 6 per cent.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick) :
5 per cent.

MR. SALSBERG: All right, I accept the information of the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts), not entirely because he comes from a neighbouring constituency but because he is around Bay Street and knows what is doing in those parts. The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) tells us the interest rate is around 5 per cent. We can borrow money as we do for 4 per cent. or less, I think, and we have operated Hydro—despite all the things we may complain about and despite things we would like to know—as efficiently as any private company would and we are able to borrow cheaper money. It is possible to operate a publicly owned telephone system in Ontario on money borrowed at anything between 3 and 4 per cent. Hydro bonds recently were sold at less than 4. Why should not we do that? I think we should. I think it would help the extension of this very necessary system of communication. The people would profit thereby and would be relieved of the load they now carry on their shoulders. The hon. member for Lambton East (Mr. Janes) has done a very excellent job and I am sure he will now qualify for a seat on the new authority. If agreement has not yet been reached that he should be a member of the authority, I would suggest his name to the government for consideration. As for the hon. Prime Minister, I am sure he privately, in his own heart, agrees with my proposals. I can see it in his eyes. His heart is in the right place, but he has no control over his heart. I hope on this occasion he will remember to implement at least some of the suggestions I have made.

HON. MR. FROST: May I say before this bill goes to its next stage in the committee, that I hope it will receive there the most full consideration. I know it will receive it there. There are clauses in this bill which I think require very thorough consideration. I should like to congratulate the hon. member for Grenville (Hon. Mr. Challies) and those to whom he referred, and I would also like to thank a large number of hon. members of this House on both sides who have taken an interest in this matter for some years past. This is another step, and I think it is one which will add to the betterment of rural communications.

I do not speak without interest. I am a rural telephone subscriber myself. I have been for some time now a subscriber to the Dunsford Rural Telephone Company, and I would point out to my hon. friend from Lambton East (Mr. Janes) that this is a good company. It gives good service. I have phoned to places a good distance away, and it is a good line.

I believe this will be a means of giving to our people improved communications. I was in the Kenora Riding some time ago, and there I saw an interesting experiment—I presume it was an experiment—in wireless communication, and I had an opportunity of talking over that wireless communication to outfitters' camps and other places. This is a very interesting thing, and it may be that development of the idea will solve many of the problems of rural people in connection with sleet storms and weather disturbances. Science may meet them.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure this bill will be given the utmost consideration in committee as one more step in providing for better rural communication.

MR. OLIVER: Will there be ample opportunity for interested telephone companies to present their views before the committee?

MR. FROST: Of course.

MR. OLIVER: I would think it elementary that we should not push it through committee too fast and that these companies and their representatives will have every opportunity to state their views in respect to the different clauses.

MR. FROST: Perhaps the best thing that could be done would be to refer it to the committee now and then let the matter stand—people will get notice through the Press—and do not hurry it; let it be there perhaps a month and then let it come back here after everybody has had the fullest opportunity.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, in moving the adjournment of the House may I say the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne will proceed tomorrow. On Friday I hope we will consider other bills and also consider the report of the Election Committee, of which the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Collings) is chairman. In considering these reports I think it should be remembered that these reports are the reports of the thinking of committees which are bipartisan. I was rather interested in a comment made during a recent by-election in which one of the members opposite—I cannot say whether it was from the C.C.F. group or not, or somebody connected with them—likened me to a person they dislike very much, because there was a provision in it for putting down a deposit. Perhaps some of the hon. members here saw that. At least—it is so said—there was provision in the report for the payment of a deposit, and therefore I was likened to a person whom the speaker did not like very much.

However, any report to be presented is a matter for this House when it comes from the committee and I can assure you that views put forward by committees are decisions at which they arrived entirely untrammelled.

I have never been consulted about any of these matters and I would not expect to be. I would look for the committees to bring forward their views to this House to be debated in the ordinary course.

On Friday I hope we may consider that report. We have a number of these reports and I want to give ample opportunity to all the hon. members to consider everything contained in them.

I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The house adjourned at 4.17 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1954

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

The Acting Speaker in the Chair.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: The following petition has been received:

Of the Corporation of the Township of Scarborough praying that an Act may pass providing that the Council of the township shall be composed of a Reeve, a Deputy Reeve, and six Councillors and providing for the method of its election.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the name of Mr. Oliver, the hon. Leader of the Opposition, be added to the Committee on Government Commissions.

Motion agreed to.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Introduction of Bills.

THE MINING ACT

HON. P. T. KELLY moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Mining Act."

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): With your permission, I would like to ask a question of the hon. Minister. He is introducing a bill amending certain sections of the Mining Act, and I think he is fully aware that there are many people who do have day-to-day dealings with this Act, who feel it would be in the interests of the Province of Ontario if a more general revision of the Act was made in committee. I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether, in presenting this bill, he contemplates referring it to the committee and permitting much wider recommendations to be made.

HON. MR. KELLY: The bill in toto will be referred to the committee, and we would welcome suggestions from hon. members and particularly the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) which might enable the committee to bring in recommendations which would be of benefit in the administration of mining by way of amendments to the Act.

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

THE OPERATING ENGINEERS ACT, 1953

HON. CHARLES DALEY moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Operating Engineers Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the Bill.

THE DEPARTMENT OF MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS ACT

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Department of Municipal Affairs Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This is just a matter of having the municipalities placed on the tax notice with rents to be received from the Provincial Government during the year. Although we listen to broadcasts about how mean we are with municipalities, we want the taxpayer to know what he is getting. We are not ashamed of it.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Municipal Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to give an explanation. This is quite a lengthy bill and will go before the committee, of course, as all our bills do.

Section 1. This is a revision of Part I of The Municipal Act, which is the part dealing with the formation of new municipalities, changes in status of municipalities, changes in municipal boundaries and dissolutions of municipalities, and matters consequent thereon. The fundamental principle that has been followed in the revision is that all such matters should be settled before the Ontario Municipal Board.

That is to say, we have been dealing with conditions in places which have been changing. We have in the Atikokan district, the "Improved District of Atikokan." They were desirous of changing their status to a town. We found, according to our Act, it was impossible. If it had been formed into a township first, they would have been put to the expense of a Private Bill. They asked for permission to be placed as a town or village.

I might as well explain here—because you will be asking me if I do not—that this will affect Malton, which is "a police village" and now desires its status to be changed to a village. It will go to the Municipal Board and not to the county. Times have changed in the past ninety or one hundred years since this was placed on the Statute Books, and conditions have changed. Manufacturing interests in or near surrounding villages have affected the sale of bonds in the township. I have had several letters during the past week from bond dealers, saying they sold bonds for the Township of Toronto, and that Malton Village was considered at that time, and the industry there is a great asset to that township, and would, perhaps, affect the price of the bonds.

Therefore, we feel all these factors in changing the status of a municipality should go to the Municipal Board, where people will have the opportunity of a public hearing and both sides will be heard before a decision was made.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I interject and ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) if he has given any consideration to having a general revision of The Municipal Act?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We have been revising it pretty well each year, bringing it up-to-date, and suggestions have been made by The Mayors and Reeves Organizations, The Ontario Municipal Association, The Rural Municipal Association, and different associations of that sort. It is a difficult thing to change a complete Act, because the foundation is sound on which it was built and amendments are made from year to year. When you consider there are nine hundred and sixty-two municipalities in the Province of Ontario, it is difficult to change the Act to fit it in with the machinery of all the different municipalities. That is why we must have so many Private Bills.

This amendment will pretty well revise the first part, and we will have further amendments to offer regarding the balance of the Act.

THE CONVEYANCING AND LAW OF PROPERTY ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Conveyancing and Law of Property Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill deals with employee pension and retirement plans operated by an employer or by a trustee.

Some little time ago The Insurance Act was amended to deal with plans of this kind when they were operated by insurance companies, but there are a number of these plans which are operated by trustees and by employers direct, and it is intended by this amendment to bring them into line with the provisions of The Insurance Act.

Also, this bill will provide that these pension trusts will be excepted from the law respecting perpetuities and accumulations as it is inappropriate that these laws should apply to such trusts, and there is some doubt whether it may apply.

THE PARENTS' MAINTENANCE ACT, 1954

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Parents' Maintenance Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This bill provides for a general revision of this Act, which was originally passed in 1921. It does contain two new principles.

In the first place, in line with the policy which appears in some other bills which I have already introduced at this session, the jurisdiction in these cases will be given to the Juvenile and Family Courts rather than to the magistrates, except in those cases where there is no Juvenile Court, and in those cases it will be before the magistrate.

In the second place, cases in which the information is laid without the consent of the Crown Attorney are extended and it is now provided in addition to these other cases under the present Act, that informations may be laid by a representative of a municipality, because the municipalities have some interest where the children of parents who are able to support them, have become public charges.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

MR. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Before the Orders of the day, I want to extend to the teachers and pupils of Stayner Public School a very warm welcome to our Legislature.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House the following:

- (1) 1952 Statement of the Return under Sections 235 and 241 of The Municipal Act.
- (2) Thirty-sixth Annual Report of the Civil Service Commission for Ontario for the year ending March 31st, 1953.
- (3) Thirty-third Annual Report of the Public Service Superannuation Board.
- (4) Report of the Provincial Auditor on the Public Service Superannuation Fund for the year ending March 31, 1953.
- (5) Report of the Provincial Auditor on the Public Service Retirement Fund for the year ended March 31, 1953.
- (6) Eighth Annual Report of the Department of Travel and Publicity, Ontario, for the fiscal year 1953-54.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: 1st Order, resuming the adjourned debate on the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor, at the opening of the session.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Acting Speaker, I would want my first words this afternoon to be in appreciation of your acceptance of the chair on this occasion, and I can assure you that, as far as I am concerned, this afternoon, you will have a quiet tenure in office. I am personally a man of peace, and I have no desire to stir up controversy, and if you have any difficulties, they will come as a result of provocation from across the way.

I thought I might as well place the responsibility at this time, because in the heat of argument we might lose sight of the relative aspects of the proper basis for the responsibility for any flare-up. But I do want to emphasize—and seriously, Mr. Acting Speaker—how glad I am to see you occupying this high place in our Legislative Assembly, and to express the hope we will have the opportunity, as the session progresses, to see you in action, and to benefit from your fairness, as we proceed forward.

It was my loss, Mr. Acting Speaker, not to be in the House the other day when the mover and seconder of the address in reply made their contributions to this debate. I would have liked to have been here, but I think the House will grant this, that I have always been here in times past, but sometimes circumstances arise which seem to prohibit a person being in the House, and one of those circumstances arose, hence I was unable to be here when the mover and seconder gave their addresses.

I have no doubt they were speeches which were well prepared and well delivered. I have no doubt, further, that in the course of these speeches, at the start, and at the conclusion, there was a bit of praise tendered to the government for what they saw as achievements on the part of the government.

Indeed, I am told that at one stage of the proceedings, the congratulations were so profuse and so unexpected—and so undeserved—that the hon. Attorney-General actually fell from his chair in consternation. That should be taken as a warning by other hon. members of the government. Personally, I would like to see many indulge in that practice if it has similar consequences, and similar results, but it just may be that carrying that to a very great degree in regard to this profuse praise, might end in some casualties on the government benches, and, of course, we would not want to see that.

I would also imagine in the speeches, the mover and seconder made little or no mention of any omissions or con-missions by the administration, for which this government is responsible. I think they would rather have sought to lead the legislators to believe that all the government did was correct, and all they did not do should not have been done anyway. I do not imagine that anywhere in their remarks, could be found anything which savoured of criticism; anything which could be classed as a rebuke to the present administration, and I do not imagine anywhere in their speeches there was an element of discord, so far as the government was concerned.

I am sorry there was not, because I think in this House, even the government benefits from criticism, if that criticism is constructive, and it benefits whether it comes from the Opposition benches or from amongst its own members.

So I would suggest to the members of the government that they be not so reticent in their criticism of the government and governmental policy.

After all, you cannot be so foolish as to think you can live in a house of dreams, in which there are no troubles, and in which everything is right, and nothing could be made better. There is always room for advancement; there is always room for progress; there is always room for improvement in governmental policies, and their application to the people of this province.

And those policies will benefit, I suggest, Mr. Acting Speaker, by constructive criticism, aimed, in the first place, toward extending the policies which have not been wide enough in their application, and, in the second place, at formulating new policies, which may be just in the offing, but which need concentrated attack, if you will, by hon. members who are interested in these problems, to bring them to the fore, and to get behind these problems sufficiently to attract public attention, and to have them rectified in this Legislative Assembly.

I would have thought that the hon. members who moved and seconded the address, would have had something to say, for instance, about municipal affairs.

We have had some bills brought down this afternoon by this department, and I hope when you put the amount the government pays to the municipalities on each individual tax bill, you will add the schedule you have drawn up, so much for the city of Toronto, so much for this, and so much for that locality, so that the people in the various municipalities will know just where they stand in relation to governmental appreciation of their problems, in respect to financial contributions from the Province of Ontario. I think that might well be added as a foot-note, advising what you are prepared to do.

I suggest there is criticism due to this government, because of their flagrant behaviour in respect to municipal financing. Over the years, we, on this side of the House, have tried to impress upon the government, the urgency of getting down to grass roots in connection with the problem of municipal financing.

We have said, Mr. Acting Speaker, over and over again, that the municipalities are in this peculiar position; that they have a tax base which is more or less static, and that most of their taxes are levied against real estate, and there is a limit, and a very definite limit, beyond which the municipalities cannot go in safety in levying additional taxes against real estate. They have not really any other source of income, and if they want to increase their taxes and thus increase their revenue, it can only come about by an increased mill rate against real estate in that particular locality. So I suggest it is fair when one says that, generally speaking, the municipal tax base structure is a static institution; it is something which does not move very much from year to year.

We know that assessments increase somewhat because of good times, and because of the buoyancy of conditions generally, but, speaking broadly, the tax basis upon which a municipality must levy its taxes, and fix its rates, is more static, and is not given as much to widening and broadening as in the provincial field. I think that is accepted by the public generally.

Over the years, the municipalities have tried to pay increased costs with that static tax base; they have had increased costs for education; increased costs for welfare services; increased costs for the administration of justice, and every municipality has had increased costs all along the line, and their continuing problem has been to try and meet these increased costs from a tax base which is more or less static. That just cannot be done, and at the same time, give the people of the municipalities that to which they are entitled.

I have suggested this many times, and I do so again today, that the provincial administration, whose responsibility is very great, should come to the aid of the municipalities of this province, and either increase the grants presently given the municipalities, or take over some of the tax fields toward which the municipalities presently contribute.

I was interested the other day when reading an editorial in the Globe and Mail—and when I find myself in agreement with the Globe and Mail, I know I must be on the right track.

The burden of the editorial in the Globe and Mail was to suggest what I have suggested many times in this rather than increasing the grants presently paid to the municipalities, the government should divide the tax fields, and divide the sources of taxation, and that it should give to the municipalities some fields in which they would be masters in their own house, and the province, on the other hand, should take over from the municipalities completely some fields in which the municipalities presently attempt to share the financial responsibility.

One might ask, "What fields would you take over?" I think it is proper to suggest welfare costs, because they are costs which should not be borne by the municipal taxpayers of the province. I think that is a tax which should very properly be borne by the people generally, and paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of this province.

I am convinced, moreover, Mr. Acting Speaker, that the cost of the administration of justice in this province should not be a tax against the local taxpayers.

All of us, I am sure, can recall to mind instances where just by chance, a certain county or a certain municipality has been burdened with the court costs, and one thing and another, which they should not have had to bear at all.

There is one case I have in mind which occurred just a few months ago, where a murder was apparently committed, and the body was thrown out in a certain county, and because it was in that county, the county had to assume all of the charges in connection with the case. They had to harbour the one who was alleged to be the slayer, and they had to pay costs of keeping him, and all the court costs, and the matter really had nothing to do with that county at all. It just so happened that the body was there, and it having been found there constituted the reason for the costs being charged against the county.

I think the administration of justice in this province could well be taken over in its entirety by the provincial government.

I suggest to the government that now is the time to do something in connection with what I think is their responsibility, in helping out these municipalities with more financial aid.

Just last week, we learned from the report of the Provincial Auditor, that the Provincial Treasurer had charged the people of this province, some $58 million more than he said he was going to charge them in the forecast he made in the budget speech.

That $58 million came from the same municipal taxpayers who are finding the burden increasingly heavy in this province. Not only did the hon. Prime Minister fail to recognize his responsibility under the provincial set-up, but he taxed them to the extent of $58 million, which makes the situation just that much worse.

I suggest to the hon. Prime Minister and the government as well that the day has come in Ontario when we should take the problems of our municipalities very seriously and we should move to improve the conditions by assuming, at least in part, some of the tax fields, presently being the property of the municipalities of this province.

I want to refer another thing which the hon. members who moved and seconded the address probably did not suggest the other day. This has to do with health insurance and hospitalization.

I do not want to deal extensively with that matter this afternoon, but I do want to say to the House that, in my opinion, there is room in this province for a health insurance scheme, which will take care of the needs of the people of this province.

I am one of those who believe that the province, as a whole, has a responsibility for looking after these people, who have excessive hospital bills, and excessive illnesses in this province of Ontario.

I have in mind, as I speak, a man who has spent at least $10,000 trying to restore the health of his child, and has had to pay that out of his own pocket. There should be some way in this province, under the umbrella of a health insurance scheme, whereby people could buy the insurance to protect themselves against illnesses of long duration, or against excessive hospital bills.

The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips), when it was announced that the Blue Cross rates were going up 25 per cent., burst into print, and made a statement to the Toronto Telegram which I must say was just the sort of statement I would expect the hon. Minister to make, because I happen to know him well, and I know the humanitarian traits which he possesses, and I was not surprised when the announcement of the rise in rates was made, that the hon. Minister of Health would say to the Toronto Telegram.

Certainly within five years—more or less—there should be a form of health insurance covering everyone in this province.

My feeling is that this should be similar to a deductible plan used in connection with car-collision coverage.

A person could buy hospital insurance with, say, $25.00 or $50.00 or $100.00 deductible, and should a bill from a hospital be $36.00, if he had a $25.00 deductible policy, he would pay only $11.00.

He went on to elaborate the system which he had in mind, and he wound up by saying that Ontario had been working on such a plan, and while it had not gone very far, he said, "We have given it a great deal of consideration."

I imagine those words on the part of the hon. Minister of Health were an expression of his innermost feelings in connection with this problem.

But then, two or three days later, the hon. Minister was speaking in Trenton, and he made this rather significant announcement, he said, "the Ontario Government is definitely opposed to a state health insurance plan." Speaking at the branch annual meeting of the Victorian Order of Nurses, the hon. Minister said,

Such plans have been tried in the western provinces, and, in the main proved more costly and less efficient than privately-sponsored schemes, like the Blue Cross.

I will not argue this afternoon as to what form health insurance or hospitalization we should have in Ontario, but I do believe in this province, the province in which the hon. Prime Minister says we have taken so many "first steps" that we could well take another "first step" and establish in Ontario, a health insurance and hospitalization scheme which would look after the needs of our people.

I know what will be said from the other side. They will say that the Federal Government should institute such a scheme, and if it does, the province will be willing to contribute and co-operate.

We must, at all times, remember, it seems to me, when discussing the Federal Government, and its responsibility in these matters, that the Federal Government has to deal with ten provinces of Canada. These ten provinces have ten varying conditions, extending from ocean to ocean. The needs of each province vary, and the desire for legislation varies in each province.

But that does not—and need not—stop the people of the Province of Ontario with its great potential wealth, and its vast possibilities, from becoming the pioneers in this great, humanitarian movement, and just as in the Disabled Persons Act, in which as we shall hear, the Federal Government is going to participate, if we start a pilot scheme of health insurance and hospitalization in this province, there is no doubt in my mind—and there should be very little doubt in the minds of the government—that after the agreement is established and we get underway with it, the Federal Government will step in and help us, as they are prepared to do in connection with disabled persons.

So I suggest to the hon. members of this House that we should give every attention to the matter of health insurance and hospitalization, before it is too late, to meet the very great need in respect of health and hospitalization in this province.

There is another matter I wanted to discuss for a moment, which has to do with housing. I do not want to deal extensively with that matter, but it seems to me that practically the same thing can be said with respect to housing as with respect to health insurance.

We, in this province, say that we have a National Housing Act, and if it does not meet the needs of the people in regard to housing, that is "just too bad." We have a National Housing Act, and we are prepared to co-operate with the Federal Government in extending the provisions of this Act, and making it applicable to all who desire houses in this province.

I say the same as I said a moment ago, that the National Housing Act, as everybody knows, has been an instrument to meet a great need in the Dominion of Canada. It has built a large number of houses, and it has met a very great degree of need which exists for housing in this Dominion.

But, just as I said a moment ago, the Federal Government has to deal, in their housing legislation, with ten provinces all with varying conditions, and each province may have a different need in respect to housing. Some may have a great need for housing, and some may not have a need which is so great.

These conditions prevail all across Canada, and the aim of the Federal Government has always been to meet, in a general way, the broad needs of the population of this country, from one end to the other.

I think they have done that admirably in respect to the National Housing Act. It has been in force for some years, and has been amended from time to time, and it has done, is doing, and will continue to do a good job for the people of Canada in respect to housing.

May I add this further suggestion, Mr. Acting Speaker, that if we find in this Province of Ontario that the National Housing Act, and the provisions thereof, do not adequately meet our needs and our requirements, then it is not only our opportunity, but our duty, to supplement the National Housing Act by legislation of our own and get on with the building of houses for the people of this province.

There is no doubt in the minds of any of us here that in the Province of Ontario, there is great need for additional housing, perhaps greater than in any other province of Canada. The last report of the National Housing Board, issued just a few days ago, emphasized that point, and set it out clearly that the Toronto Metropolitan Area was in no better condition now than it was in 1946. That is a condition, Mr. Acting Speaker, which it seems to me is one which we should do something to rectify.

We should try on our own, to be pioneers in this matter and get into the field of housing legislation and devise ways and means of helping our people to secure houses for which they can pay. I do not think there is anything that will lend itself to a deterioration of mankind, generally, more than poor housing and slum conditions, by people being crowded into one or two rooms and lacking the facilities of good housing. There is nothing that will sap a person's morale more definitely, nor more quickly than the fact that we have not houses for our people. I suggest to the government they make another "first" out of this, that they go into the field of housing and do something to help our people into places in which to live.

Might I add this further suggestion, that a few years ago we had in this province what was known as the "Second Mortgage Plan." That was one way in which the government tried to help people to own their own homes. We have not that plan now, it was felt that because of some changes in the National Housing Act the need for the plan was not as great as it had been heretofore. However, there are other ways in which people could be helped to secure and maintain a home in this province. And I am not thinking, as I speak, only of new houses. It seems to me this province could render a very great service to young couples, when getting married and starting out in this province, and particularly in this Metropolitan area, if we could say to those young people:

You go and buy a good house in the old section of Toronto proper and we will help you with the first mortgage, or we will help you with the interest payment.

I do not know why we should not go that far. It seems to me that one of the greatest assets we can possess is young people owning their own homes.

Now what chance has a young couple today to buy an existing house, when they ask from $4,000 to $6,000 down and from 6 to 7 per cent. interest? What opportunity is there there for a young couple to buy such a house? But if there was someone to come along and say: "We will take care of the first mortgage on the house," then the earnings of that couple might very well be expected to and in most cases would, keep up the principal payments on the house. But to make the down payment and then be expected to pay 5, 6 or 7 per cent. interest is just too much to ask, and these houses are not being sold to the proper people. We should get our young people into good existing houses; we should start them on the way to becoming good citizens, and there is no better way of doing that than to give them the opportunity to own their own home in this province.

There are many ways the government could move to alleviate the distress which exists with respect to housing accommodation in this province. I have not very much hope they will move in the right direction, but the opportunity and the challenge are there, to make available to those who need and want houses and are prepared to keep up the payments on them, and to meet the carrying charges and for this government and this House to do something really worthwhile in respect to housing.

Now for a little while this afternoon I want to talk about another matter which seems to have some interest at the present time, and that has to do with the Department of Highways. I think it would be expected that I would say something about that department in my remarks this afternoon and I would not for anything disappoint those who are looking forward to it. I do not think any analysis of the present highway problem, shall I say, would be satisfactory if there were not included in that analysis a knowledge of what has transpired in the process of building highways in this Province of Ontario.

We started building highways many years ago, perhaps 30 or 35 years ago and in this province in those days it was a pretty small department. The money expended on highways 30 or 35 years ago was but a shadow of what we spend today for building and maintaining provincial, county and municipal roads. In those days, back in the twenties and the thirties, the Province of Ontario paid only 80 per cent. of the cost of provincial highways. The other 20 per cent. was assessed back to the municipalities. The same story is true in connection with county roads, the province paid much less a proportion of the cost of county roads than they do today. The same is true in respect to township roads, the relationship between what the province paid 25 or 30 years ago toward township roads, and what they pay today is one which should be examined as we approach the problem that we have at the present time in connection with highways.

Highway construction 25 and 30 years ago was very, very small indeed in comparison to what it is today, and I think any discussion of this whole problem would not be complete nor too informative if we did not take into consideration and keep in mind the past picture relating to highway construction and highway costs in the Province of Ontario.

We are bearing, as I say, a much larger share of the three levels of road construction than we did 25 or 30 years ago. And not only are we bearing more of the municipal share of highway construction but we are at the same time spending four and five and ten times as much as we did 30 years ago, so that the two of them coupled together have brought us to the place in this province where we are spending now some $150,000,000 annually for road construction and maintenance.

That is a tremendous figure. It is a lot of money, it is much more than the total budget of this province was just a few short years ago. And in this great acceleration of expenditure there is bound to be a degree of trouble, shall I say. There is bound to be somebody in that vast organization who will "step out of line." The human frailties are with us today just as they were years ago and while they remain with us—and I suppose they always will—we will always have the odd person who will seek to take advantage of what looks to him to be a promising situation, an opportunity to get rich quick. We will always have the penny chiseler, the man who sees an opportunity to get a little of something for nothing. We will always have in a vast organization like this men who will take advantage of their position.

I think as far as I am concerned, Mr. Speaker, I am prepared to acknowledge and to admit that we have had these things to a degree in the past and that we might as well prepare for them in the future, and the public generally, I suggest, is ready to accept the odd stepping out of line. They are ready to accept and almost condone the odd person who steals from the government, who takes something from the government which does not belong to him, who wants to make it sooner. We will have those people with us for some time to come, I am afraid. The public in the past has been prone to accept that state of affairs, and that they would have to go on with it and make the best of it.

But the difficulty that we are in at the present time is that it does not appear to be just the odd chap who has slipped out of line nor it does not appear to be just the "penny chiseler." Apparently they have grown wiser as the years have gone on and now they do not bother with small amounts and small things, they are getting to the place where they are grafting on what appears to be a very large scale. If there is grafting and corruption in the Department of Highways on a large scale, we in this House have the responsibility to ferret it out. We have a responsibility to get to the bottom of the problem and to clean it up and to present to the people of this province a solution for the difficulty which has arisen, and to promise that it will not happen again.

In this matter of highway work we are presently discussing, there have been indications that the sums involved are large and that the area covered is somewhat extensive. Those two things in my opinion make this problem one which should have the searching attention of the people of this province and particularly the legislators of the Province of Ontario.

I am not going to quote all the various things that have been written in respect of this highway probe, but I do want to quote, just to show that there is some indication of the size of the problem, some of the records and some of the stories which have been written in the paper. That of course is all we have to go on at the moment, but I notice a headline in the Toronto Star—I think that is a paper published in the city of Toronto—and the heading of this article is:

Hills, Swamps and Pits Grow A
$7,000,000 Drawing Board Swindle.
Probe Has Been Ordered.

I would think if it was $7,000,000, the least we could do would be to order a probe. The paper goes on to say that:

The firm and management consultants retained by the Ontario Government to investigate the road building scandal at the lakehead will report that at least eight contracting firms and dozens of Highway Department employees worked hand in glove in a drawing board swindle that has cost Ontario taxpayers at least $5,000,000.

I suggest to the House that I am not aware of the authenticity of that story, but there is contained in that article by a recognized writer of the Toronto Star a story which should focus attention on that particular matter until it has been cleared up to the satisfaction of the legislators and of the people generally.

I want to quote one more thing and then let it go at that so far as quotations are concerned. The other one is from the Windsor Daily Star, and I want to read this carefully. What I am trying to suggest at the moment is that this problem we are discussing is a problem of some magnitude, I mean it is not petty chiseling, it is not a few dollars here and there, it is dealing in big sums and dealing with big people. This article in the Windsor Star dated January 22nd had this to say:

The Ontario Highways scandal probe has spread to still another jurisdiction. This was confirmed here today unofficially by a top highway official. On top of the already announced investigations in Fort William, Blind River and Kenora, this makes the fourth division of the Ontario Highways to come under scrutiny. The official wouldn't say where the latest probe was taking place, except it was in the north and in the east.

How big is this thing going to be? That is what a stunned Queen's Park is asking itself today, as day after day what started out to be a more or less routine investigation of the suspected irregularities grows into what seems to be the greatest mass swindle or series of swindles in the province's history.

And then further down it says that:

Newspaper reports have said the swindle in Fort William will amount to $7,000,000.

And this writer in the Windsor Star suggests that may be a little big, he says it is doubtful on the facts if it could be this big—

But one thing is certain, he goes on to say—it is huge and the government knows it is and admits that it is huge.

He says further:

Premier Frost called reporters in late on Wednesday afternoon for his first comment on the probe and he admitted the potential swindle was huge. It was apparently a big effort intricately planned involving a large number of people, he said.

Then the writer goes on to say that:

The original investigation which started in Fort William has spread to Kenora, Blind River and an unnamed division.

I suggest to the House until those suggestions—if that is what you want to call them—are proven erroneous, we in this parliament have a duty to perform, and that duty is to find out just what is behind all this smoke and to see if there is really a fire of some magnitude. Quite frankly I say to the House that I think there is a scandal in the Highways Department of some magnitude. I believe, Mr. Speaker—and I say this seriously to the House this afternoon—that in the workings of the department from the day it was started, with the huge increase in expenditures that there has been in the Department of Highways, the administrative practices in the Department of Highways have not kept pace with the increased costs and the money expended in the Department of Highways. I believe that to be true, I believe that the administrative practices have fallen down before the impact of the increased spending that there has been in the Department of Highways.

I said a moment ago that I would want to know whether this was an isolated case or not. Does it concern Fort William alone? Is it that one division and no other? Before it was discovered there were other divisions. I was bold enough to make the suggestion that I thought there were other divisions involved. Since that time auditors have been into Kenora, I understand, and into the Blind River district and the other day the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) said he had suspended a foreman in Rockland near Ottawa for stealing lumber from the Department of Highways to build himself a couple of houses. After all he was greedy, he should have been satisfied at least with one house. I was interested in what the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) said. He said: "I am going to lessen the inventory that these fellows have." Well, I thought that was rather an odd explanation, in other words he knows they are going to steal, so he is going to place less in their hands.

HON. CHARLES DALEY (Minister of Labour): The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) never made any such statement.

MR. OLIVER: He is going to make the temptation less, because the amount is less. Then the other day it was made known by the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) that still another division, that of Huntsville, has come under scrutiny and they have suspended the divisional engineer.

This has gone on long enough, far enough, and its implications are wide enough to suggest that there should be a thorough and an impartial probe into the whole situation. That is the point I want to discuss next, and I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) will agree that in the face of what has happened and what is happening—because we do not know from day to day when another district engineer may be suspended, it breaks on us before the Orders of the day, something like "An apple a day keeps the doctor away," sort of parallel—I would suggest that in its present scope of seriousness, the government has a grave responsibility to search the thing out right to the bottom. It has a responsibility not only to itself and to this House but to the people of the Province of Ontario. After all the people of the province "Pay the shot," through the avenues of the gasoline taxes and the license fee and so on, they are contributing very huge amounts to the Department of Highways and they have a right to expect, Mr. Speaker, that their money is honestly expended, they have a right to expect from this government that it can look the people in the face and say: "We got a dollar's worth of service for every dollar expended." Now while this present suspicion lasts, no hon. member of the government can look the people of this province in the face and say that and be truthful about it, because there isn't any doubt even in the government's mind that there has not been only isolated cases of irregularity, but it has been spread over a very wide front, and the sooner we tackle this thing in a realistic way, and the sooner we have it cleaned up, the sooner will be public confidence be restored in this government and in the legislators of the province.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest there are three or four ways this matter can be dealt with. One of them is by the avenue presently employed by this administration, that is by sending a group of consultants to go into the whole matter and report. There are one or two things I do not like about this group of consultants. One of them is that they are appointed by the government, they report back to the government and the hon. members of this House are dependent upon the government to divulge to the full the extent of that report. I have some confidence in the government but I do not know whether it goes that far or not at the moment. However, I want to say in all seriousness, Mr. Speaker, that as I understand it these consultants are to probe the irregularities at the Fort William office, they have not been commissioned so far as I know to probe the irregularities at the Huntsville office, they have not been commissioned to probe the other irregularities that have come to the fore in recent days. Therefore they are only doing a part job, they are dealing with an isolated case, they are dealing with one number where there are many numbers and they cannot do a full job when their commission is as it is.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, if I may interrupt the hon. Leader of the Opposition—he will not mind if I do so for half a moment. May I say this firm of consultants is employed to investigate every part of this Province of Ontario and anything they wish in connection with the Department of Highways, regardless of where it is or what it is. We have given them full authority and that I hope they will do.

MR. OLIVER: Did not the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) say—and I will be corrected if I am wrong—in his letter appointing these consultants, that their duty was to investigate the irregularities of the Fort William division and then to make general recommendations as to the policy of the department? I think if the hon. Minister re-reads the letter, he will find that is exactly what is contained therein. It may be, Mr. Speaker, that at the present time the government will consider extending the scope of operations of this group of consultants. I do not know what is in the government's mind in that connection but I do hold the view, Mr. Speaker, that is not the proper approach to dealing with this matter. I have said before and I say again here in the House that the group of consultants are restricted in their operations because of their inability to call witnesses and to take evidence under oath. What if a contractor or somebody involved refused to come before them and give evidence? Where would you be? They have not any powers at all; all they can do and all they can say is: "Come now, boys, let us reason together" and if they are not pliable to that extent, then their whole effort is stymied and I suggest to this House that that one avenue of probing into this matter will not be sufficient.

Another way it can be done is by the appointment of a Royal Commission. I want to say quite definitely to the House this afternoon that I am very cognizant of my attitude in the past in respect to Royal Commissions. I looked up what I have said on various occasions and, thank goodness, I always fortified myself to this extent, that while I did not close the door entirely as I said that I believed there were some places and some uses to which Royal Commissions could be put, but I also remember an occasion when the hon. Mr. Drew was Prime Minister, when I said that "the prolific use of Royal Commissions by this administration is to be deplored."

Now if there ever was a set of conditions which lends itself to a probe by a Royal Commission, this is it. A Royal Commission would be fully equipped to take evidence under oath, to have hearings held in public. The public would be acquainted with the progress of the investigation and they in that way could be more helpful than they could be, if you are going to carry on the investigation in camera, but that is just about what you are doing at the present time.

I say seriously to the government even at this date I doubt if you can restore public confidence in the Department of Highways and in the government as a whole unless you do appoint a Royal Commission with the widest possible powers to go into this matter and sift the wheat from the chaff and find out exactly where we are.

Another way of course in which this matter can be handled is along the line of approach suggested by another editorial of recent date in the Globe and Mail. The Globe and Mail suggested—and I think the suggestion had some merit—that after the session was over and hon. members had more leisure time, a committee of the Legislature could start to work on this problem, a small committee, the Globe and Mail said, of five or seven men. I think there is merit in that suggestion and I wish to say to the government that if it will not accede to what I think is a very proper demand to appoint a Royal Commission, then surely they can go so far as to entrust the examination of these matters to a committee of this Legislature.

The other way, of course, by which the matter can be dealt with is the one suggested by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) the other day. Mr. Speaker, I have known the hon. Prime Minister for a long time and I never thought I would listen to him make such a suggestion to meet a very serious problem. My hon. friend suggested the other day that this whole matter could be discussed by the Public Accounts Committee, and in the next breath he as much as said that the statements and the evidence which the government has would not be available to the Public Accounts Committee, so that he did, as I suggested the other day, just put the handcuffs on the committee, locked them good and tight and then told them to go to work and do a good job.

After all is said and done, Mr. Speaker, that committee is only one of seventeen which are functioning in the short time this House sits. I want to ask the hon. Prime Minister in all seriousness, how can he expect hon. members of the House to give the attention they should to the deliberations, when we have all these committees? And, moreover, as the hon. Prime Minister knows, a standing committee of the House lives only as long as the House itself, when the House dies it dies also. In the five or six weeks that remain for the hon. members to do their work in committees, the hon. Prime Minister makes the facetious suggestion that this important work should be done by the Public Accounts Committee.

I suggest to the House and to the hon. Prime Minister this afternoon that he give very serious consideration to this matter, and I suggest seriously to him that I do not think the people of this province are going to be pleased with that sort of dealing with what they consider a very serious matter. And to that end, Mr. Speaker, I want to move, seconded by the hon. member for Brant,

That the motion for an address in reply to the speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor now before the House be amended by adding thereto the following words: But this House regrets that the Speech from the Throne contained no assurance from the government that the serious and widespread irregularities in the Department of Highways would be thoroughly investigated by a judicial commission.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, on this day when the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the Leader of the Government take issue on all sorts of matters, I was prepared, frankly, to be taken back to the days when I used to practise law and prepare statements of defense, and to agree with what my hon. friend would say about yourself and the mover and seconder, but then to say: "Well, I disagree with everything else except wherein I specifically admit it." After listening to my hon. friend (Mr. Oliver), I do not take that attitude. The hon. Leader of the Opposition made a very reasoned speech this afternoon and I shall endeavour to do likewise.

I would like first of all, to join in what the hon. Leader of the Opposition has to say about yourself, and to re-state some of the words I spoke the other day when I had the pleasure of moving your appointment to this position this year. I should observe that I am not altogether in agreement with what he has said about the addresses by the mover and the seconder, of the reply. I listened to them very carefully the day before yesterday, and I can say, what I have said in other years with all sincerity, that there have been very great addresses delivered in this House by movers and seconders and certainly the addresses of Tuesday were on a par with that very high standard and were on a high plane indeed.

One might wonder what there might be for me to say in this month of February, 1954. We have completed another year of the term of office to which the people elected us two years and some three or four months ago, and, Mr. Speaker, in less than six months, we have had two very emphatic endorsements from the jury of the people.

One might come here this afternoon and be boastful about these endorsements, one just ten days ago, one a little over three months ago, but I do not do that. I come here, as I came in the month of February two years ago, in all humility, to acknowledge that these endorsements are a trust to us to give good government, and that will be the effort of everyone on the government's side of the House.

First of all, I should like to start at the part of the address by the hon. Leader of the Opposition and his references in relation to the Department of Highways.

Mr. Speaker, in these past two or three months for reasons which, I think, are apparent and have been accepted by the people, I have not engaged in comments in relation to that matter, and I think this gives me the opportunity today to say something very specifically.

This trouble at Fort William, and what appears to be trouble in another division, the Huntsville Division, was discovered by our own very fine Provincial Auditor and his staff which, I assure you, are second to none in Canada in this regard. These matters are not totally confined to Trans-Canada Highway contracts, but there are the indications that perhaps this is the major place in which they exist.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition, in effect, says that the government is on trial. Of course, governments are always on trial before the people. Nevertheless, I want to just accept that position and I want to explain to you and to the House, how this matter is being discharged and how it is being handled. This matter arose specifically some time last September, or in the late summer in any event. At that time, our auditor, and indeed the department and the government, might have levelled the charges at little people. That is where the matter first became manifest, and they might have there hushed things up. That was not done. As a matter of fact against the little people perhaps little may have been done to date. The matter was proceeded with the other way, without fear or favour. I do not know whether the hon. Leader of the Opposition made use of that expression, "without fear or favour," but right down the line this matter has been so proceeded with. Payments have been stopped. Senior officials have been suspended. Remember, this was not a matter of prodding the government, or of prodding the auditor into investigating matters. This was done long before that, as I will point out to you.

At the present time—and as I shall have to deal with this sometime, I might perhaps make mention of it at this point—this matter has been under the direction of the Provincial Auditor, an auditor who has served several governments, including the government in which the hon. Leader of the Opposition served, a man of the highest integrity and ability, as are his assistants and his staff.

Secondly, without any restriction, in an attempt to get the very best, Mr. G. W. Mason, Q.C., one of the great and leading lawyers of this province, was engaged, along with Mr. C. W. Dubin, Q.C., one of the rising stars in the legal firmament.

In addition to that as the hon. Leader of the Opposition has said, we have retained one of the outstanding firms of consultants in Canada, one not only engaged by this government—Messrs. J. D. Woods and Gordon Limited—but widely used by the Federal Government, the people who conducted the probe into the Post Office, people with the widest experience, and to them we have given the widest type of commission, not only to recommend and assist in connection with the irregularities, but the betterment of practices to which the hon. Leader of the Opposition referred. I would ask him to note these things so far as the government is concerned. With the resignation of the hon. member from Niagara Falls last July or August, a by-election became imminent in the old riding of Niagara Falls. The date for the by-election was set for the 26th of October last. On the 7th day of October, a statement was released to the press stating there were irregularities in the Fort William division.

Now I ask the hon. members of this House, might it not have been possible that such statement could have been given on the 27th of October, instead of the 7th? That was not the case. The statement was made at that time. I will say this. I imagine perhaps in the riding of Niagara Falls the matter had not developed to the point it did later. I should imagine perhaps the matter there was not of paramount importance in that by-election. I should say what was of paramount importance in that by-election was the record of the government. What happened?

The hon. member for Niagara Falls, who used to sit beside the hon. Leader of the Opposition, had a 3,500 majority in that riding. Last August 10th, I think that was the correct date, he was elected in that identical riding to the Federal House with a majority of 7,500. Yet on October 26th, the now new, good-looking hon. member for Niagara Falls was elected to support this government with a majority equal to the majority given to the hon. member who had resigned.

I think when the hon. Leader of the Opposition refers to confidence in the government, perhaps he might bear these things in mind. On the 26th of November last, the Division Engineer in the Fort William Division was suspended and a statement was made then which gave full import to the seriousness which was placed on that situation. In addition to that, on December 4th, our great friend and hon. member of this House, Doctor McPhee, passed away.

Again I ask, Was there any hesitation to face these issues fairly in the face of the talk and the editorials in the newspapers? The by-election was called, the writ was issued on December 23rd, returnable on the election day, the 8th of February which has just passed.

Did the government then take the position, "We will do nothing about this matter. We will hush this up until February 8th, and we will keep things going along and say nothing."? That was not the case.

On January 20th, right in the face of a by-election in Simcoe East, a most serious statement was made by the government, and the firm of J. D.

Woods and Gordon was appointed and given an unlimited commission.

I point out these things to the hon. Leader of the Opposition who has referred to newspaper clippings to some of which I want to refer to myself. I have a very large number of them here and I can assure you in the face of that by-election these clippings gave me some concern. One of the papers said some $7,000,000 or something of the sort, was missing. Mr. Speaker, I could have gone to Simcoe East and I could have told the people there that a great many fine roads had been built up in that country. I think the hon. member who comes from up there will agree we have built some magnificent highways, and $7,000,000 is almost our whole share of it.

I could have said in Simcoe East, "It might seem unbelievable that very nearly the whole amount of money would have been stolen." I could have referred to some other things such as the story that bridges were missing. I must admit I do not know of any bridges that are missing to date, but I could have said that. I could have talked about the mystery road, but I do not know about any mystery road. I could have said, Ottawa was over-charged $2,000,000 on Ontario roads, but I do not know whether they have been over-charged at all. This government stopped payments weeks and months before the difficulty arose and there is no possibility of them losing a copper. If you do not think our credit is good, look at the budget and see for yourself.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition referred rather facetiously and somewhat inaccurately to a $58,000,000 surplus. Perhaps I might refer to that later. Let me point this out to you: If I had gone up to Simcoe East and told the people what I am telling you here now, they would have been very apt to say, "Oh, well, Mr. Frost has come up here and he says there is nothing to this thing at all." Mr. Speaker, we do not take that attitude. We do not discount the seriousness or possible seriousness of this. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition would like to read another newspaper, I would refer him to the Free Press Herald from Midland, which contains the statement made up in Simcoe East. I did not subtract one tittle from anything that was said relating to the possible seriousness of the situation for the reason I thought it would be unfair to the people.

What was at issue in Simcoe East was this: How this government would treat this problem; how this government would regard it. I did not turn to the people and say, "There is nothing to this. There is no bridge missing. They talk about $7,000,000, that is practically all the money that was spent on these roads so far as the Ontario Government's share. If it was not all, it certainly was a very substantial part."

I could have gone up there and said, "How were these great roads built? What built them? How was this money missing?" I could have gone up there and laughed about the Federal Government being "gypped" out of $2,000,000, Mr. Speaker, but I did not do that for this reason: I did not want to give to the people of Simcoe East the impression that we did not regard this matter as serious, and that was the way the issue went to the people.

We stated on the 20th of January that there had been action taken by the government to appoint this firm of consultants, and what had been done, and remember, Mr. Speaker, that this matter was unearthed by the Provincial Auditor and by his very fine staff. That is where the matter came from.

The point is this: would the people of Simcoe East accept what the hon. Leader of the Opposition said? He practically put the words of this motion before the people of Simcoe East. He asked for a royal commission. I have some of the election literature here, and very good looking literature it is, too, and this is written right into it, a demand for a royal commission which he now asks for.

What did the jury of the people who heard this matter say? They listened to it, and they very emphatically supported the government after hearing the matter, after having read all of these newspaper headings—and a great many more which I have here about this matter, reams and volumes of them. Having been bombarded by all this, and on the radio, but having no word from me or from our people except that we would deal with this honestly and fairly, what did they do? Why, they voted by a 2,788 majority to return another good looking man, who will be introduced to this Assembly in a few days.

Yes, they voted by 2,788 and when I look at the municipalities in that riding I know that that figure did not come from one municipality, it came from all but two. Taking the town of Orillia, the great township of Orillia, and the township of Oro to which I referred a few days ago from where Mr. Drury comes, every poll gave a majority to the supporter of this government, except one.

MR. OLIVER: You did lose a number of votes.

HON. MR. FROST: If you will figure this out, I think you will find it amounts to between 53 and 55 per cent. of the votes, which was just about the same as in 1951 which some people say was a landslide.

Mr. Speaker, I come here today and say we think we have taken the proper course which is in the best interests of the people, and the people to whom this has been submitted, have said overwhelmingly "Yes." I would ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition to remember that in connection with commissions. I would point out to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that I realize at another time, and under different conditions, he said a great deal about "Royal Commissions," and I did wonder he would go up to Orillia and Midland and Coldwater, and the township of Medonte, and other places, and urge the people to accept a Royal Commission in this matter. When he made that statement, he did not refer to a time back in 1949, about five years ago, when he said:

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to deal with one more subject, and that has to do with Royal Commissions. We almost had another one today. If we had said "Yes," we would have had it.

I am saying this, Mr. Speaker, because to me, these Royal Commissions are a "pain in the neck" for all we get out of them.

That is quite a bill of goods to try and sell to the people. No wonder it was not sold. No wonder the people said, "Here is a government which having discovered certain conditions is endeavouring to right them in a business-like way, has met them in an honest way, and we are confident that is the way they will meet them in future, in the interest of all the people of this province."

I was quite interested in what the hon. Leader of the Opposition said about the necessity of improving and strengthening our Departments and our organization, to see that we do our best to be sure these things cannot happen again. I am in perfect agreement on that point, with the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

As a matter of fact that is one of the great problems of government and business today and I want to face that with you very seriously. My hon. friend pointed out very fairly that the practices in the Department of Highways have grown up from some 30 years ago. They are practices common to various governments, starting with the Drury government and going through the Ferguson government and the administrations of Henry and Hepburn and the rest up to the present time.

No system that you devise will work unless you have honesty. Honesty will make almost any system work. To be frank with you, I am not one of those who think that our system of government here is perfect by any means, in the Department of Highways or, indeed, elsewhere. I feel we must be alert to strengthen government, and to strengthen the means of government, for the reasons I will give you, in every way we can.

However, dealing with the matter of honesty—and I do not want to say anything that is unfair to anybody, or impute anything, and, therefore, I am not referring to specific cases—one is dependent upon the elemental things such as trust and good faith which can be destroyed when dishonesty gets into things. I would like to refer you to a paper published by the "Big Interests." I do not want to alarm the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) by such a reference. I do not often read the papers of big interests but I do read the papers in which the people are interested.

In January 1953 there was an article in Inspection News by one of the heads of the Continental Casualty Company—that is a big concern—and he says this: "The Federal Bureau of Investigation's crime report for 1951 shows that the lowest figure for embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, theft and other crimes committed by business employees is estimated at more than $500,000,000 annually. The average term of employment is nine years and three months. A person works for you for six years and nine months before he steals a dime and then he continues to steal for three years and two months before he is caught." I tell you that to point out the difficulties there are in some businesses. It would be absolutely impossible for me to attempt to tell you the way to stop a businessman from stealing, because no one has ever compiled a complete list of ways in which a business employee steals, and every day some employee discovers a new way to embezzle.

In an article published in the Saturday Evening Post, about two years ago, a nationally known expert listed 210 ways whereby business employees could rob a bank, including one official who was not content with stealing the bank's entire assets, but he even went so far as to mortgage the real and personal property and pocket the proceeds.

In the Government of Ontario we are in big business and we have to recognize that. When you start handling $350,000,000 a year you are in big business. My hon. friend the Leader of the Opposition has referred to the growth of highway operations in the last few years. Now let me tell you my first budget in this House ten years ago this month or next month, was something around $118,000,000. Last year it was considerably over $350,000,000. In other words, the business due to the expansion of this great province of ours has grown by three times. So that I shall not give my hon. friends opposite any ammunition against me, I point out that this was without a sales tax, with the lowest gasoline tax in Canada, with no meals or tobacco tax and without raising any taxes, but coming, and arising, from the expansion of business in this province.

I think this is indicated by the tour hon. members took yesterday on that great underground railway which will shortly be opened in this city.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we have here a great business to keep up. The highway business has expanded roughly thus: I think in 1938, the total highway expenditure was about $73,000,000; it was roughly the same in 1939. In the war years, 1943 and 1944, they fell to $19,000,000. By 1945 they were up to the pre-war levels—some $75,000,000.

Now they are up to $150,000,000, which shows you the tremendous expansion that has taken place. At a time like this you can make a profound mistake. There are, I believe, approximately 600 contractors in Ontario. There are very few bad apples in that barrel. As a matter of fact, they are pretty sound, good fellows who have done a good job for this country, for this government, for the Ottawa government and for industry. I would say you have thousands of highway employees in this province. There are very few, you will find, I think, engaged in things that are not right. As a matter of fact, these people are good people, and at a time like this we want to take a common sense, decent view. We have got to carry on with this mighty work. We have got to go ahead with the job there is to do. One of the problems included in this concerns keeping that organization that has done a mighty job for this good old province.

Go to any state of the Union, go to any province in Canada, look at the highways and see what has been done, and you will find you will be proud of our good old province of Ontario when you see the jobs that have been done; everywhere you go, including the Lakehead, in a big way. These are some of the things we have to face. What have we done about this? In the fall of 1952, as you know, we revised the Highway Improvement Act and we provided that funds should be voted in this House. That point was raised on one or two occasions by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). We took machinery which was well designed in its day, and we remodelled it to meet the requirements of today. We introduced into the Department of Highways the office of the Comptroller, which with modern practices has had a good deal to do with the uncovering of the situation of today. We have been looking at the matter of government and the handling of finances from another position, that is, from the standpoint of the treasury. When the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition, were in another government, in those days the executive details were pretty well handled by the Deputy Treasurer. Such a thing as that is impossible today. The making of a budget was perhaps a matter of two or three weeks. Nowadays it is a matter of 365 days. Today, on this 18th day of February, our men are working on the budget not that we are going to introduce now, but the one we are going to introduce a year from now.

We have now a Comptroller of Finances and with him we have a Provincial Economist, a post created since those days, whose job it is to look at the money markets, to look at the economic outlook of the province, to estimate the returns the government will get from its taxation and its various sources of income, and to know in these delicate markets where "Old Ontario" can get the $300,000,000 to build the St. Lawrence Seaway, to go "back to Niagara" and to do all those things.

Then we have a Comptroller of Revenue whose duty it is to extend his forces in every department, and to be responsible for the collection of all revenue in all departments, either by himself or by those who are deputized to do so.

Then we have the Chief Accountant. He will shortly be called the Comptroller of Accounts, who will also extend into every department the representatives of the treasury, for the purpose of providing for Ontario the best fiscal system that can be devised to meet the requirements of 1954 and the years to come.

It will be my duty to introduce here shortly a new bill, a new Finance Act, such as we never have had in Ontario before, under which there will be a Deputy Treasurer, a Comptroller of Finance, a Comptroller of Revenue, and a Comptroller of Accounts, who will all have the rank of Deputy Minister so that they can go to any department with their men and with their forces and see things are properly done.

In doing so we are laying the foundations for taking care of the fiscal future of this great province.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to overlook the fact that there are two very important points, to both of which my hon. friend has referred. One is that in regard to the person who is dishonest and who has defrauded this province, whether he be big or small, it is our job to see justice is done, and that will be done. On the other hand, it is our job to be big enough to see if there are lessons to be learned, if there are ways in which we can improve the system of this province, we ought to do it, and that, I can assure you, will be done.

Time has gone by and I would like briefly to refer in conclusion to one or two other things. I have discussed at length this problem, because this is the first occasion on which I have really been at liberty to elaborate in that connection. But I should like to refer to some of the issues in which I think the people of this province are interested, and that is what we call "Good government."

This government was elected to office a little less than two years and three months ago. It was elected by a great following, and gained 79 out of 90 seats. Some people said we were complacent, that with the great majority, we would grow indolent, and perhaps we would grow fat, and would not be as anxious and keen as we were before. That has not been the case. I think that is the principal reason why the people of this province have endorsed us by giving us another seat at this time.

Let us look at the work of the past two years and three months. I will say to the House—and I am sure the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will agree with this—I do not see how he could do anything else. These two years and three months have been marked by more monumental achievements than any two or three years of the many years the hon. member for Brant has served in the House, or, indeed, before that.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition referred to some things municipally. After thirty years in this province, last year we introduced and passed in this House, a bill creating the Metropolitan Toronto.

Mr. Speaker, that was the largest confederation since the Confederation of our country.

A year ago, on the 18th of February, 1953, I would not say I had misgivings, but I had some fears, because people had told me that bill would promote and develop things which would be introduced into this metropolitan area which might be disturbing. Indeed, some went even so far as to warn me about that.

Today, on the 18th of February, 1954, we can say it is there, and it worked. You can take a ride in a motor car around the metropolitan area, and you will see the development which has taken place, see houses in their thousands, and the industrial development in this great area, and at this time, perhaps I should pay tribute to some of those who have been at least partly responsible for this development. Everybody did not see eye to eye with us. One of those who was a little critical was my old friend Louis Shannon, a controller of the city of Toronto. He is one who has not been of the same political faith as myself, but has been a great public servant, and the last occasion on which I was with him was, I think, a week ago tomorrow night. Louis Shannon was a great man, and was doing a great job, and he will be missed in the Metropolitan Council.

sibilities early when the bill came into effect and was passed, he was one of those who gave his whole heart in support of the carrying out of the objects of that bill, and the success of this venture is due in no small measure to that very fine man, who will be greatly missed.

My hon. friend the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) talks about housing here in Toronto. What has cut the chains which prevented housing in this metropolitan area? The Metropolitan Bill passed here last session. And who voted against it? The hon. Leader of the Opposition, who talks about housing. The hon. Leader of the Opposition, and, I am sorry to say, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). I thought I would carry him along with me in that great progressive measure, but he was against it. And so were others in that group across the way. So was the hon. member who sits in the back row.

So were the other two gentlemen, whom I thought would support that great measure which was designed to provide housing and transportation for the people. But they were so short-sighted they could not see it.

Coming now to the question of assistance to municipalities, Mr. Speaker, where in Canada were unconditional grants passed before but in this House in the past two years and three months. Just last year indeed, those unconditional grants were passed. May I remind the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), and will he please tell the hon. Leader of the Opposition this when he goes outside, that the amount of our contributions to municipalities have risen from $18,000,000, in the days when he sat here, to nearly $130,000,000 this year, and that is quite outside the unconditional grants.

You can talk, about dividing tax fields, and about taking over responsibilities, but do not think other provinces have not this problem. Last November I was asked by my good friend the hon. Douglas Campbell, the Premier of Manitoba, to visit him and address his Municipal Association. I went with great misgivings. I wondered what they might ask a Prime Minister from a Progressive-Conservative province; but I went out there and I had a very interesting experience. I found the report from their own municipal committee and their treatment of the problem pretty well parallels what we are doing here in this province, making the point that it is very difficult to take away the power to do things from the level of government best suited to carry them out. That, sir, applies to so many things but you finally come to the point where a certain level in government can best and most efficiently do a certain thing.

However, I would like to refer to "unconditional grants." My hon. friend the Leader of the Opposition referred to me the other day as one who was "Pulling the wool over the people's eyes." That was said in reference to another motion I made here.

May I remind the hon. Leader of the Opposition that is not the way to win elections. I read an advertisement published in Simcoe East a couple of days before election day. Perhaps the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) wrote it. However, I do not think he did because I think he has too much political sense. It said:

Are you a $4 citizen or a $1.50 citizen?

That referred, Mr. Speaker, to our unconditional grants, and it is worth reading:

There is no secret about it, the government thinks the big-city voter is twice as valuable as the voters up here. What do you think? Remember this.

Mr. Speaker, the people did remember it to the tune of nearly 2,800 majority given to this government.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows better than that. He should have consulted the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), who commended this bill and the way it was drafted. As a matter of fact when this bill came up, the hon. Leader of the Opposition voted against the Toronto Bill, the one that is providing housing and a way for people to live today, but regarding Bill 81, which was the bill covering unconditional grants, he certainly did not vote against it. There was no vote so I assume it was unanimous. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) never said a word about it in any event.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, is the hon. Prime Minister quoting something I said about it now?

HON. MR. FROST: I cannot quote the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) when he said nothing. I can only draw an inference from his action. He did not vote against it. The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) rose on that occasion and I thought made a very sensible speech about that bill.

Mr. Speaker, I will send this advertisement over to the hon. Leader of the Opposition and hope that he will go into the quietness of his room tonight and read it over and think of how he and his followers attempted to "pull the wool over the eyes" of the people of Simcoe East by talking about "$4 citizens and $1.50 citizens."

May I point out, Mr. Speaker, that bill is designed to do what he says, to compensate those municipalities and the people for welfare, administration of justice and social services which they perform. The hon. Leader of the Opposition knows so well that social services in Ontario range from 30 cents per head in some municipalities to $9 in some of the larger centres. What was done in this case was an attempt to find a formula covering a thousand municipalities which would reasonably meet the situation, having regard to the differences in assessments and the like. To that end this formula was devised, which gives to rural townships at $1.50, practically 10 per cent. of their tax bills.

Mr. Speaker, the people that made really the most from this, percentage-wise and tax rate-wise, are the people who got $1.50. I am using figures which now may be a little out of date in view of the more optimistic statement which the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) has given me, but it seems safe to say that the townships were 10 per cent., the villages about 9 per cent., the towns 7 or 8 per cent. or in that neighbourhood, and that the cities themselves amount to about 7 per cent., and the metropolitan area, which gets the $4, amounts to about 6 per cent. On the other hand, sir, I do not want to make the people from the big centres feel badly about that. May I point out that there are differences caused by the fact that they have industrial assessments which perhaps compensate in some measure. That is the reason for that arrangement.

Those are just two of the things this government and the hon. members of this House, have done in two years and three months.

My hon. friend the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has mentioned "disabled pensions," now to be extended across Canada. Ours was the first government in Canada to attempt anything of this sort. By agreement, which was sparked and sponsored by this government, we have, after 20 years of talk, provided pensions for needy persons from 65 to 70 coming in at that time—true, by Federal-Provincial agreement—but that is one of the ways you get things done.

What are we doing in education in this province? Last year some 55,000 new pupils entered our schools and we were able to accommodate them by way of substantial school grants which today are almost half as big again as the total budget, when Mr. Hepburn introduced it in 1935. We have been able to provide rooms and desks and teachers for those children. Next year in this province there will be built and occupied schools for another 56,000 or 57,000 children. In other days that alone would have been counted as a mighty thing, but when combined with such other things as pensions and pensions for the disabled and unconditional grants and a new government for Metropolitan Toronto, it becomes almost beyond comprehension. When I tell the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that in those two years and three months, after twenty years of talk, "back to Niagara" is an accomplished fact with one of the great engineering schemes of this continent by which we will get another 1,000,000 horse-power, and when the hon. Leader of the Opposition replies we have said this over and over again, I am reminded, sir, that when he and his colleagues were in office they did nothing "over and over again." That is why they are over there at the present time.

May I point out to the hon. Leader of the Opposition the progress which has been made in other fields, our co-operation on the great power projects, our attempts at co-operation with the Federal Government to get the St. Lawrence Seaway under way, and the hon. Mr. Chevrier and I agree when he is optimistic enough to say that we are going to win through this year. After thirty-five years of talk, that has been accomplished in this two years and three months.

Such things as our working in bringing to this province the great resources of natural gas from the West, our consultations with Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe and with Mr. Manning and others, show vision beyond the mere humdrum of party politics in the Province of Ontario.

What about our fiscal arrangements in those two years and three months? We entered into a tax agreement with the Federal Government in the fall of 1952, confirmed by this Legislature that fall, not perfect—of course it is not perfect—but it is a step which has meant for the people of this province no extra income tax, and—although the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) may not like it—has relieved our corporations, which relief is passed along in costs, of some 3½ per cent. in toto. The foundations have been laid, I believe, for rational arrangements and it has enabled us to maintain, what we have accomplished, the lowest taxes in this country. It is true, Mr. Speaker, that if you want to take it on a per capita basis, it appears large but percentage-wise and from the pockets of the people—and that is where it counts, when you put your hand in your pocket and see how much money you are losing by taxes—it is the smallest in Canada.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) mentioned what the Provincial Auditor very properly referred to in his report. Last year I reported an excess of revenue of some $58,000,000 over what I estimated. Well, sir, I made $40,000,000 of that for "Old Man Ontario" by a good deal with the Federal Government. And what did I do with it? I did not spend the money. I paid off the mortgage on Old Man Ontario's farm. That, Mr. Speaker, is why I think we can count on the confidence of the people in carrying on the government of this province.

With that, sir, goes the credit of this great province of ours, our ability to do things, our ability to face with confidence the future, whatever it may hold; the development of our land; the building of the St. Lawrence; the carrying on of a great programme in connection with the modernization and extension of our public projects; the providing of rural power for our people in the country; the providing of loans for young farmers; the providing of our share of the finances necessary for some 40,000 new houses in this province this year, which I am sure will reach an all-time high; the providing of funds necessary for the extension of hospitals, and for the betterment of the services we have for our people in public buildings.

After nearly eleven years I can say that the credit of this old province was never higher and our people were never more sure of the means to carry on the expansion of this grand old province.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of the House, and in so doing, I would like to say that tomorrow the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Collings) will table and speak on the report of the Select Committee on Election Laws.

I assure the hon. members opposite that has no significance whatever. That report will be introduced, and perhaps the hon. member can devise a method of adjourning the debate, or something of the sort, to permit the hon. members of the House who want to speak with relation to that matter, to do so, and then we will continue with the bills.

MR. OLIVER: Could the hon. Prime Minister say what bills will be submitted tomorrow?

HON. MR. FROST: I will say, most of the bills are routine, and if there is anything which the hon. Leader of the Opposition wants kept over, I will be glad to do so.

Motion agreed to.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1954

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, would you pass over the next item, "Presenting Reports by Committees"—and go on with the other routine business and then revert to that later?

CLERK OF THE HOUSE:
Motions.

Introduction of bills.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Secretary and Registrar): I beg to present to the House the following reports:

Report of the Minister of Agriculture, Ontario, for the year ending March 31st, 1953.

Report of the Statistics Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ontario, for the year 1952.

Report of the Ontario Food Terminal Board, Department of Agriculture, Ontario, for the year ending December 31, 1953.

Report of the Ontario Stock Yards Board for the year ending June 30th, 1953.

Report of the Ontario Veterinary College for the year ending March 31st, 1953.

Report of the Minister of Agriculture respecting Co-operative Marketing Loans made under The Co-operative Marketing Loan Act for the year ending December 31st, 1953.

Twenty-seventh Annual Report of the Ontario Agricultural College and Experimental Farm for the year ending March 31st, 1953.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrews): Mr. Speaker, a question to the Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh). The Provincial Secretary has been presenting these annual reports and I would like to ask what, if anything, is being done to expedite the printing and distribution of these reports earlier than is now being done. I wish to draw to his attention the lamentable fact that it was necessary for me to bother a very important official of the Department of Welfare today to get certain facts which should not have been necessary. But the last printed report we have from the Department of Welfare is for the year 1950-51. It was mailed to us, at least I received it on January 23, 1953. Their last report is not in. It is no fault of the Welfare Department or any other department. There is a terrible amount of time consumed between the receiving of the reports by the Provincial Secretary and the printing of these reports and that is due, as I said, to the fact . . .

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: This is my question. Does not the secretary think that this is due to the fact that he is giving most of the printing to a few houses?

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I cannot allow that. It is not for an hon. member asking a question to make a statement answering that question. I will allow the question to the Minister and I will allow the Minister to answer, but I cannot allow the one who asks the question to state an answer.

MR. SALSBERG: I have not finished, sir.

MR. SPEAKER: I am sorry, the question has been asked as to why there is delay in printing the reports.

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that the information contained in these reports is not public until they are tabled, and immediately they are tabled the printing is gone on with as expeditiously as possible.

The little interjections the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) made about the printing being allocated to a limited number of firms is, I want to assure you, absolutely untrue. There is no basis for it at all and when my estimates come up I will be very glad to go into that and explain it.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, and before reverting to the matter of presenting reports by committees on which there will be some comment, no doubt, by the members of the committee on the revision of election law, may I say that on Monday the purpose will be to receive a report in the form of a White Paper to be submitted to the House by the Minister of Lands and Forests. We are very glad to have the Minister of Lands and Forests back with us after a serious illness last fall, and I understand he is in good shape now to undertake the pressure of his duties in connection with his department.

This is the first occasion, I think, in the history of this province, that a White Paper has been presented to this House. It is a form of parliamentary practice which is very well known and extensively used, I think, at Ottawa and certainly at Westminster.

I noticed some comment in one of the papers the other day about the Beveridge Report. That has no relation to the liquor situation in the province, but it is in connection with security in Great Britain from the cradle to the grave. That report was submitted to the British House of Commons by the government of that day in the form of a White Paper. We have had sittings continuously of certain experts, General Howard Kennedy, Dean Sisam of Toronto University, the Advisory Committee on Forestry consisting of gentlemen of many and varied views, the Minister, until the time he was taken ill, representatives of the Minister, various members of the Department of Lands and Forests, including the Deputy Minister, and some others.

Mr. Speaker, they plan to submit for the consideration of this House a report in the form, as I say, of a White Paper, to be placed before members of the House for study. The purpose is to submit that to the Committee on Lands and Forests and for General Kennedy, Dean Sisam and others to come before it to express their views in connection with this great problem. I think the situation is this, as will be explained later, we are at the point where the forests inventory is virtually complete, or at least it is complete for a very large part of Ontario and now the point arises: What is the policy in this province for the next 20 years—what is the long-term policy? That was part of the Kennedy Report of a number of years ago and it is a problem that has to be considered, with all its checks and balances, by the people of this province. In this there are undoubtedly problems. There are some pinches that will come because of long-term policy. I think the fairest way to put it to the people, and to members of this House who must make decisions, is to place this long-range thinking in the form of this White Paper before the House, and then allow people to come before the committee, General Kennedy, Dean Sisam, and others who are interested—people who may approve or disapprove of ideas that are put forward in that document—and from all that help available I am satisfied a long-range policy, which will be the policy of this province, as I say, for perhaps 25 years, perhaps for more, may emerge.

That will be the business on Monday. The Minister of Lands and Forests will introduce that matter. Following that there will be the consideration of bills and other business and on Tuesday we will proceed with the debate on the Speech from the Throne in which my hon. friends of the Opposition will continue to take the government to task for the things they may allege we are omitting to do or doing incorrectly.

If we may now revert, sir, to presenting reports from the committees. I think on this occasion, sir, when that Order is called some of my hon. friends may want to say something. I think members of the committee may have something to say about the election committee reports. This is not for the purpose of receiving or debating the report itself, but for the purpose of tabling the report for consideration.

MR. S. J. HUNT (Renfrew North): Before the Orders of the day there is a matter, I feel, which should not go unnoticed. On February 20, 1912, an event of some considerable importance took place in the town of Pembroke. A very young man, I may say a mere boy at that time, took unto himself one of our very fine Pembroke girls as a partner there for life. Since that time this young man has met with considerable success in public life and today we find him sitting as the Minister of Municipal Affairs in this Legislature.

I am sure the Minister would give credit to his wife for the assistance and inspiration that she has offered for these many years. This help has brought about a great deal of the success that has come his way and I am sure I speak for all the members of the House when I say that we offer the hon. Minister and Mrs. Dunbar our heartiest congratulations as they celebrate their 42nd wedding anniversary tomorrow, and wish that they may both be spared for many years to carry on the sphere in which they find themselves today.

MR. A. J. REAUME (Essex North): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day may I mention this is a very important week—Brotherhood Week—and I have not heard one word about this mentioned in the House, nor in my absence have I read about it in the paper. Nor is there anyone trying to practice it.

This House is made up of honourable men from all parts of the province and in service, are a very fine agency in promoting goodwill and good feeling among all of our people. Certainly I hope that until the House adjourns around 4 o'clock, we can at least refrain from getting into any arguments other than calling each other "gentlemen."

In Windsor, of course, which is I think the capital of the Province of Ontario for practicing brotherhood, we did in the early part of the week issue a proclamation, inserted in the paper, calling upon all our people to practice what they preach. As the province is growing and expanding and becoming more important every day, it would appear, whether we are Protestant, Roman Catholic or Jew, whether our colour is white or black, that we all are part and parcel of God's creatures, and there is no use in trying to push the other fellow over the edge of the earth, because there is plenty of room on it for all of us.

I only mention it because I think it is well that the week should not pass without saying a word about it. Thank you.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day are called, I want to draw your attention to certain deletions which have taken place in the printed Hansard report of the proceedings of the House. I do not know how many instances there have been. Mr. Speaker, in which deletions have taken place, but it has been brought to my attention that on one particular occasion, on February 15th, when the hon. Attorney-General moved The Mechanics' Lien Act, there were a number of comments made with respect to that bill on its introduction which have been deleted from Hansard.

One of the remarks was made by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr.

Salsberg) who asked whether this would go to the Labour Committee, because it is for the protection of labour, and the hon. Attorney-General replied something along this line, that "all our legislation is slanted toward the protection of labour," and then the hon. member for St. Andrew made some other comments.

Mr. Speaker, I am not arguing as to the substance of the remarks made by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), nor by the hon. member for St. Andrew, but I am arguing against the principle of deleting remarks from Hansard which are made on the floor of the House.

HON. MR. FROST: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition suggest there should be any deletions? I never heard of such a thing myself.

MR. OLIVER: I am coming to that, Mr. Prime Minister, if you will allow me.

It may be, Mr. Speaker, in your capacity, you have some knowledge of what has transpired in this regard. My only point in bringing it up is to insure what I think is something of which we are all in favour, and that is, that the words which are said by the hon. members in this House should be recorded in the printed copy of Hansard.

I bring this up because in this instance there was a deletion, and I think if you, Mr. Speaker, would enlighten us as to the procedure in this regard, it would be helpful to the hon. members of the House generally.

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition may reflect somewhat on myself. If I said something, or the hon. member for St. Andrew asked me a question which does not appear on the record, I can assure the House that I never read the record, and I do not know whether it is in or out.

As a matter of fact, I never read Hansard. I leave that entirely to those who are employed to carry out faithfully, the recording of what we say, no matter whether it is for or against us.

I never like to look over past errors. I leave it to the hon. members, and if it is not in Hansard, I am not responsible and I do not know why it is not there, in fact, I do not know whether it is there or not.

I hope there is no suggestion there was any interference with Hansard on my part.

MR. OLIVER: There was no such suggestion at all, Mr. Speaker.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, with your permission, since I am the person involved, I would like to make it clear that I in no wise asked for any deletions, and certainly knew nothing about them, until they were drawn to my attention. I read Hansard, because I have not a staff to read it for me, and bring to my attention anything they think I should know. I have not got around to that as yet.

I want to make it abundantly clear I did not seek, and I did not desire, nor am I at all happy over the deletions, and I am very glad the hon. Leader of the Opposition raised that point.

For the record, I want to say that what I said, to the best of my memory, which is not contained in the printed report, was this:

Would you not agree, Mr. Attorney-General, that this be referred to the Labour Committee, since it is supposed to protect labour?

And the hon. Attorney-General replied by saying:

All our laws are written to protect labour.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not think those are the exact words. I did say that our legislation was in the interest of the working man, which it is. If it was not in Hansard the last time, it will be today.

MR. SALSBERG: To which I replied, "You should be the last one to say that."

MR. PORTER: I happened to be the first one to say it.

MR. SALSBERG: I repeat my words, to the best of my recollection. I was addressing myself to the hon. Attorney-General, and I said, "You should be the last one to say that because most of your laws are for the protection of property and property rights."

Those were my remarks, and I am sure they will be on the record now.

HON. MR. PORTER: Surely the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) does not suggest a working man is entirely devoid of property. He has property rights, the same as anybody else. Just because the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) does not claim property rights, the working man can.

MR. SALSBERG: When I spoke, I had in mind, of course, property rights of the sort and in the category which was never attained by the working men.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is not what the hon. member said.

MR. SALSBERG: You did not say that; I did.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in reference to Hansard, before you say anything may I refer to another matter in connection with it. I never have heard that anything was deleted from it, but I know there are the most terrific inaccuracies in it.

I made a few remarks here the other day in connection with the appointment of the Public Accounts Committee, which I read over afterwards, and I must admit that I could hardly recognize what I was alleged to have said, as having any relation to what I said here in the House.

I would say, sir, that I have never been enthusiastic about Hansard at all. Really, I oftentimes have felt that preferably there should not be any Hansard here. However, I acquiesced in that, but when I see pages of a report which will require at least twenty-five corrections, to make it resemble anything which bears any sense, then I am almost brought back to my feeling we should not have Hansard here at all.

If we are going to have it, let it be accurate, and let us have our words taken down.

I imagine the report of the hon. Leader of the Opposition and my own, will require a half-day's work to get it into some kind of shape to mean anything and I object to taking hours of time from a busy day to correct what I am supposed to have said in the House. If it is going to be that way, let us abolish it.

HON. MR. HAMILTON (Minister without Portfolio): At this time, it may be the proper occasion to seriously consider a more modern method of recording the debates. Surely, in this day and age, there are better methods than writing the record by shorthand, and I think through a recording machine, we would be able to much better record the debates.

MR. SALSBERG: Then we could listen to ourselves all over again.

HON. MR. PORTER: Heaven forbid!

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. Leader of the Opposition has asked what I can do to remedy this situation.

I think, if I remember correctly, there are five copies of Hansard made on the typewriters. These copies are submitted to the hon. members who have made various speeches, or have entered into any debate.

The reason for the submission of these five copies is that a copy may be placed on the desk of an hon. member by ten o'clock in the morning, so that an interested hon. member go over his own remarks, and make such corrections as he feels are right.

I think the hon. members are willing to agree there are many weaknesses in the system, but we have endeavoured to make it possible for the hon. members to assume some responsibility for what they say in the House.

I receive a copy of Hansard, usually around seven o'clock in the evening, and

I glance through it, but I cannot be expected to remember every word which is said. I do correct some little things which I have caught, but my memory is as fallible as anybody else's.

As the hon. members were notified at the opening of the session, their corrections, if any, are to be completed before six o'clock in the afternoon.

There is a good deal of merit in what the hon. member for Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton) said. We have gone into the matter of the possibility of tape recording our speeches. I am certain some of us would not have too much appreciation of having an absolute record of what we say.

It is a big question, and we have looked into it, but have not taken any action on it as yet. At times, we wonder if it is always advisable to have a Hansard. Sometimes, I can assure you, I wish we did not. Perhaps some of the hon. members feel the same way about that; I do not know.

But we have agreed on a Hansard this year, and I will do my level best to see that every word spoken in the House will be included in the printed Hansard. I will make as many mental notes as I can of what is being said, but it is up to the hon. members to correct their speeches, as long as the substance is not changed.

I can assure the hon. members I will do my best to see that it is better than it has been previously. I will meet Hansard immediately the House rises, and we will discuss the matter thoroughly.

HON. MR. FROST. May we revert to "Receiving petitions"?

MR. SPEAKER: Yes.

MR. C. G. MACODRUM (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the first report of the Standing Committee on Legal Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. MacOdrum, from the Standing Committee on Legal Bills, presents the following as the first report of that committee:

"Your Committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 34, An Act to amend The Administration of Justice Expenses Act.

Bill No. 36, An Act to amend The Coroners Act.

Bill No. 37, An Act to amend The County Courts Act.

Bill No. 39, An Act to amend The Crown Attorneys Act.

Bill No. 42, An Act to amend The Insurance Act.

Bill No. 44, An Act to amend The Jurors Act.

Bill No. 45, An Act to amend The Magistrates Act, 1954.

Bill No. 46, An Act to amend The Mechanic's Lien Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS

MR. W. H. COLLINGS (Beaches): Mr Speaker, I beg to leave to present the report of the Select Committee appointed to act with the Chief Election Officer, and the Assistant Chief Election Officer, for the purpose of studying The Voters' List Act, and The Election Act, and move its consideration.

Mr. Speaker, before I enter into the few comments in reference to the report, I would like to say to the hon. members of the committee that I deeply appreciate the time they have given to the study of the several Acts during the sessions of 1952-1953, and 1953-1954. It was a privilege to me to have the honour of chairing this committee.

I do not know whether people generally know exactly what the private hon. members sacrifice by way of their time in coming to Toronto. It is easy for me to come from my office downtown, which I can do in a matter of about 15 minutes, but when hon. members have to come from all parts of the province, their work should be appreciated by all the people of this province. May I say,

Mr. Speaker, that the hon. members take their work very seriously. I would like to go on record, Mr. Speaker, with just a few of my own observations in reference to that. Let me first refer to the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope). He could very well at the last meeting have absented himself, but he telephoned me long distance when he found it was impossible for him to be here, and asked to be excused.

The same thing applies in regard to the hon. member for Lambton East (Mr. Janes). During the two years, if he was going to be away, he always wrote me a note, saying he would be absent from one date to another, in case I should call a meeting of our committee.

I have always received the same co-operation by the hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Hunt) and the hon. member for Perth (Mr. Edwards).

I might make special mention of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). I believe he attended every meeting of our committee. In fact, the membership of our committee was practically 100 per cent. at every meeting.

I also believe the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) was a 100 per cent. attendant, except at the last meeting, when it conflicted with another committee, of which he was a member.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) was present at every meeting, to my knowledge. May I say, Mr. Speaker, how much I appreciate the co-operation of the members of the committee, which made the job of chairman much more easy.

I would also like to thank the Chief Election Officer (Mr. R. G. Lewis) and his staff. It was a pleasure to have Mr. Harvey with us as our secretary. He has given a long and faithful service to this province, and I understand now he has earned his retirement.

This report comes to this House with practically the unanimous support of the committee. The hon. member for Essex North (Mr. Reaume) mentioned something about everything being peaceful and quiet. We had that in every meeting of our committee. I do not recall at any meeting where there were any flare-up of tempers.

Mind you, it was a committee in which the hon. members opposite could have a little fun at the expense of the hon. members on this side of the House, but that always worked in reverse, and we had the opportunity of having a little fun at their expense.

I believe the highlight of our committee meetings was when the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) related to us the story of the travelling ballot box, where the ballot box, and the staff, went out for business, and made a little tour around the area for the collection of votes. That was taking the box to the people, in other words.

MR. SALSBERG: What Party controlled the election machinery?

MR. COLLINGS: I forget whether that was in the hon. member's riding, or not.

MR. SALSBERG: What Party controlled the election machine?

MR. COLLINGS: Mr. Speaker, your committee is proposing twenty-eight amendments to The Election and Voters' Lists Acts. As you know, the present Election Act provides for a period of 31 days from the date of the issue of the writ to nomination day. Then 7 days elapse from nomination day to election day, should the election be called in what we call the summer months, and in the winter months 14 days from the date of nomination day to the election day.

Your committee recommends 31 days from the date of the issue of the writ to nomination day, and 14 days from nomination day to election day, or a total of 45 days, no matter what time in the year the election is called.

To successfully carry out the provisions of The Election Act, and in preparing a good voters' list, your committee recommends the appointment of permanent returning officers. They feel this would enable the returning officer to be properly schooled and become informed of any changes which may take place in the Election Act between elections. It would also give him an opportunity to become acquainted with the political organizations, so that when the election was called he would know immediately whom to be in touch with to secure the names of the enumerators, because by definitely saying that the election must be held within 45 days, it is imperative for him to have a list of enumerators so that he can quickly start the enumeration of the voters, and we believe that a permanent returning officer would aid in this respect.

Mr. Speaker, your committee examined thoroughly every section of the Election Act. With the aid of the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko) with his keen, legal mind, we found there was some question as to whether the chap who went out and posted billboards, for instance, was in fact "clerical help," and would be barred from voting in that particular riding. Therefore, we recommend the repeal of subsections 2 and 3 to section 16 of The Election Act.

I call to your attention recommendation 16, which I believe will have the unanimous approval of all hon. members of this House, and is a widening of the privilege of voting at advanced polls. We are not suggesting any change in the three days of polling in advance polls. Let us assume that the election is held on Monday, the advance polls would be held the previous week on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The recommendation of our committee reads as follows:

The amendment to subsection 1 of section 88 by striking out the words "will be."

That is to say, if you will be away from the riding on election day, you may vote at the advanced poll. We recommend that be changed and substituted therefor the words, "except to be." So there you have it, Mr. Speaker, that if you expect to be away from the riding on election day, you have the privilege of voting at the advanced poll.

I believe this is a great step forward in providing the means to the electors of this province whereby they are able to cast their vote if they expect to be away on election day. I think this point might have the support of the government, because I do recall the hon. Prime Minister speaking in Montreal, I believe it was, at the Labour Convention, in which he advanced something like what we are proposing to do, that every effort should be made available to those who might be out of the riding on business, or in fact on holidays, and especially if they were delegates to a national convention. It is a holiday more or less, but at the same time they are there on union business. I believe that recommendation will have the full support of all the hon. members of this House.

At our committee meetings we had an opportunity, Mr. Speaker, to reminisce about how things went during our own particular campaign. It was unanimously considered that the repeal of section 169 should be recommended. How can you expect to carry out a successful campaign today without the aid of motor cars? What is wrong with your friend, or your friends, sending along on election morning one or two or three cars? If he does that, naturally he has to pay for the driver, so I say, "What is wrong with that, I see nothing wrong with it." Our committee was of the unanimous opinion that we should repeal section 169 of The Election Act.

MR. SALSBERG: Was that unanimous?

MR. COLLINGS: Yes, unanimous. I want to say a few words on recommendation No. 12. It was the opinion of the members of our committee that as quickly as possible after you have received your endorsement as a standard bearer from your convention, either yourself or your official agency should quickly get your nomination papers into the hands of the returning officer.

A certain time must elapse for the preparation of the list. Therefore your committee is now recommending in subsection (c) of section 58 to provide that nominations may be filed with the returning officer at any time in the period of 10 days immediately preceding the close of nominations.

That means simply that within the 10 days prior, you have the right now to file your nomination papers with the returning officer. We are recommending that we reduce the number of qualified electors who must sign your nomination papers from one hundred to ten, so the returning officer could quickly certify as to whether your nomination papers are in order with reference to the electors, and give you a certificate, and you may go about your business. You know the worries of filing your nomination papers are over, they are quite in order, and you can go about your business of being elected.

We also provide that any candidate who files his nomination papers with the returning officer on the date set for the nomination, that the returning officer will certify, up to 11.00 o'clock on the morning of the election day, that you have a right to put your nomination papers in, and he will then certify as to the correctness of your papers and give you your certificate. However, should you not file your nomination papers until after 11.00 o'clock on the day of nomination, then he has the right to not certify that immediately, because it is running too close to the hour of closing. But, should the nomination papers be found not in order, the right of the candidate is not immediately taken away from him. The returning officer would, in turn, notify the Chief Election Officer, and it would then be the duty of the Chief Election Officer to notify the returning officer if there is anything wrong with the nomination papers.

Mr. Speaker, yesterday we heard from the hon. Leader of the Opposition and the hon. Prime Minister. In their wonderful speeches, in reply to the Speech from the Throne, I am sure each of us sitting here must have felt proud to be a member of the Legislature of this great, old Province of Ontario. Your committee feels that if a candidate presents himself to the electors of this province hoping that he will be elected, he should accompany his nomination papers with a deposit of $200, either by marked cheque on a bank doing business in this province, or in cash or by postal order. We believe the Ontario law should conform to that of the Federal law in which a deposit is required to be filed with nomination papers.

MR. SALSBERG: Was that unanimous, too?

MR. COLLINGS: No, I believe there was probably one dissenter, who will probably speak for himself on that section.

Sections 23 to 28, in the recommendations are simply for improving the Voters' Lists Act and to enable the Chief Election Officer to carry out his duties in the 45 days as prescribed in the recommendation. The principal one is No. 24 in the printing of the voters' lists. Your committee felt, after hearing from the Chief Election Officer as to the time required for printing of lists in several of the ridings—and we so recommend—that the lists can be "printed or otherwise reproduced." We feel that would help in some of the ridings.

As I say there are other recommendations which are simply in order to clear up and tidy up the Election Act, and the Voters' Lists Act.

In tabling this report, Mr. Speaker, there has been placed on the members' desks a copy of the committee's report.

So there it is, Mr. Speaker, the report of the Select Committee. We now only hope that the government will pursue it and probably bring in the necessary bill, and I am sure it will receive the unanimous support of this House.

HON. MR. FROST: I think perhaps there may be some hon. members of the committee who would like to say something about this report, and if so, I think the hon. members of the House might be granted your indulgence to permit that.

Concerning this matter, Mr. Speaker, this is a report of a committee. It is a report summing up the consensus of opinion of a committee representative of three Parties in this House. I do not know if the report is a unanimous report, because the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) told me there were some points of difference. However, in any event, it is not a minority report.

May I point out to you, Mr. Speaker, and for the benefit of the member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), I do not know whether you would say he has a "leader at large," I suppose that describes it, but this "leader at large" has accused me of the most terrible things in connection with this report and has associated me with people whom he obviously does not like from other places and other provinces. I was held up in various places in this province as being a terrible man because of certain things which are contained in this report.

May I point out I have nothing to do with the formulation of this report. I think it is a very worthy document which comes here for consideration, not necessarily for adoption in its entirety, but for consideration. I do not know of any way in which I can correct such an impression, other than to say I would not like to suggest that either one of the hon. members for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) or Ontario (Mr. Thomas) should perhaps make way so that their leader might be better informed as to the practices of this House.

I would not make that suggestion because I would not like to lose either one of them. They are very fine members and I do not know of two members from Opposition Parties who give more thoughtful consideration to matters than the hon. member for Cochrane South and the hon. member for Ontario, and they have my very best wishes until the next general election.

I just point that out because this report is tabled here for consideration, and while it may be the consensus of opinion of the members—and very excellent members—of that committee, again it may not reflect the consensus of opinion of the hon. members of this House.

It is a good document presented here for consideration. We will have a number of such documents during this session, and in sessions following. I am a believer of freedom of thought on the part of all members, and I would like to have their advice in consideration of this report.

MR. SALSBERG: Will there be a discussion on this report?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: When?

HON. MR. FROST: Right now.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I believe the best way to deal with this report would be to proceed with it section by section.

As you know, the items dealt with concern different sections of the Act, and totally different proposals, so if we speak on the report in the abstract, we will not get very far.

The chairman has very ably covered the report in a general way referring to some of the sections, but in order to find out what the hon. members of the House think, we should take it and deal with it section by section. That is the only way in which we can find out how the House considers it.

A copy of the report has been placed on the desk of every hon. member. Some of the members might feel they want to take time to read it, but I would suggest that the chairman read each section and then discuss that particular section.

The hon. Prime Minister referred to the fact it was not a unanimous report, perhaps. There is only one small point in which I disagree with some of the other members of the committee, and that was on the question of the $200 deposit. I do not want to elaborate on that point if we are going to deal with it section by section. When that number 12 item comes up, I would like to join in with the other members in debating the possibility of paying a deposit.

HON. MR. FROST: There are one or two corrections I have. In reading over the report yesterday evening I noticed points which I thought we should have discussed at the time. I blame myself for not being careful and not reading over the draft which I received, but I think there are one or two points which will need further discussion, and I will take these up when we come to these particular sections.

If we do not finish today, I am going to speak to the chairman and point out to him these little observations, or these small matters that bother me. I might have the wrong slant on them altogether, but I would like to have the questions clarified before we finalize the report.

I am going to give the floor to some other member for his suggestions, but again I would suggest that we deal with this report section by section.

HON. MR. PORTER: May I interject at this moment in reply to what the hon. member has suggested? This is merely a motion for the tabling of the report. Eventually the bill will come before the House as a bill, either in its present form, or it may be that all the recommendations of this committee may not be reflected in the bill, and in due course that bill will come before the House as a committee of the whole.

I think the proper procedure at this stage is any discussion on this motion as to tabling the report I think should be on any section, or any part of this bill, and that discussion should be of a general character, because there will be ample opportunity eventually to deal with this report as it appears in the form of a bill.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I agree with the hon. member for South Cochrane. This should be considered carefully, section by section, because I feel now, listening to this bill being presented, that I cannot support some of these recommendations.

From my experience in public life, I have never seen any objection to any man being allowed to offer his services to the public in public life, and I do not see why he should be penalized and should have to pay $200 in order to have his name placed on the paper.

I have never been in favour of that kind of thing at all. What does it amount to, a permanent returning officer, because a member has the power to recommend that at any time, so how could you make a person permanent? If you appoint a permanent returning officer for my riding in Ontario, any time I feel like I can make a recommendation for some other person to replace him—without cause, too.

I would not be in favour of cutting down the number of names required from 100 to 10, raise it from 100 to 200. If a man has 200 people who say they desire his name on that paper, then let it go. Do not cut the number down to 10, for goodness sake. Then you would have some "crackpots" in. In 27 years of public life I have never objected to people running against me, opposing me in elections. They bring out their good points, they are well meaning, they may not agree with what I say, and I do not agree with all they say. I like to have the CCF in my riding. Last year they decided they would vote Liberal instead of CCF and the Liberals came a little closer to my vote. I only got a majority of about 7,600 instead of 9,000. But I can see a great advantage of having CCF in my riding. To get my majority down from 9,000 to 7,600 was "something."

MR. SPEAKER: I could help here, I think, to have the matter clarified. It is entirely in the hands of the House as to how this matter should be considered. If it is the wish of the House that you discuss it clause by clause, as in committee, then I think it will have to go to committee. If you decide to discuss it clause by clause, while we are in the House, I can only allow one speech. The House is its own master but I would point out that if we discuss it clause by clause you make a speech and you are over. It would be possible to speak on every clause, but as far as the arguing and bantering back and forth is concerned, that cannot be allowed so long as we are constituted as a House.

MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, even if I have to repeat what I said before, this is merely a motion to table that report and the decision of this House to table the report has nothing to do with what may be decided as to what to do with the different sections of the report when they come before this House in the form of a bill. There may be great advantage from a discussion at the present stage on the report in general or on particular sections which any member wishes to discuss. It may be very useful. It may be very useful to the government, and to the followers of the government, in deciding what should be put forward in the form of a bill. This is almost, in a sense, an Election Act Committee. It is now extended to all members of this House and I would suggest at the present stage that it might not be the best time for the House to come to any definite decision as to any one section or any other section of this report. I think we should wait until we see it in the form of a bill, and also I see many advantages in doing the way the hon. member suggested.

I think, in view of the fact that this is not a motion for the adoption of the report, as I said, or any part of it, it is merely a motion for the tabling of the report, that discussion should be wide open and it should be left to any hon. member to present his views. He is not necessarily bound by this, he is not bound by any vote that takes place on any particular section of this report this afternoon. We may have the benefit of the views of any hon. member who wishes to speak on this bill without his being under the impression that anything he says is going to be put in the form of a vote and he has put on record his vote one way or the other on any paragraph of this report, so I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that a general discussion should ensue on this bill, leaving it open to any hon. member to deal particularly with any section as he sees fit.

MR. SPEAKER: I am quite prepared to accept that, but I say you can speak once, you can speak on any section, you can elaborate on it, you can speak as much as you like on every section as long as you like, but once the hon. member has spoken, that finishes his portion of the debate so far as the tabling of this report is concerned.

MR. SALSBERG: On the question of procedure, would it be agreeable to the government to proceed with a general discussion? That, I think, is sound and will help guide the government on what to do. But the report has just been brought down and for an intelligent discussion I think hon. members should be given a chance to read it, check with the original Act and then make a contribution that will be thought out and have some value. The hon. members of the committee are, of course, up to date. I would suggest to the government an agreement on those lines.

MR. FROST: It may not be necessary to close off this discussion this afternoon. We have some time. There may be some hon. members who are ready to speak now. I suggest we proceed.

MR. SALSBERG: Then I move the adjournment.

May I move the adjournment of the discussion on this motion? Nobody else wishes to speak.

MR. OLIVER: May I say with respect to this report and the tabling of it this afternoon, I find myself in disagreement with my hon. friend from Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) and in agreement, strange as it may seem, with the Attorney-General, because this is after all a report tabled in the Legislature and my objection to discussing it clause by clause would be that we would be discussing each clause as if it were impending legislation being considered by the House. Actually this is not the case at all. This is a report from a Select Committee and it will not become authoritative, or any phase of the report become operative unless the government decides to recommend to the House any form of a bill which would include those particular sections which the government is prepared to accept.

What could be done this afternoon is to deal with this in a general way, and if any hon. member has particular thoughts which attach themselves to a particular section, then that could be dealt with, but the real discussion and the decision of the House as to whether they are going to accept or not will come not now but in the bill.

It does seem that any discussion on this tabled report today might be just a waste of time. Perhaps we have other important things to discuss. We have heard that even though we talk about this it does not really mean anything because we have not considered it.

So I would like to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that we move on to something else. We have had this very capably presented by the hon. member for the Beaches (Mr. Collings). It was very well done. I would like to have the opportunity to read it over and come to my own opinion and I do not think that can be done this afternoon, so that if there is anything else that can be done this afternoon, I would sooner go on with that.

MR. SALSBERG: I move the adjournment of this motion.

MR. PORTER: This is a motion for tabling a report and it is not usual on such matters to have an extended discussion, but in view of the contents of this report, if it is merely a question of tabling it, I suggest that the motion be adopted and the report be tabled, and if hon. members want to have a discussion on this report we could have the matter re-opened at a later date, but I do not see any positive advantage in leaving this discussion open at the present stage. This will come forward in the form of a bill and if we have not the advantage that members wish to express themselves on it this afternoon, no doubt we will have plenty of discussion when the bill comes forward.

MR. OLIVER: What procedure would be followed to bring the matter up again?

MR. PORTER: A motion could be tabled if desired. We could always re-open the discussion.

MR. S. F. LEAVINE (Waterloo North): I suppose this is one of the occasions on which spontaneous thoughts can arise and they may be very apt. I cannot support any bill requiring a deposit of $200 because I think this is futile in this inflationary age. I would rather go along with the suggestion for the raising of the number of names required on the nomination paper. I was somewhat surprised at the amount of work that this committee has done and feel that on the whole they are to be commended, but I am a little concerned that no mention has been made of two items that I think are of considerable importance. We know that our western provinces have adopted some of the more modern methods of voting, and I am forced to the opinion that I, being a minority representative, may very well be the victim of such innovation, but I do not think it is my responsibility to be elected but rather it is democracy to represent the majority of the people and I would have thought that there should have been some consideration given to such a voting system.

The other point is this. We talk about the small vote that comes out. We talk about the costs of elections and it has been mentioned that sometimes funds are collected by means that are not regular. All that may be true. I think the error is in not throwing on the candidate the responsibility of getting out the voters—and what I am about to say is not calculated to get myself re-elected—but it is the duty of every citizen to vote. There is only one way to achieve it. Many things I have to do, such as paying my taxes and so on which I do not find particularly agreeable. If you can compel a man to do these several things I think he should be compelled to vote. I must recognize there may very well be reasons in cases of religious belief of people as to why they should be exempt. There may be physical and mental reasons why some people should not vote. I would accept this, but I do think if there is no provision made for compulsory voting, you will always have a small vote, an expensive vote and a vote that could be very well influenced by lobbying.

As to the operation of election machinery I notice scrutineers have been mentioned. After the last election the first telephone call I received was from the official agent of the former member for Waterloo North and his chief protest was: "You did not have any scrutineers." To this I replied: "What use are they anyway?" And I think in the main that is true. I believe expenditures on elections should be a charge against the province and I think a certain limited sum should be allowed for advertising.

I do not know in what particular party the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) will place me this afternoon. At least, this is my considered opinion, and the opinion I am going to support.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I am sure I will have something to say about this when it comes down in the form of a bill.

I do hope sincerely that the government will not bring down a bill containing all the recommendations made by the committee. When this does happen, sir, whether the bill contains all or only a portion of the recommendations, there will be need for discussions. I believe the report deals with a very vital question, and the bill that will incorporate some of the recommendations will be a major piece of legislation. I sensed, as did other people in the province, that the sense of the committee's recommendations come out with a clear move for a further infringement of the rights of people and of the election processes. Reference was made to the Leader of the CCF. He can defend himself and explain his position but I want to state here for myself that my reaction was not far from his own when I received the report—that here was an attempt to narrow down the number of candidates and to ease up in areas where the tightening of restrictions is necessary.

I am not discussing the report as intelligently as I would like because we have not yet read it but being compelled to discuss it at this stage, I will discuss it, but return to it after I have had the chance to read the report fully. Let us take a couple of items as an indication of what I have in mind.

This establishment of a permanent returning officer—I am not in favour of it and I am glad to have one hon. member of the treasury benches take the same view. My experience with returning officers has been—well—very unhappy. My experience has been that the party in power usually appoints whoever they want, and the retiring officer turns the thing into a very good thing for himself without regard to the requirements of the electoral machinery. It is common to find a returning officer appointing his wife as a deputy or a secretary, his daughter as a clerk, his living room as office space and so on. In other words, it becomes a family affair, whether they can read or write, whether they can type or not. The idea is to make as much out of it as you can for yourself. That is the situation and it will not be improved by the appointment of permanent returning officers.

The hon. Minister for Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) is quite right when he says that the hon. member for a riding will, of course, seek to influence the government to give the appointment to one of his own supporters. He is right, and he is frank about it. The only trouble is he will always succeed in getting it for the person he recommends whereas the opposition never will.

I would give the job to a well-known and generally acknowledged impartial and honest person in every riding. Yes, I would give it to a minister of the church.

If a minister is not eligible I would make some such person eligible and let him act as returning officer. I have seen cases, Mr. Speaker, and so have most other hon. members, where returning officers are so incompetent that the party in power which gives them the appointment runs the officer to all intents and purposes and he is merely a rubber stamp.

That is true and it should be said Federally and Provincially.

I do not think this is an improvement, and I believe that improvements are necessary. I would like to see an improvement which would guarantee the establishment of a constituency machinery which will be above suspicion, and above influence. I think such a way can be found, and that will be our task now that we are dealing with the improving and overhauling of our election machinery.

Another recommendation the committee brought in was to remove section 169 of the old Act. The chairman of the committee spoke of it lightly, but to me, it is extremely significant. He said that everybody knows it is a regulation or a law or a restriction which is more observed in its violation than its observance. In other words, you can rent cars and pay for them, while the law says you must not. I suggest in this type of legislation, we should not ease up on the regulations, but make them tighter, and make them more difficult to violate.

I venture to say if we were to have election methods less costly than they are now, with less money required by the Parties, including the Party in power—the old-line Parties—in order to fight elections, we would have less graft, less corruption, and less “Fort Williams.”

I think these are truths which should be stated. Surely if you can go out and hire all the taxi cabs in a riding, and send them out to bring in the voters, somebody has to pay for them, and the money has to come from somewhere. Perhaps the odd candidate can afford to foot the bill. I daresay there are some candidates who can, but, is it not a fact, Mr. Speaker, that in the old-line Parties, the candidates would turn to the Party leaders for a handout, and would get perhaps $500 or $600 or $1,000 or $1,500, depending on the amount required, and the ability of certain people to chip in.

But where do you think the man who gave you the $1,000 or the $5,000 got it? Where do you think he gets it from? It does not come from Heaven, like manna. Manna comes from Heaven, but money does not, and if the government is in the valley of humiliation now, the Liberals, too, were in that valley more than once. Is that not true?

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): You take up a collection?

MR. SALSBERG: We take up collections. We have collection cards in the shops, and the workers give us what they feel they can afford, and people come with their cars, but there is no remuneration. But it is wrong, and I do not think it can be made legal, that is, to hire a fleet of taxi cabs and use them on election day. I say we should not allow that. We should tighten up on that.

There are many other points in this bill which require some plain speaking, and a good, common-sense approach. I am sure there are many hon. members on the government side who feel the same way as I do.

I was not prepared to participate in this debate today, but I would recommend the hon. members of the House should read a very stimulating article which I read in Maclean's Magazine, some months ago, on this question, where the writer quite correctly says that there are members of the House of Commons in Ottawa who privately violate the Election Act, before they are even elected, and these are the men who are supposed to make the laws, and expect everybody else to uphold them, but they are the ones who violate them in their elections.

I suppose we will have that as long as there is capitalism, and industrial and other large corporations handing out hundreds of thousands of dollars to Parties, in order to assist them in conducting their elections.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): We will not need any elections, when your Party gets into power.

MR. SALSBERG: We should do nothing to make it easier; what we should do is to make it more difficult. I think the proposals before us in the report of this committee can serve a very useful purpose. Some of the proposals may be very valuable and should be adopted and enacted in the form of legislation. Some, undoubtedly, should be rejected.

But if the report will introduce and inaugurate a good, thorough, frank and full discussion of the problems in connection with our election machinery, the costs of elections and the sources from which the money comes will have served a very useful purpose, and I hope that will be the outcome of this discussion.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I have already spoken, and I do not know whether you will rule me out of order, but I would like to say a few more words in connection with this report.

I would like to point out to the hon. members of this House that the members of this committee sat down on several occasions, and very carefully went over the two Acts, The Election Act and The Voters' List Act, and we considered them section by section, and it was the considered opinion of the members, that the recommendations as contained in the report would improve our election machinery.

As I said before, I cannot recall a difference of opinion being recorded on any point other than the $200 deposit.

I, for one, disagree with the inclusion of that recommendation in the report. I still maintain that to ask for a $200 deposit from a candidate is not democratic.

The argument used by some who favour the inclusion of the $200 deposit in the Act is that it will do away with the "nuisance candidates." I do not think a "nuisance candidate" does any harm. I believe it was pointed out to me at the time that one candidate who opposed me in the last election received less than 3 per cent. of the votes. That is his right. He has a perfect right to run as a candidate.

But to ask any man to put up $200, I maintain, is taking away his democratic right. It is quite possible that the $200 deposit, for some of the larger Parties, will not amount to very much. They can get the amount from Party funds, but for the independent candidate, or the man who has no Party affiliation whatsoever, a $200 deposit will be felt by him or one or two of his friends. It is a problem for a Party, which is not in a position to get large donations toward election expenses. If the amount has to be contributed by a very few, how many will pay the deposit for all their candidates? At the present time, it would take $18,000 to pay the deposits of the candidates of any one Party, if they ran candidates in each one of the 90 ridings.

That is all I will say now on that point.

Coming to the question of the permanent returning officers. I am strongly in favour of having permanent returning officers. I have been in quite a number of elections, and I believe that with the securing of men who are trained, and who understand the Act, we will be getting much more satisfactory elections.

On many occasions, I have seen disputes and "squabbles" with returning officers, who did not understand the provisions of the Act. In fact, during the election of 1951, I had a dispute with a returning officer myself. He stated that he would appoint the enumerators from whichever Party he wished. He proceeded to appoint them from the Conservative and the Liberal Parties, and told a representative of mine that was his privilege, and he would do as he pleased.

This representative called me and said, "Do you not think we are entitled to a few?" I said, "A few? We are entitled to 50 per cent."

I got in touch with the returning officer, and he gave me the same answer, and I said, "I will give you until eleven o'clock tonight, or I will call upon the Chief Election Officer."

He called me later on, and said that I was correct. I had quoted certain sections of the Act, and suggested that he read them.

I give that incident to show that with a permanent returning officer, problems such as that would never arise.

The returning officer might be an official of the county, such as the Sheriff or the Registrar, or the County Court Clerk, or somebody else in a similar position. They would have time to study their duties, and be prepared to act.

If we followed the procedure of appointing returning officers after a writ has been issued, the Chief Election Officer would have to find someone in the area who would take on the job, which might take some time. And since we have narrowed down the time between the issuance of the writ and the election, we have to have the machinery which will facilitate the election, and a known returning officer should be located in each riding, to whom material could be sent, and then there would be no delays.

Permanent returning officers in each electoral district, in my opinion, is absolutely necessary.

As regards the question of having 10 people nominating a candidate or 200: I am in full accord with ten. Why should we have to go travelling, going around collecting signatures of 200 people? Surely ten nominators would be sufficient. They can signify their desire to have a person run, and if you increase the number, you are only increasing not only the burden placed upon the candidate, but also increasing the burden placed upon the returning officer because he will have to examine the list of nominators and certify each one—or at least 200 are qualified voters. It means increasing the duties placed upon the returning officers.

I am in full accord with the recommendation of the committee that 10 persons only be required to nominate a candidate.

I do not think the question of "advance polls" needs any discussion here. I am sure that each hon. member of this Legislature will agree it is a big step forward, and there will be no disagreement on that point.

When the bill is introduced, we can again discuss these points. The arguments of the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and the hon. Attorney-General have not yet convinced me it would not be more advantageous to this Legislature, to have gone through these recommendations, and obtained the viewpoints of each hon. member of the House.

That would have guided the government and would have shown what the opinions of the different members were on these points. In leaving it to a bill, I think the government then will have to run the risk of opposition to some of those points, but if we had all discussed these points and agreed on them, then it would have been a simple matter to introduce a bill which would have been acceptable to all. But now, should a controversial point be introduced into the bill, we will have to argue the point in the House, which would not have occurred had we settled on this report as it stands.

MR. J. YAREMKO (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, it was my pleasure to serve on this committee under the very able chairmanship of the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Collings). In attending the meetings of the committee I was interested in two things, one in certain fundamental changes which are thought to be fit and proper and especially to my mind the section that deals with absentee voters. There were other fundamental principles in which I was interested.

I also was interested in another factor. To me a document such as The Election Act which governs the bringing into being of the people who are to administer the affairs of this province should be a document which clearly sets out the procedure and requirements of a proper election. It is my feeling that this committee on both counts fulfilled its duty. It has introduced certain fundamental changes which are good and I believe its recommendations when put into legal language by the officers responsible for it will produce a document which will lead to the more orderly and a better understanding of the elections to be run in the future.

I was interested in some of the words of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) which he dropped so lightly in the course of his comments, comments such as: "Who controls the elections," and "The fact that infringements are being made on the rights of the people." Mr. Speaker, I know of no other place where elections are run better by and on behalf of the people and I think this time is a fitting time to bring to the attention of the people of Ontario the way this administration has brought about elections.

Coming now to control of elections, the committee has retained what to my mind is one of the most democratic principles of control of elections in that it is permitting enumerators to be appointed not only by the representatives of the government in power but by those who ran second. To me I can think of no more democratic spirit, as a matter of fact, that was one of the things I learned during the course of the last election. When the former hon. member for Bellwoods riding walked in with 150 or more nominations of enumerators—I may say I was not as well prepared as he was—that list of enumerators was to me one of the most interesting lists I have ever heard of. And if anyone wishes to know the organizations which certain Parties have for the conduct of elections, they should see the people who participate in that somewhat lowly but very necessary task of enumerating to make sure that the people who were entitled to be on the list were on the voters' list.

I do not know how my hon. friend the member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg) made up his lists, because the list of enumerators in Bellwoods riding represented the top leaders of the Party, not the rank and file, but the top leaders. And surely, Mr. Speaker, for a member of that Party to come into this House and speak slyly about "controls of elections," that election campaign was controlled from the date of the issuance of the writ, I know by the people from the Party represented by the man who, having sat in this House, regardless of what Party he belonged to, was entitled to appoint the enumerators who controlled indeed who was to be on that vote.

I may say in all modesty I was fortunate to be able to also draw up a list of people who went out jointly hand in hand in most cases and eyes watching eyes in the enumerating. The initial control of who has the right to vote and then on polling day—and in this regard I disagree with my hon. friend the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr.

Leavine) with regard to scrutineers—under our Election Act each candidate is entitled to have a scrutineer in the polling booth from the time the booth opens until the time it closes, from the time the first ballot is put in until the time the last ballots are counted, control of elections at the very beginning and at the very end by people working on behalf of the Party to which they subscribe.

During the course of elections many comments are made by one candidate towards the other. I listened to the hon. member for St. Andrews (Mr. Salsberg) speak on "control of Party funds." I remember a certain piece of literature which was put out by the former hon. member for Bellwoods, portraying myself sitting on the knee of some man with a top hat. That caused me more difficulty than anything, because all my supporters wanted to know when we were going to get some funds for some printing and for distribution. They were confused: "How many shall we order? Ten?" "No, eight, cut down expenses."

Mr. Speaker, I can conceive of no country in the world where elections are able to be run as closely by the people. Every citizen has an opportunity to become directly involved in an election campaign not only by the marking of his ballot but also by participating on the behalf of the Party he supports. I am convinced that under our election laws the control of the election in in the hands of the people.

With respect to the deposit. This item came into being this way, to my mind, that some discussion had taken place of the difficulties—I should not say "difficulties," but the chore attendant upon candidates going out and getting their nominations completed. I have seldom heard of anyone who could not get 100 nominations, but it is a chore, it is something that has to be attended to. However, in the past it seemed to be that it was little enough to require of a man who was going to participate in an event which cost the taxpayers some money, that he should at least have 100 supporters to show that he is quite serious about the election business.

Some hon. members felt it was a chore. They decided that perhaps the number should be reduced to 10. But having reduced the number to 10 and having made the business of nominations so easy—for, Mr. Speaker, whether there have been and whether there will be “nuisance candidates” is something we cannot pass on—surely with the knowledge that almost anyone could go out and get 10 people to sign any document, surely being aware of the responsibility of an election, we should impose some sort of obligation so that a man can say: “I am in this, I mean business. This is no light thing, I am taking it seriously enough that I am going to put up a deposit of $200.”

I can sympathize with the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) and yet I cannot see the difficulty he pointed to, because members of his Party had no difficulty in filing 100 nominations with 100 deposits—it is unfortunate that all of them were lost.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I did not speak about the number of signatures required at all.

MR. YAREMKO: I am speaking about the $200.

MR. SALSBERG: I did not speak about that either, so the hon. member (Mr. Yaremko) can save his sympathy for someone else.

MR. YAREMKO: Fine.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not need it, I did not speak about that.

MR. YAREMKO: Then Mr. Speaker, I perhaps agree with my hon. friend (Mr. Salsberg) that he did not state that, but I am sure that some discussion must have at one time taken place about the $200 and I am sure that when the time comes the hon. member for St. Andrew will probably speak on the point, if the government sees fit to bring it in.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member (Mr. Yaremko) is far-sighted tonight. I may do so.

MR. YAREMKO: Mr. Speaker, just to bring it to the attention of hon. members of the House, it is interesting to note that of the eleven jurisdictions in which election campaigns are carried on, there are seven which require deposits of $100 and more, and there are two jurisdictions which in addition to the $200 require 25 signatures; and that, Mr. Speaker, was the only point in which I too disagreed with the finding of the committee. It was my opinion that there should be 25 signatures in addition to the $200.

There was one section, Mr. Speaker, which I should just like to bring to the attention of hon. members, which the chairman upon which I do not think commented, and that was the redrafting of subsection 3 of section 165 to the following effect:

The dissemination by any means by a candidate or his agent of political information or material or other material of public interest at any time shall not be deemed corrupt or illegal acts or a contravention of this Act.

All members of the committee felt that there should be full opportunity to all candidates regardless of Party to have the fullest opportunity of conveying their viewpoint to the people at large. In my mind—and I think most of the members agreed—the section as it had read prior to this was rather ambiguous and certainly did not deal with radio or television, that appeared to have been left in the background. I think that that section too backs up my earlier statement that this administration—and indeed it was the attitude of all the members of the committee representative of the three major Parties that our concern as a committee was to lend whatever assistance we could to make sure that the elections in the Province of Ontario would be run for and by the people and give the fullest opportunities to all Parties to present their facts before the people.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, in tabling the Report of the Select Committee on Election Law the chairman very kindly made complimentary references to members of the committee, on their attendance, and on their co-operation with him in the work of the committee. I would like to join with the last speaker in reciprocating his kind and complimentary words and say what a pleasure it was indeed to work on this committee under the able chairmanship of the hon. member for Beaches. Never at any time did he show any bias. He listened to the views of any member notwithstanding the Party he represented, just as courteously and as seriously as he did to those of any other member.

I shall certainly not make any personal comparisons, but I will say the committee could not have chosen a finer or better or fairer chairman than the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Collings).

Certainly we had no thought in presenting this report that it would be accepted without argument by hon. members who are so interested individually, as we all are, in elections, but it was the consensus of the members who were chosen by this Legislature to do this job and work for them.

One of the recommendations which seems to have met with considerable opposition and that I thought would be acceptable unanimously, was that of a permanent returning officer. This has obtained in Federal affairs for many years and I think has worked out well, at least they have returning officers who have an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the provisions of the election law. The Chief Election Officer has an opportunity to visit them, call them together in convenient centres and spend considerable time, sometimes a day or two days, in discussing all aspects of the Federal law with them and answering any questions or giving any information that these permanent returning officers desire to have, and should have.

That certainly has not been the case here in my experiences, and they have been now quite some in number, in Provincial elections. I know in the last election the returning officer in my riding received a telegram that he was appointed to that responsible position and he had not even received a copy of the election law. I know for certain that he proceeded with the appointment of enumerators and certainly without knowing what the provisions of the election law were, because the enumerators were all appointed before I even knew he was the returning officer, and I had to appeal to the County Board to override him, because nothing was clearer than the provisions in the law that in certain urban areas it was the duty and the responsibility of the returning officer to get in touch with the candidate who had the largest number of votes in the last election and secure from him the nominations for enumerators.

I know this was not intentional on his part, he was a personal friend of mine of many years standing, he even ran against me in one election some years ago. But he was not familiar with the provisions of the Election Act and he made this mistake quite innocently. Certainly had he had an opportunity to be informed by a reading of the Act, by instruction and advice from the Chief Election Officer, he would not have made that mistake.

It seems to me there is everything to be gained and nothing to be lost by having returning officers who know their job, who have an opportunity to familiarize themselves with the work and then once the writs are issued the work of preparing lists can proceed expeditiously and properly and without the friction and trouble that otherwise might occur. I can certainly recommend that provision to hon. members of the House most sincerely. Certainly it is not my intention at this hour to go through the report that is before you section by section, but in regard to the subject of the permanent returning officer, I think we can well in this case follow the practice of Ottawa and have officers of this nature.

With respect to the deposit, I have some responsibility for this recommendation being before the House. This is not the first occasion that it has been before this House, sir. I can recall some years ago, I think it was about 1926 or 1927, when the hon. Mr. Ferguson brought in a special bill, not in connection with the general revision of the Act at all, but he felt that the need for it was so obvious that it should receive attention by a special bill, and that provision was placed upon the statute books at that time. However, it was subject to proclamation by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council and when it was not proclaimed in the next revision of the statutes, I believe it was automatically dropped.

This provision has stood for many, many years in the Federal election law and I have not heard anyone complain about the deposit. It is a principle which I believe has been recognized by at least eight of the provinces anyway in Canada. In seven of them it amounts to $100 or more, in some of them it is considerably less. I think in one case it is $10. But I am firmly of the opinion and always have been that submitting one's self as a candidate for a Provincial election is not a frivolous or a light matter and one should be expected to represent some little body of public opinion among electors, and to show that responsibility by putting up a deposit of some kind. My friend's suggestion, frankly, was $100, Mr. Speaker. I do not know to what extent one should go into the discussions that took place on the committee, but I do know that the law of Canada has provided for a deposit now for many years and I have never heard of any candidates at Federal elections complain of that requirement. It is just taken as an accepted fact and they comply with it. Possibly the amount is too high in this recommendation, possibly the number of signatures still required may be too small. Frankly I think that if there is to be a deposit, that it should not be necessary for the candidate to go to all the trouble of securing such a large number of signatures to his nomination papers as 100 or 200, as the case may be. I have known candidates to put in nomination papers with thousands of names on them, in one case well over 4,000, and when the votes were counted he did not have as many votes as he had names on his nomination paper. I have known other nomination papers to be filled out very mysteriously in the back room of the meeting where the candidate was nominated, and certainly there were not nearly as many at that meeting as there were names on his nomination paper, which was turned in at once to the returning officer. I have not very much confidence and I do not place much importance on a great number of names being put on a nomination paper. But this matter has found universal approval in Federal elections. I have followed Hansard from Ottawa fairly carefully and I have never seen any hon. member of that House suggest that that provision should be dropped from the Federal Act, and the fact that nearly all the other provinces have some provision of a similar nature I think is one that this Legislature could very well consider at this time.

Another matter that has seemed to arouse considerable discussion and difference of opinion—although I think we are all agreed on 16—is in connection with the advance poll, where those that could vote at the advance poll were limited to a certain extent by the provisions of the last Act by being required to say that they intended or believed they would be absent on business. It was always my feeling that if they were going to be absent for any reason, sir, that they should have the right to vote at the advance poll.

I think the recommendations from the committee would make that very clear, even if you were absent on holidays or attending a convention as occurred in the last Federal election. Many representatives of that convention lost their vote because of absence. You should be able to make use of the advanced poll. I do not think that will meet with much opposition.

Then there is the suggestion of the repeal of section 169, which has to do with the supplying of cars and conveyances to take voters to the polls. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) speaks of hiring fleets of taxi cabs, and of course he, in my opinion, presents a rather extreme suggestion in that way. However, those of us who are country representatives and rural representatives where there are vast distances in many cases for voters to travel to the polls, know that provision has to be made in some way—is made and has been for years, for conveyances to be supplied for this purpose. Our friends who go to the trouble of providing their cars probably expect to find a little gasoline in their car at the end of the day, and not to find the tank completely empty, and one never enquires too closely as to how those things are done, of course.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is the rural way of life.

MR. NIXON: But the fact remains, Mr. Speaker, in ten general elections in which I have participated, I am sure there have always been cars driving voters to the polls, and I have never asked my friends just how those were provided.

If one would read the section, he would see every candidate who himself or by any other person on his behalf, and every other person who hires or promises to pay or pays for conveyances, and so on, shall be guilty of a corrupt practice and shall incur a penalty of $100; and every person who provides or furnishes transportation free of charge is guilty of a corrupt practice and shall be fined $100; and disqualified from voting at the election.

We might as well be realistic in this matter. Certainly in the rural constituencies cars are going to draw voters to the polls, Mr. Speaker, no matter what we do. I do not like to be guilty of a corrupt practice, even if nobody hears about it, and I do not like my friends to be guilty of a corrupt practice under the law of the province. I suggest that section should have some consideration.

As these seem to be the sections which have aroused the most contention here this afternoon, I simply agree that the discussion should not be limited to the members of that committee. They have discussed these matters in meetings, and they are particularly interested at this stage in hearing the views of the hon. members of the House, who are not members of that committee.

I leave this, Mr. Speaker, at the present time, and if legislation should follow the tabling of this report, the hon. members, as has been pointed out, will have every opportunity to discuss the provisions of the amendments which come in clause by clause on that occasion.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I have no wish to prolong the discussion. I am quite sure the hon. members are awaiting the adjournment of the House.

Our position as to the deposit of $200 has been very ably put by the Leader of our group. I do think it has the effect of restraining people of modest means from qualifying for election for this Legislature, people who would be desirable representatives. Therefore, I do hope that recommendation will not be acceptable to the government.

Mr. Speaker, I was interested in section 16, the advanced poll. I think that is quite a concession, and I suppose that is the result of the Federal election last year when the election was called in the middle of the holiday period on August tenth.

I think you will agree the first two weeks of August are usually regarded by most people in the province, and in Canada, as very good weeks to take a holiday, and there is nothing in that section, Mr. Speaker, which would stop the Provincial Government from calling an election in the first or second week of August of this year and depriving a good many people of their right to vote, because they would be away from the constituency.

I do hope that is a consideration to which the government will give some thought. There is still a possibility of this government calling an election in the first or second week of August, and we would have a repetition of what happened in the Federal election last year.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.20 o'clock p.m.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Supplementary Report of the Special Committee of the Legislature of the Province of Ontario charged with the revision of the Companies Act, Ontario and related Acts.

I am, Mr. Speaker, in fact tabling the report, and with your permission I would like to make a few observations with relation to it.

The main report of this committee was made at the last sitting of the Legislature, and was followed by statute, a bill which has now been enacted as the Statute of 1953 which is in the red book and which will take effect on April 30th, of this year.

The committee was continued from last session in order that we might have further time to consider any additional comments or reflections on the work which we had done. I might say that a number of letters and representations were made to the committee. We had three sittings. I would just like at this point to say that our report now is as was the case in the first instance, a unanimous report, and so far as government members are concerned, perhaps it was not unexpected that we might agree. However, I would like to say that the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) who attended all our hearings this year and who contributed considerably to the comments and work of the committee, has joined with us, as has the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), both of whom represent Opposition Parties of this House. Therefore it is a particular pleasure for me to present the report as a unanimous report after deliberations continued this year.

I presume the hon. Provincial Secretary, in due course, no doubt will present the Act to the Legislature. Added to the report as a schedule is a draft bill, which the committee recommends. Without going into details I think there are about 30 sections, most of which deal with changes in the wording, improving the wording of some of the sections, clarifying some of the sections. I will not worry the House with comments of that sort, but I would like to draw attention to three or four major changes or additions.

First of all, in Part 4, which is the Mining Companies Part, representations were made to us, first of all by a well-known Ottawa lawyer, and later by several other lawyers familiar with this particular type of company work. As a result of those representations, we have seen fit to recommend that no longer is it necessary to include in the name of the mining company the word, "No Personal Liability," but proper amendment to section 121 is recommended which would remove that requirement, which will make it necessary to indicate on share certificates when share certificates are due for shares issued under that part, that they are either subject to call or not subject to call.

With regard to Part 5, the Co-operative Corporations Part, we had representations further from competent representatives of the co-operatives, and we are recommending that subsection 3 of section 124 be amended by adding certain words which will restrict the use more than, even at present, of the word, "Co-operative" in business ventures. The words we are suggesting will make this subsection read, if it is enacted:

No person not being a corporation to which this Part applies, —that is the co-operative part—

shall use in Ontario a name that includes the word "co-operative" or any abbreviation or derivation thereof, whether or not the word, abbreviation or derivation is used in, or in conjunction with the name.

We are also adding a further section to that amendment and a further section to that Part which will permit, were by-laws are passed by a co-operative, for up to $1.00 a year per member to be deducted from patronage returns for use in educational work.

With regard to Part 6, which is the insurance Part, we repeat again in our report that we think with insurance experts the wording of this Part could be considerably improved.

However, on the representations of the Superintendent of Insurance, we are recommending in the meantime certain additions, the effect of which are to give to Farm Mutuals somewhat broader powers of insurance to go beyond just agricultural property of a non-hazardous nature to include new suburban dwellings of a non-hazardous nature, and also to enable that type of Farm Mutual—and I think there are some 66 of them in operation in the province—to insure for weather insurance, providing they re-insure if the risk involves more than $100, in any case, with a recognized weather insurance company.

Likewise in the same Part we are giving what I may call the Millers Insurance Companies similar powers except in that case we are not asking them to re-insure if they cover weather insurance.

Section 308 of the general Part, which is an improved new section, a section which gives the power and the right to a representative minority group to present through the channels of the company itself, or its secretariat, a resolution for presentation at a meeting of shareholders and an explanation up to 1,000 words of a point which they wish to be brought before the shareholders at a meeting.

That section, as it appears in the Statute of 1953, is still not as complete and clear as it might be, and we are re-drafting certain Parts of it to clarify it. We are also adding, as a result of representations, two subsections which deal with a point which I think is rather important, and in this we are following the English practice again.

In the case of a statement being presented by a group of shareholders to be publicized in the manner that a company would send out its own notices, there might be libellous matter contained in that material, and we have allowed for presentation to the court for a decision if the management feels that course is necessary.

We have also recommended that, in any event, if notice of that sort is sent out at the request of a requisitioning group, there should be no liability for libellous statements on the part of anybody sending out the notice as a result of the requisition.

Then we have an addition to section 322, which is really a new idea and was submitted on behalf of companies, or individuals who are interested in companies of foreign origin, particularly companies in the States, which might be said to be bordering states on the Iron Curtain, for example, to enable a company normally operating under the laws of Belgium, Luxembourg or Switzerland, or others of that sort, to change its allegiance—perhaps that is one way of putting it—to an Ontario company, by means of a mutual arrangement beforehand between that state and our own. For anyone who might be interested, the discussion appears in the printed proceedings on pages 3171 and following.

What we are recommending is a section pretty well in the form recommended to us, with a slight improvement in the language, the effect of which will be:

That in the discretion of the Provincial Secretary—where there is a reciprocal arrangement ahead of time with the state concerned—in an emergency, certain steps may be taken by such corporations so that they can operate from the Province of Ontario and not be interrupted by pending or actual invasion that might come overnight in the area in which they reside.

Mr. Speaker, I might say that this committee and myself as chairman—perhaps more than the others, because I had the honour of occupying that position—have received a number of congratulatory messages with respect to the work done by this committee. Of course there has been some criticism, but I am particularly pleased with a letter I received from a veteran former parliamentarian, Mr. Charles Parent, Q.C., of the City of Quebec, who for 18 years sat in the Federal House. You can guess what stripe of politics he has when he was able to sit continuously for 18 years in Ottawa. His letter reads as follows:

May I point out that I was 18 years a member of Parliament, and that I have tried for over 10 years to have our Dominion Companies' Act revised to protect the small shareholder in giving him more information through a consolidated report or separate reports on each subsidiary, but I never got more than a conference with the provinces in the autumn of 1952.

I am, therefore, in a position to realize and gauge the great work that you have done and wish to express to you my congratulations.

I might say with respect to minority shareholders; in this Act, as enacted last year, and with these amendments if they take place, there are at least six main points where minority shareholders receive more protection than they did in the past. First of all, the cumulative-voting provisions, if desired, can be obtained; secondly, section 308 provides that information can be given to shareholders through the channels of the company; thirdly, the aggrieved shareholders section, section 340; fourthly, the right of shareholders of a private company to be bought out if the sale of the assets of the company is consummated and they are diversified; and the financial sections which, of course, are very important; and the director sections which also are very important and indicate a number of changes.

I think, Mr. Speaker, in saying that, I am just repeating what the hon. Prime Minister of this province has said on many occasions, that this government is a Progressive Conservative Government, a government of the people.

I will conclude my comments in a moment. I may digress for a moment, and I hope you will not call me to order because I will only be a moment or two, Mr. Speaker.

Last Friday, we had a discussion in the House in regard to Hansard. I see the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is in his seat. I was going to say it all happened because of that turophilo opposite who represents the riding of St. Andrew in this House.

MR. SALSBERG: Was that parliamentary or not? I do not know.

MR. ROBERTS: Before I get through, you can judge. Hansard, tired of the continual flow that comes from that source, missed a ripple or so, and what happened? The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) then came up with what might be termed a "clobber" of the reporter concerned, which, if there had not been a "flub" might have brought about a very serious situation. I am sure that the reporter concerned would have wished at the time that he was either in Bizelon or perhaps even farther away in Serendepity or some other place. At any rate, I will look with interest tomorrow morning on the production of my copy of Hansard to see how they get along with that.

The hon. member for Middlesex North (Mr. Patrick) in a whisper, asked me to explain a little more the word, "turophilo," and the hon. member opposite suggested I should, and if Mr. Speaker thinks it is necessary to rule on it, I would say there are several versions of that word.

MR. SALSBERG: What dictionary did you get it from?

MR. ROBERTS: There are two new dictionaries in existence. The hon. member will find it in either or both of them. One of the versions is that it is a word derived from two words, "taurus" and "philo," and if he wishes free translation, it is a "lover of bull."

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): Before the Orders of the day are called, may I refer to an article, an editorial appearing in the Toronto Daily Star on Saturday, February 20th, entitled, "Of All Things, Mr. Frost!" Then it says:

No government of this province ever before had the courage or the hardihood to try putting a crimp in telling tales out of school.

That refers to The Telephone Bill. I think it should be put right by saying it is with reference to conversations over the telephone. This bill still is law. It is on the Statute Books now and in fact you will find this clause became law in 1917, and the one with reference to obscene language, in 1915.

As far as the present Act is concerned there is no intention that the authority should do the policing, but rather the clause is a guidance to what the rights of private and/or public telephone companies are in case of abuse of the telephone system, or better still, it would support any private or public telephone company which might wish to adopt a code of ethics as to what use the telephones should be put.

It will therefore be the duty of a company or private individual to take action if any action is desired.

Returning to the statement that "no government of this province ever before had the courage or hardihood to try putting a crimp on telling tales out of school," I would say that has been on the Statutes for 37 years, and the other one has been on the Statutes for 39 years.

The editorial goes on to say:

"The boys at Queen's Park are certainly covering a lot of territory."

It is very difficult for me to ascertain what territory, as this was covered 37 or 39 years ago.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): As a matter of personal privilege this editorial refers to, "of all things, Mr. Frost!"

The purpose of the legislation before the House, as I understand it, is to modernize the Statutes, place them under one Statute under a new Authority. I imagine the great majority of provisions in the new bill are those which were in the old bill. I think that is mentioned in the Statute itself. It says it refers to the Acts of years ago.

I would not want to suggest to the committee what they do; that is for the committee to decide. But when the bill comes back to the House, if there are things we do not like in it, we can alter them.

As I said on a previous occasion, I am a rural telephone subscriber. I have good neighbours and find that everything is satisfactory. I did not know about these Acts of 1915 and 1917, but the points which are raised, to which reference is made, have been the laws of the province for very many years and they seem to be satisfactory. If one goes by what one hears, the views of the people seem to be that these things are quite satisfactory.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I take it the hon. Prime Minister does not want the innocent pastime interfered with.

HON. MR. FROST: I will say that I will leave things as they are today.

MR. SALSBERG: It is an humorous editorial. The hon. Prime Minister has lost his sense of humour.

MR. ELLIS P. MORNINGSTAR (Welland): Mr. Speaker, may I have your permission to ask a question? We have a large number of unemployed in the Welland area. I wish to know what the Government of Canada has indicated; if the gas pipe line from Alberta to Ontario has been approved, and whether the Government of Canada will be in a position to place the order for the pipe in Welland; firstly, because of the unemployment situation, it would seem that priority should be given to an area with unemployment; secondly, the Paige Hersey Tube Company of Welland is the only firm who can manufacture this pipe in Canada.

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I am not in a position to say what might be in the mind of the Federal Government as to the letting of contracts for a pipe line, when the route of that pipe line has been decided, but I think I can say at the present time that the Federal Government has passed legislation providing for the incorporation of the Trans-Canada Gas Line Company for the purpose of building a pipe line across Canada, at least from Alberta to Quebec, through Ontario.

That company, when it begins to function, which I understand it is just about ready to do, will, of course, no doubt, be letting contracts, but to whom they let the contracts is something we in this government have no control over. I do not know whether the Federal Government will exercise any control over that at all.

My understanding is that the federal policy is to arrange for the building of this pipe line by a company which has been incorporated, and the company will raise, presumably, the necessary capital to carry out that project.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask a question of the government, primarily, I believe of the Prime Minister, on a matter of great urgency and importance. My question is this: In view of the fact that the building of an all-Canada seaway has long been recognized as a matter of great national need, and in view of the fact that this Province of Ontario is more than any other part of Canada interested and, therefore, vitally concerned with the whole question of the seaway; and in view of the fact that the people of Ontario and Canada have been led to believe that the seaway will be an all-Canadian effort, even if built in partnership with the United States, and that further, in view of the fact that the Prime Minister stated only a couple of weeks ago that he wants our American friends to get out of the way and let us proceed with the construction of the seaway—a statement, by the way, which I think was applauded on all sides and in all parts of the country—in view of all these things, the newspapers, and I think the Globe and Mail notified us first on Friday that there seems to be an undisclosed understanding or agreement between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States that the construction of the seaway would be of a sort that would deprive it of the all-Canadian aspect. Furthermore, in view of the evidence given before an American Congressional Committee by American military authorities that the seaway should be proceeded with on a basis of building locks in the United States—three locks—and that they should retain full control over these three locks, even to the point of determining unilateral charges and rates on ships passing those locks; and in view of the fact that those military authorities appearing before the committee stated that the construction of the seaway is in the same category as the construction of the Panama Canal, implying very much a sort of unilateral action which would lead to the surrender of this country's rights and controls of the St. Lawrence Seaway and allow it to become an American lake or an American canal, does not the government think we should not lose one minute in coming to grips with this problem during this session so as to make abundantly clear to Ottawa and to Washington that so far as Ontario and this government is concerned, it will not stand idly by and allow the robbing of the people of this province and of this country of their rights to construct an all-Canadian seaway over which they should exercise control and authority and utilize it for the advantage of Canada for all the years that lie ahead of us?

Mr. Speaker, you will recognize that this is a long question and it is one that leaves one breathless. But I know from experience that unless I continuously make it sound like a question I may be stopped. Now that I have asked it, I can possibly have a breather and hope the Prime Minister will give as broad and as lengthy a reply as he thinks necessary and for myself I think we should devote a long and fruitful discussion to this issue.

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. member is quite right. I think the question is very long and involved, and if the Prime Minister is able to give an answer to all that, I think it will be more than satisfactory, not only to the Prime Minister but to everyone.

HON. MR. FROST: I will do my best to answer that several-pronged question that the member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has propounded.

I think at the outset I can say this, and I think I can say it kindly, if I can put it that way. The people of Ontario, for whom I think I can speak, are satisfied Canada can do this job herself and they are anxious that as Canadians we do the job ourselves. We have not asked for participation on the part of anybody else, and I think that arises from the fact that this question has been bandied around now for some 30 or 40 years. We have always been brought up to the point where we can get ahead with this matter that is so essential to our country, and then something happens.

This government and the government at Ottawa are in complete agreement. We are prepared to do the job ourselves. I think this makes the matter perfectly plain. We have the means, and our people are quite willing to assume the obligation and go ahead.

As far as Ontario is concerned, our great task is in relation to the development of power on the international section. The part of the Government of Canada would be in relation to the building of the canal on the Canadian side of the river. That is what we would all like, I am sure.

On the other hand we have to face facts as they are. The St. Lawrence River is in fact an international river, an international waterway for a good many miles. In order to get ahead, if Canada does the job herself, you have to have United States participation to this extent. The United States has named an Authority, and that Authority has to be prepared to go ahead. The Authority so named is the Power Authority in the State of New York and they are as anxious as we are to go ahead. Now there has been certain litigation pending in the United States which will shortly be cleared away. I can only say what hon. Mr. Chevrier, the Minister of Transport, said in this city a few days ago. Either there is a type of participation by the United States or there is an actual participation in the building of the canal and the waterway in the international section. One can imagine the United States would not want, as a government, to act in connection with the building of the international section unless there was an agreement on the part of the Government of Canada and other authorities to carry on the building through the part of the river which is purely within Canada. That is the situation.

I think Canada's position has been this: We have never said to the United States, "You cannot come in." It would be ridiculous to say that. Of course they can come in. The river is, in part, their river. All we have said is this: "If you do not want to come in, then do not get in our way, and let us go ahead and do it."

As regards the connection between the Government of Canada and the Government of the United States, that is purely a matter for the Federal Government. We do not negotiate directly with authorities in the United States other than with what has been named as our opposite number, namely, the State of New York. It is not the function of this government to discuss matters with the United States Government. That is for the Federal Government and the Department of External Affairs.

I cannot add anything more to what I have said. If the United States desires to act in all of these matters, it would appear to me that the river is a boundary river; there are rights the United States has which we certainly must recognize, and I think, Mr. Speaker, that the negotiations, if the United States indicates its desire to come in to these negotiations, must be conducted by the Federal Government of Canada and the Government of the United States.

Our position, under our agreement with the Federal Government, which we signed, I believe, in December 1951, relates solely and wholly to the possession or development of power by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and that forms a very vital part of this whole problem. I do not think there is anything further I can say on this matter.

MR. SALSBERG: Can I follow up with another question? I fully appreciate the responsibility of the Federal Government, but does not the Prime Minister agree that if his friends are strongly in favour of an all-Canadian seaway, and since such a seaway is separate and apart from our arrangements for joint Hydro developments with the State of New York, does not he think that this House should make it clear to Ottawa that we have strong wishes and strong opinions on this question instead of merely trailing behind what the Globe and Mail calls, correctly I think, "all-Canadian seaway barter"? I think this House should be opposed to the bartering of the all-Canadian seaway, and I think we should come out with some resolution which would be unanimous in this House.

HON. MR. FROST: I can only point out that there is an international section of the river. On that international section of the river, the Hydro-Electric Power Commission and the New York State Authority are designated at the present time by their respective governments to look after power.

It is impossible for us to tell the United States that they cannot participate in something which relates to that part of the river in which they have joint ownership with us. It is a matter for the Federal Government and the Government in Washington.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. WELLAND S. GEMMELL (Minister of Lands and Forests): I beg leave to table a White Paper on suggestions for the programme of Renewable Resources Developments of the province, setting out the long-term aims and objectives for this department. I may say this report is being referred to the Committee of Lands and Forests of this Legislature.

HON. MR. FROST: Before my hon. friend speaks on the matter, which he has tabled, I would like to table an answer to question number 8.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: May I, Mr. Speaker, with your indulgence take this opportunity of first of all expressing my gratitude to the members of the Legislature who were so generous to me during my recent period of illness. I want to assure them I have returned to the House in good health and I will try to give to my important duties very vigorous and active attention. I say that with the thought in mind that one of my hon. friends, representing a riding situated I would say beyond the Mason and Dixon line, made reference to my health, and he felt that more vigorous direction should be given to the department and that I should be retired to a function of less importance. I want to assure the hon. member, and I am not critical of him for making this comment that I now feel perfectly fit. May I take the opportunity, because this is the first time I have spoken this year, to congratulate the new member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) who moved very ably the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and thank him for the very kind comments he made on that occasion about myself; also to my good friend the hon. member for Rainy River who similarly expressed these feelings. May I also refer to the remarks of the Leader of our Party (Hon. Mr. Frost) and to others for their welcome help when I was inactive, and who were so kind as to wish me well during that period.

In presenting this White Paper to the House, Mr. Speaker, I feel signally honoured, because this is the first time, I believe, that a White Paper has ever been tabled in this Legislature.

May I, Mr. Speaker, refer to it as a blueprint for the future. It covers in many fields the widespread responsibilities of the Department of Lands and Forests which administers our renewable resources. I would not, in tabling this report, wish this House for one moment to think that during the course of the management of this department, particularly under my regime and that of my predecessor in this government, that everything possible has not been done to give to the people of the Province of Ontario the best possible management which could be given. I want to say on this occasion that we are ably supported—very ably supported—by many people, officials of the Department of Lands and Forests, a Deputy-Minister who has devoted his life to these things, and by many division chiefs whose whole history of endeavour in this province has been to ensure that the people of Ontario should have the very best that is possible in the various fields of endeavour with which they are associated.

I must express my appreciation of the very able and kindly manner in which they have supported me as Minister of the Department, and I cannot help but thank them.

Mr. Speaker, I have a soft spot in my heart occasionally for the hon. member from St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), not because of the particular Party which he represents, but rather because of the name of the riding he represents—that good old name St. Andrew. That name is associated with my ancestors down through the centuries. I want to assure him that our department, in one of its great divisions, that of surveying and engineering, is continuously carrying out investigations into the water resources of this province, and in that report much information of great value to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario and other power producers of this province will be made available, to ensure that all potential power sites in this province are available to supply our ever-growing needs. I would not like members of this House to feel for one moment that we were only now beginning to approach this problem and suggest that a greater programme be encouraged to ensure the adequate management of our resources. I want to make special reference to the beginning of this programme, the foundation which culminated in, and to a large extent produced the report I am tabling today. While the former Minister, the Hon. Mr. Scott, is not here with us—I see him sitting in the gallery—I would like to point out that it was his responsibility to make the decision to carry out the Forest Inventory which began in 1946 and to which we are going to make considerable reference today. The suggestion I am going to make to you is that the recommendations contained in this White Paper are to a large extent directly attributable to the information gathered during the inventory, and for the benefit of hon. members may I say that in 1946 this government made the decision to try in some way adequately to assess the timber as well as other renewable natural resources of this province.

Since that time we have also made a decision to carry on an aerial survey of Patricia, an area, I believe, of approximately 15 or 20 million acres.

We are also surveying parts of the south of the province. I want to remind hon. members that these aerial photographs which form a major part of this inventory, serve many other users besides technicians of the Department of Lands and Forests.

We supply every other department of this government with these photographs and that is of great help in the programmes they have to carry out. You may have noticed in the metropolitan press the other day, Mr. Speaker, where the City of Toronto carried out an aerial survey in an effort to solve the traffic problems in the metropolitan area. So I say to you that this aerial photography programme of ours carries with it a great deal of usefulness beyond the supplying of information on the timber resources of this province.

I would like to impress again upon the hon. members the importance of our lumber and pulp and paper industries and the great part they play in the economy of Canada, and what they mean to the prosperity of our people, not only in Ontario, but in many other provinces.

I might say the Federal Government recognized this some years ago when they passed an Act making it possible to contribute from the Federal Treasury to the cost of some of the work I have mentioned. Unfortunately Ontario's first five years of that work will not be included in such grants, but we shall benefit in subsequent years. So far the Federal Government has only seen fit to make contributions in regard to the inventory of timber and to aid us in the reforestation of unalienated Crown lands.

Because of the importance to us of such grants, we hope the Federal Government will see fit to increase its forestry grants and so help our province to carry out this great programme of forest management.

Now, before going on to another subject, I would like to say that our accessible forests cover an area of 172,000 square miles and that half of this land is held under lease by the large operators of the great mills at Sault Ste. Marie, Espanola, Sturgeon Falls, the Lakehead, Kenora, Dryden, Kapuskasing, Iroquois Falls, and many others. Every company which holds land under these agreements greater than 50 square miles, has been required to supply to our department, working plans from their inventories, which covered age classes, species, and other information. These plans have been placed before our department and from these will be worked an operational policy to ensure the proper cutting which good forestry management requires.

I may say, too, that it is to its credit that industry has been very co-operative. In fact the whole programme has been one of mutual respect and mutual success.

The inventory has now been completed, and we are able to table before the hon. members of this House, this document, to give them some idea of what this Legislature and this government should do to ensure our people a policy which will guarantee, in perpetuity, the economic operation of our forest resources. Research and science no doubt will provide improved silvicultural and other methods, through which we may expand that programme far beyond what we are now able to foresee.

At this time, I think no one can question the future of this industry. We must realize that our greatest market for this production is our neighbour to the south. That great nation is growing at the rate of 5,000,000 people annually—in other words, the United States population is increasing annually to an extent equal to the present population of Ontario. We must also realize that the use of wood fibre is entering into many new fields of application. I say the future of this industry is assured, thanks to the management features we are bringing into force.

May I say that the saw-milling industry in this province began away back in the 1870's. I believe in the years following Confederation, we produced in this province, 177 million board feet of pine timber. I might say that red pine and white pine timber are the basis for the supplying of material to the saw-mill industry.

By 1908, we had reached the peak, with well over 800 million board feet—very close to one billion—annually.

Since that time, it has tended to decline, until today, we are getting in this province about 150 million board feet.

According to figures with which I have been supplied it would appear that in a period of from 17 to 20 years, at the present rate of exploitation, our stands of white and red pine will be extinct.

I want you to remember, Mr. Acting Speaker, that I am saying that the red and white pine are the bases of the saw-milling industry in this country.

When we turn to the pulp and paper industry, we find that our vast spruce forests have given Ontario much of its power and strength as a paper producer.

There are other species used, but I think no one will argue but that this specie which produces the high quality of Ontario newsprint is what makes Ontario strong in this field.

The inventories just completed indicate to us and our department that what happened to our white and red pine saw-milling industry can well be repeated with pulp and paper mills.

They are now experimenting with the use of other species but still spruce is the predominant wood upon which depends our success in the future.

So it is our important duty now to examine this condition immediately, and pass legislation which will ensure a continued supply of spruce species for the industry we now have, and, as I say, if research and silviculture give us better methods and better production, we can carry on and expand this industry to meet the whole requirements of the market and maintain Ontario's outstanding quality production.

I am trying to draw a parallel between what happened to the saw-milling industry in this province, and what could possibly happen if we do not take measures now regarding our spruce forests and their continued availability.

Legislation will be introduced at this session of the Legislature which will, in some measure, take care of this situation.

When you look over this inventory of our forest resources, you will find there is not a great deal of difference between the volume of soft woods now standing and that of hard woods. Unfortunately most of our hard woods are not in great enough demand. Research will probably help establish a better balance here.

So I say it is the task of the Legislature, and subsequently in the discussions in the Committee on Lands and Forests, to go thoroughly into this matter, and I do hope that adequate time will be given to discussing these matters thoroughly, and that we shall be able to implement, as a result of a study of this White Paper, methods which will ensure for future generations, an adequate supply of our natural resources. We should inaugurate now, a 10-year programme, the result of which will ensure in years to come a constant supply of renewable resources to meet all needs.

It takes a long time to grow a merchantable tree to meet the needs of our woods-using industries and you will find in reviewing this report, for instance—that the average for a rotation crop in spruce is about 85 years. Putting that into simple language, may I say in regard to the 85-year cycle, it means that when an area is cut over today, it will probably be 85 years, even with good silviculture and good conditions to reproduce the same species of merchantable spruce.

That same situation will not pertain to the saw-milling industry.

If you want to produce saw logs, you will have to provide for a longer period than 85 years in the rotation of crops.

This report will point out to the hon. members of the Legislature the difficulties respecting the saw-milling industry.

And not only have we the timber industry to consider, but when the St. Lawrence Seaway is constructed in this country, a great amount of piling and timber will be required in the construction of that great venture. And not only will the St. Lawrence Seaway demand saw-mill types of timber, but we will also have to be able to supply timber within a competitive price range.

So I think you will agree with me when I say that a decision has to be made by this government and this Legislature, that the saw-milling industry, as far as we are able to assess from this report, could very well amount to very little from 17 to 20 years from now.

We must take measures now to ensure that does not happen. This report will point out to you there are saw-logs on the pulp and paper concessions of this country, about which there has been considerable argument. And there is saw timber on the unalienated land still in the hands of the Crown and not under licence, which we feel certain 15 or 20 years from now can help maintain the present production of saw timber at its present rate.

It is true a mill may have to cut down the size of its production in certain areas; it may have to switch to various other species; it may have to learn the "know how" for the use of poplar which we refer to as "weak specie," although I have seen it cut, and a good job done in many mills of this province.

These are some of the things which face our department. Negotiations are continually going on in an effort to assure this, and I think I can say to the hon. members of this Legislature this afternoon that the Department of Lands and Forests of Ontario is prepared to do things that will ensure the survival of the saw-milling industry in this province.

We are not concerned about the next 15 or 20 years. What we are concerned about is the next 30 or 40 or 50 years, and possibly 100 years from now, and the responsibility rests upon the shoulders of each one of us here to stand behind this programme.

I made some reference earlier to the fact that in this report we had spared nothing, as far as I am aware, in an endeavour to get the best advice and the utmost support in the preparation of this report. Mr. Acting Speaker, we used the abilities of every man in the Department of Lands and Forests, those men whom I consider to have no peers in this country, at least in connection with forestry matters.

They prepared for us, on behalf of their several divisions, a programme which they felt would meet the needs at the moment.

After the assembling of these facts by our departmental officers, this information was submitted to the Advisory Board, and from them to the Minister of Lands and Forests.

For the benefit of those who do not know the composition of the Advisory Board, may I say that we have, sitting as chairman, the Dean of the Faculty of Forestry of the University of Toronto, Dean Sisam. Not only does he represent the Faculty of Forestry, but he represents education in general. We also have sitting on that board representatives of the mining industry, banking, labour, construction, pulp and paper, the saw-milling industry, and railways, which are great users of these materials, as well as others.

This report was submitted to them for their consideration and approval.

I might say in passing that Dean Sisam and Major-General Kennedy—who is the author of the report by the Royal Commission in 1947 in connection with forestry—and Mr. MacDougall, the Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, spent a great deal of time studying the original report, they edited this report, and it is now being presented to you as a report which has received the benefit of all the advice we have been able to assemble, in a sincere endeavour to make this report worthy of this government, and for presentation to our people, and to enable the people to know where we hope to go in the future.

I should not forget to mention that the hon. Prime Minister and myself referred this matter, in regard to the aspects of economics, to the Provincial Economist, Mr. George Gathercole, in regard to certain information we wanted as all these industries could contribute to the various phases of the welfare of our people, and under his direction, a very exhaustive report was prepared by Mr. Goundrey, and it appears in the form of an appendix, and will be found in the back of the report.

All these various methods were used in ensuring that this report would be of some benefit to our legislators when discussing this very important issue, and I hope that suggestions can be offered which will tend to ensure the future of this great industry.

I hope that every hon. member, and particularly those sitting on the Committee on Lands and Forests, will take the time to read this as thoroughly as possible, and I want to assure you when the Committee meets we shall try to have available the staff of the Department of Lands and Forests, representing all the divisions, and including the Deputy Minister. We shall have Major-General Kennedy here, in order that he may give the members the benefit of his advice and counsel, and explain perhaps some of the things appearing in the very excellent report they prepared in 1947. We also hope to have present Dean Sisam, who is, as I have said, Dean of the Faculty of Forestry of the University of Toronto.

I might say, in passing, that Dean Sisam prepared a special report for our department in connection with our staff at the forestry school at Dorset, for the benefit of our organization. It was to enable use to plan in the future for the betterment of the training of the staff, which goes to make up this great organization.

Major-General Kennedy has, on various occasions, made some extensive examinations into economic conditions on the west coast of Canada, which may seriously affect our industry. His experience has enabled us to get in our department knowledge as to the proper methods to apply to the Act which we now have, and subsequent legislation, to keep this industry healthy, in the best interests of our people. I want to assure you that, as far as I am concerned, I am more concerned about the health of this industry, and the effect it will have on the lunch pails and the homes of the people in our great North Country, from which I come, than I am in any other factor. I shall not leave the department without first of all ensuring that development, and I shall accept advice at any time, and shall apply it in every possible way I can, in order that I may secure the best assurances for the future.

The protection of existing forests is of extreme importance. As a matter of fact, Mr. Acting Speaker, I think I can say that forest protection in this province cannot be ignored, and before we start regeneration and reforestation schemes, and nurseries, we have to be sure that what we already have is taken care of as near to 100 per cent. as possible, so that it will not be jeopardized either by forest fires or by damage from insects and diseases.

The forest-fire protection service of this province is second to none on the American continent.

Connected with this great branch is research in connection with diseases and insects. In passing, may I make reference to the insect laboratory at Sault Ste. Marie which is carried on in conjunction and co-operation with the federal department. We constructed the laboratory, and the Federal Government staff it and carry on the work.

Our forest protection service includes all the different species of destructive agencies which exist in our forests.

May I say that we have completed the Research Pathological Station at Maple. I would like some day during this session to have the hon. members go up and see that for themselves, and I will be glad to arrange for such a trip at any time. This is something which is being carried out by agreement with the Federal Government, in a large building we constructed just north of this city. There is carried on the pathological research in connection with our department, and also research is being conducted in conjunction with the Biological Division of the University of Toronto. I feel sure that every hon. member of this House would find a visit to that institution very interesting, as it would enable him to see what is going on.

Not only do we carry on research in connection with insects and destructive matters concerned with wood fibre, but we carry on research into the equipment we use in the suppression of forest fires.

As a matter of fact, the Department of Lands and Forests can take a great deal of the credit for the construction of the Beaver aircraft, which operated so well that subsequently large numbers were sold to the United States Government for use in Korea and other theatres of operation, as it was much better than any aircraft produced in the United States for this particular purpose. As I say, the Department of Lands and Forests can take much of the credit for the construction of that very versatile aircraft.

In connection with the Division of Fish and Wildlife I do not think there is anyone who is not conscious of its importance, and also of what it means to many of our people; not only in regard to the tourist industry, but because of the recreation facilities it provides for this great industrial province in which we are now living.

It is only in recent years that hunting and fishing pressure has become so great that we have to realize the need for measures of protection as well as regeneration to ensure good sport to as many people as possible.

One thing this report will bring to your attention, Mr. Acting Speaker, and to the attention of the hon. members of this House, will be the importance, first of all, of the assessment of all the resources in connection with fish and wild life in this province. For instance, I think those who are familiar with our trap-line management programme throughout the north will realize the great work this division has done in that connection so far.

This has got to go much further, but it is significant to note that in the past years Ontario produced as a result of this programme more fur than any other province in the Dominion of Canada. We have added numerous biologists to our staff as readily as they are available so that we can properly assess the results of the fish planting and hatcheries transplantation that is being done in this province. This is being done in a manner in which we are getting the best for our dollars.

To illustrate the fishing pressures that have developed upon this great resource which I have just mentioned—and I see the former hon. Minister of Fishing and Game has left his seat: sometimes he contradicts me on some of these issues and I am glad he has left so that I will be free to say what I like here—the non-resident angling licences issued in this province in 1940 amounted to 66,226.

In 1953, that is 13 years later, this number had risen to 300,500. The resident hunting licences during a similar period rose from 97,218 to, in 1953, a demand of 274,000. Resident deer licences jumped from 27,000 to 98,000 over the same period.

It is important to ensure to the tourist industry of this province and to our great and growing population adequate supplies of fish and game to make Ontario a happier place in which to live; and not only that, but to maintain the livelihood of many of the people with whom I have been associated all my life. The goal of fisheries and wild-life management should be that of sustained yield, as is the case with forestry.

I have made reference particularly to timber management and to fish and wild life because, as I said when I began, I did not intend to deal with everything in all the various phases of this report, except to mention specifically and in some certain detail these two divisions which are of such great importance.

Up to this time, of course, reforestation has been largely confined to Southern Ontario. Today we have under contract with the counties of this province 80,000 odd acres, by agreement in which we participate 50-50. But the management of these forests is carried out entirely by the Department of Lands and Forests. Then there are township agreements and various other agreements with different municipalities which add greatly to this. From that great experience has come the pattern for the future of reforestation in Southern Ontario.

To show one how easy it is to be mistaken and the nature of the foresight which one must use in carrying out a programme in connection with the department—because as I say you are looking ahead always 50 years and in some cases a century—there is the reforestation programme for instance, at St. Williams. I am happy on this occasion to be able to mention this, and I do not know whether he is in the gallery or not, but retired as of last year is a great and grand old gentleman whose contributions in that field are without question of great importance to us all and a great credit to him. I refer to Mr. Ed. Zavitz, whom many of you have known, and who recommended to the government of that day the reforestation of the St. Williams area, which now covers 4,000 acres.

I had a chat with him just before I came here today. He is now a gentleman of 76 or 77 years of age, whose vigour and enthusiasm are neither more nor less now than they were, I suppose, when he was in his twenties. In our conversation he referred to something that happened in 1908 when he visited Australia in connection with the reforestation programme of the British Commonwealth of Nations. He is one of those to whom they refer when they say "Old soldiers never die." This gentleman is thoroughly familiar with everything that has happened in this field and I want to assure hon. members of the House that he will continue to contribute to the advice of the reforestation division of this province. In referring to some of the county forests, he mentioned to me today that they are rapidly arriving at a position where they can carry themselves financially with the thinnings. I believe they ship from the Midhurst Forestry and Nursery, and maybe one other, at least 1,500 cords of pulpwood, of which they made a shipment to the KVP Company at Espanola. This is a typical example.

To illustrate how this gentleman has worked out a pattern, he said to me: "You do not need to spend billions to do this, Mr. Gemmell, but you need to use the experience and the wisdom of those who have gone down through the years in working out the programmes which are now showing us what we should do in the future."

The companies of this province cutting on the great concession areas are very, very much alive to the importance of regeneration. I had occasion in the past year to visit many of their operations and I want to assure hon. members that they are spending as much I believe as their budgets can stand economically to carry out these programmes and to find what is the best method of doing this. I visited an operation where they are using 27 per cent. of the poplar, a weak species, in the process of their making pulp and craft paper. This same operation 5 years ago used old methods for harvesting the tree crop, which included the horse and sleigh method. Today on that same operation work goes on 12 months of the year, thanks to mechanical methods. In this process the soil is scarified and thus regeneration is helped. In the process of being loaded pulpwood is dragged through the bush a distance of at least 700 or 800 feet in some cases, but in all that process the land over which the complete cut has been made is scarified, the mineral soil underneath is worked out and regeneration takes place. I was able to stand one day in one of those operations and see the difference between where the land was not disturbed after cutting and where the land was disturbed with the cutting, and to see the regeneration of jack pine and spruce without reforestation and alongside of it another great area cut 5 years before where the soil had not been disturbed and which was growing up entirely in poplar.

That is only one example, but these companies who are greatly interested in the reproduction of the crops which they cut are doing a grand job to assure that we find out the best silvicultural methods to ensure perpetual yield.

I think many hon. members will remember the trip the Legislature made to Northern Ontario. I am referring specifically to a visit to Kapuskasing where the great Spruce Falls Paper Mill is operating, they took us on that trip to a nursery outside the town of Kapuskasing providing a volume of trees to replant some cut-over section on their limits. I refer specifically to the spruce ridges which were not returning to growth. This is but another example of what industry is doing to help improve our forests and the stands they are operating.

Our research division, our reforestation division and forest protection division along with the companies in this province to the best of my knowledge are using everything they can possibly devise to assure the application of the best silvicultural methods for the Province of Ontario.

Some people may say: "Why do you not go to Sweden and get the methods they use there? And why don't you go down to New Brunswick and see them spraying the budworms and so forth?" However, Mr. Speaker, every division of this country is different, every division of the world in silvicultural methods is different and the methods that apply in Sweden and the Scandinavian countries—and their methods are of the best—do not in most cases apply to this great Province of Ontario, nor do the methods of the west coast or the east coast apply. First of all on the west coast and on the east coast you have climatic conditions, including a heavy precipitation which provide for a more rapid growth of trees. Then you have different species of trees to deal with as well. Now while some of their methods may help, most of them are not applicable to the Province of Ontario. Neither are the methods that we use in Southern Ontario for reforestation applicable to growth in most sections to the north, where temperature and rainfall are not the same. Nevertheless, I want to assure hon. members we have been sending men to the different projects both on the east coast and on the west coast and have had men examine programmes in the eastern United States which were being carried out last year in connection with insect and disease control. Our men are completely alive to the best means and methods which will adequately meet some of the situations which I have outlined to you, sir.

I have dealt probably at some length with the subject and I do not want to tire the hon. members of the Legislature with this programme, but I have tried in as brief a manner as I could to outline the importance of the work and also to give them some assurance that this government and this Department of Lands and Forests are completely alive to the needs of this province.

I want to assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that I am not being entirely critical about the period when he was a member of the government of this province. I am thinking of the hungry thirties.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Very charitable of my hon. friend (Mr. Gemmell).

MR. GEMMELL: I am going to make some reference to that period for this reason. The forestry programme of this province was retarded, first of all, in my opinion, by the depression of the thirties. During that period economic conditions made it impossible financially and otherwise to carry out programmes which would have probably today ensured us a greater stand of timber than we now have. Then after the hungry thirties, we came into a war period when the processes and the demands of the industry for war purposes were tremendous and as a result of that, certain programmes which we today would call necessary had to go overboard to meet the needs of a nation at war.

Therefore beginning with 1946 this government inaugurated a programme the beneficial effect of which will be felt in the days ahead—and we have not missed much in the years that have gone by since 1946. We intend to ensure for our people an adequate supply of wood for the great mills which toughen our economic sinews and fill the lunch pails in the towns of our North Country.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, in the discussions which take place in connection with this White Paper which I have the privilege to present today, that every member of that committee will give it his utmost attention and I am sure that we shall bring to it men of great experience to answer your questions and to discuss the various problems with you.

There will be no hampering of discussion in connection with the programme which this government intends to recommend to this Legislature in the days ahead and I want to assure every hon. member, whether on the government side of the House or otherwise, that that is my objective and the objective of the leader and the hon. members of the treasury benches.

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, with your indulgence I should like to make some comment from this side of the House about the remarks just concluded by the hon. Minister for Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell). I want to assure the hon. Minister that there was no unkind thought in my mind last week when I made some comment about his health, because as he knows I have commented to him about it personally from time to time over the last year. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Gemmell) is well known to us in the Opposition and well respected, and I am certainly heartened that he has been able to stand and display, by his speech today, that he is able to continue with the rigours and demands of his job, because he certainly did make an extended outline of the White Paper he has presented to the House.

One thing that has been concerning us, and I am not going to burden the House with much discussion this afternoon until we have seen the White Paper, one thing which has been concerning the Opposition and concerning many people in the North Country is the fact that the lines of unemployed are gradually increasing. I was a bit disappointed the other day when the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden), my colleague from the North, in seconding the address to the fine Speech from the Throne, seemed to indicate that it was this government's policy which had brought about the reduction in pulpwood and raw wood exports from this country. I think, Mr. Speaker, that an examination of the record will reveal that the exports of raw wood from the North Country, particularly into the United States and other places, was not greatly decreased, or at least not up until last year, and the very sharp decrease which has taken place this year and during this current period is due entirely to economic conditions; in fact it is due almost entirely, from what I can learn, to the price of our product.

I read in the press not long ago where the town of Hearst had made some representations to the government about conditions resulting from the falling off of wood export. From those press reports, I learned that at Hearst as well as certainly in our part of the province, they have unused export quotas, therefore I would suggest that what has happened, Mr. Speaker, is that to a very limited extent through government policy and to a far greater degree through economic conditions, the export of raw wood has fallen off from this province.

The tragedy of the situation is that there is nothing which is taking its place. I hope when we read this White Paper and get down to the business of discussing it in committee that we will discover that the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) and his advisory committee and staff have produced some alternative to the limiting of export raw wood.

We have a situation in the North, even with the timber management which has started and is being carried on to a certain degree of success even at the present time, we are finding now, as timber men will tell you, that we are getting an in-balance in quotas of certain species. We are finding that particularly in the jackpine species and in hard wood. Something is going to have to be done and something will have to be done quickly if we are not to lose markets and lose a good deal of the use of those woods.

I made a note of the remarks the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) made about his staff, and particularly about his Deputy Minister and some other officials in his department and the services they have rendered to this province over the years. With those remarks I heartily concur, because there are men in that department, particularly the Deputy Minister, who have given many years of faithful service to this province. I am proud to say that many among them, regardless of which government appointed them—and our Party naturally did appoint several—we have among that staff some of the finest forest administrators that can be found anywhere in the world, I would not limit that to Canada.

This programme the hon. Minister speaks of this afternoon, which he says began in 1946 for the purpose of assessing renewable natural resources and for the purpose of guaranteeing an adequate supply in the future to all our mills, is just a bit lacking insofar as his remarks extend today, because he does not say—and again I expect this White Paper will deal with these subjects—what we are going to do with our surpluses of wood; what we are going to do about the utilization of certain species and what we will do about the jackpine and hard woods.

I was glad to hear him admit, which one of the hon. government members did not seem prone to admit the other day, that the Hepburn administration did take some steps of a constructive nature in forest management and, secondly, the seven years and one or two years afterward when materials and men were difficult to obtain, that during those years there was little which could be done aside from those things which were absolutely necessary.

I was a bit disconcerted to hear the hon. Minister's remark about the lumber industry, with particular reference to the saw-milling industry. I was not enabled to draw a final conclusion as to what he did mean, because perhaps inadvertently he contradicted himself once or twice when first he said the saw-milling industry would be extinct in 15 or 20 years unless something was done. Another time he said the saw-milling industry would continue provided we devote our attention more to spruce and alternative soft woods rather than devoting our attention to the hard woods and to red and white pine. I will check that more closely in Hansard and get the actual meaning from it. Nevertheless, I think this House will realize, Mr. Speaker, that the saw-mill men generally in Ontario, and I think in other of the internal provinces of Canada, are expressing deep concern about the saw-mill industry generally. Again I suggest that it is not entirely a matter of forest management or of policy, it is a matter of economics.

But one thing, Mr. Speaker, I submit that the timber dues insofar as the lumber industry is concerned in Ontario are now too high and do not enable saw-millers in the Province of Ontario to meet the very severe competition which has developed in recent months. As an example, in certain points in the northern part of Ontario it is now possible to buy No. 1 grade B.C. lumber landed for example at Sioux Lookout and F.O.B. Sioux Lookout, at a price which is just about that which our own saw-mill operators must have in order to show even the slightest profit. There is something wrong either with the costs or with their operators, and I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmill) gave us the assurance this afternoon that by and large our lumber operators are a pretty efficient group of people. So I think there is some other answer to it, something which should cause us concern when we can find competition of that kind where the finished product has to be shipped over several hundreds of miles and can still be sold at a wholesale price equal to ours.

Another thing I was interested to hear the hon. Minister say was that research activities in the Department of Lands and Forests would be accelerated. Again I am looking for more specific information on that subject in this White Paper. One thing he did not mention and one thing which is, perhaps, not within the jurisdiction of the committee and I quite agree, is one important feature of costs in our timber operations generally in the north. That is transportation. There is one aspect of it which Ontario can and should deal with, and that is in the development of access roads and assistance to timber operators in the building and maintaining of these roads. The other is the subject of freight rates and I think that this House should in some way at some time during this session indicate to the powers that be in the transportation boards in Ottawa that some consideration should be given to the timber industry generally, particularly in the North Country, and some preferential freight rates set up along the lines of those enjoyed by other types of industry across Canada.

I was very pleased to hear the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) mention the paper mill at Sioux Lookout. I wish there was one there. But it is disconcerting to me to read in the papers very frequently—and it has been frequent in recent months—of new mills being erected in British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and in the Southern States and at one point on the eastern seaboard, and yet we find our own department concerned with the supply in perpetuity of pulpwood to maintain our present paper mills' present and expanding production. I submit, Mr. Speaker, we are losing in the North Country now more wood by waste through overmaturity and attacks of spruce budworm and other insect infestation than we might gain by timber management in the next few years. I submit to this House again, as I have said before, that it should be the consideration of this government to erect in the north, in the midst of the wealth of virgin pulpwood, timber mills of their own. In other words, by Crown company enterprise if private capital cannot or will not undertake it. It would serve two purposes. I repeat, as I said last year, it would serve two useful purposes; the first would be to set up a model area of silviculture; to set up a model area of forest management and development within which the kind of mill operation and wood operation which the department theoretically might think is the ideal type. The second useful factor in the matter would be one of simply using wood at its source, using it according to its immediate access; and I cannot yet, despite all I read about it and despite the many talks I have had with officials both of the department and of pulp and paper companies in many parts of the province, I still cannot reconcile the fact that people can operate successfully other inland mills in Canada and yet we cannot seem to do the same thing in Ontario. In fact, we are told from every side when the matter is raised that it is uneconomic to build these mills inland, and yet other people have done so in other provinces.

I was interested also to hear the hon. Minister's remarks about our natural life and resources in the north, the game and fish. I think the figures he quoted in angling alone, as I wrote them down as he was speaking, he mentioned that in 1940 we had in this province some 66,000 non-resident anglers and in 1953 we had in excess of 300,000, certainly does point up a very desirable area. It must be a desirable area to other people who visit with us and return again, because among that large increase there must be a large number of repeaters.

I would point out to this House, Mr. Speaker, that we cannot lose sight of the fact that even to our fish resources there is a limit. I am not very old, but I can remember in my part of Ontario, just a few short years ago, when I was going to school, I could go out to several lakes and streams and catch a fish in a matter minutes. At the present time, it sometimes takes a matter of days to catch a fish. There is a limit to these resources, and while we may be proud of the ever-increasing numbers of visitors who are coming to this province to hunt and to fish, we must never lose sight of the fact it is a rightful heritage of ours which we should pass on to the coming generation, and we should never take the risk of not passing that great and priceless heritage to these younger people coming along.

With those remarks, Mr. Speaker, I would conclude this afternoon, and I would again compliment the hon. Minister on his presentation of this White Paper. I confidently expect it will be fully discussed in committee, and I can assure you as far as the Opposition members are concerned, we are looking forward with great eagerness to that opportunity.

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, apparently there are no other speakers and perhaps I may be pardoned for suggesting to the House and to the committee that one of the things which will contribute to its success is that it organize and get down to business at an early date.

I would very much like, as I know the hon. Minister and the hon. members of the House would, to meet men like Major-General Howard Kennedy, Dean Sisam, the Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests, and any members on the Advisory Committee. There are some on the Advisory Committee who are experienced in the lumber business. Of course the Advisory Committee is designed to be representative of labour and industry, but there is a great opportunity to have people who are interested in this matter come before the committee.

As was reiterated several times by the two hon. members who spoke, this requires a long-term policy, involving problems in which there are complexities and difficulties, and it is well to have these things before you when you come to this point, which is rather a turning point, because the forest inventory is completed, or practically so. You come to a point where a long-term policy should be considered by the people, and by the hon. members of this House, and there should be the greatest opportunity given to the people to consider it.

The hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) raised the matter of the export of pulp and the problems of surpluses which arise in some species. I say to him, Mr. Speaker, that the problem of export is not just as simple as cutting exports off nor of permitting exports to be carried on without limitation. It is a matter involving more than the balances of species and the surpluses into which you run from time to time. It is a matter which the committee could well consider and could well discuss with the people who will appear before it. It will be found that there is by no means unanimity of opinion in that regard, and there are very, very cogent and weighty reasons advanced by persons who take opposite views in connection with that matter.

Mr. Speaker, one of the great problems, as has been said here many times, is the fact that much that we are doing in connection with forestry has arisen from practices of other days that really have little relationship to the problems of today. Remember in the first settlement of this province the forest was regarded as a weed and as something which should be ruthlessly destroyed. Many of the great stands of forests in this country were destroyed in those days, because they were in the way of the development and settlement of land.

Some of this attitude still exists today, but I might point out that there are now many great industries in this province. We have communities—not only communities, but very vital parts of our economy, which are dependent upon and are affected by these great industries, and our job here is to lay out plans for the future, and to see that they are well laid, and that they carry the conviction of the people who have the opportunity of knowing the reasons for the adoption of certain policies.

I think that is the position. I am hopeful that out of this there will come to this committee matters of very great interest and importance, and there might come before the committee even a diversity of views and opinions of people, so we will achieve the right results. After all, that is the way by which many great decisions are made, by sharing our views, sifting them down, ascertaining public opinion, the opinion of people who have the opportunity of listening to and weighing these various points of view.

I am hopeful that the committee will be able to meet at a very early date and that great care will be taken in organizing the appearances before the committee of those who will give evidence in the form of an expression of their opinions.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

THE BILLS OF SALE AND CHATTEL MORTGAGES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General) moves second reading of Bill

No. 35, "An Act to amend The Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages Act."

HON. MR. FROST: In connection with these several bills, they concern matters which will go to the Legal Bills Committee, nevertheless there may be points on which some hon. members would like information, and it would be a pleasure to give that information here in the House.

HON. MR. PORTER: This bill I propose should be sent to the Legal Bills Committee, as well as all the other bills of which I intend to move second reading this afternoon, and as the hon. Prime Minister has suggested, if there are any questions I will endeavour to answer them; I do not know with how much pleasure—it all depends upon the question. If there are no questions I shall proceed.

MR. SALSBERG: Why the amendment? I think there should be some explanation.

HON. MR. PORTER: I gave the explanation on first reading, but if the hon. member wants me to explain it all over again, I can do so. I am always glad to do it on second reading, I will be in better form.

Under The Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages Act, it is provided that at present when a chattel mortgage is renewed, there must be a statement set out in the renewal, of the payments made of the amount of the mortgage. In other words, those payments must all be itemized, both interest and principal payments, and the amendment provides that the renewal statement will only show the amounts still due for principal and interest or the extent, or amount of the liability still secured by the mortgage, as the case may be, at the time of renewal.

It overcomes the necessity of making an itemized statement on the renewal. It is a matter of convenience, and as the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) well knows, is in the interests of the working man.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE DESERTED WIVES' AND CHILDREN'S MAINTENANCE ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 38, "An Act to amend The Deserted Wives' and Children's Maintenance Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill is in line with some other bills which have been introduced and some of which are up for second reading, and authorizes judges of Juvenile and Family Courts to try cases of child desertion. It is our policy to endeavour to place in the Juvenile and Family Courts all classes of cases, to as large an extent as possible, which deal with family relationships, as well as juveniles.

It also provides that judges of Juvenile Courts may try cases of wife desertion.

MR. SALSBERG: Am I right in concluding its purpose is not to help the working man, but the wives and children of working men?

HON. MR. PORTER: The "wife desertion" is where the wife deserts, and the working man is the one who is interested in these things more so than the wife.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE DIVISION COURTS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 40, "An Act to amend The Division Courts Act."

He said: In view of the fact my explanations were made several days ago, I think it perhaps would be better to explain again that this is an amendment to The Division Courts Act which simply provides that the responsibility for the payment for books, stationery and the jurors in the four Division Courts, having jurisdiction in the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto, shall be within the Metropolitan municipality and taken away from the individual municipalities.

The other amendment simply corrects typographical errors.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE EVIDENCE ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 41, "An Act to amend The Evidence Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill was recommended by the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada, and it brings the terminology of the Evidence Act in line with the Canada Evidence Act. It deals with affidavits which might be taken outside of Ontario for use in Ontario, and outlines the various persons before whom those affidavits can be taken.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): May I ask the hon. Attorney-General what would happen in a case where an officer in the armed forces makes an affidavit and signs his title to it which gives the force of fact to the document. Suppose there should be an impersonation? What guarantee do we have of the authenticity of the person taking the affidavit? Suppose the person says he is a major in the army, and that happens to be false, what security do we have as to the authenticity of the rank of the person taking the sworn declaration?

HON. MR. PORTER: Of course rank and unit of the officer who swears the affidavit must be stated below his signature and that can always be checked. What security have we in any affidavit sworn before a Commissioner? Nobody checks it in every case.

MR. CHARTRAND: If a sworn declaration were to be made, and the signature could not be authenticated by the person taking the affidavit—?

HON. MR. PORTER: An affidavit sworn in Ontario before an officer of the army, has always been perfectly good, but if that officer is outside of Ontario, it is just as easy to check on it, if anyone wishes to do so, as if he were inside Ontario. He is still under control of the government of the country.

MR. CHARTRAND: What I mean is this: I think the principle is good, and I think it is in the interest of the armed forces if an officer in charge should be able to take an affidavit. But the point I wish to raise is that in case there should be an impersonation somebody should sign his name and say "I am so-and-so." Suppose there is an impersonation? Do you not think a certificate should be required to be attached to the affidavit stating the rank and authenticity of the officer in charge taking the affidavit?

HON. MR. PORTER: I would suggest the hon. member bring that up in the Legal Bills Committee. We can discuss it there at great length.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE JUDICATURE ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 43, intituled "An Act to amend the Judicature Act."

He said: This amendment to the Judicature Act provides for the sittings of the Court of Appeal in three divisions instead of two as at present. It is permissive. They may sit in three divisions concurrently, and the amendment gives that power. There is also a section which makes uniform the provision dealing with the absence of, or vacancy in, the office of local registrars, County Court Clerks and Surrogate Registrars.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

MINORS' PROTECTION ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 47, intituled "An Act to amend the Minors' Protection Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill gives jurisdiction in cases under this Act to Juvenile and Family Courts. Where there is no such court, cases will be tried in a Magistrate's Court.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE SURROGATE COURTS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill no. 48, intituled "An Act to amend the Surrogate Courts Act."

This bill provides for the payment of an allowance to all those who have been appointed Surrogate Court Judges, but who are not, however, County Court Judges. Under the present Act, County Judges who are appointed also as Surrogate Judges by the province may be paid an allowance, but no provision was made in the case of an appointment of a person who was not actually a County Court Judge. Apparently it had never arisen before. Only recently when an appointment was made of His Honour Judge Barton, who retired as a County Judge in the County of York and it was considered desirable to appoint him to carry on in the capacity of a Surrogate Judge, has a case arisen. This amendment will deal with that situation and any similar cases which may arise.

MR. CHARTRAND: I presume nobody will be appointed a Surrogate Court Judge unless he has the qualification of a County Court Judge?

MR. PORTER: Not necessarily. There is no limitation on the appointment. Any barrister could be appointed a Surrogate Judge. The appointment is entirely within the control of the province.

MR. CHARTRAND: Is it the intention of the government to open the door to the appointment of anybody who may not be a County Court Judge to be a Surrogate Court Judge?

MR. PORTER: There is no such thing in contemplation, but we have always been willing to do it if occasion arose. Judge Barton is not a County Court Judge, because he has reached the age of retirement.

MR. CHARTRAND: I know about that.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not closing any door. I say we have no such programme in contemplation, if that is what the hon. member would like to know. It is generally desirable, and has been the practice to appoint County Court Judges to that capacity so that they can carry on the Surrogate work in conjunction with their own County Court work, and generally the Surrogate Court work is not sufficient in volume to occupy a person fully and it would perhaps be embarrassing to have part-time judges in different parts of the province, so that practice has been invariably followed.

MR. CHARTRAND: What I had in mind was this—you would not, for instance, appoint a Juvenile Court Judge to be a Surrogate Judge at some time?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know why we should not, if we thought it would be a good thing, and that the appointment was a good one. I do not think we should be limited to someone whom the Federal Government might appoint.

MR. CHARTRAND: This is quite a departure from established custom.

HON. MR. PORTER: We are always prepared to depart, if it is in the right direction.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE WAREHOUSE RECEIPTS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill Number 49, intituled "An Act to amend the Warehouse Receipts Act."

He said: The Warehouse Receipts Act is a statute that was passed some time ago which deals with the title to goods that are held in storage warehouses.

It provides for the negotiability of warehouse receipts, something like the negotiability of bills of exchange and promissory notes, so that the title to the goods in storage warehouses may pass from hand to hand simply by the delivery of the warehouse receipts.

But there was a section in that Act which says "This Act shall not apply to the storage of furs, garments and home furnishings, other than furniture, which are ordinarily used by the persons placing them in storage or a member of his family or household."

The present Act goes on to say that the Act will not apply to that class of goods until a day to be named by the Lieutenant-Governor by proclamation. That section of the Act has never been proclaimed and I think it is quite clear that goods of that kind, stored not for purpose of storage merely, but furs or garments to be cleaned or washed or home furnishings to be repaired or something of that kind—the storage is incidental—and that the person who stores them is the person who wants to get them back it is not within the contemplation of the Act. On the whole that type of storage should be governed by the provision as to warehouse receipts. It is therefore proposed in this amendment that this type of goods should be excepted from the Act, and that the words enabling a day to be named by the Lieutenant-Governor by proclamation should be deleted.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE WILLS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 50, intituled "An Act to amend the Wills Act."

He said: This is a bill that is recommended by the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada, and it deals with the question of the validity of wills that are executed outside of the province. The conflict of law which applies to circumstances of this kind is somewhat complex and some of the rules require clarification. This statute is the result of prolonged consideration by the committee in question as well as by a number of amending authorities on wills and it is felt the drafting of this section goes as far and clearly as can be to rectify some of the difficulties, doubts and uncertainties which have existed up to the present time.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: I think those problems will give the Legal Bills Committee something to consider, and I would now move the adjournment of the House. Tomorrow we will debate the reply to the Speech from the Throne. I very greatly regret that I shall not be here tomorrow at 3 o'clock to hear the remarks by the hon. member from Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I cannot say whether it was the influence of the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas)—I might blame him, anyway—but I promised to go down to a hospital opening at Ajax in his riding tomorrow afternoon and I shall not be back, I suppose, before the hon. member has finished his address. I am sorry I may not be present.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.29 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 23, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: The following petition has been received:

Of the Corporation of The Sudbury Community Young Men's, Young Women's Christian Association praying that an Act may pass changing the name of the Association to Sudbury's Young Men's Christian Association.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting reports.

MR. J. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): I beg leave to present the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Standing Orders, and move its adoption.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: Mr. Dempsey, from the Standing Committee on Standing Orders, presents the Committee's Second Report as follows:

Your committee has carefully examined the following petitions and finds the notices as published in each case sufficient:

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Hespeler praying that an Act may pass withdrawing the said town from the County of Waterloo.

Petition of the Corporation of the Township of Toronto praying that an Act may pass empowering the corporation to declare certain areas of the township to be 30 miles per hour speed limit areas.

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Paris praying that an Act may pass withdrawing the said town from the County of Brant.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of St. Catharines praying that an Act may pass vesting the St. Catharines Public Market in the corporation in fee simple, free from any restriction; and for other purposes.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of St. Thomas praying that an Act may pass validating the annexation of certain lands by the city; and for other purposes.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough praying that an Act may pass enabling the trustees of the R. A. Morrow Memorial Park to convey to the corporation part of the park for the site of a Memorial Community Centre.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of Toronto praying that an Act may pass confirming a by-law respecting service and disability pensions for civic employees; and for other purposes.

Petition of Walter Juxon Blackburn, Verschoyle Philip Cronyn, Roy Watt Robertson, et al. praying that an Act may pass incorporating The London Foundation.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. WILLIAM NICKLE (Kingston): I beg leave to present the First Report of the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills, and move its adoption.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: Mr. Nickle from the Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills presents the Committee's First Report as follows:

Your Standing Committee on Miscellaneous Private Bills begs leave to present the following as its First Report:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 2, An Act respecting the Toronto East General and Orthopedic Hospital.

Bill No. 4, An Act respecting the Town of Fergus.

Bill No. 6, An Act respecting the Town of Mimico.

Bill No. 15, An Act respecting Sao Paulo Light and Power Company, Limited.

Your committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 2, An Act respecting the Toronto East General and Orthopedic Hospital and on Bill No. 4, An Act respecting the Town of Fergus.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

THE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION ACT, 1954

HON. WILLIAM J. DUNLOP moves that the Order of the day for the House to resolve itself into committee to consider Bill No. 33, "The Department of Education Act, 1954," be discharged and that the bill be referred back to the Standing Committee on Education.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

THE TOWN OF HESPELER

MR. R. M. MYERS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Town of Hespeler."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE BEES ACT, 1954

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW, in the absence of hon. Mr. Thomas, moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Bees Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: In connection with these bills which I am about to introduce, which will be administered by the Department of Agriculture, they will all be referred to the Committee on Agriculture, at which time we propose to call in the various heads of the branches concerned, and the committee will have an opportunity to go into the "whys and wherefores" in connection with these bills.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW, in the absence of the hon. Mr. Thomas, moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Agricultural Societies Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE PLANT DISEASES ACT, 1954

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW, in the absence of the hon. Mr. Thomas, moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Plant Diseases Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE LIVESTOCK AND LIVESTOCK PRODUCTS ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW, in the absence of the hon. Mr. Thomas, moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Livestock and Livestock Products Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE LONDON FOUNDATION

MR. JOHN P. ROBARTS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting The London Foundation."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE TOWN OF PARIS

MR. NIXON moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Town of Paris."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH, No. 2

MR. H. E. BECKETT moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the City of Peterborough, No. 2."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE SECONDARY SCHOOLS AND BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. OLIVER: Is this bill to go to the Education Committee?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Yes, it is the second instalment of the consolidation which I spoke of some time ago, and it goes on second reading to the Committee on Education.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Public Service Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. OLIVER: Will the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh) outline the changes in this bill.

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Speaker, at the present time in the Civil Service, we have those who are contributing 4 per cent., some contributing 5 per cent. and some contributing 6 per cent. This amendment has been discussed with the Civil Service through the Joint Advisory Committee, and they are in favour of bringing all the civil servants in on the same basis of 6 per cent., and that is the basis of this bill.

THE CORPORATIONS ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Corporations Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Will the hon. Provincial Secretary tell us if this Act incorporates the recommendations of the Committee on Corporations?

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Speaker, this bill is to incorporate the report of the Corporations Act Committee which was given to the House yesterday by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts).

There were one or two changes in principle involved which he covered very thoroughly at the time, and the rest of the sections are merely for the purpose of clarification, and in some cases to correct clerical errors.

THE CORPORATIONS INFORMATION ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Corporations Information Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill is complementary to the previous one, in that it sets back the date of the Act coming into force from April 30th to July 1st, in order that the 1954 returns from the various companies whose fiscal years do not always agree, can all be completed under the present Act.

THE CITY OF ST. THOMAS

MR. ROBARTS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the City of St. Thomas."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE CITY OF ST. CATHARINES

MR. A. C. JOLLEY moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the City of St. Catharines."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE CITY OF TORONTO

MR. E. L. WEAVER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the City of Toronto."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

THE TOWNSHIP OF TORONTO

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH, in the absence of Mr. Kennedy, moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Township of Toronto."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

MR. C. G. MACODRUM (Leeds): Mr. Speaker, before proceeding with Orders of the day, I would ask leave of this hon. House to speak on a matter of public interest, and certainly a matter which reflects on the good name and reputation of constituents in the County of Leeds, and more particularly referring to certain people in the Town of Brockville.

Mr. Speaker, I have in my hand a clipping from the Globe and Mail which appeared in one of last week's issues. The heading of the clipping in bold black type reads, "Claim Fees Chief Aim of Business Colleges." I am now referring to comments alleged to have been made at a meeting of the Committee on Education by the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), which comment in part read as follows:

All these Business Colleges worry about is whether the youngsters have the ability to pay," Mr. Wren said. "When they do graduate, they cannot meet the standards their qualifications say they can.

Mr. Speaker, in the Town of Brockville we have a college known as the Brockville Business College, founded in 1883, which has for the past 71 years carried on in the Town of Brockville, and for the past 48 years this business college has been owned and operated under a partnership by the Rogers family of Brockville.

Lest any hon. member of this House should feel I am speaking in support of some political friends, I wish to point out that Walter Rogers, one of the members of this partnership, ran as a Liberal candidate for Leeds in the Provincial Elections of 1914 and 1929.

In addition to operating the business college in Brockville, the Rogers family also operate the Kingston Business College, and in these remarks I am supported by the hon. member for the City of Kingston (Mr. Nickle). Mr. Speaker, the blanket accusations to which I have referred are, in my opinion, unwarranted, unjustified and uncalled for, and reflect on the excellent business colleges which I have named, and there may be others.

It is usually unwise, I have found by experience, to make general accusations, and I therefore respectfully suggest—and that not unkindly—that in future the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) to whom I have referred, should be more specific when suggesting or insinuating that any institution is guilty of what might properly be called, "an unethical practice."

The Brockville Business College has very distinguished graduates, one of whom is the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett).

Mr. Speaker, in closing, may I outline the policy of the Brockville Business College and the Kingston Business College with respect to the matter of fees. The sum of $25 is usually collected each month and if a student drops out before the end of the month a portion of his or her fee is refunded and in like manner, if a student pays $250 for a 10-months' course and if he were to drop out before completing it, the balance is also refunded.

Both colleges are registered under the Trade School Act where adequate supervision of the type of course presented is maintained. The standard for graduation is governed by the monthly examinations of the Business Educators' Association of Canada. In addition the competitive examinations for clerks, stenographers and typists of the Civil Service Commission are held regularly and when the results are published it is usually found that the candidates from these colleges take a high standing.

So I do very much regret that the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) should have spoken so loosely, because I have been told by many people that the best money they ever invested was in a business college course.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, I was under the impression that subjects in this House were usually reserved for their own debate. I think this House will learn on proper examination—and I think this can be verified by many who are in the House here today—that I did not first raise this question as the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. MacOdrum) suggests. The question was first raised by the hon. member for Hastings East (Mr. Robson) and I supported, I admit—and I do not retract a bit on that point—that hon. member's view that some of the activities of some of our business schools, trade schools and correspondence courses might be the subject for review by the Education Committee as constituted during this session, and the hon. Minister assured this committee that he would have one of his officers attend a subsequent meeting and outline the procedures used by his department in supervision of these courses, and at some future date during the session opportunity would be given to business college directors to appear before the committee and explain the operation of their schools.

At no time did I make mention of any schools in Brockville or in the Province of Ontario. The Globe and Mail, I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, inaccurately reported the statement made in this meeting and if hon. members would consult some of the other papers, a more accurate report might be found. I have nothing but good to say about most of the business colleges, trade schools and correspondence courses in Ontario but there are some that need supervision by this government and I am not going to hesitate at any time to say so. As the hon. member for Woodbine (Mr. Fishleigh) mentioned in committee the other day, he himself purchased a correspondence course in violin lessons, secured his diploma and still could not play the violin and had to dispose of it.

There are a number of people in this province who have been "rooked" by some of the sales methods being used by these places and I still submit that it is our duty in this House as legislators to see to it that any person or any school hanging out their shingles as educators should come under the supervision of our Department of Education. If there are any loopholes through which they might be escaping proper supervision, these should be attended to.

I know of a good many highly reputable business schools. I also know of some that need closer attention by the Department of Education. I do not depart from that.

HON. GEORGE H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I might take this a little personally, having been the principal and owner of the Wills Business College on Sparks Street in Ottawa for 27 years, opening a school in Pembroke in 1903, which continued for 7 years, then, after I sold that school, opening a school in Renfrew.

I think I brought an opportunity to the people of that district to get a business education that was not offered by the high schools of those days. And speaking about discipline, I only regret that the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) was not a pupil of my school. I would have taught him real discipline. If he is fortunate enough to meet some of my ex-pupils he will find out. The hon. member speaks about being over-charged. I suppose an advertisement did appear in the Ottawa papers, but all you require to attend the Wills Business College was honesty and integrity. You did not require money. I carried my pupils until they got positions—carried them through until they were able to pay me back. And I want to say there was not one pupil who I carried through, who did not pay me 100 per cent. of what he owed. I think I was doing something worthwhile for the people of Ottawa and of Pembroke and Renfrew and North Bay.

If you want to go to Renfrew with me tomorrow, or Pembroke, North Bay or Ottawa I will introduce you to the leading citizens there and ask them what they think of the schools I was conducting and I can speak in the highest terms of the other schools in Ottawa and the way they are carrying on.

Business colleges are a necessity because the other schools start with a certain course and if a pupil is not getting along well at high school, he can change and take a business course, or if any pupils wish to brush up on their shorthand or typewriting they can come at night to the business college. So far as I am concerned I am proud that I spent the greater part of my life helping the boys and girls of this province prepare themselves so that they might follow a successful business career.

MR. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I have great pleasure now in speaking about some other schools. I have three schools in my own riding of High Park—there are about 175 of the students in the gallery today—from Humberstone Collegiate, Western Technical-Commercial School and Hughes Public School. I am sure we extend a hearty welcome to them. The hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) has also asked me to extend the same hearty welcome to the students of Brown School in his riding of St. Patrick.

THE MINING ACT

HON. MR. KELLY (Minister of Mines) moves second reading of Bill No. 53, intituled "A Bill to amend the Mining Act."

MR. OLIVER: Is this bill going to committee?

MR. KELLY: Yes, this bill will be referred to the Mining Committee.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Before commencing my remarks this afternoon I wish again, as I have done on previous occasions, to offer you my congratulations, Mr. Speaker, on your presiding over the House in your usual fair and genial way. I am sure it is a pleasure to us who serve here in the House to be under your leadership.

I was pleased yesterday to see the Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) in the House to deliver the White Paper, and he spoke yesterday in a very able manner. He has been ill for some considerable time and I am sure every hon. member of the House was pleased that he was able to deliver the lengthy address in the manner he did. It shows he has recovered and is now able to fulfil the duties of the position he holds.

Also each hon. member here, I am sure, regrets the continued absence of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas) and hope that in the very near future he may again return to the House and undertake his duties. We are very sorry indeed he is not here during this session.

There is one problem which has rather worried me at different times and that is the practice in the Cabinet of apparently overloading some of the Ministers with work. Whenever a Minister is absent or away on special duty, his portfolio is loaded onto the shoulders of another Minister who already has a great deal of work in his own department. I think some means should be sought whereby whenever there is additional work to be carried on by Ministers, it should be given to Ministers without portfolios. We have in the Cabinet two Ministers without portfolios. I think the duties of Cabinet Ministers who are absent should be given to these Ministers.

Now I know that Ministers without portfolio do not receive a Minister's salary. What I would suggest is that whenever the duties of a Minister are given to a Minister without portfolio that he, from the time he assumes those duties until he hands back the duties to the regular Minister, should be paid a Minister's salary. I think in that way a great deal of the burden which rests unnecessarily on some of the Ministers could be lessened. Some of them are continuously carrying two or three portfolios, and that is not proper.

I wish to congratulate the mover of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne (Mr. Jolley) and also the seconder (Mr. Noden). Both of the hon. members did a very excellent job. Both are comparatively new to the House. The hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) only took his seat at this session and the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden), at the time of the last election. Both did an excellent job. I noticed, however, in the press, both of them were "panned" a little severely for reading their addresses. I think that was unnecessary in connection with the speech in reply to the Address from the Throne. It is a very important speech and I think the motion in reply, and the seconding, should be permitted to be given from a text. It is quite a severe strain, especially on a new member, to rise and deliver an address within a few days of reaching the House as the hon. member for Niagara Falls did, without referring to a text. But I agree with the comment in the press that in all other speeches given in the House we should follow strictly the rule. No speech should be read in the House. I think the rules provide that speeches should be given without reference to a prepared text, though, of course, you can use notes, but the continued reading of speeches does not tend to bring out the real intent of what the speaker is trying to "get across" and I think we should stick strictly to the rules in future.

I recollect that some years ago, when we were the Official Opposition in the House, that rule was strictly enforced and much to the embarrassment of some of the hon. members of the Opposition at that time. I remember one hon. member—I think he was from Welland—who sought several times to continue reading his speech but Mr. Speaker checked him and eventually he had to give up, as without the text he could not carry on.

And I think it would be advisable if we in this House returned to the same practice and used brief notes only.

I wish now to refer to quite a few remarks made by both the mover and the seconder as to the salary of civil servants.

I have on many occasions advocated an increase in the salaries for provincial police officers and other civil servants, particularly guards in penal institutions and so forth. I am very pleased indeed that both the hon. members who led this debate made reference to the same thing this year. It shows we are becoming more aware in this House of the necessity for better salaries for our civil servants. We can only obtain good civil servants if we pay good salaries. I must say for the hon. Attorney-General that he has in the Ontario Provincial Police one of the finest police forces on the North American continent, but if you want to keep it so, you will have to pay them good salaries. I know salaries have been increased during the past three or four years, but they are not yet sufficient to hold in the service able and efficient officers.

The only way you can get good civil servants is to have men who are determined to give a lifetime to the service, and if we want officers who are going to remain in the provincial police for a lifetime, we have to pay them good salaries.

Another thing is providing them with suitable quarters. A start has already been made, and a very fine one, too, in building residences and quarters for police officers in Northern Ontario, and this has assisted greatly in areas where police officers were unable to find adequate living quarters for their families. Police thus accommodated are much more satisfied with their home life, and are giving better service. I think the same thing could be extended to all Ontario. I would like to see provincial police barracks and residences provided in all the chief areas so as to demonstrate that the police force is a respected body in the province.

Mr. Speaker, I am now going to take a line somewhat different from that I have taken in previous years. Usually I have devoted my speech to my own riding, referring to different matters appertaining to the riding, and have left the Speech from the Throne practically out of my remarks. I am going to refer this year to the Speech from the Throne, because I think it is a unique speech. If we go back 10 or 12 years, and read the various Speeches from the Throne, we will see that the one at present is totally different. I can recall in 1945, 1946, 1947, and so on, that more than one-half of the Speech from the Throne was taken up in self-praise of the government. They were, in other words, sort of "whistling in the dark," and they referred to some accomplishments they had put through in the past, in other words, they used one-half of the space devoted to the speech in boasting of what they had done. In this speech, Mr. Speaker, there is scarcely one word of boasting, and I congratulate the government on what I would consider to be a first-class Speech from the Throne.

HON. MR. PORTER: We are very modest, you know.

MR. GRUMMETT: The Speech from the Throne also gives us a greater indication of what is going to be brought forward by way of legislation. I can recall several Speeches from the Throne in which we had no information as to what legislation was to be brought down. In the present one, they have set out, in chronological order, the proposed legislation for the different departments, and at the end, there is reference to no less than 24 amendments. I think that is a good departure from previous Speeches from the Throne.

We now have an idea of what will be brought forward by the government, and we can get a preview of what legislation will be introduced into the House during the session.

Dealing with the projects, or other items mentioned in the Speech from the Throne, I want to refer, first of all, to the St. Lawrence Seaway. I think any mention which was made in the House, coincides with my own thoughts in the matter, and that is, if we cannot secure the co-operation of the United States, and if they are going to delay the commencing of the project in any way, shape or form, it is time we get on with the matter, even if we have to go alone. The construction of the power project can be done by Canada without the co-operation of the United States. Of course, if they want to come in with us, we are willing to accept their assistance and co-operation, and we will work with them on the project, but if they are going to hold up the commencement of the project, as they have done for the past 30 or 40 years, it is time we now ended the farce and got on with the project. I hope the Federal and Provincial Governments will undertake it, going ahead on their own, if there is no indication on the part of the United States to assist in the project.

Another item mentioned in the Speech from the Throne is in connection with the gas pipe line. I realize the main pipe line coming from the western provinces is a project under the control of the Federal Government, but the distribution and use of any gas taken from this main pipe line is a problem for the Provincial Government. There is an opportunity here, Mr. Speaker, I believe, for the province to undertake another project similar to hydro. Why not build up a great public utility, such as the hydro, for the use of gas from the pipe line, which will cross our province in the very near future? I think the project has great possibilities for parts of Ontario, at least, and in saying that, I am thinking of my own part, Northern Ontario, where I believe the use of gas will encourage secondary industries.

As you know, the great difficulty in Northern Ontario is the fact that we have only one industry in each town or locality. For instance, in connection with the mining industry in Timmins or the Porcupine camps, if anything happens to the mining industry—as happened this past summer—then the whole camp is very hard hit.

In Iroquois Falls, we have the paper mill, and if anything would happen which would cause a shut-down of that mill, everybody residing in that area would feel the effects. But if they had secondary industries in those localities—and I think that could be greatly assisted by the use of gas—then we could build up something more stable industrially in Northern Ontario.

I would like to repeat the suggestion that the distribution of gas from the main pipe line should be done by the province, as a public utility. The gas will have to be taken from the main pipe line, to the different municipal centres and there stored, and from there, distributed. I think the same set-up as was used in the development of hydro-electric power could apply to the gas supply, in the use and distribution of gas in our municipalities, that is, the gas distribution should become a public utility, under a Public Utility Commission.

Another point mentioned in the Speech from the Throne concerns welfare. I am very pleased to see the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) in his seat, as I would like to pay him a compliment. I know for many years the hon. Minister has been disturbed by what has taken place in our province in the way of desertions and so forth. I have spoken on many occasions in the House about wife and family desertions, and I am hoping the new bill, consolidating three or four Acts, when brought down by the hon. Minister, will help us solve these problems, both as regards the deserting husbands and deserting wives. Something will have to be done to stop the terrific amount it is costing the province and the municipalities through desertions, and I am hoping, under the new Act, the punitive sections will be tightened up so that a man may know he cannot walk away from his family, without due regard to its welfare, and leave it to the municipality and the province to bear the costs of relief.

As you know, at the present time, if a man deserts his family, and his whereabouts are unknown for one year, the care of the family falls on the municipality until the expiration of the one-year period. Then the mother may apply for Mothers' Allowance and the care of the family then falls upon the province.

Here, a year ago or so—it may have been last year—we passed an amendment to the Deserted Wives' and Children's Protection Act, which I thought was going to be of great benefit to the province and the municipalities, as well as to the deserted families. That amendment contained a provision whereby the provincial police could be used to round up and bring back—as we thought—those who had deserted their families. It provided that the services of the provincial police could be used to locate deserting husbands or deserting wives.

From complaints lodged with me by municipalities, we now find that what we thought was originally intended, is not what is happening.

It now appears that the services of the provincial police are used to locate deserting husbands, and having once located a man, they notify the wife, and also the municipality, and if the family was receiving Mothers' Allowance, that is cut off. When we put through this amendment, we understood it to mean the provincial police would bring the man back to the municipality in which he had resided, and see that he was punished for deserting his family. However, it really does not mean anything of the kind; it merely means that the provincial police have located him, and when they do, they notify the local authorities, who, if they act quickly, may catch the man where he is residing, but if there is any delay, the man moves on, because the investigation by the provincial police has alerted him, and he knows somebody is after him, and he is gone by the time the municipality can send someone to bring him back.

The result is that mothers and families are taken off Mothers' Allowances, and the municipality has to again bear the brunt of supporting the family.

I think that Act may require a further amendment or some adjustment in regard to how the provincial police are used.

—Mr. Acting Speaker in the Chair.

MR. GRUMMETT: Another item mentioned in the Speech from the Throne is concerning parks. I am very pleased indeed to see reference made to them, because I think we can do a great deal for the province by setting up parks, such as these, and it could be possible we might be able to do a great deal to relieve unemployment, should any occur during the summer months. The unemployed can be used to reforest and set out these parks. That will provide a considerable amount of work during the summer months, and at the same time, assist in reforesting a great deal of our barren waste land, which should be put back into forests again. Land which should never have been farmed at all could be turned back into forests, and reforestation, undertaken in conjunction with the setting up of provincial parks, would do a great deal to help the province.

Another heading in the Speech from the Throne is that of "Rehabilitation." I am not just sure what that means, but I think it is the extension of the benefits provided by the Disabled Persons Allowance Act. At the present time, a pension is given to those permanently and totally disabled. Those who are only partially disabled receive no benefits whatsoever, and I am hoping that by the amendment to the Act, as suggested, assistance may be given to those who are partially disabled, and that they may be trained, both academically and through vocational or trade training, to assist in supporting themselves.

As regards agriculture, I think I have mentioned before in this House the tremendous wastage of our farm lands, due to the young farmers leaving the farms, to enter industry. Some day, we will need those farms to supply the food needed in the cities. If we continue to build cities as we have been doing in the last 10 years, at such a phenomenal rate, the question will soon arise "where will we get the food to feed them?"

I think it is apparent to anyone who has driven around our countryside in the past 6 or 7 years. I am sure they have noticed that less than 50 per cent. of our farms are unoccupied. A great many of them are used as pasture land. The farmers have too much land to farm and they use the excess amount as pasture. I think something should be done to split up these farms, and endeavour to bring them into full production. I think also better advice might be given to the farmers as how to farm.

I was interested in a remark made by the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) yesterday about clearing the farm land. I can recall, as a very young boy, seeing great areas burning, with respect to the available timber stand, which had been cut down, and burned, simply to get at the land. In those days, the owners of land felt that trees were simply nuisances, and of no value whatsoever. So they cut down these available stands of timber and destroyed them.

If they had left that timber standing until today, it would be worth many times the value of all the farm crops they have ever taken off those farms. They could have sold the timber today for many times the value of the farm crops.

I think a survey should be made of the farm land to ascertain what land is still suitable for farming, and what land should be re-planted back into forest.

The hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) dealt very fully with his department, in his White Paper yesterday. There were several things which rather indicated a return to the ideas contained in the Kennedy report. I think it is about time we took down the Kennedy report from the shelf, and dusted it off, and took a second look at its contents. I think perhaps the hon. Minister did take a second look at the report, and I think it would be well for all of the hon. members of this House to do the same thing, in order to refresh our minds as to what is provided for in the Kennedy report.

For one thing, it provided for 12 operating companies to handle and control the cutting in the 12 areas in the province. These companies should all be Crown companies, and control the cutting within their own areas.

In my opinion, reforestation again enters into the question of our forest programme. Some operators argue there is no use whatever in artificial reforestation; that it should be left to natural growth. I disagree entirely with that. I think we should, as we cut, see that the land is re-planted back to trees.

I was quite interested yesterday in hearing the hon. Minister say that the scarification of the land by the removal of the trees tended to reproduce the crop more quickly than if the land had not been disturbed.

I also heard some time ago, another thing which to me was very interesting. It is something with which I do not know whether the hon. Minister will agree or not, but I was told that a quick or flash fire run over part of cut-over land would promote a greater growth of trees of the same nature. That is, if the growth which had just been cut, was spruce, a quick or flash fire, which did not destroy the cones, and so forth, would provide sufficient heat to open the cones, and the trees would grow much faster. That was, to me, a very interesting observation I heard a short time ago.

I think that reforestation should be carried out not only in the north, but in Southern Ontario, where we find great belts, such as in the Muskoka and Parry Sound Districts, where the trees were taken out many years ago, and if they had been reforested or re-planted at that time, it would have been of great benefit to the province, and I think the government should undertake a project whereby this land can be put back into forest acreage. The land was never intended for farming, and would never be of any use as farms, and I suggest the province should inaugurate a plan for putting trees back in those areas, and letting them stand as long as necessary, until they attain a growth which will be of some benefit to the province. At the present time, they are merely barren, stoney, depressed areas, and if they could be re-planted with trees, it would help the province, and would also be of assistance in preventing the flash floods from which certain parts of the province are suffering at the present time.

The next item to which I want to refer is not mentioned specifically in the Speech from the Throne, but it has been mentioned in the House on several occasions, and mention of it has appeared in the press many times. That is the question of highways.

The Fort William scandal has drawn down on the Department of Highways a great deal of adverse and critical comment, and I think the hon. members in the House are entitled to know what has happened to our Department of Highways. If we continue as we have during the past few days in the Legislature, receiving no information, and apparently getting nowhere, the session of the Legislature will end, and we will go back to our homes not knowing what has been done or what is going to be done in regard to highways.

I think we, as members of this House, are entitled to be told what has gone on, and what is going to be done.

It is unfortunate that the prosecutions stemming from the investigations have not been carried out some considerable time ago, so that they would be completed and out of the way, and we could proceed with any type of investigation we desired, either by way of a Royal Commission, by a Select Committee of the House, or by any other means whereby the whole question could be gone into very thoroughly.

—Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. GRUMMETT: I do not care what system is used to bring out the facts, but I want the facts. I want to know why these things have happened. It has been said, for instance, that contracts have been awarded, and as they progressed, it became apparent the contractors were going "in the hole," and were not going to profit by their contracts, but they were permitted—in fact, even encouraged—to continue, and in the end were paid on a sort of a cost-plus basis. If that be true, it has been totally unfair to the other contractors who may have tendered on a project, and totally unfair to the people of the province, because if a man knows he is going to be able to tender for a contract, and not to be held strictly to the terms of that contract, he will not be so particular in regard to the amount of his tender. Then he knows that, after all, "If I go behind, a very sympathetic department will permit me to submit a cost-plus account, and I will come out on top anyway."

But what about the man who has submitted a tender in good faith? His tender has been rejected, as being too high, for instance, whereas the tender may have been an honest one, but he is, under these circumstances, precluded from proceeding with his contract.

These are some of the many things we want to find out. I do not know whether these things are correct or not. I have heard them mentioned on several occasions. If they are correct, then I want to know it, and I am sure not only myself, but all hon. members of this House, would like to know it before the House prorogues its session.

There are many questions of a similar nature. I want to know how it could happen that the plans of the engineers could be altered without the department here in Toronto knowing about it.

Also, I would like to point out, it is necessary for banks to have their books inspected quite frequently by inspectors. These inspectors drop into a bank without the staff knowing anything about it. The door is opened some morning and in walk some strangers, and they say, "We are here to inspect the bank" and the books of the bank are seized from then on until the inspection is completed.

Why could not the same practice be followed with the Department of Highways? I think when doing a business of $153 million it warrants the employment of inspectors of that nature. You cannot expect your auditing department here in the city to look over the contracts of the department, but you should have your own group of specially-trained inspectors who would drop in on any divisional engineer, and seize his books, and in that way the department would be able to control them. There would be no opportunity whatsoever for that man to carry through the work which is alleged has been carried through in Fort William. If these inspectors or auditors had been on the job, the people would have been assured there was no opportunity for the kind of thing alleged to have happened in the Fort William area.

Mr. Speaker, owing to the absence of my colleague, I am unable to present an amendment to the amendment now before the House, and I would crave your indulgence and ask that I be permitted to have my colleague present an amendment at some time when he is in the House.

MR. ROBERT MACAULAY (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, it is a great pleasure for me to come back to this House and to have an opportunity of taking some humble part in the debates of this great Legislature with my friends who are gathered here, and to learn something, as we do each year, of the problems of those other hon. members from other ridings with which we are not as familiar as with our own.

I am afraid that I am not perhaps of as persuading or genial or good-natured nature as the hon. member who spoke just before me (Mr. Grummett), but, I shall speak of specific problems which I would like to bring to the attention of the House.

The first is a matter concerning directly the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter). Some years ago, a young man by the name of Paul Cachia was accused of armed robbery; he was tried and convicted, although he did not commit the crime. He was at least 5 miles away from the scene of the crime at the time it took place.

Hon. members might ask, Mr. Speaker—and with much justification—“How can a man under a system in which we have much pride, be found guilty of an offence which he did not commit?”

I say to you this, Mr. Speaker, for several reasons, and out of this case we learn, in my humble opinion, two most important lessons which I would like to present to this House.

The first is this: that this young man was found guilty because basically he signed a confession that he had committed this crime. This is a most serious matter, Mr. Speaker. He signed a confession that he had committed this crime. When I tell you that he came from one of the toughest sections of any city on this continent, and from one of the most depressed kinds of background, and that the chap—to put it as fairly as I can—was not blessed by God with the finest and highest intellect, that he was an epileptic, and that a confession was beaten out of him with a rubber hose, and he was convicted by the court.

Mr. Speaker, the reason why this case is most important is this—and for this reason only. One can hardly credit this could happen in this country, or else I am terribly naive as to what is fairness. This young man, when he was being tried, during one of the recesses, I am advised by persons in whose integrity I have confidence, that the judge who tried this case the first time, called the Crown Attorney into his chamber, and pointed out to him what he felt was an inherent weakness in the case, namely insufficient evidence on which to charge and convict this young man. The Crown Attorney thereupon pointed out to the judge that there was a confession in the case, and he did one of two things. He either told the judge what was in the confession, read it to him, or allowed the judge to read it.

The reason this is most important—and in my humble opinion diabolical—was that this confession was never introduced during the trial of this man and, in short, this young boy was tried partly upon evidence which he had no opportunity to rebut, which his counsel had no opportunity to examine, and presumably, the person who was in charge of the prosecution desired more to have a conviction than to see that justice was done.

I believe in this young man. He is the son of a constituent of mine. I know his minister, I know his family and I believe in him. I came to the hon. Attorney-General and I prevailed upon him to investigate this matter. The hon. Attorney-General is an able and fair man, and he instituted immediately an investigation which satisfied him—and his department also, as I believe—that this young man was not guilty.

As a result of that investigation, the hon. Minister of Justice of Canada ordered what I believe was the fourth or fifth time in the history of this country, a new trial for Cachia, and in due course, this young man was finally discharged by the court as “not guilty”—and I repeat to this House, not guilty of a crime that he did not commit. A great deal of credit, therefore, goes to our hon. Attorney-General and his department.

But from this case, Mr. Speaker, come two most important lessons, and these are the points I would like to bring to this House. Firstly, I think it is improper that any man in this country of Canada, and particularly in this Province of Ontario, should have to be tried upon evidence bearing directly or indirectly on the conduct of a previous trial, nor upon evidence which is not presented to the court, before the accused, but “sneaked in the back door” in some way.

It should be clearly understood that there is no reflection whatsoever on the judge who presided at the first trial, nor on the hon. Attorney-General's department. How could there be? After all, when this was said to the judge, he did not know what was going to be presented by the Crown Attorney, who, in this case, apparently desired a conviction above all things.

As I say, that is worse than the kind of trials which we fought wars to end, those in relation to the "Star Chamber" methods.

Why was not the confession put in at the first trial? The reason was the Crown Attorney knew it would not stand up in the face of public scrutiny. He knew it had not been obtained under fair and proper circumstances and he knew his arguments would be decimated, and he would rather introduce it "through the back door." That is the issue. The issue is, are we to be tried in that way in this country?

The second lesson to be learned from this matter is that Cachia was not the first Canadian to be found guilty of a crime he did not commit, and will not be the last, under our system of the administration of justice, and under our jury system. I say to you this, Mr. Speaker, that when a man sins against the state, he should be punished, but when a state sins against a man, that man should have some recompense.

I may be wrong, and I am prepared to stand here and apologize in public, but I say that I think Cachia spent two years in jail and nobody so much as apologized to him, much less gave him any recompense for the two years they took away from him.

I say, Mr. Speaker, if we take away a man's car or his property, we will have to pay him for it, if it is in the interest of the state, because it is under the laws of expropriation, but if we take away his soul and his freedom, the things God gives to every man in this country, do we give him anything for it? Nothing at all. We do not even care.

I say there are lessons to be learned from this case. The second lesson is when you take away a man's time, freedom and soul, there should be some form of recompense for the time and the freedom of which he has been deprived.

Mr. Speaker, I want to refer secondly to a matter about which I spoke of last year—in fact, to two matters. Firstly is the great need, I believe, of a central registry office in this province. I do not know whether hon. members in this House realize this, but if a car is purchased by a man in Toronto, who does not pay for it in full, the seller can register a document in the Toronto or the County of York Registry Office, but if the purchaser takes that car to the County of Simcoe and sells it, that car is still subject to the conditional sales contract, that is, the unpaid amount is registered here in Toronto, although the man who bought it in Simcoe searched in the Simcoe Registry Office, and thought he was getting a good title, but he was not.

The only way we will circumvent that is by having a central registry office where a search, when made, will be good for the entire province. So I urge upon the government to give consideration to the setting up and operation of a central registry office in the Province of Ontario.

I would like to speak to the same matter about which I spoke last year—something I think will inevitably come to this province—and that is Certificates of Title of Ownership of motor vehicles. These vehicle ownership certificates are in effect in 36 out of the 48 states in the United States. I investigated the matter a month ago, and there were 36 then, perhaps now there are 38 or 40. So it is a good thing, and not an untried matter.

When you buy land, you get a deed, but you do not get anything when you buy a vehicle. A vehicle today has become one of the chief sources of barter against which money is loaned, and given as collateral, and so forth.

If there was a place such as a central registry office, to protect those who lend money or who may buy the chattel—the motor car—all the information could be placed on a Certificate of Title to be issued by the Department of Highways, and the transfers kept up to date by a central registry office, I believe we would come into line with other types of legislation which are so necessary.

There is something which may prove embarrassing, or may sound embarrassing, but I do not want it to sound that way at all. It is an idea of my own, and I may, perhaps be very naive, because I have had no discussion with anyone, but I feel if we have nothing to hide, if we are doing the right thing, I cannot understand why tenders for public construction for the province should not be opened in public as they are in many municipalities today.

The second matter—and I do not accept the pounding on desks by hon. members, as a compliment, in fact I think it is insulting because I believe they do it for no other reason than to embarrass the government. I do not suggest it for that purpose. I suggest it because I believe it is important.

There are other persons and other corporations who do it, and I believe it should be done by all parties, and I would remind the hon. members with large, flat fists, that their friends in Ottawa do not do it.

With regard to the Department of Highways, I have always felt it was improper for the Government of Ontario to say to a passenger who stepped into a motor vehicle, "If you have an accident, you may not sue the driver."

If, Mr. Speaker, the driver has been guilty of ordinary negligence, that is so, and that should be so, but a passenger who gets into an automobile or who is invited into one, does not thereby give the driver a licence for murder. I feel sincerely that a passenger who steps into an automobile has the right to presume that although the driver may err in judgment, he is not giving him a licence to manhandle him in such a way as you might a poker chip at a table. Therefore I say that if a driver is found guilty of gross negligence by a court, then the passenger should be entitled to sue the driver of the car, for any injuries the passenger suffers.

Mr. Speaker, these are small, itinerant matters that somewhat concern me. I mentioned this morning in The Government Commissions Committee that I have had impressed upon me by many in my constituency the necessity for sanitary caps on milk bottles. It is a small matter, I recognize that, but I am a "small guy" sent here by a small riding who believes humbly but importantly in some of these matters and they impress upon me the necessity for sanitary caps for milk bottles. Tremendous expense is incurred for the protection of the consuming public by way of avoiding T.B. and other communicable diseases, by the use of other sanitary methods and there seems no reason why sanitary caps should not be put on milk bottles. I spoke about this to the members of the dairy industry and they indicate it would involve very little expense indeed, and I hope the government may consider a feasible means.

Another small matter which concerns me, to which the hon. member who sits immediately before me referred and that is a man 65 or 67 years of age, whose wife died two days ago. He spent in the period of 7 or 8 years $10,000 or $12,000 to try and save her from a disease from which he knew God intended her to succumb. She died of a disease that no medical science could have cured, but at the same time, with respect to the Disabled Persons Pension, he had little money but he had just a little more than the minimum and for that reason he could not get this pension for his wife. It seems inequitable to me, and I have spoken to the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) about this and I almost believe he feels the same way about it, that it is most inequitable that that man could not have it for his wife, but could have had it if she had been his daughter. I therefore humbly beseech the government to give consideration to this matter, so there should not be difference in relation to a spouse, for example, on the one hand, and a child on the other.

I see that in this evening's paper unfortunately there has been a certain amount of publicity given to proceedings taken by the same committee this morning in relation to the times and hours of the opening of liquor outlets. I have felt for some time, Mr. Speaker, that all the bars in this province should be open for the same length of time. I cannot see why some should be allowed to stay open until 12 o'clock and others until 2. I believe in equity, I always have, and I believe hon. members of this House do also. I think if one bar is to be allowed to stay open until 12 o'clock and another until 2, that is not equity, they should all be 12 or they should all be 2 or they should all be some other hour. I do not enter into a moral, physical or legal argument, I just enter into the equitable argument that they should all be the same, across the board.

Lastly I want to make some reference to the speech of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). Although I have always taken very great pleasure in following the speeches of the hon. Leader of the Opposition, because he is indeed an able debater, a description which might well be applied to his speech was one which was given in this House some time ago, that his speech was "very much like the turkey 10 days after Christmas, nothing on it and nothing in it."

The other day after the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) had spoken of the surplus in the budget as a means of making payment on the old mortgage, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) said: "Payment on the mortgage, nothing. It amounts to over-taxation." Mr. Speaker, I am not, with the greatest respect, prepared to swallow wholly both of those pills or either of them, for fear that I obtain the type of indigestion that Lord Porter did not fear in "Pinafore" when he said:

I always voted at my Party's call
I never thought of thinking for myself at all,
I thought so little they rewarded me
By making me the ruler of the Queen's Navy.

I only say that the difficulty of swallowing an argument of another without investigating it on your own behalf, no matter how little intelligence you may personally possess, is that when a thinker is gone from the room, no more thinking can be done until he returns. May I say this in reply to the argument of the hon. Leader of the Opposition, when the Liberal Party has a surplus, the Liberal Party says it is the result of wise spending, sound saving and superior accounting, but the Liberal Party says when the Conservative Party has a surplus it is the result of penny pinching, neglect of duty and over-taxation. I really believe the hon. Leader of the Opposition should be consistent, that either a surplus in Ontario is over-taxation or not, and if it is, it is also over-taxation at Ottawa. The old argument of whether one should "spend when times are bad," or "save when times are good," is the old argument of "deficit spending" and "surplus saving," which I think was the hallmark of the administrations of Roosevelt and Truman and has bothered all politicians since the days perhaps of Aristotle. I only say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that I think in all fairness he should at least be consistent, that an over-taxation in one case should be considered and called over-taxation in all cases.

He next turned the might of his water pistol upon the hospital plan of Ontario, which he said he felt we should have. I should have thought my hon. friend had been smacked across his electoral bottom, less than 2 years ago, sufficiently so that he would have felt he could perhaps afford to leave that red herring in and under the compost heap perhaps at least for another 2 years. However, he has seen fit to haul it out into the light of day and in case he does not remember—which he obviously does not—and since he does not have confidence in what is printed in Hansard, I shall attempt to put it in Hansard for him in such a way that even he will understand.

We cannot have a hospital plan in Ontario for 5 reasons, and I should like the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) to read this matter tomorrow, or when Hansard next appears. Firstly, we have not enough doctors. Secondly, we have not enough nurses. Thirdly, we have not enough beds. Fourthly, we have not enough hospitals. Fifthly, the Party of the hon. Leader of the Opposition and its leader at Ottawa have themselves stated they will not take part in, nor do they believe, in a hospital plan at this time for Canada or any of its provinces. So I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition he at least might take the trouble of finding out the dictates from Ottawa, so that although he may not agree with this policy, it would at least have the merit of consistency.

I see in Hansard the hon. Leader of the Opposition stated that:

We must at all times remember when discussing the Federal Government and its responsibility in these matters that the Federal Government has to deal with ten provinces. These ten provinces have ten varying conditions.

And so he went on in a manner which is in effect an apology for the inability of the Federal Government to cope with a problem which was directly handed to it by the British North America Act.

But in Ontario we cannot jump into the hiatus, into the chasm left by the Federal Government and fill in the holes that they themselves have not seen fit to fill.

It is clear that, regardless of the dictates of the Liberal policy, if any Provincial Government were to leap in every time the Federal Government has a responsibility and does not fill it, that Provincial Government first of all faces three problems, one, economic bankruptcy; two, that its legislation is ultra vires; and, three, a neglect of its own duties for which it must spend the money in its own budget.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition then turned to housing and gave an equally naive explanation of that. He said in Hansard I think one of the most outstanding statements, perhaps, which has been spoken in this House:

May I add this further suggestion, Mr. Acting Speaker, that if we find in this province that the National Housing Act and the provisions thereof do not adequately meet our needs and requirements—oh what a masterpiece of understatement,

—it is our duty to supplement the National Housing Act by legislation of our own and get on with the building of houses for the people of this province.

What utter nonsense. If we were to enter into every field allocated to the Federal Government every time they did not have the courage to face the problems presented to them, this province would constantly face bankruptcy.

When the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) suggested this, he said we should return—and I think I am fair in saying this—to the second mortgage plan or some similar type of scheme. I would remind him that we got out of the second mortgage plan at the request of the Federal Government. The hon. Leader of the Opposition has got the cart before the horse. Even I, who have been born and brought up in the city, know at which end of the horse you place the cart, and I would suggest that the hon. Leader of the Opposition get a diagram if he does not know.

The important thing in this country is not to encourage inflation, the important thing is not to put money in the hands of the purchaser, but to put objects for sale in the hands of the vendor. The only thing that we will do by entering into the field of the second mortgage plan at this time is to put more money into the hands of the purchaser, which will only spiral inflation. What we want is more houses, not money, of which the hon. Leader of the Opposition I think perhaps has more than he knows what to do with. May I say to him that if he really wants a change from the housing legislation of this province, he should take the train this minute—and I will lend him my pass—and go to the Banking Committee which is at this moment sitting in Ottawa considering Bill 102. There are 5 things Bill 102 is intended to cure. It is intended to cure high interest rates, and yet we know the banking officials are now before the committee saying: "Interest rates will be the highest in the history of the Dominion Government." We need interest rates on these mortgages at 4 per cent. and the bankers themselves are saying they cannot be less than 6. Secondly, we must cure the high down payment which is required. The banks themselves say that it is still going to be from $4,000 to $6,000 and the hon. Leader of the Opposition the other day said that is what we want to get away from. He and I are on common ground in that particular, because we can have a plan of a 4 per cent. mortgage requiring an $800 down payment on a $12,000 house if the Dominion Government has got the courage to lend money to the people who gave it to them in the first place.

The third point which the bill is intended to cure is the repayment policy, that is they should be amortized over 25 or 30 years rather than requiring payment after 5.

The fourth point the bill should cure, is to make possible more money, and yet the banks say they will not have any more money to lend, they will likely have less. So what is the bill for? To ameliorate and apparently placate a certain number of "feathered friends" sitting in the background who are waiting to go before this committee, one would assume. It is certainly not going to create more houses, interest rates are going to be higher, down payments are going to be higher, as far as I can see the only thing that will be any higher, and with our approval, will be the smell which surrounds it.

Mr. Speaker, the Dominion Government is attempting to make the banks the hatchetmen for the Dominion Government, because they know the people of this country cannot maintain such a housing plan, they know it will likely never come into force, to start with, much less be carried out, but if carried out, they are careful to have the banks foreclose, not the Dominion Government. So I say, Mr. Speaker, every single purpose which should be encompassed in a housing bill is missing from the housing bill now before the Banking Committee and if the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is really sincere, his best and quickest step will be immediately out of this door, onto a train and before that Housing Committee, to whom he should tell that heart-rending story that he told us the other day.

Quite apart from what the hon. Leader of the Opposition said, Mr.

Speaker, did he come into this House and say to this government or any hon. member of it: "I have an alternative plan."? No. Did he say where they have gone wrong? No. Did he have even the suggestion of an alternative plan? No. Did he even have, as the French say, a soupeçon of a suggestion of an alternative plan? No.

Lastly, Mr. Speaker, I should like to turn to one point and one only, and that is in relation to the Department of Highways. The hon. Leader of the Opposition went considerably out of his way to criticize the Provincial Government and the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), presumably, in relation to its investigation concerning the Highway Department's so-called "scandals" in Northern Ontario. Lest he has been misled in any way, may I tell the hon. Leader of the Opposition everyone in this House wants justice done in this case. Everyone in this House wants the axe to fall where it may, everyone in this House wants the culprits—the persons who have stolen, the persons who have cheated—for they have cheated not only the government, they have cheated the people of this country—all brought to book. There is no doubt about that, we all believe in that, but what I think is so despicable is for the hon. Leader of the Opposition to stand there and say: "We want a Royal Commission." He had no criticism to offer, apparently, of the Federal Government when it called in Currie & Co., but we called in Wood, Gordon & Co. He says that is wrong. Did the Federal Government call in a Royal Commission? No. So we do not call in one, and he says that is wrong. The Federal Government sent the matter to a House Committee and that is o.k. We sent it to a House Committee and that is all wrong. I want to know why the hon. Leader of the Opposition is trying to suck and whistle in the same breath.

I merely say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that his policy on these matters—and I have touched on only a very few of them—is a vacuum, it is a hiccough on the breath of progress. May I point out to him that it is a great deal easier to fight for one's own principles than to live up to them, but this government, with the trust which has been put in it by the people of this province, is doing its level best to live up to that trust, so help it God.

MR. W. E. BRANDON (York West): Mr. Speaker, I wish to avail myself of the opportunity of participating in this debate this afternoon and following the words of my hon. colleague from Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay). There are some things which he has mentioned which I may reiterate in part, but in the main I wish to deal with the operation of government as a whole.

In the first place I wish to bring before the attention of the House that the government this year, as heretofore, in spite of the advancement of the programme for the benefit of the people of this province, does not anticipate any increase in taxes nor any new taxes. That is something of which we as hon. members of this Legislature can rightfully be very proud, especially when we take into consideration the fact that in adjacent and other provinces in this Dominion there is a multiplicity of other taxes, personal taxes, nuisance taxes, which one meets with almost every time one goes into those provinces.

Initially I should like to say a word relative to education. Earlier this afternoon we heard reference made to the operation of business colleges and trade schools in this province. I wish to draw to the attention of the House that business schools and trade schools, even though they may be privately operated, are not operated separately and apart from supervision of the Department of Education of this province. On the contrary they are subject to review and inspection in many avenues. Some criticism has been offered in regard to business colleges to the effect that they are in business for profit. Personally, I find no quarrel with that statement. I think it is a fact and I think those who operate business colleges think it is a fact, because after all is said and done, a business college is a business, it is a business which is operated by those who have charge of that business just the same as you and I operate our own several businesses, and if they were not in the operation of a business college for profit, I do not know what else they would be in that type of business for, and I say "more power to them."

On the other hand there is this to be said in regard to business colleges, they fill a need and a vacancy in the operation of our educational system as we know it today in that they do provide for those persons who desire to have a business college education or a trade school education which though perhaps of the same type as provided in our vocational schools is on a different basis of day time or evening attendance and also with a shorter period of attendance in classes. We know for example that in our vocational classes in education, it is necessary for example that a student should start at the beginning of the school term in September and carry through until the end of the school term in the following May or June. A business college on the other hand will take a student who may start at any time. He can start on the 1st of December or the 1st of March or any other date that he wishes and the business colleges do provide individual instruction on a much greater scale and a more particular plane than is possible to provide on the educational basis of our school system as we have it in the Province of Ontario today. For that service those persons who attend those schools rightfully pay and are required to pay additional fees. The teachers who are teaching in those trade schools and business colleges in themselves are likewise subject to the inspection of the Department of Education. It is necessary, for example, that a teacher in a business college should have business experience or business training and a teacher who does not have the qualifications which the department demands to meet those teaching standards, of necessity will not be permitted to carry on much longer.

The matter of education generally in the province is also worthy of note. Education today is the major municipal expenditure on everybody's tax bill. It is the major expenditure and consequently it is of great and particular importance to every individual in this Province of Ontario. We are all anxious to know what we get for our tax dollar relative to education.

The Department of Education last year paid out in grants just under $55 million. That is a great deal of money. Where did it go? It went into an educational system in this province which undoubtedly will bring back manyfold the original investment in better educating the children of this province in years to come and in qualifying them to take their places in not only their own local communities but in the various positions of public life to which they may aspire from time to time.

Last year and again this year—and indeed it is a sort of forecast for the next 10 years at least—there will have to be provision made for an additional 53,000 pupils in our school system in this province. It will take a great deal of accommodation in school buildings and in providing of teachers to take care of those students. It will require many text books to be handed out and to be provided. But all in all, it is a very justifiable expenditure when one considers, as I have indicated, that it is for the benefit of the young people of this province in years to come.

Recently we have also had come into our midst many new Canadians, and many of those new Canadians have desired on their own to acquire a knowledge of the English language and to become accustomed with our manner of living, and with some of our culture here in Canada, because in some respects it is different from that to which they have been accustomed in Europe. Let us consider as well the fact that many of these people have gone through torture and even hell while living in concentration camps, and that in the freedom they have found since coming to Canada it is very gratifying indeed to realize that we in this grand old Province of Ontario can participate in some small measure in making life a little more happy for these persons who have had such sad experiences in years gone by.

It is not all young people who are coming to this country as new Canadians. There are many people who are past 40 who are coming here and “starting from scratch” to provide a living for themselves and for their families in this grand land of opportunity. In the metropolitan area of Toronto in the Province of Ontario, we find that there is an expanding influx of population aggregating about 10,000 people per month. That is a large increase in population when one stops to think about it in those terms, but not only is it an influx in population, it additionally requires services to be provided by the municipalities wherein these people come to live and to participate in their daily work.

So we find that the municipalities in the area have an additional burden today that they did not have a decade ago. There is much to be provided in the way of normal municipal services, police and fire protection, garbage collection and all the other incidentals to which we are so accustomed from a municipal standpoint. The question is, where is the cost of these additional charges to come from? What has happened over the years is that in many of the older sections of Metropolitan Toronto where a house used to house one family of 4 or 5 people, we find there are many people living in one house. But the taxes on that particular property have not increased to the extent that it would satisfy the increase in cost in providing all of those municipal services which have been necessary to take care of the increase in population.

Consequently we have found over the years that the municipalities, not only in the metropolitan area but generally at large, have found themselves in a position where their costs have been increasing, but they have not had anything with which to take care of those increases in costs, save and except a normal increase on real estate taxation. As we all know, insofar as municipalities are concerned the normal tax comes from real estate, and what does not come from real estate comes from business tax and there has been much discussion and observation in recent months and in recent years on the part of industrial and commercial enterprise to re-allocate the various and several categories into which businesses have been allocated under the Assessment Act for business assessment purposes.

It has been felt, for example, that a grocery store of years ago no longer is a grocery store, because, like a drug store, for example, you can walk into a modern grocery store which may be chain-operated, and you can buy a mop, you can buy a can of wax, you can buy almost anything. They are little department stores in effect, and maybe at the back one may find a warehouse storing huge quantities not only of groceries but of hardware and other allied and associated goods. So that as I say, the type of grocery store with which we are acquainted today is so vastly different from what it was 10 years ago that it would appear high time that some consideration should be given to a revision of the Assessment Act in order that various re-allocations of different types of industry might be given some consideration.

Now in the matter of municipal affairs I would like to say a word in regard to legislation enacted last year in this House relative to Metropolitan Toronto. I do not propose to go into all the details and ramifications but merely to mention one or two aspects. What has happened during the past 12 months? Prior to the legislation being enacted last year there had been much consideration given as to whether there should be or should not be amalgamation of the suburban areas with the City of Toronto. The government came up with a new type of co-ordination between the City of Toronto and the suburban municipalities, with the result that there is not an amalgamation, but rather each of the municipalities operates and continues to operate in its own right on a co-operative basis and during the past 12 months that legislation has proven its worth, has proven that it can and will work, and that it will undoubtedly, in my view, solve many of the problems that have been associated with this great metropolitan area over past years.

It has been said in some quarters that the metropolitan council has come up with vast figures of proposed expenditure. It is true that as one reads the press occasionally, one reads that for a particular project the expenditure of many millions of dollars is contemplated and that for another project so many more millions are envisaged. And the poor taxpayer finally comes to the point where he adds it all up and says "Here is a total of X million dollars to be spent on the metropolitan area—it is going to increase our taxes very considerably, and what are we going to get for it?"

The answer is that all of us should realize that this programming of the Metropolitan Council is not an immediate programming. It could not be. It is a programme spread over many years—8, 10, perhaps 15 years. This is so of necessity because if all of the programming were to be enforced in 1 year it would be found that we did not have the manpower, the machinery or the wherewithal to incorporate all these things in a short period of time, but on a long range view it undoubtedly will work.

Of course such expenditures will be debentured and paid off in 10 or 15 years or whatever the terms of those debentures might be. In addition we can also bear in mind another piece of legislation brought down in this House last year which has helped all the municipalities in Ontario as well as Metropolitan Toronto, and that is the unconditional grants legislation. Prior to last year, legislation already enacted, provided for grants to municipalities which qualified under the Police Act and the Fire Department Act. These could avail themselves of such grants. But legislation brought down last year dissolved all of those grants applicable to police departments and fire departments as such and we found the municipalities entitled to unconditional grants.

In the case of Metropolitan Toronto, what does that mean in dollars and cents? It means that into the treasury by way of an annual grant there is going a grant of $5 million provided by the Ontario Government. $5 million is a lot of money and it will undoubtedly provide the wherewithal for Metropolitan Toronto to get on its feet and provide some of the initial services that are so urgent at the present time.

We must also remind ourselves that last year this government took care of the needs of Metropolitan Toronto in its organizational stage and that undoubtedly was a great boon to Toronto. It has been said in some quarters, particularly in the rural areas, that Metropolitan Toronto was enjoying the big gifts of this government. That is not so. As was mentioned by the Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Frost) in his speech the other day, the fact of the matter is that the rural townships are getting by far the greatest amount by way of grants under the Unconditional Grants Act. These would run all the way from $1.50 per capita up to a maximum of $4.00 in a municipality such as Metropolitan Toronto. We must also bear in mind that the larger the municipality the larger the expenditure which the municipal council is called on to provide and so, as I say, in the case of townships which are in large rural areas, $1.50 was provided per capita. On a percentage basis this would work out at roughly 10 per cent., which was the benefit in the rural municipalities and townships, down to 6 per cent., which was the percentage benefit which Metropolitan Toronto obtained.

Here again is another instance of the way this government is providing adequate and proper assistance to the municipalities of this province.

One other aspect of municipal administration which I would like to bring to the attention of this House has to do with the Department of Welfare and it is something in regard to which municipalities over the years have had much to do. I refer to Children's Aid, or the provision of ward care of children taken care of through Children's Aid Societies. Before 1947, the grant provided by the Province of Ontario to the very best type of Children's Aid Society was $1,500. That was the amount of money provided by way of grant to the Children's Aid Society in the County of York. Ultimately these grants were increased in 1947, with the result that the Children's Aid Societies, through their respective municipal councils, benefited greatly on a much higher basis through the good auspices of this government.

But Children's Aids cost of administration are still skyrocketing and that is on account of the influx of population into the Province of Ontario and particularly into our largely populated areas where there have been mothers and children to be taken care of.

The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) this afternoon mentioned something apropos of this particular piece of legislation and he indicated, I believe, a case with which he had to deal relative to his own constituency. There are instances when it would almost appear that municipal authorities throw away their better judgment for a poor return of finance and I would like to relate to this House an instance that came within my own experience, where that happened.

There was a chap who came to the City of Toronto who had separated from his wife in Northern Ontario. The wife had 3 or 4 children to look after. He came to Toronto and obtained for himself employment in the city and, as my hon. friend the member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) mentioned this afternoon, the services of the Ontario Provincial Police were used to find him in Toronto. When they found him, what happened? They rushed him into jail. The provincial police officer came all the way down here from one of our northern municipalities and took him back. He was tried before a magistrate and he was sent down for one year. You may say "that is all right," but what underlies the situation? Here was a chap who had a job in the City of Toronto. He was earning very well and he was willing to provide for his wife and family in Northern Ontario; but the officials of this particular municipality decided they would rather see him in jail than providing for his family, with the net result that not only did the people of this province have an opportunity of paying for the keep of this chap while he was in jail, but the municipality also had the privilege of keeping his wife and family for 12 months.

For me a situation such as that does not make reason or common sense, and I think in all of these matters of adjudication relevant to such questions, municipal officials and judges and magistrates as well should look at the practical aspects of such things before they decide that every culprit should go to jail. In some cases jail may be the proper answer, but it does not meet all cases. Also on this matter of Children's Aid I should like to say that up to the present time municipalities have found by reason of the increase in population that their Children's Aid and welfare cases have been fast increasing, I would like to suggest that some time in the future the government might consider assuming a larger burden of Children's Aid costs even to the extent of 75 per cent. But I would also say: "Leave something for the municipalities to pay." because it is only through paying something that the body concerned will have some effective supervision over operations. I think something could be done along these lines which could be of very real benefit.

With regard to the Department of Highways, the member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) mentioned this afternoon something about the problem that has arisen in Northern Ontario. While we are all very sorry that something has occurred there—we know not what at the moment—may I simply remind him of this fact, that anything and everything that has been brought out relative to the Department of Highways administration in Ontario has been brought out by this government and brought out departmentally as well as through the auditing staff of this province. The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) said something about having auditors travel around as banks do. That is a fine suggestion; but may I say that today if a defalcation were to occur in the banks it would not be the first time although bankers over the years have had travelling auditors to drop in periodically and make inspections. There have been instances in the past where businesses have been subject to defalcation on the part of employees and where men have succeeded in robbing their employers. I do not care whether it is big business or small business. You cannot prevent things of that nature from happening. One thing that can be done is this: when it is discovered, appropriate and adequate means for its remedy can be applied and I am sure that will be done in this case. My hon. friend wants to be furnished with all the details relevant to it. He knows, as I do, that this particular matter at the present time is sub judice. Certain persons have been arrested and certain charges have been laid. The matter is still under investigation. Ultimately there will be a court hearing with the various interested persons having the opportunity of presenting a defence after having heard the evidence for the prosecution presented. At this stage all I say is this: In due course all of the evidence will come before a court and will be made public, and be public information, and that is the policy of this government. It is laying its cards on the table and letting every citizen of this province know exactly what happens. The Department of Highways has had a budget of $153 million this past year. That is a great deal of money but there has undoubtedly been a tremendous amount of highway development. All you have to do is to travel around the bypass around this City of Toronto to see what has been done to assist traffic in this area.

But all the money has not been spent in Toronto. Practically on every highway you may travel you will find improvements being made, re-allocations of traffic routes, or cloverleafs or what have you, for the benefit of the people of this province.

I do not suppose any motorist in Ontario begrudges paying 11 cents per gallon gasoline tax when he knows that the money is being used for the improvement of highways and the improvement of the economy of the Province of Ontario, as has been the case.

Relative to the Department of Highways, I have some further observations to make. The hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) would like to see a central registry system for the registration of motor vehicles and of any liens or chattel mortgage contracts. I wish to endorse that particular suggestion because I think it would be of great benefit to the people of this province for the reasons which he indicated. Not infrequently do we find groups of individuals who get into the car thieving business. Who suffers through purchasing cars obtained by such methods? It is the individual purchasing members of the public. It is quite true, undoubtedly, that some of these fellows are put behind bars ultimately, but it is the innocent purchaser who loses money and finds himself without recourse against individuals who are for all practical purposes men of straw and without substance. If such a central registry existed and each individual car owner had a title certificate which he could pass over to the new owner of the vehicle, on which there was a public record of any mortgage or lien, there would not be the opportunity for fraud that there has been in the past.

One further comment on highway matters. In my opinion there should be two types of examinations at least every 3 years. In the case of individuals I think there should be an examination at least every 3 years irrespective as to what physical condition the driver may be in today. No one can be sure a driver is going to be 100 per cent. fit for the next 50 or 60 years. Consequently an individual should be subject to a fresh examination by a duly authorized examiner at least once in 3 years.

Our physical make-up is such that many of us can and do suffer various types of illnesses, about some of which we know, and about others we do not know until it is too late to effect a cure. A regular check-up of the physical condition of drivers is something which, to my mind, should be paramount.

Not long ago we read in the press of an unfortunate accident which happened near Morrisburg, where an individual left his parked vehicle on the highway, and as a result of leaving it on the highway without lights, a bus carrying passengers came along the highway, struck the vehicle, and ended up in the canal which runs along the side of the highway, and resulted in a great loss of life.

According to the evidence which appeared in the press, following that particular incident, it was learned that the driver of this vehicle which had been parked, had been turned down by an examiner in his own locality for a permit, but apparently had gone to another area, where an examiner had given him a licence to drive a vehicle.

That is something which I think we should consider very carefully. I think the examinations of drivers should be required to be made within the area in which the applicants reside, so that a situation of the kind I have just mentioned, could not occur again.

Recently, too, we have been reading in the news—in fact, it is almost a weekly occurrence—in regard to motor vehicles and railroad trains coming into collision at level crossings. On the outskirts of the City of Toronto, there is an intersection at Royal York Road and the Dundas Highway, which is fast becoming known as one of the most dangerous level crossings in the Province of Ontario. There have been several accidents there, some of them fatal.

The situation there is that not only is there a right-angled four-lane intersection, but within a matter of 200 feet of that intersection, on two of those highways, there are two railroad level crossings.

The line-up of traffic on Dundas Street, and also on Royal York Road, especially in the rush hours, is such that it is more than just heavy—it is extremely heavy.

At times the drivers of vehicles find themselves stopped on the railroad track at the crossing, and we are told that some 72 trains pass every 24 hours along that railway, which is a tremendous amount of railway traffic.

That is one place, if there ever was one, where there should be a subway, or something done to eliminate the highway level crossings.

Last year the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) indicated that it was the policy of his department to eliminate level crossings in the Province of Ontario, and he is to be commended for that policy, but, as we all know, there are other authoritative bodies with which his department has to co-operate before these level crossings can be eliminated.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, in any event, we should keep this in mind—and I suggest it as a policy—that we should eliminate all these railway crossings as quickly as possible, because they constitute one of the greatest sources of injury and even death to the motoring public.

In connection with the particular crossing to which I have just referred, I might give you one illustration.

In the lineup of traffic on Dundas Street, not very long ago, a car had stopped owing to the flickering of the red lights indicating a train was approaching. A commercial vehicle coming behind the car, ran into the back of it and shunted it across the tracks, due to the fact that the airbrakes on the commercial vehicle had failed. Fortunately the passenger vehicle which had been pushed across the tracks was not hit by the train, but the commercial vehicle was, which indicates that it is not always the fault of a driver of a car himself, who is trying to prevent accidents at level crossings, who through some circumstance finds himself in a dangerous position.

Mr. Speaker, I would like now to say a word or two in regard to labour. During the past year we have had industrially several strikes. We had strikes in Northern Ontario in the mining areas; in Southern Ontario relative to the truck drivers, which affected the area west of Hamilton; we also had a milk strike in the City of Toronto. Just the other day we read in the papers where there is a possibility of a strike amongst the engineers in the Metropolitan Area, those who control the operation of the water supply and sewage disposal for the Metropolitan Area.

Over the years, I daresay all hon.

members will agree the standard of living in this province has become better and better, and a great deal of the improvement in that standard has been due to the operations of trade unions, and labour unions, from their efforts to improve the living conditions of the workmen, members of those unions.

But there are one or two observations I would like to make relative to the matter of strikes, insofar as the general public is concerned.

Back in January, 1952, the City of Toronto endured a street railway strike, by reason of which many of the citizens of this city were very badly inconvenienced. What happened? It was soon found that the citizens pooled their resources in regards to cars, and eventually reached a point where they were able to provide their own transportation facilities.

But let us imagine what the result would be if we have a strike in a public utility, such as a hydro project, or a filtration plant, or a sewage-disposal plant in a large, urban centre such as the Greater Toronto Metropolitan Area. If a strike were to be called whereby the public would be deprived of its water supply, or sanitary conveniences, not only would the public be inconvenienced, but the health of those living in the entire area would be in danger, and indeed the health of the citizens of this entire province might well be endangered.

I know that all hon. members appreciate the fact that labour has had, and should have, the right to strike. That is one of the basic principles which we have had with us for many, many years. But should we not consider this factor, Mr. Speaker, that labour should also appreciate the fact that as need arises, it must co-operate with industry and with management? I think, insofar as labour is concerned, it is anxious to co-operate with industry and management; it is anxious to see that its workers are given the greatest possible benefits, and we can have no quarrel with that. But I do feel at times that perhaps legislation, such as we have in regard to the Police Act and the Fire Department Act, where arbitration is required, might be well enacted in regard to other public utilities, the cessation of the functions of which might endanger the health of the public at large, and that this legislation should require arbitration, rather than the right to strike.

All down through the years there have been many applications for arbitration, both by police departments and fire departments, and after the arbitration proceedings have been had, the differences have been resolved, and satisfactorily dealt with, and everybody has gone away happy, without anybody being inconvenienced, and there have always been fire and police services. Could not something of a similar nature be provided in cases such as I have indicated, which may affect vital public utilities, for the benefit of the public at large?

Mr. Speaker, the situation, as far as labour is concerned, resolves itself into this; co-operation between management and labour will produce an increased variety of products, will provide more ready markets for our goods, increase our commodity production, and increase employment.

Today we are faced with great increases in the population in Ontario, and Ontario is going ahead—in fact, it is bound to go ahead. Ontario is progressive in its character, and in its economy, and in regard to what is good for all, and I feel, Mr. Speaker, that if we co-operate together, there is no doubt that Ontario will be the best province in this fair Dominion, and there will also be a grand opportunity provided for this government to continue to give the good government for the people of this province, it has always provided in days gone by.

—Mr. Acting Speaker in the Chair.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Acting Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

—Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, will the hon. Minister indicate the programme for tomorrow? Are we going on with this debate?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, Mr. Speaker, we shall go on with the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne tomorrow, and probably consider some bills.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.33 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 24, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK, P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I beg to inform the House that the Clerk has received from the Chief Election Officer and laid upon the table a certificate of the result of a by-election held since the last session of the House.

Electoral District of Simcoe East.

Mr. Lloyd Letherby.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I beg your permission to leave the Chamber accompanied by the hon. member for Essex South (Mr. Murdoch) to escort the member elect for the riding of Simcoe East to the Chamber.

Mr. Speaker, I have the honour to present Mr. Lloyd Letherby, the member elect for the riding of Simcoe East. He has taken the oaths, signed the roll and now claims his right to a seat in this Assembly.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the names of Messrs. Allan (Haldimand-Norfolk), Allen (Middlesex South), Cathcart, Janes and Parry be added to the Standing Committee on Mining.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I might as well present this motion now with relation to our Friday procedure.

HON. MR. FROST moves that commencing Friday, February 26th, and thereafter on each Friday of the present session of the Assembly, this House shall meet at 2.00 of the clock in the afternoon, and that the provisions of Rule 2 of the Assembly be suspended so far as they apply to this motion.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): I beg leave to present to the House the following:

The Annual Report of the Department of Reform Institutions for the Province of Ontario for the year ending March 31st, 1953.

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I wish to make reference to certain remarks made in this House yesterday by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) who referred to the Cachia case.

That, as the hon. members will recall from the remarks of the hon. member, involved a young man who was convicted on his first trial of some offence connected with armed robbery, or an offence of a similar kind. After that conviction some further information was brought to light and brought to the attention of the hon. Minister of Justice at Ottawa, who ordered a new trial.

The second trial was held and he was convicted again, but further investigations were proceeded with. I must give credit to the hon. member for Riverdale for the part he took in getting these investigations into motion. As a result of these investigations made by the Criminal Investigations Branch of the provincial police, a further witness was found whose evidence in some respects corroborated the alibi put forward by Cachia at the first two trials.

The first two trials, I might say, were tried each one by a different County Court Judge with a jury. At the last trial apparently the accused elected to be tried by a County Court Judge without a jury, and when the evidence was heard in the third trial, with the additional evidence which was produced on that occasion, the County Court Judge acquitted this accused.

I might say at the outset that the remarks of the hon. member were, in some respects, a serious reflection upon some of the officials concerned, and I immediately asked for a complete investigation and information about this case. I have not yet, perhaps, complete information on all aspects of it. I am obtaining copies of the evidence adduced at the first two trials. In the third trial the evidence was not transcribed. I hope to have as complete evidence as possible as to what did happen shortly. However, at the present time, there is certain information which I have which I think I should present to the House to clarify, at least in part, the situation.

The hon. member said that at the first trial an attempt was made to gain a conviction by "back door methods," a conviction based upon a confession which was made by this accused. Mr. Speaker, the information I have is to the effect that at the first trial, or prior to the first trial, a confession was made by the accused to two members of the Toronto police force which, of course, came into the possession of the Crown Attorney who was handling this case, one of the most experienced Crown Attorneys we have in the Toronto courts. This Crown Attorney denies that he went to the judge in his chambers and disclosed the contents of the confession to him. As far as I can find out at the present time, there does not appear to be any basis for the suggestion that there was any attempt to influence the judge's mind on this particular point.

MR. OLIVER: It was really more than a suggestion, was it not?

HON. MR. PORTER: It was a suggestion. That was one side of the case. I am giving the other side.

I might further say in view of the fact this was a case to be tried by a judge and a jury, the judge had no power to convict. It was the jury which had the responsibility of deciding upon the guilt or innocence of this accused. So that, unless the confession were placed before the jury, the confession could have no part at all in the outcome of the case. As the case proceeded, the Crown decided to have the issues tried on the evidence of the witnesses available, and he decided not to introduce this confession at all.

So, in the first case, the man was convicted upon the evidence of witnesses, rightly or wrongly; nevertheless, it was sworn evidence of witnesses in open court subject to cross-examination before a Senior County Court Judge of the County of York, and twelve jurors who heard the evidence.

Apparently, in that case the jurors did not believe the evidence of the accused and the evidence of the witnesses who attempted to substantiate his alibi.

Whether they were right, or whether they were wrong, that is the information of what happened at the first trial.

During the second trial, there were a different Crown Attorney and a different judge, and I have not yet been able to get in touch with the persons involved to see whether there was any presentation of this confession to the judge at that trial. However, the hon. member indicated the first trial yesterday and that may or may not be so. At the second trial, again before a judge and a jury, the Crown decided not to present the confession as part of the Crown's case. I may say, it is not a

The third point was this—and it arises from the second—that it was completely indigestible. The complication of government and administration, and the varying degrees of the development of all these municipalities made the impact overwhelming. Amalgamation would not work.

Those were the reasons the bill was introduced about a year ago today. That was the position then. I think this article raises the point: "What do I think now, what do those associated with me think?" I think, Mr. Speaker, that this is the answer: That confederation—if I can put it that way—was right a year ago, that everything that has happened since that time has borne out the opinion I have expressed as the reasons I gave you against amalgamation.

We are certain of this, that on February 24th, 1954, the metropolitan principle is positively right today, that there has been shown to be no alternative to what was done for the future. It is my belief today, and I think the belief of my colleagues, that this form of government is the right form of government for this great area in the future. I do not come here and say there may be no changes. I do not say there may not be alterations in this—it would be almost inevitable, almost unbelievable that such would not be the case, but it is an amazing thing to be able to come before you today on the anniversary of the introduction of this bill and say that there are no amendments to the bill in 1954 unless they are comparatively minor amendments—I would not say there would not be, but there is nothing fundamental.

I think the principle of this bill carries out this idea. In a great area such as this, Mr. Speaker, there are varying degrees of conditions. There are going to be varying degrees in the future and that a form of government that leads to the centralization of the essentials and to a decentralization of those things that are capable of being handled by the constituent parts of the area, is the right form of government. I may say, Mr. Speaker, if I had any doubts about it a year ago—and I did not because I felt that with the care we had taken we were right—they are dispelled.

May I say something about the Council? The chairman of the Metropolitan Board is in the House today. I would not want the Metropolitan Board to think their efforts are not appreciated. I would not want them to think that this is an expedient to do something else and that what they do today may be undone tomorrow. That, sir, is not the view of the government. I want to express my appreciation to the members of the Boards, both the Metropolitan Council and the Metropolitan School Board, for the very broad way they have taken hold of this problem. I want to express the appreciation of all the people for this. The late Mr. Shannon did not share the view that was taken in Bill 80 at the outset, but afterwards there was no more loyal person in co-operating in carrying out the intent of that bill than Louis Shannon. That is true of all the members.

Of course, there are different points of view expressed. Of course, some of the members take the view of their local municipalities. But I ask hon. members of this House whether the same thing does not happen in relation to hon. members' own ridings. It is a right thing to do provided we take in this House a broad view of the general betterment of Ontario and her people. I think the matter that we have some local pride and some balance towards the communities from which we come is all part and parcel of serving, not only this area, but all Ontario.

So I want to dispel from the minds of the people of Metropolitan Toronto the idea that we have any feelings here whatever other than that this method of doing this great task is the only method which could have been devised and the method which could work, and we are satisfied that the representatives of this great community, from Scarborough on the east to Etobicoke on the west will all do their very best for the great community they represent.

HON. MR. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I would like to refer to the last paragraphs in the Globe and Mail article:

The key to provincial thinking probably lies in amendments to the Municipal Act recently laid before the Ontario Legislature.

One amendment provides authority to be given for an application to dissolve the Board of Management established for an interurban area, under section 22 of the present Act. This is the section of the Act on which the bill creating the Metropolitan area was based.

The hon. members know that that was not based on that section at all. This interurban section was placed on the Statute Book 65 years ago. One municipality has taken advantage of it, that is, Burlington and Nelson Township. It has not worked out well and when Mimico made application to the board to apply that, the board could not agree, and turned it down, stating the disadvantages of this interurban area.

I am not going to bore you with what the board said, but they would not recommend it and said it was not worthwhile. They went further and they said to our department they felt it was not workable and should be taken off the Statute Books and I said while one municipality was endeavouring to make it work we should leave it there. They did not have the power to dissolve that interurban board. They had the power over several other boards but not the interurban board and that is why the amendment provided for the dissolving of all boards by the Municipal Board, to give them that power. If the Town of Burlington and the Township of Nelson so desired, they could apply to the Municipal Board which has power to dissolve that municipality. That is all that legislation means.

MR. SPEAKER: I would like to take the opportunity to welcome to the Assembly today students of the Orde Street School and Ryerson Public School. I am happy to welcome the students of the various schools and colleges, in order that they may gain, I hope, considerable inspiration and enthusiasm for the way in which the government of the province carries on its various duties and obligations.

HON. MR. FROST: Before the Orders of the day I also want to say again at this time something about Hansard. My attention has been drawn to page 128 of the Hansard of February 19. I see on that page that at the bottom of the right-hand column it says:

Mr. Speaker, there are one or two corrections I have. In reading over the report yesterday evening I noticed points which I thought we should have discussed at the time.

Now sir, I was not in the House at the time. As a matter of fact I had to leave. I did not have the privilege of hearing the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I believe, he said that. That is on the bottom of page 128 where it says "Mr. Frost."

I think perhaps what the hon. member said was quite correct. I would not question that, but I know that he would not want to have attributed to me things that he said. I also notice on page 130 that "Mr. Frost" comes into it again. That was Mr. Porter. It was not "Mr. Frost" because he was not in the House at the time.

I just make these points for the benefit of the House. I do not disagree with the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter). It is just that I have strong views in that connection. I do not disagree with what the hon. member opposite said either, but I just point this out to the hon. members who have for so long pressed me to have Hansard printed. Again this raises in my mind a thought as to the desirability of this particular institution. I just say that because we ought to be more careful about these matters.

Orders of the day.

SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Speaker, the other day the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) said something about "health insurance" and the need for it in this province and I would like to make a few comments on that matter, if I may.

In the first place, Mr. Speaker, I do not believe the time has arrived when we should have any form of health insurance in the Province of Ontario. As you know, these schemes are in effect in the Provinces of British Columbia and Saskatchewan and there is a partial scheme in Alberta and Newfoundland. I have some interesting figures here in which I think the hon. members of the House would be intensely interested.

Health insurance is something which has been talked about for quite some time, and it has been tried in many lands, but I do not believe the time has yet come to consider it here in Ontario. It is a well-known wish of the three national Parties, the Progressive Conservatives, the Liberals and the CCF to bring on a health scheme of some kind, and I am not going to say whether the Federal Government is in a position to go ahead with it or not. That is entirely up to them. I am going to confine my remarks to what we should or should not do in the Province of Ontario. But it does seem when we talk about health insurance or insurance of any kind, our socialistic group is interested in taking over insurance. I have not found out just why, other than that they might think that people in the insurance business, or insurance companies have all the money today, but if they think that I can assure them that a great many of us do not.

It is a great thing to have free choice. I am a great supporter of free enterprise. I believe that people should be able to choose the things they want. That is what we stand for in Canada. That is our way of life, to be able to choose those things which we think are best suited to our needs or requirements. As soon as the government steps into the picture, we have compulsion and anything that smacks of compulsion I am opposed to, and I think our government is opposed to it. I know we can point the finger at the Ontario Hydro and at our TTC here in Toronto and some other organizations that are doing a wonderful job and could be considered under control of a government, either municipal or provincial, but I am not going to argue that one way or the other. I would like to confine my remarks strictly to insurance.

These health schemes cost the taxpayers a great deal of money and, Mr. Speaker, I do not think at this time our government should assume or consider assuming a large and unpredictable expense which would be incurred through a health scheme, to say nothing concerning the lack of hospitals, doctors, nurses and so on.

I do not want you to feel, Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to some sort of investigations being carried out or to a committee being appointed to investigate all phases of a health set-up. I think it is all right that we should be studying and looking to the future, but at the present time we are not in a position to do it.

I have got some figures, which will make rather interesting reading in Hansard. For example, approximately 52 per cent. of the cost of hospital plans—and I am speaking now of the Saskatchewan hospital plan—is being paid from general revenue. In all these state health plans one hears about the low cost of premiums as compared with premiums charged by private insurance companies. But if you stop to consider that any deficit is simply taken out of the general revenue, or the Consolidated Revenue Fund—whatever you choose to call it—then you can appreciate the fact that indirectly the taxpayer is paying finally for them. Even though the premiums may be low, the deficits are high. The steadily growing increase in the number of people participating in private-insurance schemes is an indication that private insurance is doing the job up to now—that they are providing a type of health coverage the majority of Canadians want. In a recent survey, I think it was in the year 1952, there were 5,500,000 people in Canada covered by private health insurance. Out of a population of 15,000,000 I would say that was a pretty good percentage. Here in Ontario we have by far the largest percentage. It is almost, from the last records, 65 per cent. of the people of Ontario who are insured by private insurance companies under health schemes.

When we are comparing Ontario with other provinces, we must think of population. In Ontario we have 5,000,000 people. In British Columbia they have about 1,000,000. In Saskatchewan they have 700,000 or 800,000—not nearly as many as the population of Metropolitan Toronto. Newfoundland has considerably less. So that in comparing provinces and considering health schemes, we must consider population and fitness. That is very important to me. As a matter of fact, I recall that during the last provincial election, there was a great deal of talk of automobile insurance, and the great job that is being done by the Saskatchewan CCF Government.

Mr. Speaker, there again they are talking about a low-population area. There are more cars in greater Toronto than in the whole of the Province of Saskatchewan and naturally the risk is greater, the number of accidents is greatly increased and you cannot put the premium on the same basis as you can in those rural areas.

In 1952, the Saskatchewan provincial health plan premiums brought in approximately $6 million and the actual cost of the provincial insurance scheme was $15 million, so approximately $9 million came out of general revenue. Even in the face of that I noticed in the paper the other day that insurance premiums had been increased again in that province, so they are steadily rising as the cost of living goes up. In British Columbia, the maximum premium was $40.00, the actual cost to the subscriber was $100.00 through indirect taxation.

In Ontario a comprehensive health plan would cost about $47.40, roughly. A voluntary coverage would cost $47.40, and the compulsory health insurance would cost about $100.00 in British Columbia. In British Columbia, the premium amounts to $39.00 plus $1.00 a day paid by the patient for each day in hospital, and in 1952, actual premiums collected amounted to some $15 million, but the actual cost of the health scheme was over $17 million. So, Mr. Speaker, before we get "het up" about a health plan, I think we should take into consideration the unpredictable cost it would involve. I have nothing against taking care of the needy in the event of sickness. That must be paid for. I think that is the duty of the government. But taking the whole population, by and large, as of now, I think the average resident of Ontario would prefer to select the scheme or the plan of his choice and pay the premium that he wishes.

I have some other figures which may be interesting. I was talking to some people the other day and they told me that a recent survey in the United States showed that 85 per cent. of the people in the United States did not have any outstanding hospital or medical plan. Thirteen per cent. of the people in the United States had some and 2 per cent. had very heavy hospital or medical bills. Applying that percentage here to Canada, I think you can see that the general public are being well served by private insurers, that the majority of the people have the type of coverage they wish to buy, and at the present time I would be opposed to any form of compulsory health insurance.

What I wanted to speak about today particularly, Mr. Speaker, was on the subject of conservation. Before I begin, I would like to extend my personal hearty welcome to the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley). We have been associated in many projects together. Today, sitting on my right, is my good friend, the hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby). I congratulate these two members on their election and on coming into the House. At the same time, I would like to congratulate the hon. Prime Minister, because by being head of our government, Mr. Speaker, he just makes it that much easier for any of us to be elected.

Conservation is a very controversial subject. I have had the opportunity of going through the report of the Conservation Committee of 1950, and I would like to congratulate them, Mr. Speaker.

They have done a very excellent job. In 1946, the Ontario Government passed the Conservation Authorities Act, and conservation authorities have been very active since that time. They do cover a variety of subjects. They cover such things as flood control, pollution control, reforestation, land use and so on.

I would like to confine my remarks today, Mr. Speaker, particularly to land use and parks and recreational areas, and things of that kind.

There are 15 conservation authorities now in the Province of Ontario. They cover a total land area of some 10,505 acres, and a membership of 256 municipalities. I think you are all familiar with the various authorities and where they are located. I think one very important point to remember is that I know very definitely that large employers seeking a place to establish themselves in Canada, either from the United States or Great Britain, always consider the recreational facilities in a given area, before they decide to build a plant and hire employees. They want their employees to be well and to be happy, and they want them to have some recreation close at hand.

I cannot help thinking of our lake-front area in Toronto which has been polluted definitely for years, and even today, Mr. Speaker, you cannot swim in our beautiful lake near Toronto. Even as recently as last summer, I was down there, and found thousands of people on a hot summer's day, but very few of them in the water. Those who go in the water are taking a chance, because according to the Medical Officer of Health for Toronto, the water in front of the city is not just right for swimming.

I would also like to congratulate the Globe and Mail. They have been receiving a great many congratulations lately, but they have been very much in the forefront in this matter of conservation, and have had some excellent editorials in their paper in the last several years which I have found most interesting and helpful, and I think they are showing leadership in this great problem.

Coming close to home again, Mr. Speaker, we had a little "to-do" a little while ago about some parkettes in front of our Parliament Buildings in connection with parking for the civil servants. I wonder if we should not have some rather long-range programme for providing parking for these people. We cannot tell them not to bring their cars down, so let us provide some parking which will not take away from this beautiful park area around our own beautiful Parliament Buildings. There is very little of it left, and I think we should be very keen to see it is left as it is. Let us provide parking, underground, overground, or in garages or somewhere. Let us preserve the beautiful grounds around Queen's Park.

Getting back to the matter of Conservation Authorities. I think I should tell you about a trip I had the pleasure of making last September, together with members of the Humber Valley Conservation Authority. We went to the city of Detroit. Although I do not like making comparisons between Canada and the United States, because, quite frankly, I do not think there is any comparison—we are away out in front—but there are some things where they seem to be making some headway. They have a scheme in Detroit called the "Huron Clinton Conservation Authority" which is really something to see. It is within an hour's drive from downtown Detroit, and it is very easy to drive out there on a summer afternoon and enjoy the facilities.

They have parking there for 6,000 automobiles, and last year, they entertained more than 700,000 people. They have a beautiful lake which covers about 1,200 acres. They have fishing, boating, swimming and all those things that we do not have here. I could not help but think of that hot spell we had last summer in Toronto and other places.

We decided to go on a picnic one afternoon and we just could not find anywhere in this entire metropolitan area a place to have a picnic without being on private property. There is not a place on Lake Simcoe where you can picnic for the day.

The time is overdue for some definite programme to be arranged to provide this much-needed park ground and recreational area around all large centres.

I know on our way back from visiting the Huron-Clinton Authority, we stopped at the new dam up there on the Thames River. That is a very wonderful structure, and, as so many people have remarked lately, it has been the means of keeping the flood waters out of the City of London. That was a joint project financed 37½ per cent. by the Federal Government, 37½ per cent. by the Provincial Government, and the other 25 per cent. as assessed to the municipalities that would benefit by that project. They have the dam which has made a nice lake, and I can see in the very near future, Mr. Speaker, because it is within 10 or 15 minutes of downtown London, they will have the same asset as the recreational set-up has in Detroit. Everything is there to be done; all the land is ready for use, and it just takes a little initiative and action to go ahead.

Incidentally I would point out that the City of Detroit which, of course, has a very large population in that area, makes most of the financial contribution—I think the same thing should hold good here in Toronto. I think in the new Metropolitan Toronto, the Metropolitan Council should be prepared to provide most of the money for the conservation authorities of this area.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I am speaking as a city member and I would like to congratulate the many hon. members from the farms and rural districts of this great province of ours, because I believe they are taking the lead and showing us something about conservation about which we do not hear in my own city. I feel that if we will come up to the standards of those people concerned with the rural way of life, shall we say—as the hon. Attorney-General refers to them—that between us we can eventually have the kind of conservation areas we all want.

I think one of the important things to remember, Mr. Speaker, is education. We need to be educated in the matter of conservation. I often think that the word itself is a very difficult thing to understand. It is a very dry, dull word, "conservation". I think if we can brighten it up and give it a new name, we would interest a great many people. It has such ramifications and covers such a wide area, it is difficult for the man on the street to tell you what conservation is. If we can brighten it up, call it by a new name and turn it over to the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity, he could do something with it.

At any rate, conservation is something we must all begin to understand. I checked with the hon. Minister of Education in connection with it and he gave me a note which I have here and which I think is worth repeating. He says, officials of the Department of Education tell him that conservation is taught in our schools in geography, elementary science, history, English as well as other subjects. As a matter of fact, the general atmosphere of our schools is one of conservation. I think that is all very well, but at the same time in order to encourage teachers to discuss this problem of conservation and teach it in the schools, my thought is that the hon. Minister of Education might consider offering a special course for teachers, giving them a special diploma which would qualify them in the teaching of conservation in schools. It would give them something toward which to aim, so they would not lose conservation in the hurly-burly of teaching other subjects. They would be qualified; they would have the diploma stating they are qualified to teach conservation.

I think in that way, Mr. Speaker, we can give the young people of today more to think about, because after all if the young people of today have an understanding of conservation and what is being done about it, it will make our province the grand province which we hope it will be in the future.

There has been considerable in the papers lately about the "green belt" about Toronto, and around Ottawa, London, Windsor, Sarnia and so many other places in the province. As a matter of fact I have a note here about some of the places where they have green belts. In the British Isles, they have them in London, Manchester, Glasgow. In the United States, they have them in Washington, D.C., New York, Boston, Cleveland, Detroit and so on. Ottawa is a good example here in our own country.

Those are words, Mr. Speaker, which are difficult to define—"green belt." The average man on the street thinks "green belt" is something you wear around your waist. A green belt could be called, for instance, a "park land". We are going to have an area around a large urban centre separating the factories, houses and so on from the country areas. It would be a series of parks. That is actually what it is. It might be a golf course, a park, or anything of that nature. Let us change the term, "green belt" to "park lands". I think it would be much more specific and much easier for the average person to understand.

I am in favour of the green belt idea, and I think the sooner we proceed with getting green belts and paying for them, the sooner we will have the type of recreational area we want.

I want to make some mention here of the "pinery," which I understand is near Sarnia. There is a great area there and they have asked for certain funds to get it started, and as soon as it is "O.K.'d" by the Municipal Board, they will have a beautiful area to develop for recreation.

The province is taking the lead. The province up to date has done a good job. I think possibly in some cases, Mr. Speaker, they could do more. They could help out financially.

We had a meeting this morning of the Standing Committee on Conservation, and I heard some ideas from some of the rural members who have had much longer experience than I have had in matters of conservation. The point was raised that in the smaller centres, a number of small municipalities just do not have the finances to start a conservation authority, and there is no way they can go ahead.

It was suggested possibly the province should consider making special grants to those areas where they cannot raise sufficient money to get the thing started. I think they contribute on a dollar-for-dollar basis, and that gives the local municipality something to think about, but we could stretch a point and assist some of the smaller areas, to get started.

Mr. Speaker, I think we should also give some consideration to water. The water supply in this great province of ours is not unending, and if something is not done to clear up the water situation, and we do something about pollution, we will not have clear water. I had the pleasure of attending a university extension lecture on conservation with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) who spoke there. Also present was Mr. John Fisher, who is an outstanding authority on almost anything you care to mention. At this particular time he was talking about water and among other things he said that in Los Angeles they are concerned about fresh water. They have set up there a plant to transform salt water to fresh water but it is not enough. They are running out of water and the situation is so bad that they are endeavouring to get water back out of the sewers to be used again. I do not prophesy that things are going to get that bad here in Ontario by any means, but now is the time to be doing something about it. On the outskirts of our larger urban centres garbage is actually dumped into our streams and rivers. You can go up the Humber, the Thames, any of these rivers and find this is so. People do not think enough of conservation; they keep dumping in this refuse. You cannot go into any of these lakes or rivers near centres of population because of this. Why cannot something be done about pollution?

I think, too, in some of these projects we could have greater assistance from the Federal Government because they have an interest in conservation and in the welfare of the people generally. I think if we have proper co-ordination between the federal and provincial governments, and then with the municipal authorities, we will secure the kind of conservation work we need in Ontario.

We have 13 parks. In the State of New York they have 9. I was very pleased, as I know, Mr. Speaker, other hon. members of the House will also be, to read in the Speech from the Throne that something is going to be done about park areas and we are going to have an extension of them.

Speaking of water; I read an interesting piece the other day referring to water running down and taking good land and top soil away.

Beefsteak, potatoes and bread and butter with jam on it are being washed down our rivers each year in the form of good rich top soil.

That is what is going on in our lakes and rivers today. I would like to speak about the Humber Valley Conservation Authority. I attended a meeting of that authority the other night. They have a new picture. It is entitled Our Valley taken in technicolor and they have already made hundreds of showings of that picture throughout Toronto, and they are going to continue to do that great job of public relations—a great job in getting the public interested in conservation.

For the record I would like to tell you how the legislation works for establishing parks and park areas. In the first place there is the Ontario provincial legislation. There are The Local Improvement Act, The Provincial Parks Act, The Public Parks Act, The Municipal Act, The Niagara Parks Act, The Planning Act, and there is also the Conservation Authorities Act.

The reason I am mentioning these, Mr. Speaker, is that in the matter of conservation I think we have it spread possibly among too many departments. We have a Department of Planning and Development which is doing an excellent job; we have a Department of Agriculture and a Department of Public Works, a Department of Education and a Department of Travel and Publicity and it is my feeling that eventually it may be deemed advisable to set up a Department, with a Minister, directly responsible for conservation in all its many phases, and that may be the eventual answer to this thing.

Now, getting back to Toronto, we have the Don Valley Authority and the Humber Valley Service Authority and it is my firm conviction these authorities should be joined into one large conservation authority to cover this whole Metropolitan area. I think that by doing that they can eliminate a great deal of the difficulty they are experiencing now. I know that, as far as the City of Toronto is concerned, they are prepared to pay their share and it is quite a large share. I was very pleased to note the other day that the City Council of Toronto is prepared to turn over the Island to the Metropolitan Council. In my own view, Mr. Speaker, that is a great move, and I can foresee some day when our Toronto Island will be turned into a great recreational area and park land for use of everybody, and all the houses and temporary buildings there will be removed.

I was attending a Dominion Day regatta on the Island last July. We had contestants there from all parts of Ontario, from the United States and from other parts of Canada. They had rowing and canoe races, and so on, at a place called "Long Pond." This Long Pond is less than the regular size for Olympic races, and may I say that perhaps if this is going to be an area to serve all the people of Ontario, it may be the government would consider doing something to assist in that project. As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, we hope—and we are now seeking—to have the 1960 Olympics take place in the City of Toronto and everything that can be done is being done toward that end.

I would like to say a word about High Park and Riverdale Park. Here in Toronto as you drive through our beautiful High Park on a summer evening, you cannot find a place to park. If we had the necessary park and recreational areas within an hour's drive of downtown Toronto we could end that situation and provide the people with the necessary outlets for recreational purposes. Mr. Speaker, I cannot help but speak on this subject, because I think it is one which needs urgent attention. There is a great urgency for getting down to this matter of conservation. It is a misunderstood subject; it is something which has gone along through the years, and I think the time has come now when we should try to make conservation what it should be. In going over the report of the committee I noticed some of their recommendations. Some are good, and many have been implemented already. There is one mention here of recreation: "The government is formulating a policy in respect to Crown land for recreational purposes." I imagine the remarks in the Speech from the Throne cover that. I see that greater emphasis is to be given to the teaching of conservation in elementary and secondary schools, both rural and urban. I believe we are going to make a success of conservation through the conservation authorities. Large areas in this Province of Ontario must be prepared to assume a substantial part of the financial support of conservation authorities. We have the population. People say: "The people in the outskirts should pay their share, or more than their share because after all they live in the area." The point is, Mr. Speaker, that by far the majority of people using park facilities come directly from the city. So I think that we are compelled to act on this idea of conservation, if we take it up. If the province will give the necessary leadership, and if we can count on the support, financial and otherwise, of the provincial government, if we continue to do something about the various recommendations made by the Select Committee on Conservation, I feel, Mr. Speaker, we are going to get some place. I am very happy to be a member of the Standing Committee on Conservation, and I am sure that it will bring forward some very useful recommendations to the House.

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): At the outset I would like to express on behalf of the community in which I live a word of thanks to the Minister of Education (Hon. Mr. Dunlop) for his splendid assistance and for his keen personal interest in the erection of the new continuation school in that community, something that was seriously needed and something which the financial state of the municipality would have made difficult without his co-operation. We are indeed pleased as a community and I am pleased and proud.

Yesterday the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) made some remarks to this House, some of which were discussed before the Orders of the day, but they were not dealt with quite adequately by the hon. members today. Some of his remarks concerning the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and concerning the Liberal Party generally made one wonder if we sometimes spend too much money on education.

Speaking of the "spanking of the electoral bottom" which the hon. Leader of the Opposition is supposed to have received in 1951, I was wondering when the hon. member (Mr. Macaulay) was speaking yesterday if he recalled whose "electoral bottom" was the more red on the evening of August 10th last, and I wondered too if the hon. Mr. Drew might now bring out the gold-plated piano he played up and down Ontario and perhaps play on it the "Fort William Symphony." Yes, and have it drawn by some of the alleged horses from Petawawa, horses which the Conservative opposition at Ottawa never discussed in the report before the committee.

I know at the end too, the last government speaker said that he as well as the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) is opposed to provincial hospital insurance at this time. In that connection and along with the condemnation made yesterday of the Federal Government's proposed housing financial arrangements, I am led to wonder whether this Party is, as the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) says, actually Progressive-Conservative, because it does seem to smack somewhat of the Tory thinking by which they used to take the four steps about anything which was of a progressive nature in Canada. Firstly, they used to say it was unconstitutional; next, they would say it cannot be done because it would bankrupt us; then they would say it won't work anyways—but five years later they usually were found saying: "Why, we knew that all the time."

One of the things which I believe is important to the people of Ontario in these times, Mr. Speaker, is something we have discussed in this House before, not at any great length, but we have referred to it, and that is the strength of the opposition ranks in the House. Some criticism has been directed at times to the opposition ranks, to the effect that perhaps they are not doing as much as they should in criticizing the activities of the government. I wonder how many people realize that we have 20 departments to examine, and we do not have very many hon. members in opposition ranks. That was the reason the other day I took exception to the remarks of the hon. the Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh) as being ridiculous, when he referred to the help we have in our office. We do need, in our office, economists of the highest type, because there are things taking place in this province of very far-reaching effect, and hon. members of our Party in the House certainly cannot devote time to the necessary research, and still have the time to attend to all the necessary duties which the hon. members of this House are called upon to fulfill.

MR. KERR (Dovercourt): You are just making excuses.

MR. WREN: I do not require any excuses—and I do not think anyone in the Party does—and if the hon. member three seats to my right would contribute a little more himself to the activities of the province and of this House, we might be more enlightened.

Mr. Speaker, it has come to public attention lately that in the month of April the Ontario Liberal Party will meet again to select a new leader following the resignation of Mr. Thompson. I can assure this House, and I can assure the province, that the Party representatives in this House, and its members right across the province, are certainly keenly interested in developing the Party, and I think a strengthening of the opposition will make for better government all around, and certainly better government, when the Party subsequently takes over the government, three or four years hence.

AN HON. MEMBER: Three or four?

MR. WREN: Well, we might have an election this summer. I rather expect we will.

One thing which seems to have become a trend since the opening of this session and of course following the practice of others, is this parade of praise, and somehow or other we can never get an admission, despite this parade, that these conditions we are enjoying today are not so much the work of genius as they are the inspired offspring of time. But the government members of this House seem rather to spring from one delirium of attitude to another in order to maintain themselves at a very perilous height. May I admonish them to be careful that they do not get themselves in the position of an ostrich and bury their heads in the sand, because it is not only a blinding position to be in, it is also very vulnerable.

In speaking to this debate, Mr. Speaker, I want to say something about the part of Ontario I come from, along with my three colleagues from that part of Ontario, namely Northwestern Ontario. I think it is generally recognized and is becoming more recognized as time passes, that Northwestern Ontario is indeed not only an important section of the province, it is certainly the crossroads of Canada, because no matter what takes place in Canada in the transfer of material from east to west or vice versa and the travel of people back and forth across our nation, they all must pass through our part of this province. I think as time goes on it will be generally realized that Northwestern Ontario is actually the head and shoulders of this province, both in the physical sense when you look at the map of the province, where it contains almost 60 per cent. of the total land area, and you will note too that in it we have potentialities and now actualities of a great empire within our own province.

The area, Mr. Speaker, is actually one unit interdependent district by district for progress. We have our common economy and we have our common problems and whenever we of Northwestern Ontario are talking about it, you will find that each of us, in discussing our particular problem, is actually posing a problem which is common, usually, to all others.

May I briefly remind you, sir, of some of the important developments which are and have been taking place in that great part of Ontario. You will note the continued expansion of the Steep Rock Iron Mines and attendant areas, the sustained and expanding pulp and paper industry, the gold mining areas of Red Lake—and Red Lake does contribute much to the gold mining activity of the province—and recently you have noticed the sensational developments in the Manitowadge District in the area represented by the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope). In that connection I have noticed some remarks in the mining press to the effect that the Noranda people are interested in obtaining control of sections in that area for the purpose of enlarging production at their smelters in Quebec. I wish to remind the government that we in Northwestern Ontario are most anxious that if smelters become necessary to reduce the products of that mine, that those smelters be erected in Northwestern Ontario and operated there.

In the area of the northwestern part of my own riding, we have significant nickel and copper discoveries and the Quebec Nickel and many other companies are doing important work now in the area northwest of the Town of Kenora. Attendant upon that, in the mid-area of my own riding we have under way now upwards of a $15 million expenditure on a development by the Hydro of the Manitou Falls power project. That is going to add a great deal to our power supply in that part of the country and we look forward to that important addition to our economy.

As the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) reminded you the other day, Mr. Speaker, we must never lose sight of the wealth we have in that part of the country, in our timber, in our water power, in our game and in our fish.

In that connection, Mr. Speaker, I want to raise one point also which I think is important, certainly very important to our part of Ontario. The tourist industry is becoming indeed a very important one. It employs a large number of people, it creates a great buying power and it generally has given a great spurt to the economy of the area. One of the great difficulties encountered in that particular industry is that of tourist operators who find difficulty in the capital financing of their operations. Inasmuch as it is a direct—or indirect as you may look at it—development of our natural resources in the entertainment and direction of tourists coming into this country, I think it would be wise if we could work out a workable scheme which would provide these people with capital from government sources along the lines available to junior and senior farmers and others. I think that for this reason, Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that many of our younger men and women have gone into this business in Northwestern Ontario, the difficulty in expanding capital has brought about a situation where gradually American interests are assuming control of those camps and we are finding that in some sections of the northwest now the camp owners and operators in the majority are American citizens. I have no objection to Americans investing money in this country, but I do not see any reason why we cannot find some means to assist our own young people in establishing themselves in an industry which is, after all, part and parcel of the development of our natural resources.

Another important problem in that area is still one of transportation and access roads. I am not referring to any difficulties about bridges, I mean the transportation and access situation generally. I must admit quite freely we have now developed a quite good, in fact I would say a very good, system of main highways across Northwestern Ontario. There are sections yet which need improvement on the Trans-Canada Highway system, but when I think back to 1932 and 1933 and the kind of roads we had at that time and look at them now, I recognize that we have come a long way. However, we do have a situation of difficulty of access for large segments of our population and it affects not only the personal lives of people in some of these communities, but it definitely affects the development of the area generally. Somehow there seems to be the thinking that if they have to build a road for us or want to build a road for us, then it has to cost a lot of money. Now that may be true in the Trans-Canada sense or in the main trunk roads, but I know, as was repeated in the Mining Committee the other day, that many sections of the northwestern part of the province would be perfectly content, and many have been content, with roads that would get them in and out of the places in which they live and connect them with main highways. I refer, for example, to one place in my riding, the important tourist and recreation centre of Minaki. There is a large number of people there in the summer months and in the winter there is quite a good-sized sustaining population, but they only have rail access to the outside, and it would not be an expensive undertaking to provide that community with an outlet. The same holds true with the community of Macintosh, another important tourist centre in the summer and again an area with a sustaining winter population of winter residents, Indian school staffs and so on. That too, and particularly since there are already lumber company access roads in the area, could be quickly and cheaply developed.

In this matter of mining access roads, the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) is to be complimented on the initiative he has displayed in developing mining roads in the sense that he seems to be one of those persons who can make his dollars go quite a long way. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that the development of these mining access roads is an item of ever-increasing importance in the budgets of the Department of Mines, and certainly the $1,000,000 appropriation which has been the case in the last year or two could well be increased and could certainly be put to good use and have a good effect.

Another problem we have in that section, to which I referred to last year, and to which I now refer again, is the matter of hospital services and the need for zoning those hospital services into zones of influence, in other words creating hospital districts around the hospitals which serve a given area. The reason for that is that in the north we do not have the same situation you would have in Southern Ontario. Here you naturally have your county system, and particularly in the more settled areas you have an area served by a hospital, sometimes, as was mentioned the other day in Private Bills Committee, one hospital serving 7 or 8 municipalities in a fairly close radius. In the north we do not have that. The large area served is usually an unorganized section of the territory. It would be a great advantage if we could set up hospital districts and find some means of taxing or assessing those people in the unorganized sections who have just as ready use of the institutions as do the citizens of a particular community, but under present conditions are not liable directly for any capital costs or for any deficits which might occur, and usually do occur, in the operation of these hospitals.

Another problem in that connection, and certainly related to it, is that of the indigent patients, and again those indigent patients from unorganized territories. For the last few days I have been going through the financial statements of several hospitals up there, the Kenora General, the Dryden General, the Sioux Lookout General Hospital and one in the Thunder Bay District and generally the pattern is about the same. You will find an average cost per patient per day about $11.40 upwards.

and the losses, through caring for indigent patients both from organized and unorganized territories—but the unorganized certainly predominate—are resulting in deficits to those institutions which run from $9,000 upwards. Now I did note in the press the other day where the Department of Health had indicated that from this year on it might be possible that the share of indigent costs to municipalities or other responsible institutions might be reduced to a point where they would only be left with about one-sixth of the cost. That, Mr. Speaker, would be a decided improvement, indeed. Nevertheless, it is still a fact that there should not be the extra charge upon a municipality or upon any company or group that is operating a hospital for these people.

I will give you some examples of that, Mr. Speaker. For example, we had a patient in our hospital last year who is a particularly glaring case, but he happened to be an old-age pensioner who came in on what is known as a Form 176, as a provincial indigent patient, for which the hospital received $3.00 per day. The man had some disease which required special drugs. I am not too familiar with the diagnosis, but it was a type which is difficult to handle and the drugs in that particular case alone were $20.00 a day. The hospital was receiving $3.00 for his care and spending $20.00 for the cost of these drugs. None of that amount is recoverable and of course the man could not be turned away, for humanitarian reasons and others. If the treatment was required it had to be given to him.

That, of course, is a rather general situation in those cases; it is not often that the drug cost will reach $20.00 a day, but drug costs from $5.00 to $10.00 a day are quite common, and in addition to the fact that the hospital is losing the revenue represented by the difference between the indigent rate and the actual cost, it is having to pay the cost of the drugs and the dressings and so on which might be added to it.

With that I will leave the general discussion in Northwestern Ontario and go on to some other matters of government in which we are all interested. One thing I have been thinking about and, in fact, have been doing a little talking about lately, is the liquor problem in Ontario. Somehow or other this question continues to arise, and I think it is time we made some further study of these matters, because I think some of these problems in liquor distribution are self-created. One of course is that common problem which was referred to I believe by the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Houck) last year, that of the continued use of the extra amount of water in whiskey. That of course is a problem we are well aware of, but no one seems to do much about it. However, on the administrative side of the liquor question, one thing I think we should consider, and consider soon, is the elimination of the use of liquor permits. I think we have advanced to the stage now where it should not be necessary, as adult men and women, to have to go through this rigmarole in going to one of our liquor stores to make a purchase. I do not know why we cannot go in there as ordinary adult human beings when we want to make a purchase, make our needs known to the clerk on duty and pay the appropriate amount of money. Some people will suggest that the province earns a great revenue from the sale of these permits. I doubt very much whether the revenue received from the sale of permits, when compared to the extra cost of handling traffic and handling orders and so on, amounts to a great deal. However, supposing there is a balance to be gained by continuing the use of these permits, if necessary, there is no reason why another few cents could not be put on the purchase price of the product and this general nuisance eliminated.

Another thing which I think would bear more study and in which a good many people are interested is the problem of the suppliers of beer. There are many people who do not have the inclination to enter beverage rooms. There are other people who do not like the inconvenience and size of the purchases which might be necessary in the usual beer retailers. I can see no reason why in this day and age we should not put our beer in the grocery store, as is done in the Province of Quebec and in a good many states of the Union. I do not know why it would not work; I do not know why it would not have a good effect actually on temperance across the province. I do not know why a family could not make their purchases in two or three units at a time if they so wish, along with their grocery order.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Is that personal to the hon. member (Mr. Wren)? Is that his own view?

MR. WREN: That is my own view I am expressing. May I say a few words now, Mr. Speaker, about the matter of health and hospitalization? As I said at the outset, I notice there seems to be some opposition in government ranks to developing a health insurance scheme at this time. Perhaps it was simply an oversight, I do not know, but it seemed significant to me that while the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) made direct reference to the health insurance scheme, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) in replying to his remarks made no reference to it. However, Mr. Speaker, it is an opinion shared by thousands and thousands of people in all walks of life, including those in the medical profession, those in the business of administering hospitals and many others, that some solution should be found to the cost of health and hospitalization in this province. The previous speaker made some reference to, and quoted some likely statistics about, plans in other provinces and about the cost of plans in this province and what the average costs were to private insurance companies. I do not think anyone with any common sense, Mr. Speaker, has any idea that we can chase the private insurance companies out of business or make way for any costly or unwieldy system of health insurance, but I do not know why, in a province as wealthy as this one is and as wealthy as it will continue to be, we cannot work out some scheme which will take care of these extreme costs on the average family and assure the proper care for those who have not the means even to subscribe to a Blue Cross or private insurance scheme, as the case may be.

I can say, without reservation, Mr. Speaker, that one thing which has been popular with the people of Saskatchewan, and one thing which I think is to the credit of the CCF Government in Saskatchewan, is their hospital plan. It is not the best plan in the world; it is not the worst. I think one of the common weaknesses of that plan is the fact that Saskatchewan does not enjoy the industrial wealth we enjoy in a province like this, and so its scope of activities is somewhat limited. However, it is a government plan. I am not too "sold" on the idea that the government should institute this plan, but I am "sold" on the idea that the government should make provision for many of the people who find it necessary to go to hospital, and for the disaster which follows incidents of that kind.

Along this line, may I suggest that in the interval between sessions, the government might give serious consideration to the appointment of a Select Committee of this House to investigate health insurance in Ontario, and a health plan; study the plans in British Columbia and Saskatchewan, and the limited plans in effect in Newfoundland and elsewhere, and bring back to this House and this government recommendations which will be workable, and sensible. An hon. member mentions elections. I am not so interested in elections as I am in the health and welfare of some of our people. I happen to know, first-hand, the personal tragedies which come from extensive illnesses, which have fallen upon people through no fault of their own.

I would suggest, too, Mr. Speaker, that actually the ones who are the worst off when this kind of trouble takes place, are not those who are entirely indigent, but the wage-earners, who are earning marginal incomes, and find that their $50.00 or $60.00 a week is stretched to the limit to feed and clothe their families. They are the ones who find it very difficult to go to hospitals, because they simply cannot pay bills, except in very small amounts per month, and it makes it very hard for their wives and families to have to find the extra few dollars each month to enable them to go to a hospital, with their already overstrained weekly income. They are the people who suffer the most.

I presume most hon. members—as I do myself—belong to some scheme. I have belonged to one for some years, and we find that with advancing years, participation in these schemes usually brings increasing benefits, and that is why so many people are afraid they might lose something by joining any government-sponsored scheme. I do not think that would necessarily happen. I think a broad plan could be worked out, and could be made to work very successfully.

The other day the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) introduced his White Paper on lands and forests. We have not had the opportunity of studying this document as yet, but I understand we are going to start on it in committee tomorrow morning.

There is one feature from a cursory reading of the report to which I would strenuously object, as I think a good many people in Ontario will, and that is the suggestion contained in the appendix to this report that a $1.00 fishing licence be charged to residents. I do not think that is a good idea at all. As far as I am personally concerned—and I do not know what the attitude is of my Party—I would strenuously object to the imposition of a licence of that kind. There are very few things left to us these days which we can enjoy without having to pay a fee, or fill out a form, or see some civil servant, and I think the right of a man to take his fishing line and drop it into a lake and catch a fish, without having a $1.00 price tag attached to it, should be maintained.

I could couple this remark with reference to a licence up until recently charged by the Federal Government. I refer to the radio licences. We were even charged for the air over which the sound travelled.

was a difficult licence to collect, and it was a sort of a "nuisance licence," and eventually abolished it. I think imposing a fishing licence upon the residents of Ontario would be a similar nuisance, and cause a great deal of grief to a large number of people.

Another matter which has been in the public attention for some time, and continues to be, is the highway scandals at Fort William. This, Mr. Speaker, is a very serious matter indeed. A person is somewhat at a loss to know what might best be done in these matters because so far there has been no attempt by the government to explain what has happened in the Department of Highways, and as far as I know, there has been no attempt on the part of the Provincial Auditor—who is, as I understand, responsible, not to the government, but to this Legislature—to bring a report before this House. The only information we have of an official, or semi-official nature, is the news items we have seen in the press from time to time.

In the press, there has been quite a sequence of reports. The first significant report was in the Globe and Mail of October 8th, 1953, when there was a report of irregularities and suspended clerks driving $6,000 cars.

Then in the Telegram of January 16th, 1954, there was a report about the firing of a number of employees and proceeding to lay charges.

On February 18th, the Telegram carried a further report which added to the general material, detailing the non-existence of trucks and truckers being carried on the payrolls.

On January 21st, the Telegram carried a story referring to the scandal about 14 or 15 contracts in the area.

On January 22nd, more information was made available in the Telegram. And so on down the line.

We were assured by the hon. Prime Minister the other day there would be no delay in setting up the Public Accounts Committee, to enable this House to examine this question in committee. There is no reason, I submit,

Mr. Speaker, why this committee should not be called at the earliest possible moment. There is a great deal of work to be done in that committee, and a great deal of information which the government is bound, by its own statements to provide to this House and to the public, before the opposition begins their sequence of examination of any information which is made available.

There is one thing which compounds the seriousness of this situation in the northwest—and, indeed, in other parts of the province—and which I think is undermining the public confidence in public activities generally. This whole thing, Mr. Speaker, has become a reflection upon everything and everybody who has anything to do with public life, and I regret to have to state in this House that until the situation is satisfactorily explained in committee, or in this House, there is in the minds of the public of this province, some definite association between the Progressive Conservative Party and the operations of the Department of Highways.

It might be unfair to suggest the government should be held responsible for the actions of a provincial Party organization. Nevertheless, the activities of this Party organization in Northwestern Ontario—and if it is true there, it must be true, in like manner, in other parts of Ontario—are indeed worthy of close examination by the public.

I would suggest, Mr. Speaker,—and again, without the authority from an examination of the Public Accounts—that the activities of the government in Northwestern Ontario produce for the Progressive Conservative Party a major portion of its campaign funds. Certainly the patronage practices in the northwest are exercised to the full in that part of Ontario, and it is a fact—not a rumour—that anything which might produce a profit with the expenditure of a minimum amount of energy, goes to someone who has taken the pledge of loyalty to the Progressive Conservative Party.

These things can have and do have the most serious ramifications. They invade not only the principle of what is right and what is wrong, but they even invade the innermost aspects of the administration of justice in this province.

The hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) made some remarks yesterday about the administration of justice, and the taking of evidence, which were serious in their import, and serious in their applications.

We have in Northwestern Ontario, a matter which is of very serious concern to the general public. It is not something which the Provincial Auditor does not know, and I do not think the government can suggest it does not know of the situation I am about to relate in connection with this matter.

Last summer, the Provincial Auditor made an investigation in our country on another matter, which has to do with the administration of public affairs, and as a result of his investigation I do not know whether the person concerned resigned or whether he was dismissed—I was not provided with that information—but, in any event, the Crown Attorney in the District of Kenora left the employment of the government.

Subsequently, during the fall months, according to a notice published in the Ontario Weekly Notes, the Law Society of Upper Canada published this notice of disbarment:

The Discipline Committee of the Law Society of Upper Canada found, after due enquiry, that Mr. Bernard Arnold Russell Taylor, of the Town of Kenora, in the District of Kenora, was guilty of professional misconduct and conduct unbecoming a barrister and solicitor, in that he appropriated to his own use, certain sums of money and in connection therewith, forged the names of certain persons.

It goes on to say:

The Benchers of the Law Society adopted the committee's report and ordered that the said Bernard Arnold Russell Taylor be disbarred, and resolved that he is unworthy to practice as a solicitor; subsequently an order was made by the Registrar of the Supreme Court of Ontario, under function of the Crown to obtain a conviction unless the Crown feels that there is sufficient evidence to justify it. So far as I know in these particular cases, the Crown Attorneys who handled these trials are men of great experience, and it is not their practice to attempt to get convictions at all costs. Their purpose is to get convictions if the evidence warrants it, and to fight the case as hard as it may be necessary, if the evidence warrants it, and if there are any extenuating circumstances or evidence in favour of the accused, it is their duty to make sure that is also fairly brought before the court.

But it was decided at the second trial not to introduce the confession. However, in the course of the evidence, for some reason which may be difficult to understand, the defence introduced the confession, and the accused made a statement that he made the confession before two police officers because they used a rubber hose or some instrument of that kind in order to force this confession from him. Then the two police officers were called as witnesses. My recollection is, I think, they were called by the defence, but that does not really make any difference, because they were called, they gave their evidence, they were subject to cross-examination, and both of these police officers swore under oath—both reputable members of the Toronto police force—that they did not use any rubber hose, that they had no rubber hose to use, and that they used no method of intimidation to obtain the confession that was made.

Whether true or not, that is the evidence with regard to the second trial.

In the third case, again the Crown Attorney decided not to use the confession but to rely on the evidence of the witnesses available, at which time the defence had an additional witness, and the judge decided that, with this additional evidence, the case for the Crown could not succeed.

Now Mr. Speaker, I intend to peruse the evidence when I have it available, and if there is any other aspect that might be of interest to this House, I will bring it forward in due course.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Would the Attorney-General care to utilize this occasion to reply to a rather important point raised by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) yesterday? I refer to his statement that this wrongly convicted person was in no way compensated for the loss of time which he served so unnecessarily.

MR. PORTER: Of course that is true of all criminal cases. I do not know whether the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) suggests there should be some policy providing compensation to every person who is acquitted. I do not know where that would take us or where one could draw the line, and there is always this to be considered, that when a man is acquitted, in some cases it is because there is not enough evidence to convict him. Very often he may be a guilty man but the Crown's evidence is not sufficient for a conviction. The benefit of the doubt is always, and rightly, in favour of the accused.

If the government must take the responsibility for compensating in all cases where an accused person is acquitted, I do not know just where that would lead. There has never been any such policy and I cannot say that there is any such policy contemplated at the present time.

MR. SALSBERG: That is too bad. There should be.

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister): I think the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) and other members of the House will see the difficulty. The judiciary is properly appointed by both Federal and Provincial Governments. Juries are a cross-section of the public chosen from the public. Mr. Speaker, it is inevitable that appointed officials, judges and magistrates, and juries of the people may make mistakes. Every effort is made to correct any mistake and prevent miscarriages of justice and I think the most meticulous care should be taken in that regard. That is one of the things that makes me fearful about capital punishment, which is irrevocable. But the point is that it is the people, that is, the great public, the appointed officials and juries, who do these things. I do not know of any country in the Commonwealth, or any other place, where there is a policy whereby if there is a mistake in judgment of that sort, either criminal or civil, there is compensation for it. I think there are cases on record where perhaps there has been something done to lighten the effect of such a mistake. I may say that my experience in law was largely confined—I mean in criminal matters—to being a defence counsel. I had one case where a man was wrongly convicted in good faith by the magistrate and afterwards was exonerated. But, sir, I think the essence of this is good faith, and the fact that this is done really by the people themselves. I have never heard of any method of compensating for any mistakes that may happen in either criminal or civil cases. I suppose there is many a person who has been assessed damages by a jury, when another jury might have taken a different view, but, inevitably, this seems to be the only way we can handle these matters.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The two things that concern me relative to this matter are the two rather definite charges the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) made yesterday in the course of his remarks. I think the Attorney-General (Hon. Mr. Porter) will agree with me they should either be substantiated or declared without any vestige of reasonable foundation in fact.

The two charges were, in the first place, as I recall them, as follows: The hon. member said that a rubber hose had been used in order to obtain a confession. That is a very, very serious charge and we should not leave this House without having in our possession evidence that will either substantiate or contradict that very definite charge.

The other charge was that the Crown Attorney was more interested in securing a conviction than in seeing that justice was done. That is another serious charge. The hon. member also said this conviction was based on evidence not submitted in court but "sneaked in the back door." I suggest to this House that, if any Crown Attorney in this province is guilty of the practices that my hon. friend suggested yesterday, he should no longer be a Crown Attorney.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer to another matter before the Orders of the day. My attention was drawn to an article in the Globe and Mail of this date, February 24th, headed "Is Metro A Matter For Laughs?" May I say, first of all, in answer to that headline, the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto is not a matter for laughs. The answer is "No."

Mr. Speaker, the tenor of the article was this: "Was this bill devised as a method of bringing about within a period of 3, 4 or 5 years a total amalgamation?" I want to state to the House, as I have stated before, those of us who have had to deal with this very complicated matter went through varying degrees of thought. There were varieties of opinion during the past 3 or 4 years as we became deeply engaged in these matters I could not hope to name all of them because a great number of persons were consulted, but the principal ones, I would say, were Mr. Cumming, Chairman of the Municipal Board, the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs and his Deputy, Mr. Orr, the hon. Attorney-General and a large number of advisers. We unanimously came to the decision—by various processes of thinking and various courses—that we were against amalgamation for these reasons: First, it was too late. Annexations may have been carried out over a period of about 35 years, but we came to this conclusion that amalgamations—that means annexation—of these areas by the City of Toronto could not now be undertaken because it was far too late. Moreover, in the second place, the area was too big, the problem was too big and filled with too many complications and there was nothing in our history or experience which could lead us to believe that anything but chaos would result from a complete amalgamation of this area.

Section 48 of the Law Society Act, striking his name off the rolls of the court.

It says that this man was disbarred from practice for appropriating to his own use funds which were provincial government funds.

HON. MR. PORTER: It does not say that.

MR. WREN: The Benchers of the Law Society are men who are well learned, and are not given to publishing accusations, unless they have good grounds to believe they are true.

HON. MR. PORTER: My recollection is that this matter had something to do with some other matters. I would like to find out to what the hon. member (Mr. Wren) is referring.

MR. WREN: As far as I can learn, there has never been a prosecution of this man, but I am not so much interested in that, because it has dragged on for some time, and I am not one who wants to persecute anyone. What I am concerned with is the principle involved, which is also the concern of every person in that part of the country. How are they to be assured that when an official in a very high place can be adjudged guilty, as the Law Society alleges, and not be brought to task, that anyone employed in the Department of Highways, or any other department of government, under similar circumstances, will not be brought before the courts, and public attention given to their transactions, and rightful justice meted out? It is not the right of the hon. Attorney-General or any other person, to determine whether or not a person has done something which is right or wrong. That is a matter for the courts. Our courts are established for that very purpose.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member (Mr. Wren) has known about this for some time. Why does he not lay a charge? He is a citizen in that part of the country.

MR. WREN: Has the hon. Attorney-General the temerity to suggest that while his department knows about these things, which were laid by his officials before him for his attention, that I should be the person to lay the charge?

HON. MR. PORTER: As a citizen, if you think the Attorney-General should lay a charge, but has not, and you know the facts, it is up to the hon. member to lay the charge, if he wants to do the right thing. All I can say is that the advice I received from the officials, after they had investigated the whole matter, was there was no basis for a criminal charge. The man was asked to resign, and he resigned. There was no loss of money—

MR. WREN: Is the hon. Attorney-General saying the Law Society dealt unfairly with this man?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know whether the Law Society did deal with him while he was the Crown Attorney, or after he had resigned. There had been some mention made about "forgery," but I do not think it had anything to do with the time when he was in our employ.

MR. WREN: The hon. Attorney-General says there was no loss of money.

HON. MR. PORTER: There were some irregularities in his accounts—

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): That is not the same thing. I suppose?

HON. MR. PORTER: It did not amount to a great deal in money, and there was restitution of whatever he did get.

MR. WREN: That is not good enough.

HON. MR. PORTER: The advice received was there was not evidence upon which any criminal charge could be laid in that case. The hon. member (Mr. Wren) thought there was.

He lives up there and apparently knows all about it, yet he did not bring it to anybody's attention, and say, "As a citizen, I think this man should be charged. Up in my community they are all talking about it."

MR. WREN: The statement made by the hon. Attorney-General is not quite correct, Mr. Speaker.

I want to add, Mr. Speaker, there were other professional people—

HON. MR. PORTER: It was the same thing with a magistrate up in your part of the country.

MR. WREN: That was at Fort William.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes. He was appointed by the Hepburn Government. Are you going to take responsibility for the whole province? The magistrate in Fort William was also found guilty of irregularities, using certain funds which should have been in a trust account, but he did not keep them in a trust account, and was told he would have to. He finally got the money into the trust account, but he was asked to resign.

MR. WREN: I do not know anything about the incident to which the hon. Attorney-General refers.

HON. MR. PORTER: You know all about the Kenora man, and you say there should have been a prosecution.

MR. WREN: I do not know all about it. I would like to know. I would like to have some evidence as to what was done.

HON. MR. PORTER: In any case, if the hon. member has any information or any evidence he thinks we should have—

MR. WREN: May I ask the hon. Attorney-General if he will table the evidence which he has, in this House?

HON. MR. PORTER: I think I can find it.

MR. WREN: Will the hon. Attorney-General table it?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, of course we will table it.

MR. WREN: Then it is a matter of making restitution? A senior Cabinet Minister of this government says that if restitution is made, all is well. May I ask, Mr. Speaker, how far that policy will be extended? If anyone in the employ of the Department of Highways should be charged, and makes restitution, is the matter completely over? Is that the policy of the government?

HON. MR. PORTER: It all depends on circumstances.

MR. WREN: The circumstances are such that all of these things should properly be the business of the Legislature of this province, and these matters should not have to be brought to light by publishing the cause and effects of misdeeds in a publication which is available to anybody who wants to read it.

HON. MR. PORTER: As I say, the misdeeds mentioned—well, I will have to investigate this.

MR. WREN: I think you should.

HON. MR. PORTER: As far as I know, some of these have nothing to do with this man's activities while he was the Crown Attorney. However, I will look into it.

MR. SPEAKER: I must ask there be no expressions from the galleries at all.

MR. WREN: Now, Mr. Speaker, I just want to conclude that portion of my remarks by saying the people in Northwestern Ontario are very apprehensive of what might be done with people who are found to have been misappropriating government funds, or misbehaving in some other manner. They are very reluctant to believe there will be any sincerity shown in other departments when irregularities are found.

There was another example of what has taken place, where another professional group—which has nothing to do with the legal profession—found itself in difficulties. This very same man came to Toronto and was given instructions here to prosecute, and to paraphrase, he went back and literally "threw the book at him." But when the Crown official himself—a man who should be an example in public service, an example to everyone connected with the administration of justice, or with government affairs of this province—does the same thing, the hon. Attorney-General says that "restitution has been made, and we do not think—we do not know—but we do not think there is any cause for a prosecution."

I am not interested in persecuting any of these people. The man has suffered a serious loss by the loss of his certificate to practice law. But I do want to be assured, the Liberal Party wants to be assured, and I think the people of Ontario want to be assured—that this will not become the regular practice in this government.

The other day, the hon. Prime Minister, in referring to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, stated that it was quite ridiculous to expect that any losses in the Department of Highways over the past few years in the north country, could even approach $5 million or $7 million because they just did not spend that kind of money up there; there was not that much money spent.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to submit that the 1952-53 Public Accounts will show that in the divisions of Blind River, Fort William and Kenora, in a period extending over some 5 years, a sum in excess of $69,500,000 was spent, and that does not include the expenditures by the Municipal Roads Branch by way of subsidies to the municipalities.

I would submit to you, Mr. Speaker, that contained in those expenditures, from 1946 to 1952, there is every possibility of there being $5 million or $7 million which has been misspent, or in some way misused amongst those three divisions, and certainly added to that, will be expenditures which have been made in other divisions in Ontario, and we find a very unhappy situation indeed.

For that reason, again I emphasize,

Mr. Speaker, that this House should be told by way of a special report, even in a secret session. I do not know how; I am not too interested in how the hon. members get the information, but it is my opinion that each one of the 90 hon. members of this House should be given a detailed report in some way and in some manner, by the Auditor of the Province of Ontario, and until we have that report, and until something is done with the report by way of discussion, and by way of explanation, we are all going to be in darkness, as is the public of Ontario.

We do not know how long these trials are going to last in Fort William. The preliminary hearings will take place within the next few days I understand from the press, but they are only preliminary hearings. If the magistrate decides the cases should be referred, they will naturally go to the next assizes, and that could be several months hence. The trials themselves could be lengthy, and there may be appeals, which will take some additional time. Meanwhile, there is nothing to indicate to us that steps are to be taken to correct a very unhealthy situation.

We have consistently stated that there should be a judicial enquiry into this situation, and I repeat it is my firm conviction—as I think it is the conviction of a large majority of people in the Province of Ontario—that this should be done, for the very simple reason that a judicial enquiry would be conducted in public, the public would have knowledge of the state of the investigation, and would be able themselves, if they wished, to contribute information to that body.

As it stands now we have a firm hired by the department to investigate its own employees, and if they are smart they will bend to the will of the employer, and there can and will be no confidence that this firm will give the kind of a report which is necessary for the public interest in the Province of Ontario.

As I conclude my remarks, Mr. Speaker, I would repeat again that the veil of secrecy in this whole situation should be lifted. We are in possession of some information which is of vital interest to this investigation, and of vital interest to matters connected with the Department of Highways, and some other departments, but until we know what the government is going to do about these things, and what they are going to give us in the way of information, are we going to be held up for another session—

HON. MR. PORTER: May I ask the hon. member (Mr. Wren) if his information might aid the prosecution?

MR. WREN: Some months ago I contacted the Provincial Auditor, and I asked him if he could find it possible to investigate certain matters in that part of the country, and his reply was, "Mr. Wren, I will be glad to check on those things. We know some of them are quite serious, but I just have not the time nor the staff to do it."

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member says he has information which we have not.

MR. WREN: Call the committee together, Mr. Attorney-General.

HON. MR. PORTER: Would the information be of assistance to the Crown Prosecutors engaged in prosecuting these matters?

MR. WREN: I do not know. I am not a legal authority.

HON. MR. PORTER: The proper thing to do is to lay any information which the hon. member may have, before the Crown.

MR. WREN: If the committee may be called, that information can be placed before it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Not the committee. If the information will assist in the success of these cases, I say the Crown is entitled to have that information.

MR. WREN: We do not know of any crimes having been committed. The government has not told us.

HON. MR. PORTER: You have secret information, and are holding it back?

MR. WREN: We are not holding back any information. We are waiting for this committee.

HON. MR. PORTER: You are in the Legislature now. You can tell us.

MR. WREN: We do not come down here 1,100 miles or more, to speak in circles. Let the committee be called. We are prepared to lay this information before the committee at any time.

HON. MR. PORTER: You will not give the information to the Crown officials?

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Has not the government some secret information, at the same time?

MR. WREN: Yes, I think so. And may I say that everyone is interested in what that secret information is.

Yesterday there was some mention made in regard to the handling of tenders, and I think one suggestion made by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) was a good one. That was, that all tenders should be dealt with and opened in public, and all information in and about those tenders should be made available immediately to the public.

There is too much secrecy altogether in the handling of government contracts and tenders. It will be interesting in the committee to see just how these contracts with the Department of Highways have been handled in the North-western part of the province, and it will be interesting to see how some of the other departments handle their different dealings with people who work for them, along these same lines.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to say in conclusion that I appreciate your tolerance very much, and I want to say to you that it is a pleasure indeed to serve in this House under you, and I want to convey to you my personal thanks for your advice and assistance as the months pass by.

HON. MR. FROST: May I ask the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope) to adjourn the debate?

MR. WARDROPE moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I asked for the adjournment at this time due to the fact this is the date of your dinner, and I understand that the representatives of the press are to be present at the dinner. If we work through until 6 o'clock, it makes it difficult for them to be there at 10 minutes to 7, the hour set by your Honour. I asked the hon. member to adjourn the debate for that reason, and I now move the adjournment of the House.

Tomorrow, we will proceed with addresses in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.30 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 25, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: May I, on behalf of the Legislature, welcome today students from the Claremont School, Jesse Ketchum Public School, the Queensway Public School with the hon. member for Dovercourt as the instructor in charge, the Jefferson Public School, and the students from St. Michael's College, who are assembled this afternoon.

As I have said in the past, we more than welcome the students from the province to these sessions. Our hope is that they will go back to be better and more enthusiastic citizens of this splendid province of which we are all so proud.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: The following petitions have been received:

Of the Corporation of The Ross Memorial Hospital praying that an Act may pass increasing the membership of the Board of Governors to 17 members; and for other purposes.

Of the Corporation of the Town of Oakville praying that an Act may pass authorizing the Council of the Corporation to issue local improvement debentures; and for other purposes.

THE SPEAKER: Presenting reports by committees.

MR. NICKLE: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: Mr. Nickle from the Standing Committee on Private Bills presents the committee's Second Report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bill with amendment:

Bill No. 29, An Act respecting the Town of Palmerston.

Your committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments:

Bill No. 1, An Act respecting The Frontenac High School District.

Bill No. 24, An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec.

Your committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 24, An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec, and on Bill No. 29, An Act respecting the Town of Palmerston.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

THE SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I desire to table answers to questions 2, 4, 6, 12 and 21.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: The first Order, Resuming the Adjourned Debate on the amendment to the motion for an Address in Reply to the Speech of the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor at the opening of the session.

MR. GEO. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, naturally it is very pleasing to me to have this reception afforded me when I rise to speak in this House, because I always consider it a great honour to be privileged to address remarks to this Assembly which represents a province of 5,000,000 people.

First, may I congratulate you, Mr. Speaker, on the fairness with which you act as referee in these debates and disputes. Your fairness is only exceeded by your ability as a very generous and gracious host, an example of which it has been my privilege to enjoy during the last few days.

I want to express pleasure, too, at the return of the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) a young man whom we were very, very sorry to hear suffered a very serious physical setback. When he stood on his feet the other day and presented the White Paper on Forestry in such an able manner, it proved to me that he had had a complete return to health, and, naturally, with all hon. members in this House, I rejoice at his physical recovery. It is a pleasure to see him back.

It is also a pleasure to see in this House two new hon. members, because coming from Fort William, Mr. Speaker, I have been a bit timorous of the results of the by-elections, in Simcoe East and Niagara Falls. But today we see two hon. members who are not only brilliant in debate, but who are very pleasant in appearance, in the persons of the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) and the hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby). I know they are going to add greatly to the legislative debates and they will, without question, ably represent the citizens in their respective ridings. I welcome them, congratulate them on their elections, and assure them they will have my full cooperation as hon. members of this House.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that it would be remiss on my part, coming from the constituency of Port Arthur - East Thunder Bay, if I were not to make some mention of the highways investigation which has been bandied about this province during the past few months, probably not always in a way that is, shall I say, to the benefit of the district which I represent. I would like to bring to the attention of the House, that the highways investigation was instituted by this government in the first place. There was no question, once irregularities were found, as to what the ultimate decision would be.

The hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) when he found there were irregularities, suspended some 17 men. Today, 5 of those former employees are under arrest. I think the hon. Minister of Highways will correct me if I am wrong, but no contractor who had any part in the building of highways in that district has been paid one cent of public funds during the last 6 months. It has been an unfortunate experience for our wholesalers, and so on, but at the same time the hon. Minister has felt that public funds cannot be paid out when there is any question that they have not been rightly earned. That has always been the policy of this government, and I think in the final analysis will redound to its benefit when it is seen it will investigate this thing, regardless of who, big or small, is to blame.

Yesterday, we had criticism of this government in regard to highways investigations, and other comments have been brought to its attention which the public may think are not quite right.

This government has a history of absolute honesty, Mr. Speaker. That has been proven since 1943, and is evidenced by the confidence the voters place in it, as proven in the Simcoe East and Niagara Falls elections.

I would like to say this about the highways investigation: there is no doubt in anyone's mind in my constituency that anyone found guilty of irregularities in connection with this investigation will be immediately dealt with.

Upon discovery of irregularities, as I said, 17 men were dismissed, 5 arrested, and all contractors' monies have been held up since the investigation was commenced. An independent firm of engineers is investigating and checking everything in connection with the building of our highways. When it is completed, Mr. Speaker, a full report will be given to the public. What more can be done?

Let me bring in this point, Mr. Speaker, the men in my district have been crucified by the metropolitan press before they have had an opportunity to be judged in the courts. Tragedy has been occasioned in homes. The men and their wives have feared to walk out in the public eye, because of the stories which have been bandied about and rolled up to colossal heights in the press and by those who seek political advantage for themselves.

Mr. Speaker, I fought in two wars to defend that flag which hangs over your head, because I believed it represented truth, justice and fair play. I still believe it stands for that, but some of the things that have been done politically, and otherwise, recently in connection with the highways investigation in our area and others, leads me to believe that forces in this country do not live up to fair play and British justice as we know it in this country. I decry that attitude, Mr. Speaker.

We pay lip-service to our civil service in this House. The other day I heard our forestry officials were the finest in the world, that our civil servants were giving service all the time to the public, and yet in our civil service today, we have men and women fearful for even their very homes and lives because of this tremendous political advertising which has been given to a few irregularities. These little people should be protected. I am not trying to protect the big man, who has made millions. He can look after himself. Today we find men in the civil service who simply have jobs, half of whom are under-paid, their names, their private lives, and their so-called "irregularities" dragged through the metropolitan press, through this House and through the country.

The other day in Montreal I went through a wax museum. They have a picture of the catacombs where years ago they used to throw human beings to the lions as sacrifices. I could not help but think that for political aggrandizement and for power, we were sacrificing these little people who in the final analysis will be proved innocent.

I do not condone any irregularities. Neither does this government, but we certainly like to see fair play, and British justice done. When in the first trial in the courts in the City of Fort William, a lawyer for one of the accused suggested contempt of court proceedings against one of the metropolitan dailies, the magistrate agreed with him, and the reporters were recalled.

Mr. Speaker, that was a gracious thing for these men who are now standing before the bar of justice and whose future is so jeopardized and prejudiced by these accusations, and innuendoes and chicanery—circumlocution if you will. Yesterday the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) spoke about the money which has been spent in our area. I think I am correct, he said $69,000. I took the trouble to check on this and I find he was only 30 per cent. out, which he is in most of his statements. I agree he has to make those statements because he is trying to attain a higher office. If that is correct, I do not agree with him, but that is his business. The money which has been spent from Blind River to the Manitoba boundary in the last 5 years is $54 million or $11 million in each of the districts concerned.

Mr. Speaker, we saw in the press where these vicious accusations against these civil servants had placed the figure as high as $7 million. How could we have the roads we have in our country today if out of an expenditure of $11 million, $7 million had been pilfered? Do not forget that in the final analysis the last word in o.k.'ing these payments was with the Federal Government's engineer. He was the man, in the final analysis, to pay all these accounts. Let us not forget that when the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) accuses us of irregularities. Why did not their man who was in sole charge not correct these things? It was left to our government to find out there were irregularities.

We built the Atikokan road, and residents of the City of Fort William know what a wonderful highway it is; we built the Marathon highway, we paved the Trans-Canada for some 70 miles, and we built secondary roads. Never in the history of our district have we had more or better highways than have been built during the last 5 years under the Frost administration. They could not have been built if this money had been stolen, or if the money had never gone into our roads. Many hon. members, both in opposition and supporting the government, have been in our area; they have driven over those roads; they have seen the improvements; they know that money must have gone into the highways. At a conference which my hon. friend the member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) attended last fall, this resolution was passed. It was again reiterated by the president of this organization which represents all the municipalities of our area, in the hon. Prime Minister's office yesterday morning.

Here is the resolution which was passed to the hon. Minister of Highways:

Resolved that an expression of thanks be sent to the Minister of Highways for the work done on the highways and municipal roads by the local officials of the Department of Highways in Northwestern Ontario.

The hon. member for Kenora attended that conference. That resolution was passed unanimously. He was a party to it. Yet he says that due to irregularities, the money which should have gone into these highways was stolen by these same officials.

MR. WREN: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, I did not make any statement . . .

MR. WARDROPE: Mr. Speaker, I gather that $7 million is alleged to have been stolen, when only $11 million was spent. That is too ridiculous to comment on. Where did our good roads come from—the Atikokan road, the Marathon road, the paving of the Trans-Canada and many other roads, the many other roads which have been built, which have pleased our people so greatly? There is only one point I wish to make, Mr. Speaker, and this criticism tends to make me think it may happen. The public is not responsible for any irregularities in the Highway Department; it cannot be held responsible for them, so there must be no restricting or holding back highway development in Northern Ontario. Fortunately, I do not think this is going to happen. I have an assurance from the hon. Minister of Highways and from the hon. Prime Minister that it will not happen. We want more roads in our territory. We need them, and we will be proud of them.

Mr. Speaker, I think many hon. members in this House will know Senator Norman Patterson. Senator Patterson is one of the outstanding men in this country. Head of Patterson Steamship Lines, he is a senator at Ottawa, appointed by the Liberal Government, a very fine man, a great friend of mine and a great booster for Northern Ontario.

Two weeks ago he was at the Lakehead and here are his remarks as contained in the press, the News-Chronicle and the Times-Journal: "Senator Patterson, who was leaving the Lakehead today, following a two-day visit to us, expressed continuing faith in the future of the Twin Cities and despite what he called 'recent regrettable publicity.'" "Senator Patterson in an interview in Fort William said the necessity of a probe into the affairs of the Fort William Highways Department Crown office was most unfortunate, but said he was confident the provincial government . . ." and mark this; he is a Liberal senator, and says the provincial government will do the right thing. He said the government is to be congratulated on the highways programme regarding the Lakehead. That by a Liberal senator. He said:

He did not think the highways investigation will have any unfavourable influence in the next provincial election.

The hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby) and the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) are fully convinced of that.

Senator Patterson said his confidence in the future of this area was in a large measure based on a conference he held with officials in the Steep Rock Company and the Caland Steel Company who in turn praised the highways in their area.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether we should listen to a lot of this folderol bandied about in this House about investigations and irregularities and what has been done in connection with the highways. I have been at the Royal York Hotel for the last two days. Our hon. Minister has been there speaking to 2,000 gentlemen at a dinner. I heard that the other night there was expressed the greatest praise for the way he has handled this investigation, for the work done in this province and for his staff. I am not a bit afraid of what the public will say in its verdict if, as and when the next election is called.

We in our area believe we have been well served by the Department of Highways. We only regret the tragedy which has befallen the lives of these little people, who have been used as a means for the political aggrandizement of other folks.

Mining, Mr. Speaker, is something that is much to the fore in our area. At the present time you hear about Manitowadge Lake, one of the greatest things that has happened in Canada. Manitowadge Lake is a copper, zinc, silver area where today there are over 6,000 claims staked covering an area over 50 miles long by 9 miles wide and we believe there will be the town at Manitowadge Lake with a population of some 10,000 people within two years.

In the Department of Mines, during 1953, more claims were staked than in any year in the history of this province. More bullion was produced, in dollar value, than has ever been produced in this province and I want to pay full tribute to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly)—who has just taken his seat—and to his very able staff, for the way in which they handled these things. They came up when Manitowadge Lake was discovered. Incidentally, it was discovered by personal friends of mine, Mr. Speaker, but unfortunately I did not benefit financially from it. I am always foolish anyways. But Mr. Parker, Mr. Forrester and Mr. Dividowitch discovered that great property. About 6 weeks after it was discovered they came and asked me if I could take them up to interview the Minister of Mines. What they wanted was to see if there could be a winter road built into that property which lies equidistant between Highway 11 and Highway 17. We went in to see the Minister of Mines and his Deputy, Doctor Rica, one of the great mining men of this province, and within one hour we had their assurance that a winter road would be bulldozed immediately to take in their equipment, men and machines, and we also had the assurance that the engineers in the Mining Department would be in there the first thing in the spring to survey a road to serve this area.

Then the hon. Minister of Planning and Development from Hamilton (Mr. Warrender)—I do not like the town very well, but I like him—assured me that they will plan and develop that town which, I say, will have a population of some 10,000 people within the next few years. I mention these things, Mr. Speaker, because it shows the speed with which our government acts when they see these great things happening. These men are alert to progress in our province and they, in their turn, do everything they can to help develop these things.

May I read you a couple of extracts from our local paper, the News-Chronicle, of recent dates, as follows:

The first is headed:

May Be Town Of 10,000 People
At Manitouwadge.

Accepting as reasonably accurate the estimates of those who should know, and in view of the willingness of others to invest millions on the prospects, it would appear that a town of perhaps 10,000 or even more is to be brought into being at Manitouwadge as fast as men can go in to do the work.

There will even be some construction in advance of the connecting roads from north and south which will be under way as soon as the ground conditions permit.

Early in January the mining and financial press agreed on an estimate of 10,000 tons of good commercial grade ore for the main, or original, copper-zinc property. Drilling has since extended this to at least 16,000 tons per vertical foot.

There are at least two other nearby properties with mine-making possibilities. For them an estimate of 5,000 tons per vertical foot may be conservative.

Only thing lacking is proof of depth beyond the 500 or so feet already reached by the drills.

Geologists agree that there is no reason why it should not go much further.

The 16,000 tons per vertical foot of ore would justify a mill of at least 10,000 tons. To be conservative, let it go at 5,000 tons. The other two known ore bodies seem to justify, say, 3,000 tons.

As a copper mining enterprise means a mill, in addition to the mining these operations would provide employment for some 2,000 men.

That number of men employed would mean a town of at least 10,000.

And the second is headed:

Town Planning For Manitouwadge

When, in the early days of Little Long Lac, it became apparent that a new town was to be built thereabouts, the chosen location was on the Canadian National Railway at its nearest point to the gold mine. It was a case largely of necessity, because the railway was there first.

It so happened that the ground was low, flat and not altogether favourable for the construction of business blocks, homes and streets. A good job has been done by enterprising people but it has not been without difficulty.

As regards the prospective town to come into being at Manitouwadge, the conditions are different. If there is to be a railway, it will have to be located for the convenience of the industries and the town, which will have first choice of location. Those who have been there say there are opportunities for selection of an excellent town site.

The Progressive Conservative riding association has named a committee to consider the matter and advise the government in the matter of town building. Under the general conditions it would appear that the opportunity affords to bring into being what might be regarded as a model mining town, different from some that in the past which, like Topsy in Uncle Tom's Cabin, "just grew," without plan or pattern.

The government now has a planning department which is expected to give supervision to such things. It has full opportunity to choose a site, to prepare a street plan with provision for schools, hospitals, business districts, residential areas and the other things that go to make up a residential and business community.

After the town site has been chosen, the motor roads and the railways can be located to suit it and not vice versa as in so many other instances.

It is an opportunity for the government to show what it can do in this respect.

I think the assurance from the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Warrender) that his experts will be there first thing in the spring to see that this is done, is another indication of what this government does in its dealings with us.

Speaking of mining again, Mr. Speaker, we must remember that in this province we know how much timber we have, we know how many fish can be produced from our lakes, we know what game we have. The great imponderable in this province is minerals. We discover them every day. Manitowadge is an example, discovered last August. There are many more areas of that kind, and the surface has only been scratched. What we need in our area are roads to serve these regions to ensure further discoveries being made.

In a moment I shall be speaking further on the roads because that is something very dear to our hearts in the north. I mentioned that I was very impressed with the White Paper on forestry the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) presented the other day, and I want to congratulate the hon. Prime Minister of this province on that White Paper. Do not forget the large paper companies have many things which concern them, our milling people have many things which concern them, and this is nothing which can be concluded in a day, Mr. Speaker. Our hon. Prime Minister and our hon. Minister of Lands and Forests and our Cabinet and others in the government, and in private industry, have been working for years trying to work out some successful conclusion to see that everybody is supplied with timber in perpetuity. In my area we have some $250 million invested in plant, employing thousands of men. The hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Mapledoram), the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden), and the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), I must include them because they have millions and millions of feet of timber and the great thing to do is to see that their mills are supplied with timber in perpetuity, to see that fires are kept out of our forests, and that insects do not destroy them. This is a great study. It is one of the great tasks our Prime Minister has today.

He asked me the other night, as a member of the Lands and Forests Committee, together with the other members, to give it the best thought we could. And I want no one to believe that this government has not in the past, nor is not at present, nor will not in the future, try to see that this works out to the benefit of everybody. They mentioned Dean Sisam and Major-General Kennedy, men of that acknowledged rating, together with the Minister, Mr. MacDougall, Mr. Sharpe—men with whom I have worked very closely for many years because I ran a saw-mill company.

Yes, I thought I knew something about the timber industry, but the methods used today are so far ahead of the time when I was in the industry that it makes me ashamed to think of the stuff we wasted. That White Paper is the prelude to a great programme this government is going to bring in for the preservation of our forests, and to see that this great industry is maintained in perpetuity. When the hon. Prime Minister spoke to me I started to think I had a great responsibility in that regard. Like the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) I have not yet had time to digest the White Paper. In fairness to the hon. member for Kenora I know he, too, is deeply concerned about these things because they affect his district very greatly.

I mentioned we had the great pulp and paper companies in our district, the Abitibi, Provincial, Marathon and Terrace Bay Paper Companies, the St. Lawrence Corporation and I heard it said the other day that the sales of our pulp were being reduced. We have a $25 million expansion programme going on by the St. Lawrence Corporation of Red Rock right now.

These great mills are supplying work to thousands of men and many more thousands of men in the woods. Is it not, then, the responsibility of this government to bring in this White Paper and see what we can do to preserve this great natural resource, to see that these mills are kept going in perpetuity, and I would like to say this, Mr. Speaker, that the great pulp mills, with their vast capital expenditure, and the thousands of men they employ, should come first.

We also have great firms which have been exporting from our area for years. These firms have been giving employment in our area for years, people have built homes, raised families depending on the continuity of their positions with these firms. If this government would say "you cut out exports tomorrow," what would it mean to the economic situation in my riding? Mr. Speaker, it cannot be done that way. I agree that over a period of years thought should be given to the lessening of exports and the manufacture in its entirety of what we produce in this country. But you cannot do that overnight. These firms have millions of dollars invested and thousands of employees dependent upon their continued operation. I noticed the other day in the hon. Minister's remarks he said something about schools for reforestation to teach game and fish improvements; to teach timber preservation and so on. But one thing that struck me, when he spoke about the resources of timber, fish, game—all these things are in the west and north of this province in abundance but in the next breath the hon. Minister tells us that the schools for forestry, game wardens, research and reforestation are all down around Toronto.

No wonder, Mr. Speaker, that our people in the north ask why. Surely this is a paradox that time must correct and many of these schools should be placed where these natural resources are. We feel that they should be in our area. The natural resources are there, yet all of these schools to teach silviculture are within a few miles of Toronto. I would just pass that on to the Minister to see what he can do.

The hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) mentioned a matter with which I am in agreement. The Timber Dues on jack pine are too high. That is something I would like the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) to look into, because this is a wood that grows in great abundance. It is now coming into its own, but dues on it are so high that the margin of profit you can get is too small.

Freight rates on wood products are too high, the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) said, and I agree with him. We have one operator in our area who employs 900 men. He cannot operate this winter because the freight rates on his material are too high. What we would like to see is a truck road in that area so that he could freight his materials and carry on and give employment to these 900 men.

The hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) knows the situation regarding freight rates. I could name a company which a short time ago was forced to petition to operate a railway of their own from the CNR to the CPR. The minute that bill came into the public press the chairman of the CNR, Mr. Gordon, who is not a friend of mine I might say, said that he would appear in Fort Frances, and I think he did, and I think they got some alleviation in freight rates which made it possible to carry on their business.

This freight rate matter is something that should be looked into. It is a dominion matter, I know, but the Dominion Government is guided by the governments of the provinces. The present position of freight rates is something that is economically unsound and it is something that should be attended to.

Somebody mentioned the other day that the staff of our Department of Lands and Forests is the finest in the world. I think of men like our Deputy Minister, Mr. MacDougall; the head of our Timber Management Department, Mr. Sharpe; Mr. MacMillan, and other men of that kind. I have known them for years as have the other hon. members in our area, the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) and the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Mapledoram). They have been brought up in the forest industry. They have done a great job for the Province of Ontario, Mr. Speaker. It is quite true that they are the finest in the world.

We are progressively improving our methods in harvesting forest, fish and game, and minerals. We have our school set-up to teach new methods. I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if any hon. members present have seen the new methods of logging. I have in mind the hon. member for Renfrew South (Mr. Dempsey) and the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan), men who logged in the old days the same as I did. I wonder if they have been in the forests today and seen these up-to-date methods of harvesting logs by mechanical logging. These forestry officials of ours and the companies have gone a tremendously long way in seeing that we harvest our products to the utmost benefit of our citizens.

In this connection, Mr. Speaker, there is a point I would like to take up with the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) if it applies to him. Our forestry employees are working on a casual basis and I have found they are not covered by unemployment insurance. Many forestry employees suffer from a lack of this coverage and I would like to see it corrected to include them. These are the casual workers who go on in the summertime and perhaps part-time in the winter, and who are never covered by unemployment insurance. I would like to see that done, because I think they richly deserve it. After all, they work practically year-round with layoffs at certain times.

I have noticed where the CCF leader of this province, who has a good Scotch name, has been going around my area and other areas in this province, making remarks about nothing having been done in my district by this government in the last few years. Who was it, Mr. Speaker, who mentioned an ostrich having his head in the sand? I believe it was the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren). That remark appears to me to apply to the leader of the CCF. He is not in touch with the situation as it exists at all, and it makes me laugh when the CCF leaders come out of university with a degree and they are all in favour of the workers, whereas the Conservatives are described as "the swashbuckling barons of Bay Street." Well, Mr. Speaker, I should like to tell you how many years I swung an axe in the bush, and if the leader of the CCF ever swung an axe in the bush, I will give him $10.00.

So these fellows are the friends of labour. I am not criticizing that Party's leader in the House (Mr. Grummett), but I hear these fellows going through the country, the friends of labour. Not one of them ever did anything but lift a pen in their lives and they are talking about the Progressive-Conservatives, who have swung axes, and you, Mr. Acting Speaker, used a shovel in the barn. Every one of the hon. members of this Party is a worker and a friend of labour, and do not let anybody tell you differently.

The hon. members from the north are here, the whole forum. Ask them what they did, and they will tell you they did everything from oiling an engine on the railroad to cutting pine. That is a fact, and do not let anyone tell you that the Progressive-Conservative Party is not a Party of labourers. It is the labour Party. When this man goes through the country and says there has been nothing done in my district under this government, I wonder if he knows about this $25 million programme in Red Rock. I wonder if he knows about the Terrace Bay development and that great pulp and paper mill there employing thousands; the Great Pulp Mill and Town of Marathon, the Marathon highway that has been built east of Port Arthur; the Atikokan highway that has been built; the paving of the Trans-Canada highway which has been carried out; the Dorian Fish Hatchery road that is now a development road; the Morgan road in my own Township of McIntyre; the Jackfish Bay road which has been built, the Leach Gold Mine, the new road to Onaman Lake; the Ontario Hospital to house 1,200 patients in my area and which cost $8 million to bring my fellow-citizens who have been unfortunate enough to have mental illness back to their own territory out of the eastern hospitals; the new OPP barracks all through the district; the new registry office in Port Arthur.

The building figures in the City of Port Arthur were the greatest last year they have ever been, the population is up some 2,500 a year; the deep waterways—one of the greatest undertakings this province has ever known—will not go to Lindsay, sir, but they will be digging in the harbour outside Port Arthur next spring. Then we have the hydro developments, Pine Portage, Aquasabon and now Manitou Falls, the greatest developments that district has ever known, supplying hydro-electric power to both rural and urban citizens. When I get home at night in my own district, I see lights in every house as I go along the country roads. I know they have got inside toilets, I know they have got telephones now, I know they have got electric stoves and electric irons. Their wives are happy, Mr. Speaker, due to the great improvement in hydro that has been made under this administration.

Mr. Speaker, I decry this constant crying of wolf by the opposition.

I wish to thank the government for the wonderful improvements they have made, and have assisted private industry to make, in my own district. I shall close with another invitation to all hon. members. This is the third one, and it is to visit our district. I am extending this invitation on behalf of the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Nöden) and the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Mapledoram) and myself. Two years ago the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Scott) planned a trip to the north. It would have been a wonderful trip, but last year the election intervened and, of course, the trip could not be made. However, we will welcome you, our citizens will welcome you and I know I speak with the full co-operation and knowledge of my friends the hon. members for Fort William, Rainy River and Kenora, in extending this invitation. We will show you some of the greatest natural resources in the world and some of the greatest industrial plants in the world. We will also provide you with good, healthy recreation so that you will return to your homes in the south and, like us, sing the praises of those great rich areas of Canada and the wonderful, kindly people who are developing them.

I am almost through, Mr. Speaker. That should be the occasion for great applause, but before I close may I say we have been talking in the last few days about being subservient to the United States of America. I do not think we are, I think that we wish to keep their friendship, but we are growing up, we are getting to be of a mature age now and we cannot let them call the turn for us. Last night at our dinner I had a talk with a very charming gentleman who is the United States Commissioner here and he agreed with me that Canada is getting to be a big country. I cannot help but close with an epilogue that was given at a dinner by the president of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, I think it is so true that I just want to recite it to the House:

We Canadians can do great things in the next half-century, but if we are able to do them we must throw away some of our habits of thought. We must become accustomed to our newly-won status as a nation. We must regard our neighbours and our parents as a wise young married man just starting out in life regards his. He indulges his parents, he watches his neighbours with a wary eye and he keeps on good terms with both.

In our hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) I think we have a man, Mr. Speaker, who, if he has one asset, it is that he is a great creator of good public relations. All through my district—and I am not saying this in order to get anything, I am just saying it because I believe it sincerely—he is respected by the people. With respect to the highway investigation, I have had them say to me: "As long as Mr. Frost is there, we don't worry, we know it will be honestly dealt with and everybody will get a fair deal." That is a great tribute, Mr. Speaker, and when you have such a man heading your government, a man who has that respect from the population of Ontario, it gives you a warm feeling in your heart to know that you are a member of that government. I know him very well, and I tell people that under that benevolent exterior there is steel inside. They say: "That's a good thing, too, because a man in that position has to make decisions on occasion." I think he embodies to them those things, Mr. Speaker, and I pay him that tribute because he is always so kind and considerate with delegations that we bring down. And when we bring delegations down, Mr. Speaker, it means a considerable expense. They have to come 1,000 miles. The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the heads of departments are courtesy itself. They put themselves out and put aside other things in order to see those delegations, which makes for very good public relations for our whole area and makes for a lot of good feeling for myself in the constituency. I know it does for the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden), the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) and the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Mapledoram).

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): And it makes quite a few Tories.

MR. WARDROPE: That is a fact. I would say, sir, that 80 per cent.—well, perhaps I should not go that far, Mr. Speaker—about 80 per cent. of hon. members of this House owe a great debt of gratitude for being here, to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost).

Mr. Speaker, thank you for listening to me and for giving me such kind attention.

MR. W. G. BEECH (York South): Mr. Speaker, yesterday the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) said that during this session and last year there was nothing but a continual flow of praise coming from the government side of the House. After the speech which has just been delivered, I want to know why we should not praise and why we should not boast. We have something to boast about and certainly we cannot expect the hon. members of the opposition to praise us. So we shall have to do it ourselves.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity of publicly thanking the members of the government from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) down for their very courteous and kindly attention to my problems, the solution of which has enabled me to carry out my duties as a representative of York South. Many hon. members will know that York South is feeling growing pains. It is growing up and one vast section of the riding, in the Township of York, a new municipality with over 100,000 people, has decided that it no longer wants to be called the "township." It wants to be called a city. Therefore, it has now filed an application to be created from a township into a city.

I think that application is justifiable, because here we have a well-balanced municipality with all kinds of people from the richest to the lowest. Yet in this vast municipality we have not even such a thing as a post office; we have not even such a thing as an Unemployment Insurance office. If people want to do business with the Federal Government they have to go to the neighbouring municipality to do so. We feel it is about time that York was created into the City of York and thus preserve that grand old name. With the coming of Metropolitan Toronto that name is apt to be forgotten.

The Township of York and the Village of Forest Hill have assumed places as members of the Metropolitan Government and are doing their best to work with the other municipalities in this great area in carrying out the requirements of Bill 80. Much has been said in the press recently about the opposition of York Township to some of the things that the Metropolitan Council wants to do, particularly in the matter of the Spadina Road extension. I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, to hon. members of this House that when this route was first mooted it could have been produced and completed for about $1,500,000. Now, however, due to the vast growth in the area, to complete that highway would cost somewhere in the neighbourhood of $15 million. The people in our riding suggest that there is an alternative route, the Barrie Highway, which has already been approved by our Department of Highways and which we feel would at least provide for a great part of the need. All we have asked—not in opposition—in the matter of economy is that this other route be completed and be given a trial before we involve ourselves in the expenditure of $15 million which may prove to be unnecessary.

I say again that our riding is playing its part in the development of Metropolitan Toronto. I feel that it is going to be a success. We are facing problems out there, but I believe most of the problems are ones between personalities. For instance, it has been suggested that the chairman is a dictator. Well Mr. Speaker, the chairman is only one man and if the other 24 let him push them around, then they deserve all they get. We have an able chairman and I am sure in the long run this council will get down to business and do what the bill enables it to do.

In the application for creation into a city by the Township of York, they have given us as one of the reasons that they should be entitled to greater membership on the Metropolitan Council. After all I do not think that has anything to do with their application because certainly if they get their desire, it still will not give them that right. That right can only come from the Metropolitan Council and I think I am safe in saying that whatever happens in Metropolitan Toronto now is in the hands of the Metropolitan Council.

One of the reasons I thought so highly of the bill is its flexibility and the possibility of the council members deciding for themselves what is going to be best for the interests of the people in this great metropolitan area.

Along with the other problems, which we have in these great municipalities, is the question of rent control. I have attended many meetings and I have heard many discussions on this matter. I have yet to attend a meeting or listen to any discussion which has not had to do with rent control as it existed in this province when the Federal Government had it and no one has said that rent control was not an evil thing. There were phases of it which certainly were not good for our community and certainly were not doing what it was intended to do in the first place. So I feel that it is a good thing that the province has dropped rent control. On the other hand, I do feel that in some municipalities and some localities there must be some sort of control to take care of the transitory period until such time as we are able to take care of the people who are going to be affected.

We must not forget that when other controls were lifted from steel and other materials, they were only taken off when those materials were in good supply. Rent control is being taken off at a time when there is still a great shortage of houses. Rents are bound to be increased, some of them very extensively, because there are many landlords who have had their properties controlled at ridiculously low rates when one considers what other people are getting. So it is conceivable that the rates will increase anywhere from $40 to $50 a month. What we are afraid of, Mr. Speaker, is this: rents in our area run anywhere, particularly if there is a family, from $70 or $80 to $100 a month. In our municipality, and I am speaking of the Township of York, we have a great preponderance of working people. It is a well-known fact that 50 per cent. of the wage-earners earn less than $2,500 a year. When we apply the old formula that no one should pay more than 25 per cent. of salary for rent, it will easily be seen that those people who are getting less than $2,500, and even less than $2,000, will be unable to pay rents running into such figures as $60, $70 or $80 a month. Therefore, the thing that is concerning us is that when these other rents are increased, we are wondering what we are going to do with the people who are going to be evicted. I have vivid recollections, when I was Reeve of the township, of a family there being evicted one afternoon. When I got home from business, I found the family parked on my veranda. It was a serious matter because we had no emergency housing, and we had to place these people in a hotel. We are still in that position. We have no emergency housing and provision will have to be made for them. We feel—and the township has so ruled—that some sort of control will be enacted to enable landlords and tenants to get together so there will not be the danger of wholesale evictions.

That brings us, Mr. Speaker, to the matter of housing. There has been a lot said about housing during the past few months, particularly since the introduction of the new Bill 102 by the Federal Government. Frankly I can see very little merit in that bill, except that it does increase the number of people who will be able to build homes: those who are getting a salary of $3,800 down to those who are getting a salary now of $3,400. However, I feel that in that income range there is not any lack of homes. If you have the money to pay for the homes there are plenty of homes to be had. The people we are concerned about, of course, are those in the lower income brackets. When one looks at and studies the legislation now provided, it will be seen that there is ample provision made for the production of low-rental and low-cost units.

I feel sometimes that we have been spending too much time writing the government and asking for legislation, and not studying the legislation which is presently on the books. For instance, here in the Province of Ontario this government has made great steps towards providing housing and at each turn it has met with obstacles. I do not think there can be any doubt one of the chief requirements for low-rental, low-cost housing is low-cost land. Yet when this government attempted to acquire land for that purpose, and had to take the only means available, by expropriation. Immediately a great hue-and-cry went up across this area and the government was called "dictators" and a lot of other names not quite so nice.

Mr. Speaker, these people who, through no fault of their own but due to economic conditions, cannot afford to pay the high price of housing, have got to be helped. It is the duty of all the people of this country, not only of governments but of all the people themselves to assist in providing homes, and those homes can be provided without subsidization. We have a fine example of that, Mr. Speaker, in the development of the elderly people's homes in York Township. There you have a perfect example of what can be done with the co-operation of people and the government. Those homes have been in operation now for well over a year and the financial statement brought down shows they are operated at a slight profit with a reasonable and substantial amount set aside for depreciation purposes. They are a credit to this government because, as the hon. members will recall, this government does provide a grant of up to $500 per unit for furnishing and helping to put these apartments in condition.

When we first opened that project, Mr. Speaker, we thought there would be a rapid turnover in the number of people who were tenants there. I might say some of the people were up to 94 years of age, so it was naturally to be expected there would be a rapid turnover. Since the operation commenced, only 4 people have passed away from those homes. You would be surprised at the feeling of security and happiness which pervades those people out there, because they have a sense of security, contentment and happiness, and, as a matter of fact, the citizens out there all "chipped in" and built a recreation hall for the old folks to gather together and pass the time of day. And tonight the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) courteously promised to come up and assist us to open that community hall in the very near future, and when the date is set I shall be very glad if hon. members of the House would accompany the hon. Prime Minister and come and see what can be done in the way of low-cost housing.

Mr. Speaker, it does set an example, and if we can build low-cost homes for the old folk, we can build low-cost homes for the people in the low-income brackets. It is provided for in legislation, and I believe last year an amendment was passed here to enable organizations to take advantage of that legislation. I can tell you the Canadian Legion will use its money to provide such homes. In fact, we have three projects in mind now. We are going to use our money to provide these homes, and there is no reason why other organizations cannot do the same thing.

The labour people put nearly a page in the Globe and Mail yesterday morning in regard to the government's lack of providing homes. For a few thousand dollars, they can build homes for their members. The Federal Government is asking, "Where is the money coming from to build these homes?" There is a reservoir, Mr. Speaker, which has not yet been touched.

This, of course, may be none of our business, but I understand that labour spent $2 million in connection with the strike at Timmins, for which amount they could have built some 500 units for the elderly working people. Surely these funds are available, and we ought to use them to the best advantage.

There is one matter, I think, in which the government might help and that is the matter of co-operatives. We have 10 young men in our municipality who acquired a parcel of land, and pitched in with their money, and started to build. They built a $14,000 home for about $7,500 or $8,000. The unfortunate part of it is that the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will not lend them money and they have had to go into the open market and pay the high interest rates, up to, I believe, 7 per cent. This had the tendency to completely nullify the hard work these young men have put into this project. I feel this government might well consider giving assistance to that type of thing, and help the people who are willing to help themselves.

The Canadian Legion suggested a proposal to the Federal Government, and we have great hopes of it being accepted, whereby anyone with an $800-equity in a piece of land, will be able to go to the provisions of the Veterans Land Act. They will provide the money to buy the material, and they will stay with them until such time as the house is completed, at which time the Central Mortgage and Housing will take over the mortgage.

So here we have people who are working 35 and 40 hours per week, and have a great deal of time on their hands, and this provides a glorious opportunity for them to use their spare time, and at the same time save anywhere from $2,000 to $3,000 in the costs of the erection of their own homes.

I think this should be encouraged. This is the type of thing we want, and if something on this order can be followed, we will obtain much better results than simply sitting down, doing nothing, and blaming the government for not doing a number of things which they really are doing.

One of the bad features about rent control, which has affected our area to a great extent, is the fact that it removed the restrictions on single dwellings. Because of the high cost of these homes, many men have found it necessary for their wives to work in order to help pay the rent, and it is creating a terrific pressure. I have had a delegation in to see me from the packing house, complaining bitterly that married women were working in the packing plant, and were depriving men who had to work to keep up their homes. So, until we get busy and get some low-cost housing, I am afraid we will be in trouble right along.

As I have said before, Mr. Speaker, this is a matter in which each of us must assume some responsibility.

Some mention was made of the poor workmanship in buildings in Scarborough—in fact, not only in Scarborough but in the west end—not very long ago. The people there are blaming the officials of the National Housing Act, because they failed to do certain things, and it is a combination of things, because builders and others, who work on those buildings, have been allowed to "get away" with very "shoddy" workmanship. When people are paying the top prices, and even blood money, to buy these homes, I think those who have been putting in poor workmanship should be heavily penalized.

This reminds me of a time not so long ago when the Veterans' Land Act was in trouble, and it was eventually necessary to bring down the hon. Minister of Veterans' Affairs. After a great deal of discussion, restitution was finally made, and we find the Veterans' Land Act today, because of criticisms made at that time, probably the best producer of low-cost, well-built homes in any part of the country. Perhaps it is time we did something in connection with these other organizations, along similar lines.

I want to be sure I am right, but yesterday I understood there was something said about "undermining public confidence in the government." I think at the time the hon. member was speaking about the highway troubles in the northwest. If I recall rightly, the inference was that this government was connected with it, because it granted contracts to people because of their political leanings.

Mr. Speaker, if there is anything which tends to undermine public confidence, it is statements like that, made by hon. members in the House, who are present here, and know what it is all about. There are enough people outside who think that politicians are "grafters" and "crooks," without hon. members inside this House adding fuel to the fire. I, for one, certainly deplore that sort of thing.

We have another example where Mr. Park, a former member of this House, accused the hon. Prime Minister in these words:

He declared that the incident showed "to what extent the Prime Minister has debased his office to that of chore boy for millionaire Bay St. mine operators, who contribute heavily to the Conservative Party's campaign funds."

Mr. Speaker, we have not gone so far as to suggest we might have the compulsory check-off system, to make sure they get these funds.

I say, Mr. Speaker, that statements like that are doing a disservice to people in public life in this country of ours, and I think there should be some way to stop it.

When hon. members and others have to resort to making vicious attacks of that kind, they have not much idea of the proprieties.

There are many things this government does for which it does not get enough credit. At a meeting of our Library Board last night, we were struggling with the Budget, and we were pleased to hear we were receiving a substantial grant from the Department of Education to assist us in carrying on the work in the library. It would be interesting to know the progress the libraries in this province have made because of these grants given by the Department of Education.

Mr. Speaker, I say we are very deeply appreciative to the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) for the grant made to the Northwestern General Hospital. It is true, it could have been a little more, but it certainly was acceptable, and we feel we are getting our share, and this all helps to create good feeling.

There is one little matter in which the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) can assist me—unfortunately, I see he is not in his place in the House at the moment. I mentioned this last year, and with your permission, Mr. Speaker, I will repeat it.

We have a cemetery in our bailiwick which has given us a great deal of trouble. It is one of the old cemeteries, practically surrounded by homes, and at the rear of the cemetery is vacant land, which has become weed-strewn and is an eye-sore to the neighbours. Some people, not knowing the true facts, built some very decent homes on one side, and a bakery has been erected on the other. Lo and behold, we found one morning when we awakened, there was a fence built around this whole lot, and we found that it is a continuation of this old cemetery, and the people of the neighbourhood are up in arms because they feel this should not be allowed to go on, added to the fact of this bakery being located there. The cemetery is on high ground, and the water will run down to the bakery, and I do not know whether we will have unleavened bread or not as a result of that water flow.

I want to thank the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) for his kind co-operation in regard to the roads in our township. We have a number of roads passing through there, and he has been of great assistance to us.

Among other improvements, is the Barrie highway, and we are looking to that to take a big load off some of our streets. We do appreciate what has been done.

I should have mentioned that one of the features of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation is the fact they tie up their legislation with what we think is a great deal of "red tape." The legislation and regulations which have been brought down, just means they are trying to do everything they can to keep the price of the homes up.

As an example: one regulation calls for tongue-and-grooved sheathing on the roofs, and the sub-flooring. Anyone who has ever worked around the building of homes knows the sub-flooring is exposed to moisture and weather generally, and if you put tongue-and-grooved flooring there, the first thing you know it will buckle, besides being very expensive. This all adds to the expense, without improving the quality of the homes.

They also require five inches of top soil around the building. That may be all right in virgin land, if you take up the top soil, and, after building, put it back, but the regulation provides that the top soil must be of a specific kind; it must be tested, and shown to be the right kind, to be placed around the homes.

In our area, Mr. Speaker, we have a great deal of land which was formerly sand and gravel pits, which is now being graded to provide sites for homes. This means the contractors have to go miles into the country to bring in the top soil, and you can easily see how this will increase the cost of the home building.

I do wish someone with authority over the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation would get after them, and see that they do not continue to have so many regulations. We have had over 100,000 homes built in the last year, 40,000 of which were built under the National Housing Act, for the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the rest being built by private industry. I think we should encourage private industry to go ahead and build, and keep building, and not be tied up by all this "red tape."

Mr. Speaker, I think I have said about all I want to say at the moment. I would like to say, however, that I am happy at what is going on. I am pleased at the co-operation we are getting. I am sure, under the leadership of our good Prime Minister, we will not be complacent as suggested by hon. members on the other side of the House, but continue to give to the people of this province good legislation.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, my turn has come to contribute a few remarks on the motion which is before the House, and, as is customary—and, I assure you, most desirable on my part—I want to commence my remarks by an expression of sincere appreciation for your manner of conducting the duties of your office. I know I sometimes try your patience. I always do so with the best intentions. If I have erred, I apologize, and I promise not to err too frequently, and I pray for your continued consideration and indulgence, which you have always shown to me in the past.

I want to say a word about the civil service. I say this annually, and I want to repeat it today. In my opinion, the attitude of the government toward the civil servants is not a satisfactory one. During the session, I shall have occasion to be more specific, but I do want to repeat to the civil servants today—all of them—that until such time as they see the light, and join a trade union centre—any one they wish—they will have occasion for complaint and for a feeling of neglect.

I hold up as an example to them, the municipal employees of this city of ours, who have made great progress ever since they joined the legitimate trade union movement, and became part of what is known as the "organized working class." Their conditions, Mr. Speaker, are now better than those of our civil servants.

May I say a word to the press, Mr. Speaker? I do not do this very often, not that I underestimate the importance of the press. If I say a word now, it is not because I shall expect headlines tomorrow, as I am inclined to think that I shall not say anything which will make for headlines. In fact, I will be satisfied if what I say stands up in the days to come as having been sound, constructive and worthy of implementation.

The gentlemen who grace our press gallery are, I believe, among the outstanding men in their profession. We do not always appreciate that. They are hard-working men. This year, I want to pay tribute to their interest in and attention to matters affecting the procedure of the House. I welcome the interest they have shown in the rules of the House, and their reminders to us about observing those rules. I think they are performing a service in doing so, and I, for one, hope they will continue to be on the alert.

Now, a word about the address delivered by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay). I was very much impressed by it. I do not want to pour oil on the fire, nor am I interested in stoking the fire, and whatever fire the speech may have kindled will, I am sure, in the fullness of time, burn itself out, and no one will be the worse.

For myself, I think that speech should not be too critically approached, as I seemed to sense in certain sections of this House, and that, Mr. Speaker, includes more than the hon. members of one Party.

I disagree with the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) on many of the political points he raised, but he did convey a tone of sincerity and well-meaning, which, to me, is very important. I suggest we do not snuff out such sentiments when brought forward by hon. members of the House.

I think by the way, Mr. Speaker, some of the points he makes will help considerably in averting, in the future, certain practices which are, unfortunately, resorted to all too frequently by certain members of our police forces, all of them. That does not mean that all are practicing the methods to which he referred, nor that all are too ready and too quick to use a fist on a prisoner, but, unfortunately, it is true that some do that altogether too quickly, and I think his speech certainly has its place.

Of course, I am not in a position to discuss, or even pass a comment, on the manner in which it was done, whether certain accepted procedure was resorted to prior to having made the confession or not. I am keeping out of that, but I do say that we should be more hesitant than some hon. members are in critically approaching that speech.

An interesting and resounding speech by the hon. member for Port Arthur was given today. I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I do not think the government should resist any longer. I think the hon. Prime Minister knows he must find room in the Cabinet for a representative from the great northwest, if only because the opposition is criticizing him for failure to give representation to that great area. Mr. Speaker, we are threatened with secession from that part of our great province. There is a name for it, "Aurora," and I am sure we do not want to lose that great area. I admire it, and I think, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Prime Minister will find it difficult to resist the attributes displayed here today by the hon. member for Port Arthur, and will invite him over, as the government has been about to do for some time.

I am just guessing or surmising, Mr. Speaker, so I am not revealing any inside secret, and I am not privy to inside information, but I do believe he is willing. I think the government needs representation and could do worse than inviting the hon. member to cross the floor, and I may be able to look at him across the floor as long as I am here.

The other hon. members from the northwest area, I am sure, will not begrudge such an invitation. I think they will welcome it and will undoubtedly join in supporting my nomination and my suggestion.

I want to extend my felicitations to the mover and seconder of the motion which we are now discussing. The seconder, the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) is no newcomer. We all respect him, and his speech has certainly not diminished the respect we hold for him.

I am interested primarily in the new hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley). May I say, Mr. Speaker, I predicted a few weeks ahead of the election that he would be elected, and that the Liberals would lose the seat. I predicted that after a visit to Niagara Falls, where I was delivering a speech for the candidate of the Labour Progressive Party, who, unfortunately, was not elected. It is not in the cards—yet.

I came back and said, "The Liberals are losing the seat and the Tories will win it." I said it was bad, but it looked as if I was right. His election and the election of the hon. member for Simcoe East, who I see in the House, is significant. I suggest to the Official Opposition to take it to heart.

We have had a few experiences. We had Dominion election on August 10th, then we had two provincial by-elections. If anything, they have proven what? That you cannot ride into power only on the backs of Petawawa horses, nor can you slide into power on the slopes of imaginary hills which are allegedly removed from nowhere, although we paid for the removal. Mind you, a Petawawa horse would help, as would a non-existent hill which was removed, but that is not enough. The "Tories" learned that, I am sure, after the August 10th election, and I think the Liberals will have learned it after the last two by-elections in Ontario.

MR. CHARTRAND: How about the Communists?

MR. SALSBERG: As far as the Communists are concerned, they learn from all your mistakes and try not to make them themselves.

What is wrong? The answer is that you need a programme to meet the problems and the needs of the people. If you have that, then a Petawawa horse can help, and a slope from a non-existing hill might also help, but without a programme you just do not get anywhere.

I am obliged to say that the spokesman for the Official Opposition in this House has not yet convinced me they have a programme for the people of Ontario, and I, as a friend, advise him that Fort William alone is not enough. The Leader of the Opposition made a number of laudable proposals with which I agreed. He spoke about housing and other matters, but the heart and essence of his speech is epitomized in the amendment referring to "Fort William." That is not a programme any more than the August method of campaigning around Petawawa was a programme. It just was not.

I am not denying the Fort William matter should receive our attention. I will speak about it. However, it is not enough to just speak about it. The hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), who is also, as I understand it, confronted with the need of presenting a programme since he is a candidate for leadership, has made good speeches. I am glad they were made, but again, he has no programme.

Unearthing, discovering, revealing, prodding, are all very good. But where is the programme? That was not made apparent.

An hon. member to my right says, "It will be given." I am sure that I and all of the people of the province will be looking forward to that.

I want to say a few words before I proceed about matters upon which, I am sorry to say, none of the other spokesmen of the opposition touched, concerning things which happened during the last year for which I think the government should be lashed. Lashing in parliamentary language is, I suppose, severely criticized.

One of these matters is the question of rent control. I am glad the hon. member for York South (Mr. Beech) mentioned it. He, being a supporter of the government, naturally, had to skate around it a bit, but, representing as he does York South, he did indicate the problem.

I think this government has committed a serious offence against the interests of the section of the people who need help mostly, when they dropped rent control and threw the matter into the laps of the municipal councils. The result will be that in some localities rent controls will be dropped; in others, a temporary patchwork will be adopted in order to escape gradually from it, but the result will be, Mr. Speaker, that thousands of families who can ill afford to pay the maximum rentals now being charged, will suffer enormously.

I agree with the last speaker, the hon. member for York South. Rents are determined, like most other items, on the basis of "how much it can fetch," or what maximum price and profit can be made out of it. When there is such a severe housing shortage as we experience in areas like Toronto, it stands to reason that once the rent controls are lifted, landlords will try to get the maximum, and that will mean that others will have to deny themselves and their dependents the necessities of life. The government should not have done that until it helped solve the housing shortage, which it has not done.

Secondly, I want to use this occasion to criticize the government severely for its role in the strikes which took place during the last year. Those strikes revealed that the government was behaving in a manner which helped the anti-union groups of employers. In some cases, it amounted to outright "scabbery" by the government, as was the case when the Ontario Northland Railway, through its leading officers, broke through the picket line in front of Noranda. Railway workers honoured the picket line, but the chief officers of the Ontario Northland Railway were, I believe, coerced into this unpleasant task of trying to pull the engine through the picket line.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. member that the Railway Unions afterwards withdrew their objection and confirmed what was done was proper and instructed their men to put cars in on the siding which belongs to the railway. I do not know whether the hon. member is up-to-date on that matter, but that is the correct situation.

MR. SALSBERG: All I know is that up to the time the officers of the railroad came to pull the train through, the engineer and other personnel honoured the picket line and refused to go through.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, but afterwards the Railway Unions recognized that was an error. The picket lines should never have been there.

MR. SALSBERG: I have here the official publication of the union, Mr. Speaker.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, that is not correct.

MR. SALSBERG: They have pictures of the picket line being pierced by the engine, Mr. Speaker, with the officers of the railroad in front.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. member that afterwards, when the true facts were given to them, the Railway Union instructed its men to take the cars into the siding. The siding belonged to the railway. It was not on the property of the Noranda Mines at all. It was property owned and controlled by the railway. Taxes are paid by the railway, and the Railway Unions quite properly instructed their men to place the cars on the siding, and that was done after that incident.

MR. SALSBERG: Not only in that instance, but generally, I sent wires to the hon. Prime Minister. I am sorry to say he did not answer. He was not obliged to, that is true. I sent letters to the hon. members of the Legislature, urging a special session of the Legislature to deal with the strike. Unfortunately, no such session was called. If you look at the picture of the people attending the signing of the contract, you will see a shocking contrast.

On the one hand, our hon. Minister of Labour is smiling jovially, as if he really accomplished something, in the signing of the so-called "settlement." On the other hand, you have the picture of Mr. Millard whose face certainly reveals, I think, the full understanding and feeling of the meaning of that signing. It was nothing to be happy about, Mr. Minister.

HON. MR. DALEY: He was not happy at all.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, there was nothing to be happy about, because the role of the government enabled a few men to dominate the mining fields of Northern Ontario and Quebec to deprive the men and women of the north of the minimum to which they are entitled. It is a fact that a few men, only a handful, maybe two, really decide policy for the whole north.

I say this government should have come out fully for the north, for the miners' families, and not be bound by a couple of men who manage to control vast corporations in the north.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that is just what the government did do, come out for the men and get the thing settled, and not at the mine operators' price either, but at a higher price. The men got more money.

MR. SALSBERG: True, the men did not lose their strike. They fought very heroically, and admirably. There are few strikes which can compare in heroism to the one just concluded. However, I think the same union is perfectly right in its advertisement this morning when it says, "The Issues Remain." That is true.

The issues in the north remain. They were not solved. Miners are still paid less than workers in industry in the south. Their life is still more endangered than any other group of workers. Their hourly rate is lower and their hours of work are longer. I am obliged to say this government pursued a policy which made it possible for those few dominant forces to rob the miners.

HON. MR. FROST: I would say to the hon. member he must understand the economics of the mining situation. I think it would be a good thing if the hon. member would get down and study the basic problem.

Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. member that the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and myself realized this was a serious problem, and you may be assured that throughout we did our best to obtain settlements which were good for the men and good for the communities and the people. The major difficulty is that the gold mining industry is a greatly depressed industry, which is really being kept alive by government subsidy.

Substantially, this industry is being kept together because of a subsidy on the part of the Federal Government and assistance we are giving to the mining municipalities.

Those facts must be recognized. There is a vast difference between conditions in Sudbury, for instance, and those in the Timmins and Kirkland Lake area. The industries are different and hence the conditions are entirely different. I would point out to the hon. member that he should look into that.

MR. SALSBERG: I appreciate the facts to which the hon. Prime Minister draws attention, and I want to assure him that I am not unaware of those facts.

HON. MR. FROST: But you did not say that.

MR. SALSBERG: But also, I am sorry to say, the hon. Prime Minister is not prepared to say, that while it is true we have a problem in the gold mining area, we cannot allow that problem to be borne by the miners and their families, while the government subsidy from Ottawa goes primarily to guarantee the payment of dividends.

HON. MR. FROST: That is quite incorrect.

MR. SALSBERG: It is true we are taking it out of the pockets of the miners and their families.

However, Mr. Speaker, we may return to this question again during the session. I felt, however, that these few points had to be mentioned. After all, Mr. Speaker, one opposition speaker is followed by three or four government speakers, due to the imbalance that exists in the House with so many "Tories." Certainly these things may sound unpleasant to the ears of the government; nevertheless, they have to be said.

I want to return to the question that was made the central issue here by the Official Opposition and by others. The question was raised about the highway situation, and perhaps the hon. Leader of the CCF group (Mr. Grummett), who just came into the House, I am glad to say, expressed it more than most other hon. members when he stood in his place, and looking across to the government, in a tone of pain, said, "What happened to our Department of Highways?" Well, let me say, I do not know what happened, excepting this, that something had obviously happened and I would be inclined to say that it is worse than bad. If what the press reported is substantially correct then I would say what happened is "highway robbery 1954 style." And I say this while quite prepared to acknowledge that in my opinion the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) is an honest man. My confidence in my own judgment will be terribly undermined if I find that I am wrong. That is my reaction to the hon. Minister of Highways. But what happened can unfortunately be labelled only as "highway robbery."

I am not certain, Mr. Speaker, that it is correct to continue to say that the government discovered it and is doing all that is necessary. If my memory serves me well I think the government did not discover it but a disgruntled employee who felt that he was not getting his "rake-off" or his share of what was obviously "loot" began to talk. I think that is correct and if it is, then let us for the sake of accuracy, not repeat that the government found it out. A man "squealed" and the rest of those who were involved with him were exposed when the government stepped in. I think that is correct. It is a great pity, Mr. Speaker, to find that money in large amounts was obviously diverted to private use at a time when the citizens of Geraldton through their Chamber of Commerce were going around collecting private contributions for the completion of a piece of highway from Geraldton to Nakina. A fraction of the money which was misappropriated would have sufficed to have built this road, yet our citizens went around with a cup asking their neighbours for money to complete a piece of highway when money in quantities such as are now spoken of, was being misused.

Why did it happen? I do not know, except to offer this opinion. First, I think it happened because I think the system under which we live corrupts people. It has, I believe, a corrupting influence. In a profiteering inflationary period people just become frantic to make, and make as much as they can. That is the nature of the beast. That is the system. That is true, and the people who otherwise would be making enough are obviously not satisfied and they want the maximum out of it. The example set for them is, of course, not conducive to better behaviour.

Secondly I think that another reason why these things happen is because of the gathering of enormous election funds by the Parties. Let us face that fact. When the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) stands up as he did yesterday and says as reported in the heading of one paper "Claims Highways Work Aids P.C. Party." I am obliged to say to him—"My hon. friend, from where do you get the money?" I mean your Party.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. members that in connection with so-called "Party funds," no contracts, no work or no employment is given by this government conditional upon any contribution to Party funds. Mr. Speaker, if such conditions were disclosed, I would regard it with the utmost seriousness. I will, as long as I am head of the government, tolerate no political check-off of any kind. That has been the condition in this government as long as I have been here, also as long as my predecessor (Mr. Drew) was here. I can assure the hon. members that no one has to come to this government or to any branch of this government and make a contribution to anybody in order to get a contract with, or employment by this government.

MR. SALSBERG: I am glad the hon. Prime Minister made that statement and I believe again that the hon. Prime Minister is an honest man but the hon. Prime Minister is not the treasurer of his Party, he is only the treasurer of this province, and I would be bold to suggest that if the treasurers of the Liberals and the Conservatives were to stand up in the House and tell us exactly where they got the money for the last election they contested, we would be closer to finding the answer to the Fort William incident than we otherwise would.

HON. MR. FROST: May I say to hon. members that the situation in Fort William has absolutely nothing whatever to do, even remotely, with any Party contributions. I may tell hon. members that is the situation and that is the case. I again repeat, no contract, no work of any kind, is given to anybody conditional upon any promise, expressed or implied, in any way that there will be any contribution to anyone or anything. It is conditional upon the ability to give service and a good return to the people of Ontario. That is what they are paid for doing, and it is our job to see that is done honestly.

MR. SALSBERG: With all due regard and respect for the integrity of the hon. Prime Minister, I, sir, as an individual must say that I am prepared to challenge both Parties to tell us where the money came from for their campaign.

HON. MR. FROST: Would the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) be good enough to tell us where the money comes from to run his Party?

MR. SALSBERG: I accept the challenge and I agree to come here and bring receipts for, and explanations of, every penny in my campaign and what I ask is that the Conservatives and Liberals do the same. In the last federal election the Liberal Party had so much money they did not know what to do with it. Is that not true? The Conservatives were on the starvation end of that campaign. When it comes to the provincial elections the Liberals are the ones who are starved, and all the money goes to the "Tories." It has been going on like this since 1943. Members of the Conservative Party are the chosen boys, while the Liberals only get the odd handout. But in the federal election of August and in the provincial election of 1951, a great deal of money was spent, and I have in my hand a clipping from a Toronto newspaper which reports that the Labour Council of Toronto said, and here is the heading:

"Tories Spent Million in 1951 Ontario Vote: Who Gave It?"
—Labour

HON. MR. FROST: May I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) who said that?

MR. SALSBERG: This is the heading from an article in the Toronto Star of January 12th, 1954, which is pretty close to the situation. It is a report of a meeting of the Toronto and Lakeshore Labour Council. One of the delegates asked the question, "Who gave it?"

You see, Mr. Speaker, the federal Liberals have a great deal of money. All this "stuff" costs an awful lot of money and I have only some of the samples. On the other hand, the Conservatives, in the last federal election, issued some very fancy pieces, too. The gold-plated piano is really a masterpiece of printing and was distributed lavishly—it did not help. The case of the spring-filled dance floor; excellent printing costs a lot of money nowadays. Take the case of the autocratic Cabinet and so on. This money comes from somewhere.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, there is a saying by a great comedian whose name I will not mention here today, but who said that every good citizen ought to give to his Church, and to his political Party. After all, that is not such bad advice. I want to say that money which is given to the Party I lead is conditioned on nothing except that it will be good for the country. It is not conditioned upon contracts or employment or anything of the sort.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I want the government to understand that everything I say is directed to the Official Opposition just as much as it is to it. That may make it easier for the hon. Prime Minister to bear it.

HON. MR. FROST: I would not want to be included with them.

MR. SALSBERG: Being in the position the hon. Prime Minister is, why should he? He is among the high and mighty. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have in my hand, an article written by Mr. Blair Fraser, published in Maclean's Magazine, and entitled, "Our Illegal Federal Election." The date is April 15th, 1953, and it is extremely interesting. I am not going to burden the House, I shall read only a few lines. It will make you laugh, although you will not enjoy the laughter, I am sure. Mr. Fraser says that the money comes from a number of sources, and one of them is:

A considerable fraction of it, probably more than half, comes from big corporations which may have little or no direct business connection with the government. These are the chartered banks, the insurance companies, the steel companies, the mining, the pulp and paper, the automobile, the oil companies, and so on.

How much they give to each Party is a well-kept secret, for they don't like to show favouritism. Some years ago, a Montreal Liberal called on one of the banks and got a sealed envelope. He was delighted to find it contained $50,000, twice as much as he'd expected. Later, he got a frantic telephone call from the banker:

"You will have to bring that back. I gave you the wrong envelope."

"You go to Hell," said the Liberal, and hung up.

That is how it is done. Mr. Fraser, a very reputable journalist, then goes on to say:

At the second level of contributors, are the contractors, the people who actually get government business. These are the heart and soul and spinal column of provincial party funds.

Mr. Speaker, it has reached a stage where contractors have now applied to Ottawa for consideration against income tax charges because of what they contribute to the election funds, and the Telegram of April 23rd, 1953, has the following to say, of which I quote just two paragraphs:

OTTAWA: The Department of National Revenue which collects Canada's income tax recognizes that in some cases political contributions are a necessary expense of doing business. Some contractors, especially those on roads in one or two provinces, have told the department quite openly that they cannot stay in business unless they make political contributions.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out this is not one of the provinces.

MR. SALSBERG: I should be happy to feel that way.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) had better feel that way.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, I wish to assure the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that as far as the Department of Highways is concerned, there has never been mention of campaign funds in any shape or form, and, regardless of the Party they belong to, they get work. I have never heard a contractor discuss—and I would never discuss with him—any such thing. Nor have they even suggested it.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I too, feel that the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) would not discuss such things. I agree with him. But I quote from very responsible sources, and what is written, cannot be unwritten, you know, and I do not question the correctness of the statements, both by Mr. Fraser and in the Telegram.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, I do.

MR. SALSBERG: Let me come now to the opposition, just to give the supporters of the government a breather. The opposition should not be so self-righteous about this; and I am one of the opposition. I think that all of us, especially of course, the Official Opposition, should feel some responsibility, because we did not try hard enough to find out what is going on. Mr. Speaker, I sometimes get on the nerves of the government supporters, because I speak too much, and sometimes I suppose I do, but of course, I think it is always necessary, otherwise, I would not do it.

However, sometimes I confess to be somewhat frustrated by government disapproval and I figure, well, "let the thing go, I have done my share." One such instance comes to my mind which I feel I should repeat as a lesson to all of us. The Estimates for the Department of Highways came up in this House a couple of years ago and I believe the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) will recall that I told him I thought I had spoken more than my share, and besides, I was not an expert on highways, and I thought I would sit it out. Mr. Speaker, I think it took 6 minutes for the Estimates of the Department of Highways amounting to over $100 million to go through this House. That is poor business. That is not good work on the part of the opposition. When it was over, I walked over to the hon. Minister of Highways—he is here, and will say whether I am right or wrong—and I said to him, "Are you satisfied? You put your Estimates through in six minutes." He answered, "No, I am not satisfied. What do you expect me to do, go to the opposition and tell them to get up and ask questions?" I think opposition members should remember that. Let us all remember it. We did not do enough. We did not probe enough, and it is our duty to probe and probe and probe, and ask, even though it may be disliked by some hon. members of the House. That is our job in the opposition.

I want to conclude on this matter by saying that it will undoubtedly come up before the House during the session again. By the way, I hope the Committee on Public Accounts will be called together quite soon, and may I suggest that it would also help matters if the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) were prepared to make a speech there. It is the least we can expect. I do not say he is hiding anything from us, but I do say he should speak to the House, and take the House into confidence as much as he thinks he can at this stage. I say with all due regard and respect to him that hon. members of the House expect it. I think he should do that. I also would suggest, while I am at it, that we do at least know what Ottawa is doing—although they have a long way to go to assure no further Petawawas. They print, at least, long lists of contracts, and I think we should do that. We should periodically give to hon. members a list of all contracts amounting to, say, more than $1,000 issued by any department, and let everybody know. For instance, on the last Ottawa list which appeared in the press on February 6th, I see "Pembroke"—that is from Ottawa, of course—"Public building, to complete, re-vote $225,000; total $600,000." Then "Petawawa," see, here it is, "Forest research, $150,000." I suggest we should do something like that here.

Now may I say that I have no vendetta with the Ontario Hydro—no vendetta at all. I am not in a political battle with them, and I have no reason to seek any personal kudos from them, and have nothing to gain. It has done nothing harmful to me. I took the chairman's, Mr. Saunders', place in Toronto City Council when he stepped up to the Board of Control, I never had any quarrel with him, and I want to say

I have no "goods" on the hydro, and I am not going around seeking any.

However, I want to say, Mr. Speaker, on this occasion, that we should as quickly as possible, make a thorough study, if you do not want to call it "investigation" of the operations of hydro. Because here is an agency of the government spending now about $1 billion in works. The Provincial Auditor does not audit the books, and repeating, Mr. Speaker, that I have no secrets and I have nothing against anyone in the hydro administration, I say that we are not doing our duty in the face of such vast expenditures and such large contracts, if we do not go into the most minute examination of the methods and work of hydro. If any are angry because I say this, let them be angry.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, this government, in that regard, has done what no other government ever did, and that is appoint a Committee on Government Commissions. The House has never had that before. No government has ever done that. We are most anxious to give the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) or any other hon. member, the opportunity to enquire into government commissions. Nobody in history ever had the Liquor Control Board here nor the Liquor Licence Board here, as happened the other day, and hon. members will have the same opportunity with the Hydro Commission. Cross-examine them. Go ahead. May I say also, that we appoint the auditors who are Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon & Dilworth. They are appointed and they have their team of auditors in there constantly.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the improvement by the establishment of the Committee on Commissions. That is an improvement, but that can hardly be the agency, nor the medium for the kind of study of which I am speaking. May I point out, Mr. Speaker, that last year when I entered the "Holy of Holies", the Committee on Commissions, to ask some questions and before I was unceremoniously ushered out for asking too many—a very bad occurrence, a very bad occurrence indeed—I said at the time if I were the Chairman of Hydro, I would ask for such an investigating committee. I said the government would do a good thing—that is, if it had a committee appointed. Everything may be, and I hope everything is all right, but everyone in this House is aware of rumours that circulate throughout the province. You talk of "slush" funds. It is no secret that the common gossip is, rightly or wrongly, that hydro provides one of the main sources of government election funds because of the enormous contracts it hands out and the amount of money involved.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Speaker, if I may just say a word. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) said that he was ushered unceremoniously out of the committee last year. The only reason for that was he would not keep quiet when the chairman asked him to do so. He would have had an opportunity to ask his questions. We welcome questions from everybody, as the hon. Prime Minister has just said. But they come in our time, not when he wishes to ask them. He just did not co-operate along that line, and we found it necessary to put him off until a later date.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, it is quite true that because I was asking questions I was asked to leave. I do not question that. If I had not asked questions, there would have been no issue, and I could have sat there. But I did ask, and then followed up with another question. Then some people found I was offending the "Holiest of the Holy" by daring to question. Well, why shouldn't I? Why shouldn't any hon. member? Why can I not ask "Bob" Saunders? I have known "Bob" for a long time.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, that is one of the reasons I arranged to have the committee called much earlier this year, to give the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) and any other hon. member who wants to ask questions, a full opportunity to do so.

MR. SALSBERG: Anyway, I want to conclude this by saying that I propose to the government, the appointment of a Select Committee to study all the operations of hydro. Investigate it, and let us not wait. I hope it never will happen, but let us not wait for that lid to blow, and then all rush in, as was the case with this Fort William business, and it will not be necessary for any hon. member of this House—I was going to say the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett)—to ask "What happened to hydro?" just as he asked what happened to the Department of Highways. I think it will be good business in the interests of the people and in the interest of hydro to appoint such a committee.

As for myself, Mr. Speaker, I do not mind telling you that I would like to be on the committee. But I assure you it is not for the money. I undertake right now to agree with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) what institution should get the money. And I assure you also, sir, that I have no desire to concoct anything. I would like to be on that committee, and I think I would be perhaps the most impartial and objective member on the committee. Just remember that, Mr. Prime Minister.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, on the subject of Select Committees, I think the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) will see the problem. This morning, I had a deputation in to see me from Sault Ste. Marie, talking about unemployment, and about public works. May I point out, Mr. Speaker, that The Hydro-Electric Power Commission and, indeed, the Department of Highways, are doing an enormous job in the province today. I sat on a Select Committee many years ago—I think with the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon)—in connection with an investigation into hydro, which I am sure he well remembers. It was back in 1938 and the father of the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) also sat on that committee. In that Select Committee, sir, I think we had all the principal hydro engineers from Doctor Hogg, in those days, down to other engineers. I do not think those engineers did any business for about three months.

I would like the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) to get those proceedings and read them carefully, and see what came out of it. I do not know really myself. It was an interesting matter, and to me it was an education, but it must have been very expensive from a standpoint of taking up the time of highly-placed and highly-priced personnel at that committee.

I say our job today is to carry on business, to do it efficiently, and to bring in better methods wherever they may be needed. In this way we keep the business going, and to do the things which are necessary in these days to streamline it, and, at the same time, provide employment for tens of thousands of our citizens.

That is the job, Mr. Speaker. If the hon. member's (Mr. Salsberg) view were accepted, the Hydro Commission would be disrupted for a period of several months, while he had a good deal of fun, and contributed his per diem allowance to some charity or something of the sort. As a result, we would not get ahead with the people's business, which I assure you, is very pressing.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I disagree with the hon. Prime Minister. The people's business, in my opinion, demands that Members of Parliament, who are responsible to the people for everything done, should be familiarized, should be fully informed, on what is going on in such an important agency. Mr. Speaker, I say they are not so informed.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I suggest that the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) attend regularly the meetings of the Committee on Government Commissions. They are going to be held day after day. Let him attend, and ask questions. I can assure him that it will not be hurried. Plenty of opportunity will be afforded, even if it is necessary to call night sessions, for committees to meet. If the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) wants night sessions for committees, he can have them any time he wants them.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): The hon. Prime Minister should put him on the committee.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes. I should be glad to put him on the committee. I will make the necessary motion later.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, that is another thing, Mr. Speaker. That is the second best thing, but we will try to do with it. Having finished with that, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that important as those items are I think they are not the biggest scandal about this government, neither Fort William or other places. They are important, but this province will go on even if some bad things took place, if they are straightened out. The biggest scandal, Mr. Speaker, in my opinion, about this government, is its failure to come to grips with the basic problems that challenge the people of this province at this time. That is a far more serious scandal than even highways.

I have in mind the failure of the government, in my opinion, to come to grips with such issues as unemployment, the Canadian seaway, the natural gas pipe line and the question of markets for our agricultural and industrial products. I know that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) can stand up, as he has and as he will, and relate exactly what he has done in each of these fields. But I will show him. If he wants me to go on tonight, or if he wants me to move adjournment to be fresh tomorrow, I will move adjournment and give it to him when he is fresh and more responsive. But if he wants me to go on, I will. I will show that he did fail in these matters. I enumerated four although there are more than that.

With respect to the problem of unemployment, the question is: Are we or are we not in the midst of a developing economic crisis? That is a serious question, because much of government policy and action depends upon the estimation and conclusion we come to on this essential question. I am beginning to wonder sometimes whether there is a dual policy, a conflicting policy in the Conservative Party as between the policy pursued by this government and the policy advanced by the national leadership of the Conservative Party.

Mr. Speaker, I can understand the Liberals in this House being silent about this, because even if they think otherwise, Party loyalties prevent them. Their people are running the country, and if their people in Ottawa say, "There is no crisis; there is no unemployment," they will not challenge it.

MR. OLIVER: You would not understand Party loyalty.

MR. SALSBERG: I think I do. Everyone in this House is bound to uphold his Party, but I am quite prepared and capable of speaking about those loyalties that are displayed by the people here and in Ottawa, whether they affect the Leader of the Opposition or otherwise. It is quite an interesting story. We will return to it if they want to, but I say they are quiet because their Party is in power. Their Party says, "Everything is all right. There is no trouble. There is no depression."

A very fine Canadian writer, a person who is responsible for quite a few people buying the Telegram, who otherwise would not, Judith Robinson, has culled a few interesting quotations from Ottawa. She quotes the hon. Minister of Finance, Mr. Abbott, as saying:

I would not say the situation is serious. I would say it is unpleasant. She quotes the Minister of Labour in Ottawa, as saying:

One approach that may assist us to place the situation in better perspective is to try and break down those who are unemployed in two or three broad categories.

She quotes the Minister of Trade and Commerce, Mr. C. D. Howe, as saying:

We have not panicked.

That is the attitude of the government in Ottawa, but that does not reflect the situation in the country. The fact is, as pointed out by the organized workers of this country by the two trade union congresses which recently appeared before Ottawa—and it is a unique occasion when they get together—when they said the following, and I am quoting from their Brief to the Ottawa Government:

Present unemployment is far beyond "frictional" or "seasonal." It is neither localized in particular industries nor in particular geographical areas. Whatever the causes of this alarming situation, it is clear that something drastic is happening to the Canadian economy and that something must be done about it.

That is, I think a sober presentation of the problem. Something serious is taking place in the economy. That is also the opinion of such responsible correspondents as the present representative of the New York Times at Ottawa, who said the same thing a few days ago in his newspaper.

I am aware of the time element and I will not read his quotation, but he takes the position that the income of our agricultural population, the decline in industry, is creating a serious situation in Canada. It has reached the stage where we in Toronto have between 35,000 and 40,000 unemployed people, where the bread lines are again extending, and where hundreds of people in this city are compelled to sleep on the floors of missions and underground, hugging steam pipes to keep from freezing. We have reached the stage where the Automobile Workers' Union, according to this morning's paper, brought a special delegation to Ottawa to lobby for some action.

I have also some figures, the latest figures from Ottawa, although they are not the most reliable, showing that in Ontario there are now 142,000 applications for jobs on file, compared with 94,000 in December. This is the last figure, an increase of 47,000 over the same period last year.

I say, Mr. Speaker, that with such a situation it is impossible to shut one's eyes, unless one is a member of the government which would have to assume responsibility for the situation, and therefore denies the existence of the unhappy situation I speak of.

The agencies devoted to the problems of the working people are now compelled to raise a cry and they speak of hunger. The Toronto Star, February 23rd, reports the following:

Many City Families In Need—Worker.

Many citizens do not know there are some families in the midst of Toronto's prosperous community who are experiencing cold, hunger and threat of eviction, Violet Munns, secretary of the Riverdale Neighbourhood Workers Association, told the February meeting of the district Neighbourhood Workers at Simpson Avenue United Church.

The Globe and Mail of February 22nd carries a letter from the Corresponding Secretary of the Canadian Association of Social Workers, pointing out a similar situation, stating that there is hunger in many homes due to unemployment.

I say, further, that I have come across in this province, cases where ex-soldiers, veterans, are now faced with the loss of the equity they have in homes because of unemployment.

In Welland, Ontario, a few of them spoke to me and told me they had bought wartime houses. The Federal Government Agency supervising and managing them served notice on them that, since they were unable to pay rent for the last couple of months, their properties would be taken away from them.

That is the situation. I say to the government by way of appealing, that they in this instance not follow the official line from Ottawa, even though they happen to be the government in power. They have to take certain action. Mr. Drew said a few days ago at St. Thomas, on February 18th:

We should not stand idly by when there are over 500,000 people unemployed.

I agree with this statement of Mr. Drew's.

Mr. Speaker, I draw the attention of the government and the government supporters in this House to some of the speeches made in the House of Commons last week by Mr. Green and Mr. Diefenbaker on this question, and remind them that Mr. Green moved an amendment for the setting up of a special committee of the House of Commons immediately to study the problem created of mass unemployment. I remind them that Mr. Diefenbaker said the following, and I am quoting from Hansard of February 15:

Indeed, as one goes back over the years, one can see that there was a similar situation in 1929, when conditions such as we face existed; but the government of that day failed to act, with a resulting depression within our country that took years to repair, if indeed it has ever been repaired.

I quote from prominent Conservative leaders because I think this government must make up its mind, and quickly, on this question. Of course the CCF had an amendment in the House of Commons on the unemployment problem. I may say that the Conservatives, as well as the Social Credit members, voted with the CCF on the amendment, bringing about a vote of 68 to 127, criticizing the government in Ottawa for not acting.

I say that in view of this situation, we cannot sit back and do nothing. I repeat what I said here before, that I agree with the government's basic position on this matter, namely, that it is the Federal Government's responsibility in the first place. Where I part company with the government is that if Ottawa should refuse to assume its responsibilities towards the unemployed, then we cannot and must not turn our backs on them. It would be cruel to do so. Certainly they have the greatest revenue, but we cannot claim poverty. We have the money, and if Ottawa fails, we must step in. We cannot shove it onto the municipalities, as is taking place.

The unemployed employables and those who have never received assistance from the Unemployment Insurance fund go to the municipal government, and the municipal government is obliged to give them some help. They cannot do that.

I therefore say that this government should decide, and I appeal to it to decide, to give leadership on this question on a national scale. I would like to see them bring in a motion in this House, and it would not be partisan politics in my opinion. It would be merited and justified, and called for, for this government to introduce a motion calling upon the Federal Government to take all the necessary steps to alleviate suffering; to assume the responsibility of caring for the unemployed and their families; to provide cash relief for single unemployed; to undertake all great public works, and to see that wages are not cut, because the maintenance of purchasing power is extremely important.

I am sure if the hon. Prime Minister took such a position, every Party in this House would vote with him on a motion of that sort. I am confident it would have repercussions throughout the country and would have its effect on Ottawa. And why not? This is the biggest province. Why should not the Prime Minister give expression to a matter of national importance, particularly as our province is so seriously affected by it?

The only reason why I might hesitate would be because I am afraid he would become altogether too popular if he did that. But I am prepared to take a chance. I appeal to him to do that. But in the meantime, this government must open its doors and provide the temporary assistance necessary until Ottawa will step in, and it should start its own work project now.

It is not enough for the hon. Prime Minister to say, as he did when I spoke about this matter before, that he has work projects and will start them as soon as Ottawa will give him the signal. I say: Stop waiting for Ottawa. Start our public works, including housing and so on, right now.

Mr. Speaker, I have a few other items to deal with. There was a little interruption, but I did not object to it, or mind it at all. I welcomed it. If you insist, I will continue, but if it is all right, I will move the adjournment now and complete my remarks tomorrow.

HON. MR. FROST: That is all right.

MR. SALSBERG: I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I plan to go ahead with the debate tomorrow. If the hon. member would be so good as to intimate to the Whip, or the Assistant Whip, the hon. member for Huron South, the length of time he requires, so that we could arrange the order of the other speakers, I would be very much obliged.

I beg to move the name of the hon. member for St. Andrew be added to the Standing Committee on Government Commissions.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I move the adjournment of the House.

MR. SPEAKER: I have been asked to announce that the Committee on Health which was called for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, has been cancelled. Will the hon. members who are in the House notify those who are not in the House and are on the committee, that the meeting has been cancelled?

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.55 of the clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker : Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1954

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF ACT

MR. SPEAKER: I have been advised there will be no committee meetings held on Tuesday morning, in view of the trip being arranged by the Department of Agriculture. Those who have been called for committee meetings on Tuesday, please accept this as a notice of the cancellation of all such meetings.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Unemployment Relief Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

It is a pleasure to welcome the students of the Hamilton Teachers' College. We are glad to welcome students of the lower grades, as we think they are amongst the more important grades, but it is a particular privilege to welcome those who are training the students, who will become the future citizens of the province.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple amendment, and only provides for the making of regulations prescribing the amounts of money which may be paid by the province in respect of the burial of indigents, who were resident in territory with municipal organization.

We wish you every success in your profession, and express the hope that you may play your part in developing fine future citizens for this Province of Ontario.

THE MILK INDUSTRY ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting the Milk Industry."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the name of Mr. Thomas Patrick, the member for the electoral district of Middlesex North, be added to the Committee on Mining.

Motion agreed to.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this new bill to the Legislature, I want to make it clear at the beginning that a good deal of thought and effort has been put forward by a great many people in regard to this particular bill.

We have been requested by the commodity groups in the dairy industry to bring forward such an Act, which will co-ordinate the dairy industry in the Province of Ontario.

I could read from a section of a brief, concerning some resolutions which were presented to the Ontario Federation of Agriculture from the dairy commodity groups in their organizations, which requests are more or less what is included in the bill presented to this House this afternoon.

A dairy producers' co-ordinating board, composed of representatives of the four major milk-producer groups of the province, requested the Ontario Government to extend and amend the present Milk Control Acts so as to provide:

For a commission to be known as the "Milk Industry Commission" to promote research with respect to the producing and marketing of milk, and to determine standards of quality for milk, and to determine sanitary requirements in the production of milk.

This matter was given a good deal of consideration and there is a realization on the part of those people engaged in the dairy industry, that the industry does need to be co-ordinated at this time.

As a matter of fact, Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out at this time that it is more an educational programme than anything else, and for that reason, when the hon. members have digested this bill, they will realize there are very few new principles embodied in it. It is a consolidation of the Dairy Products Act, the Milk Control Act, the Milk and Cream Act, and those parts of the Farm Products Marketing and Sales Act, and the Farm Products and Marketing Act, which deal with dairy products.

Some of the hon. members are aware that for the past two years, there has been a co-ordinating body, composed of representatives of four commodity groups, who have been working together very well, and with a very high degree of co-operation in the interest of the producers of milk in this province, and this bill sets up a co-ordinating body similar to the co-ordinating group which has been working two years on behalf of the producers.

It is the purpose of this bill, in the consolidation of the Dairy Acts, to appoint the Dairy Commissioner to work under the Minister and the Deputy Minister of Agriculture, as a co-ordinator, with respect to the administration of this Act. Working with him will be an appointed board, which will be designated as the "Milk Industry Commission," which will be composed of the four milk-producer commodity groups, together with representatives of the processors and distributors, the Ontario Milk Distributors Association, the Ontario Creamery Association, the Ontario Milk Powder Manufacturers, the Ontario Cheese Manufacturers, and the Ontario Ice Cream Manufacturers.

They will constitute a Milk Industry Commission, whose duty it will be to represent the whole industry, and be concerned with the co-ordination and improvement of all phases of the industry, and the promotion and co-ordination of research. They will be interested in improving the quality of milk produced in this province.

I want to make it clear at this time that this Act, which is the consolidation of the existing Acts, does not change any principle of the present practices in connection with the existing Acts, as they are administered at the present time.

The Milk Control Board will not be affected in any way, nor will its functions.

The Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers, at their request, will be removed from the Milk Control Board, over to the Milk Products Board, under which the provisions of the Milk Products Marketing Act, and the Dairy Products Act, are in effect at the present time, insofar as cheese producers and cream producers are concerned.

The Concentrated Milk Producers feel they should be placed in the same position, and under the same administration and under a marketing scheme such as the Cheese Producers have at the present time.

Under the bill, minimum standards for milk will be established across the Province of Ontario.

As I said in the beginning, there is a great educational programme to be carried on, and it is not the intention of this bill—nor those who will be responsible for its administration—to try and change to any marked degree existing practices in connection with the milk industry at the present time.

Those who are interested in the milk industry feel this bill is a step in the right direction and that is the reason the bill is being presented to the House at this time.

After the bill has had second reading, it will be referred to the Agricultural Committee, at which time the officials of the Department of Agriculture, who are familiar with the bill, will be called in to explain in detail just what is involved, and give any views they may have. In addition to that, representatives of all producer groups, and those interested in the processing and distribution of milk in this province, will have the opportunity to express their views before the Agricultural Committee, and to study this Act in detail, before it will be proceeded with further.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) if the bill contains a provision to establish a stabilization fund?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker, I neglected to mention that point. There will be provision in the Act for the collection of fees to establish a stabilization fund, but it will be voluntary, and will only be in effect after the producer groups have indicated their wish to have fees set aside for that purpose. In other words, there is nothing in the Act to force any producer group to contribute to the stabilization fund.

THE PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Professional Engineers Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: The Association of Professional Engineers of the Province of Ontario is divided into five branches of the profession, and each of these branches is represented on the Council. The purpose of this bill is to add a new branch, which is becoming increasingly important in the province, that is, the branch of Aeronautical Engineers, to one of these groups, so it will be possible for them to have representation on the Council.

THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS QUIETING ORDERS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Municipal Corporations Quieting Orders Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It saves a little expenditure. It was worded in the wrong way previously. At one time, they had to consider all the boundaries, whereas, under this bill, the consideration of only one boundary may be necessary.

MR. OLIVER: The word "quieting" has been retained?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, yes; it is as quiet as ever.

MUNICIPAL DRAINAGE ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Municipal Drainage Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. OLIVER: What about this one?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: This gives the engineers the same power in towns and cities, as was given to them in the townships, that is, to initiate the construction of the drains.

A portion of this amendment changes the figure from "$100" to "$1,000"; that is, the municipality would have to assess previously if it amounted to $100; we have raised that to $1,000. If it reaches $1,000, then it must be assessed.

THE VITAL STATISTICS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Vital Statistics Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This is in order to give the Registrar-General power to ask for a new registration, if the first one should be found fraudulent or unreadable. Sometimes, we receive from municipalities forms not properly made out, and we think they should be in proper order. This amendment gives that power.

THE INFANTS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Infants Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in 1949, the Matrimonial Causes Act was amended to provide a procedure to be carried out by the official guardian to assist the courts in dealing with the custody of children in divorce actions brought by their parents. These have been very helpful, and the establishment of this procedure has been a signal success. It has been of very great assistance to the courts in arriving at their decisions as to the custody of children in divorce cases.

This bill, the amendment to The Infants Act, is to apply the same procedure in all cases of custody applications, whether a divorce is involved or not.

CREDIT UNIONS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Credit Unions Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, at the last session of the Legislature, provision was made for the transfer of the administration of credit unions from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Insurance, and this transfer has been made, and has become effective.

In the course of the experience gained during the time since the Department of Insurance has had authority in these matters, certain changes in procedure were considered advisable, and this bill is designed to bring the Act into line with the new administrative policies of the Department of Insurance, and also in line with some of the present practices of the credit unions.

The amendments are entirely devoted to procedural matters, and I propose to refer this to the Legal Bills Committee.

I have been informed that the changes incorporated in this amendment have been approved by the Credit Union Association which is concerned with these activities.

JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURTS ACT, 1954

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Juvenile and Family Courts Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill is a complete revision of the Juvenile and Family Courts Act which was last revised in 1927.

These courts shall be known as "The Juvenile and Family Courts," whereas, they were formerly known as "Family Courts" and "Juvenile Courts." Now they will be under the one appellation of "Juvenile and Family Courts," thus giving equal emphasis to the fields in which these courts function.

It provides for the establishment of courts, and also for the financial obligations involved, and also provides for the retirement of judges, which up to the present time, have been governed by The Public Service Act.

In other respects, the principles of the present Act are continued.

REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS BROKERS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Real Estate and Business Brokers Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the changes contained in this amendment are of a minor nature which have been recommended by the Real Estate and Business Brokers Branch.

The first one provides that a person may trade as a broker only if he is registered as a broker, and can trade as a salesman only if he is registered as a salesman, whereas, now the wording of the Act is somewhat unsatisfactory, in that it provides that a registered salesman is free to operate as a broker, as well as a salesman, because he is registered, under the wording of the Act, as a broker or salesman.

There is also a section dealing with the surviving or remaining partner in a partnership who is permitted to carry on the business.

It also covers the case of a limited company, and it provides that officers of limited companies who carry on this sort of business must be registered, the same as individuals have to be.

There are one or two other amendments of a minor nature, similar to the ones I have mentioned.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

ON THE AMENDMENT TO THE REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, as you will recall, I said yesterday that the greatest shortcoming in the Speech from the Throne as an indicator of government policy and intention, is the failure of the government to come to grips with a number of fundamental problems affecting the well-being and the future of the province.

I dealt, first, with the problem of unemployment, and now I want to deal with another very vital issue, that of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Mr. Speaker, it is generally recognized that the construction of a deep waterway is one of the means of providing employment, but I suggest the importance of this enterprise goes far beyond the creating of jobs immediately. It affects the future economic development of Ontario, and of Canada, and, furthermore, it touches on the basic question of independence as well.

We know that Canada has for many years desired a deep waterway from the Head of the Lakes to the Atlantic; we know this country has spent large sums of money deepening the waterway, in the construction of channels, locks, and so on. We also know that the United States has, throughout that long period, refused to co-operate with Canada in the building of a deep-sea route all the way.

I suggest there were very definite reasons why that obstruction and refusal to co-operate came from south of the border. It is true there were certain selfish interests, such as the coal producers, and sections of railroads, and so on who objected, but I suggest there was a deeper reason. The United States was not interested in the development of such a waterway, because it would make possible the industrial development of Canada, but they preferred to have Canada mainly as a base for the securing of raw materials, and as a market for the finished products, rather than make possible the development of great processing industries.

Lately there has been a change in the United States' attitude which, I think, is due to two main reasons. First, the steel interests are now desirous of having a seaway because it would enable them to bring iron ore from Ungava and other parts of Canada through the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes, to their large manufacturing centres, and they have begun to support the idea of a joint seaway.

But, Mr. Speaker, I think there is even a deeper reason. The United States has realized that Canada is determined to build an all-Canadian seaway, and is prepared and fully able to build it herself. Once that was realized, the attitude of the dominant circles in the United States was to prevent the realization of this over-all project.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. members of this House will recall two years ago, the House had before it a bill introduced by the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies), dealing with certain developments in the eastern part of the province in relation to the seaway. I then moved an amendment that every reference in that bill to the seaway should be understood as referring to an all-Canadian seaway. It is true, I could not get a seconder, but I moved it, and, of course, it fell by the wayside. In fact, I think some of the hon. members thought I was a bit "off" in making such a suggestion.

Mr. Speaker, today there are many people who are saying the very same thing—and for obvious reasons. When it became clear in Washington that Canada was going to build a seaway, the Army, and other governmental agencies, stepped in, according to the report of a hearing, before a Congressional Committee, as reported by the New York representative of the Toronto Telegram. It was reported that one General said, in regard to the St. Lawrence Seaway, "It is analogous to the Panama Canal, which is under the control of the Secretary of War."

Another one declared that "Canada must not be permitted to build this seaway."

They now come forward with the proposal not to have a seaway which is all-Canadian, but a seaway in which they will participate, on condition that three of the main locks be on the American side, and that full control be vested in the hands of the United States Government and its agencies. In other words, the seaway, which they could not block any longer, would be one they could control, with the right to determine the policy left in the hands of the American Military.

Mr. Speaker, I think I am expressing not a partisan view when I stand before this House at this time and argue that we should take positive action to the effect that a seaway be built, which will be all-Canadian in character.

We have lately been advised, Mr. Speaker, in a speech delivered at Kingston by the hon. Minister of Transport in Ottawa (Hon. Mr. Chevrier) that a secret understanding has been reached between Ottawa and Washington Governments a year ago, that if an arrangement can be made for power, they will make concessions to the United States in regard to the seaway. I have reason to think that no one outside of the intimate circle in Ottawa knew of that secret agreement. At the present time, it looks very much as if that secret agreement will come into effect.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that I am not always happy to say I agree with the Telegram, but I am mentioning the Telegram in order to convey to this House, the breadth of the opposition to that secret agreement. The Telegram said, editorially, on February 5th, "If Canada thus got the short end of the stick . . ."

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): May I interrupt the hon. member? I may be quite wrong about this, but it is my recollection that hon. Mr. Chevrier denied that there was any agreement such as he mentioned. Remember, that was a newspaper statement and, I think, he declared it was inaccurate. I do not think it would be fair to go ahead on the premise that he did say that.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not recall having seen any denial.

MR. OLIVER: May I just say to the hon. member, I remember distinctly reading in the press where hon. Mr. Chevrier explicitly denied that.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That is right.

MR. SALSBERG: If you say he denied it, I acknowledge it and will not refer to the matter.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Your premise is all wrong.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not. My position stands safe and solid, regardless of what hon. Mr. Chevrier denied, because the intentions of those at Ottawa on this issue are abundantly clear. So clear that I think this House should have something to say about it. As I began to say, I agree with what the Telegram says, that "If Canada thus got the 'short end of the stick,' after shouldering two-thirds of the seaway cost, it might itself do something along the line of 'unilateral' tolls." I agree with that.

Furthermore, I am glad to associate myself with opinions expressed by the officers of St. Paul's Riding of the Progressive Conservative Association in Toronto, which includes the provincial riding of the hon. Attorney-General. At a meeting of this association a few days ago, the following was said:

HON. MR. PORTER: Not by me.

MR. SALSBERG: Unfortunately, not by you. In my opinion, you should have said it. But these are rather wise words said by an officer of that association. I am quoting from the Globe and Mail of February 23rd:

Canada will be branded "a banana republic" if it accepts the St. Lawrence Seaway proposals now before the U.S. Congress. W. L. Archer, president of St. Paul's Riding Progressive Conservative Association, said last night.

That was the president of the Progressive Conservative Association saying something with which I agree. All he has to do, is adopt a motion there and make it obligatory on his hon. member (Mr. Porter) to get up in the House and express the sentiments of his Party in his riding.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not bound by anyone.

MR. SALSBERG: The reason Mr. Archer used this expression is, because the representative of the United States Army said before a Congressional Committee that the deep-sea waterway is going to be in the same category as the Panama Canal, and the Panama Canal has turned Panama into a "banana republic" with the United States having cut it in half, dominating and running the Panama Republic. I am sure that every hon. member supporting this government in this House will certainly not desire to see such a development take place here.

Let me quote a very prominent business man. You will notice what company I am seeking on this issue. I quote now from the Canadian Tribune, a fine Canadian paper, an excellent paper, and if I had not the desire to finish on time, I could tell you something about that paper. I will on another occasion.

MR. JANES (Lambton East): Who wrote that?

MR. YAREMKO (Bellwoods): Is not the whole speech from the Tribune?

MR. SALSBERG: This week's issue made me feel a little bit aggrieved. I did not get headlines. Do you know who in this session got the headline story in last week's issue? The hon. member for Welland (Mr. Morningstar). I really felt I should have got a bigger play, but I found a big story—which was very laudable—concerning the hon. member for Welland, because of the stand he took here in an endeavour to secure orders for the Paige-Hersey Company in connection with the pipe line. Now, this appeared on the front page of this paper which seeks to give support to anything worth while, no matter from where it comes. The Progressive Conservative Association received publicity and you are still complaining. What do you want?

I am asked who the editor is. He is Mr. Thomas C. Simms, a gentleman who was alderman for many years in the City of Toronto.

MR. A. KEILSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Will the hon. member permit me to ask a question?

MR. SALSBERG: I have a quotation dated February 22nd, 1954, which reads as follows:

"Canada should definitely proceed with the St. Lawrence Seaway on her own and collaborate with the U.S. only where there is no alternative," R. H. Davis, president of Atlas Steels Ltd. of Welland declared in reply to a Financial Post questionnaire, February 13th. Davis warned: "Canada will regret trying to work with the U.S. on this project."

MR. ROBERTS: Will the hon. member permit an interruption?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes.

MR. ROBERTS: The hon. member spoke of the report in the Tribune concerning the St. Paul's Conservative Association. I would like to ask him whether the Tribune reported that a resolution was passed there unanimously, for the attention of the Crown, regarding the emblem of the Royal Canadian Air Force?

MR. SALSBERG: I have not yet finished the story. I will read the entire story, and will gladly reply after I have read it.

Having brought this before the House, I want to suggest that we take some action. I might say that I am not suggesting we take an "unilateral" action, or that we seek to Balkanize the country, but I suggest this government should take a positive position and come out forthrightly so as to influence development.

What is necessary is not to accept a priori the arrangements which Ottawa will make on this issue. It is terrifically important for the development of this province, its industry, for the growth of the Northwest, and other areas in the province. It is sufficiently important for us to say that we want this an all-Canadian seaway. I reject any suggestion that the question of power is inseparably linked with the deep-sea waterway. On the seaway we can act independently while continuing to seek co-operation from the State of New York for the development of power. I say this government and this House, if necessary, should be prepared to say that if the Americans will refuse to budge, then we will build our own canal on this side. We can afford it. This country can afford to build the necessary locks on the Canadian side. If the Americans will want it that way, fine; but the control of the seaway must be in the hands of the Government of Canada, to administer in the interests of this country.

I hope, before the session is over, the government will more than make a pronouncement on this question but will seek to exercise a decisive influence on this important issue. It is important enough now, but it is of even greater importance for the future.

As I said before, the United States wants to use us mainly as a source for raw materials. An hon. member—with the best of intentions I am sure—questioned that.

Let me tell the hon. member that I have here the monthly letter issued by the Bank of Nova Scotia, entitled The U.S. Tariff and Canadian Development, dated October-November, 1953, a few short sentences of which are worth repeating:

In 1952 Canada exported more than $2.3 billions worth of goods to the United States, exclusive of gold. It is perhaps not surprising that close to $2 billions consisted of products derived from her farms and fisheries, her forests and mines. But it is somewhat disturbing, in view of the recent rapid industrial growth in Canada, that in most cases the bulk of the exports went in raw or primary form and comparatively little in a highly manufactured state. This pattern reflects the structure of the U.S. tariff which permits free entry to many raw materials and imposes low rates of duty on others, while rates on goods at more advanced stages of manufacture rise progressively, in some cases to quite prohibitive levels.

That, Mr. Speaker, is the state of affairs. The seaway is important in correcting such an imbalance as now exists. We want more processing of our raw materials. We have no objection to shipping excess stuff to the United States, such as iron and so on. But above everything, we want new steel mills here—at the Head of the Lakes, on the St. Lawrence—and processing industries of all sorts—to correct this situation, as pointed out by the Bank of Nova Scotia. I think an all-Canadian seaway will go a long way towards realizing that objective.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. member that my understanding of the Wiley Bill is that the American Congress is asked to appropriate $100 million for the building of the canal on the American side of the international part of the river. There is nothing to prevent Canada building a similar canal on her side of the river, if she wants to.

May I further point out to the hon. member if he were in Montreal and were sailing a ship up to the Lakehead—Fort William is the name we use here—what would he do?

The canal is bound to be built through Canada in the international part of the river, so from Montreal to Cornwall it will be on the Canadian side. There is no other place for it to go.

From Cornwall, it could then go either way; on the American side of the river, or, if Canada built a duplicate on the Canadian side you could go along the Canadian side until you reached Welland or Port Weller, which is in the riding of the hon. member where we launched the big ship.

Then you must sail through Canada. Nobody can get to the Upper Lakes unless they go through Canada. Then, you would go through Lake Erie, on up to the "Soo" and then to Lake Superior where you would have to go through the canal on the American side, because this is the only way you can get through with a large ship.

Will the hon. member tell me what is the enormous importance of Canada putting in another $100 million to build a canal on our side of the river, if the Americans build one on theirs? I cannot see it makes a great deal of difference. As a matter of fact, it is a partnership arrangement.

You cannot get through unless you sail through Canada, then through the international section, then through Canada, then through the United States and up to the Lakehead.

Would the hon. member explain to me what is really bothering him about this? I cannot understand what it could be.

MR. SALSBERG: The fact is, there had been an understanding reached. If I am wrong, I would like to be corrected. However, I am under the impression that an understanding had already been reached for the construction of the seaway on the Canadian side, with the United States coming in as a partner. It was only a last-minute intervention which caused this change in the United States. Furthermore, the original plan for the seaway, which called for the three main locks to be on the Canadian side, had been approved by the International Joint Commission of Canada and the United States.

Why do certain American interests, at this later hour, desire to change a plan which had already received approval? Because they want to use the key locks as pawns and as pincers to "put the squeeze on" any time they want. Shipping rates, as we know, can determine the growth or decline of industry.

HON. MR. FROST: We can build a canal on our side, if we want to spend the money. But should we do that in a partnership deal—

MR. SALSBERG: I think so.

MR. NIXON: Are there not two canals?

HON. MR. FROST. Yes. But the American canal is the one which is used the more because it is the larger. We could build a large canal at the "Soo" at the present time, which would take all shipping. The United States could also do that, for instance where we have the Welland Canal, which is there for all shipping, so why duplicate it in that way?

May I point out to the hon. member the reason the canal is being built—and the reason why it will go through—is because the Government of Canada and this Legislature said: "We will do it ourselves."

MR. SALSBERG: Is it?

HON. MR. FROST: We wanted them to come in with us. That is a fact. The hon. member knows for years we endeavoured to negotiate through the International Joint Commission. It was only after years of negotiation that we said, "We will do it ourselves. We will build the canal." Canada and Ontario have said that, and if our friends come into this partnership, we must realize that, after all, they are partners in the rest of it.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree with the last words, with one exception, and that is, that we build a canal separately or jointly on condition that it be an all-Canadian seaway as was originally proposed, as was originally agreed to by the International Joint Commission, which agreement they are now trying to get out of.

All I suggest is, it will be the safest—perhaps the only—way to guarantee uninterrupted growth and development of industry in this country, and to provide them with the means of shipping our products as well as our grain to any part of the world at the lowest possible shipping rates. We should build that seaway in a manner which is controlled, and leave that control in the hands of the Canadian Government. Otherwise, I do not know whether even the grain shipments from the West, let alone timber and industrial products coming from the Northwest, will be in a competitive position, if the Americans will be the sole determiners of rates on the key canals. It will be exclusively under their control, as Mr. Davis of Atlas Steels points out. They will have their working control there. They will have the locks, but they will also flow over onto the Canadian side.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Mr. Speaker, may I just interject? This is all hypothetical. The fact is, we control it because we own the Welland Canal. They have to use the Welland Canal. They have to go through Welland, and you have the parallel locks at Sault St. Marie. There is no reason why Canada cannot—in fact, they contemplate it as I understand—put a big lock on the Canadian side, no matter what the Americans do.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very glad we have the Welland Canal. I think it is to the credit of those who have gone before us, and of all the governments which were farsighted, and started to build that great canal so many years ago. All the more reason why, after half a century of U.S. sabotaging, we should not slip up now in the crucial hour.

HON. MR. HAMILTON: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I promised the hon. Prime Minister to finish at a certain time. I am trying to oblige, but I find it very difficult.

I want to go on to a third item, regarding the question of the Canadian Natural Gas Pipe Line.

This too, is a vital issue for the province and the country. I want to say a few words on it. It is true it is touched upon in the Speech from the Throne, but not as it should be. One cannot overstress the importance of bringing natural gas to Ontario. It is extremely valuable fuel. It is a Canadian fuel and we can get it almost without limit. It can help industry to develop and bring great benefits to the domestic consumer.

Attempts were made at the beginning to divert the natural gas pipe line southward. Those were the initial steps taken by the Texans who came up here. One gentleman, a former horse trader—so his record is given in Maclean's, and this is not to his discredit, he is now a tycoon—thought it would be good to get hold of our gas pipe line. The idea was to divert the line to the south, as was done with the oil line. I think Conservatives in Ottawa opposed the granting of a charter to pipe western Canadian oil to the United States and I think they were right.

I must say that the Canadian Tribune carried on a heroic campaign for an all-Canadian gas pipe line. Hon. members will, I feel sure, excuse me if I bother them a great deal on this subject between the sessions. I have done all I could to arouse public interest in this question. I gave a lot of credit to the Prime Minister of Ontario with whom I am in political disagreement, for having said, and I quote him, that the construction of an all-Canadian gas line is as important to us as was the construction of the first trans-Canada railway. That is true. But there were private interests trying to interfere for a number of reasons, even after Ottawa made known that it would favour an all-Canadian route. I think the Consumers Gas Company's campaign was scandalous. Its publicity campaign was definitely misleading from beginning to end. But I do not want to take the time of the House to go into that in detail now.

We want an all-Canadian pipe line which will bring this natural gas here at the lowest possible price. Therefore, we say it should be not only all-Canadian but a publicly owned utility. The government, having made a fine statement through the hon. Prime Minister, then subsided for a while. . . .

HON. MR. FROST: What statement did I make?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister said the building of an all-Canadian gas pipe line is as important as was the construction of the first trans-Canada railway.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. I did not say "public utility."

MR. SALSBERG: No, you did not say "public utility." I do not even imply that the hon. Prime Minister has sinned to that extent. He is not guilty. But I say that not only should it be an all-Canadian pipe line, but it should be a publicly-owned utility to assure the supply of gas for industry and domestic use at the lowest possible rates.

I am glad to be able to say that, for a while, the action of this government looked very encouraging. The hon. Prime Minister placed the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) in charge. He went west and east and south on this question. The Chairman of the Ontario Hydro came in and everything looked as if it were travelling in the right direction at a good clip. I was very happy about it because it was in line with what I and the Canadian Tribune and the Labour-Progressive Party have been advocating.

Then something happened. After the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) had visited all necessary places, there seemed to be a new hitch developing. And perhaps we would all be wiser if the government were to make a full explanation to the House. It seems to me now that some very ominous developments are taking place. For instance, the Senate at Ottawa approved the application of the Consumer Gas Company without having prior guarantees and assurances that its so-called north-south line will not eventually pipe gas southward.

I suggest we take a very positive position on the gas question. First, that this House should say to Ottawa, and to the country, that we are going to fight like Trojans to make sure we shall have a pipe line that will bring the gas from the Prairies down to Ontario and Quebec. Second, I suggest that we insist that the pipe be manufactured in Ontario. I am glad the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Morningstar)—and this is one of the things I hold against this government—was selected as the candidate in Welland, as he is a man who works in the pipe works, and, therefore, manages to secure a number of votes from the workers. I agree with everything he says. I was in Welland addressing a meeting of the unemployed, after he—quite rightly—had addressed another meeting, and found that the Paige-Hersey Company, the only big pipe company in Canada, has laid off a lot of men, and I think the pipe for the pipeline should be made in Welland. I think that company should make them, even though it may mean installing new machinery to construct pipes larger than those being made at the present. I suggest the government provide an opportunity to discuss it in the House, give a full report and, if it will listen to reason, take my advice, and set up a Gas Commission to construct and operate the pipe line for the benefit of the people of Ontario, and sell the gas at cost.

In conclusion, there is this question of markets. I have already overstepped my time and I want to conclude. Let me just say this: In addition to providing home markets for the products of farms and factories, which means purchasing power, which means keeping wages high, reducing taxes wherever possible, so that more money remains in the pockets of the consumers, we are confronted with the problem of finding new markets. The hon. members who come from the Ottawa Valley know that the textile towns are facing a severe crisis. Hon. members from the Hamilton and other Southern Ontario areas know that the textile mills in their towns have been compelled to reduce staffs, or close down. That is so in a whole number of other industries.

I think it is shameful that Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe—on behalf of the Ottawa Government—should have told a delegation of workers from the farm implement industry, that they should go and find other jobs when he knows there are no other jobs in Hamilton or other places where the farm implement works are situated. It is shocking that a man in this day and age should speak that way. It is a fact that there is no reason why 2,000 men should be laid off in the Brantford agricultural implement industry when there are countries in the world still using wooden ploughs, who are anxious to buy every plough and combine and tractor produced in this country and to trade with us.

I am glad we have not reached the stage where hon. members will say "Ah, you mean with Russia." I would say, "Yes, and with the British Isles and with the Commonwealth." We want to regain all the markets in the Commonwealth and accept Sterling for the sale of our bacon and cheese. I would even say, "Yes, sell to China." We do not sell to China because the United States prevents us. They could not stop us if we were to tell them "Mind your own business," but unfortunately Ottawa is not inclined to say that. Every piece of farm machinery produced in this country in the next 25 years would find a ready market among countries which are anxious to raise their living standards. I would also say, "Yes, sell to Russia and other countries." It is safe to say that this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, after Prime Minister Churchill said the same thing last night. Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, that while the United States tells Canada not to sell farm implements to China, they have in Hong Kong representatives of the largest American corporations waiting to jump into that market and take orders.

There is no reason why we should say we cannot develop something independently. I suggest to the hon. Prime Minister that we send an independent Ontario trade delegation to Europe. I would like to see the hon. member for Hastings East (Mr. Robson) or the hon. member for Addington (Mr. Tringle) be on that delegation, because they represent the dairy industry, and I would like to see hon. members of this House, representing areas producing other farm products, on it. I would like to see representatives of labour and industry included on the delegation. Such an Ontario trade delegation should go to the British Isles and other countries and say to them, "We have bacon, we have tobacco, we have beef, we have . . ."

AN HON. MEMBER: Bananas.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, the hon. member is the representative of a "banana republic."

I want to say the recent order we received for cheese was a sort of windfall, but there is no guarantee we are going to get it again. The sale of salmon from British Columbia was the result of private negotiations, not of arrangements by Ottawa.

I would like to see an Ontario delegation with, of course, a Cabinet Minister or two on it to shepherd the hon. members composing it. Let us say to all countries "We want to trade with you." The former hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) made a statement a number of times that I felt was very wise. He said "Let us sell food rather than guns" and I think this province should take some independent actions, not in opposition to Ottawa, but independent action nevertheless—which it has done on other occasions and at other times—to find markets for our agricultural and industrial products.

I conclude with this, Mr. Speaker. We are at the crossroads. I am sorry to take a tone that differs from the Speech from the Throne. I do not think it is all rosy. I do not think we have no cause for worry. I am sorry, but I do not think it is a matter of settling down. I do not think we are suffering because of growth in the recent period. I think we are facing serious challenges which will determine the well-being of this province for a long time to come. The few issues upon which I touched are those which concern the future development of the province, and I call on the government to give leadership to all these issues. I do not suggest that we embark on a struggle, Queen's Park versus Parliament Hill. Or that we begin every day to shoot arrows towards Ottawa, and Ottawa replying with other weapons. I do not mean that at all. But I do mean that this government on behalf of this great province, in the interest of its people, in the interest of the country, should give statesmanlike, sound leadership. And if, as a result of such leadership, they should secure some political benefit, I for one, will not at all resent it, providing the government does the right thing.

And I think the right thing should be done right now.

MR. S. F. LEAVINE (Waterloo North) moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

SAO PAULO LIGHT AND POWER COMPANY

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick) moves second reading of Bill No. 15, intituled, "An Act respecting the Sao Paulo Light and Power Company Limited."

He said: Perhaps I should say a word on the principle of the bill at this point.

The purpose of this bill is to enable the Sao Paulo Light and Power Company which is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Brazilian Traction Light and Power Company, Limited, with offices located in Brazil, to change its head office to Brazil, and thereafter to apply to the Brazilian authorities for the necessary decree under Brazilian corporation law, to become a naturalized Brazilian corporation, and if and when that occurs within the limited time mentioned in the Act, to file with the Provincial Secretary a certificate showing that that has been done, after which time the Ontario corporation law and the Companies' Act will cease to have any application.

May I say that this company, which has very large assets—something like $275 million of assets—all of them in Brazil, has played a very important part in the development of electricity in the heavily-populated centres of Brazil.

The State of Sao Paulo, which is a highly industrialized section of Brazil, is dependent to a very considerable extent on this company for its development and the electricity produced is not sufficient for its present requirements, and for the growth contemplated.

If this bill becomes law, and the procedure I have mentioned is followed, it will enable the people of Brazil to invest in this company, and take part in the development in that way, by supplying the additional capital.

Mr. Speaker, a bill with respect to another subsidiary—the Brazilian Telephone Company—of the same Brazilian Traction Company is, at the present time, going through the House of Commons in Ottawa, having received approval in the Senate, and it is asking for the same ends this bill seeks in the Ontario Legislature with respect to electricity.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

TORONTO EAST GENERAL AND ORTHOPAEDIC HOSPITAL

MR. PRYDE, in the absence of Mr. Macaulay, moves second reading of Bill No. 2, "An Act respecting the Toronto East General and Orthopaedic Hospital."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWN OF FERGUS

MR. PRYDE, in the absence of Mr. Root, moves second reading of Bill No. 4, "An Act respecting the Town of Fergus."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWN OF MIMICO

MR. BRANDON moves second reading of Bill No. 6, "An Act respecting the Town of Mimico."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE FRONTENAC HIGH SCHOOL DISTRICT

MR. EDWARDS, in the absence of Mr. Pringle, moves second reading of Bill No. 1, "An Act respecting the Frontenac High School District."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE BOARD OF THE BAPTIST CONVENTION OF ONTARIO AND QUEBEC

MR. OLIVER, in the absence of Mr. Nixon, moves second reading of Bill No. 24, "An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWN OF PALMERSTON

MR. EDWARDS moves second reading of Bill No. 29, "An Act respecting the Town of Palmerston."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS AND BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves second reading of Bill No. 63, "The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act, 1954."

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill goes to the Committee on Education.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways) moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

The House in Committee; Mr. Roberts in the Chair.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE EXPENSES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 45, "An Act to amend The Magistrates Act, 1952."

On Section 1:

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask if some magistrates had jurisdiction throughout the province before this legislation was passed?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: What proportion did have?

HON. MR. PORTER: The magistrates frequently have been sent to different points to fill in, when there was a vacancy or illness, but, generally speaking, I think there were but a few, perhaps three or four, who have had jurisdiction to fill in, and for those, that was most of their work.

We have two or three magistrates who have been travelling about the province filling in, which is really their full duty. They are not assigned to any particular place at all. The majority of the magistrates are assigned to one particular county.

But, if I recall correctly, there are only two or three in that category.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive agreed to.

House in Committee on Bill No. 46, "An Act to amend The Mechanics' Lien Act."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.

Bill No. 46 reported.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report eight bills without amendment.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House reports eight bills without amendment, and begs leave to sit again.

Report adopted; motion agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

MR. OLIVER: Will the hon. Minister tell us, Mr. Speaker, if it is the government's intention to proceed with the addresses in reply to the Speech from the Throne on Monday?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, the addresses will continue on Monday. Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 3.40 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

MONDAY, MARCH 1, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: The honourable members of this House have experienced this morning the profound sorrow through the passing of one of our most esteemed and kindly members of our Assembly in the person of William Bruce Harvey. His genial nature, always carrying the spirit of supreme optimism and bright outlook, left an impression upon all whom he served of the real possibilities of life. He was possessed of a rich happiness which was so evident in his cheerful nature and ready smile. His enthusiasm for his part of the province which he loved so much carried a contagion which made so many feel that his was the best part of God's creation. His love of nature, his abundant faith, and his simple charity were distinctive marks of a true servant of God and man. We give thanks for the gift of his life to our day and generation, and to his family extend our understanding, sympathy and prayers for strength and faith and courage.

May we observe one minute's silence please, in grateful recognition of the life of William Bruce Harvey.

One minute's silence; all hon. members standing.

MR. SPEAKER: Almighty God, with whom do live the spirits of those that depart hence, we most humbly beseech Thee to look in love and mercy upon the soul of Thy child, William Bruce, whom Thou hast called from the cares and duties of this world, into Thine Eternal Presence. Grant that as we believe in the reality of Life Eternal, so too may we, his friends and associates, find comfort in that same knowledge for him. Graciously look upon those bereaved by their loss, and may they find in Thee—the God of all mankind—a sure refuge and strength in their time of sorrow. For all his weaknesses and shortcomings we beg Thy mercy. For all his good deeds performed in the midst of this world may he be a lasting memory of thanksgiving and may his human understanding add to the betterment of all with whom he came in contact. May he find Eternal Rest in Thine unbounded love. All of which we ask in the name and for the sake of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, who is the Resurrection and the Life. Amen.

Introduction of bills.

Before the Orders of the day, I think, perhaps, I should explain for the benefit of those who are not aware of it, the significance of this very important day. This is St. David's day.

Those of us who are Welsh, and we have at least two born in Wales in this august Assembly, 2 out of 90 is not too bad for a little country with only a few million population, but I can assure you that the smallness of our numbers does not represent our enthusiasm, I think, our devotion, and I would say perhaps, even our intelligence, but in that perhaps I would not find too much agreement.

I can assure you, it is a very great privilege for me to accept from the Welsh Players, in token of this day, this very lovely basket of daffodils. I am extremely grateful they did not send a bunch of leeks with them, which is, of course, our emblem, as I do not think I would have been able to stand the leeks beside me—not nearly as well as the daffodils, I assure you.

I do want to express my public thanks to the Welsh people of Toronto for thus honouring our patron saint.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I am very glad today to join you in expressing our tribute to our patron saint, St. David. Although today is St. David's day, the Welsh people in Oshawa had a banquet on Saturday night, and I wish you had been there to listen to the singing of the old Welsh songs and hymns.

We had a very large gathering. We had some friends from Lindsay, who, although we enjoyed their company, I am sorry to say were supporters of the hon. Prime Minister.

The English have their patron saint, St. George; the Scottish have St. Andrew; and the Irish have St. Patrick; but they are not quite sure where they were born. The Welsh people can truly boast that St. David was a native son, born in Wales.

I am very pleased to see that you received a beautiful basket of daffodils. There is some controversy respecting the national emblem, whether it should be the daffodil or the leek. I am very glad to know the Welsh players of Toronto favour the daffodil; otherwise, I am sure you would be drinking a great deal of leek broth for the rest of the year.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MACKINNON PHILLIPS (Minister of Health): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I beg leave to table this Third Annual Report of The Alcoholism Research Foundation, and, at the same time, to make a few explanatory remarks.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate Mr. McNab, the President of The Foundation, and all its members. These men are doing a remarkable job in the fields of treatment and rehabilitation of patients who are suffering from chronic alcoholism.

This takes the form of, first, diagnosis, which is based on research; second, treatment; and third, and most important, rehabilitation.

I also want to congratulate the Executive Director, Mr. David Archibald, and his Medical Director, Doctor Armstrong. Within the last few months they have taken on a Director of Education, Mr. Ross. Our new Alcohol Clinic and Hospital was opened last spring. It is situated at 9-11 Bedford Road.

May I say, at the present time, there are only two copies of the Third Annual Report available, but if any of the hon. members of the House wish a copy, if they would write to Mr. Archibald or Mr. John Scott of the Public Relations Division of the Department of Health, they would be glad to mail it to them.

I would like the hon. members, while they are studying it, to look at last year's Annual Report, and also the first one, so they will realize that chronic alcoholism is a disease.

Research has proven there is a change in the bio-chemistry of the blood, that there is a difference between chronic alcoholics and normal people in that their internal glands do not work the same.

Then, Mr. Speaker, I would also like to mention the legislation which was passed by this Parliament in the spring of 1949, and to keep in mind the foundation must carry out the measures, and not go beyond the legislation which was passed at that time.

For your information, I would like to spend a few minutes in describing alcohol itself, how it was made yesterday and how it is being made today. In the distillation process of alcohol, we have four alcohols which are given off.

The first one is ethyl alcohol which is the one, and the only one, which should be taken as a beverage or in any other form. Then we have the so-called fusel oil, butyl, propyl and amyl.

In the old days the great distillers in Great Britain were very particular about the distillation process, because the ethyl alcohol is given off first, at the lowest temperature, and then the other three alcohols. They aged it for many, many years, mostly in oak which was charred on the inside. I might say, it was the charring of the inside of the oak barrel which gave the whiskey its colour.

Strange to say, during the early part of the war in the lend-lease programme, Britain had to send her whiskey to our neighbours to the south in order to help repay them for armaments, and by the end of the war most of the aged whiskey was gone.

You may ask me, what the aging of the liquor has to do with it. First, in the distillation, and if that is properly done, there should not be over an ounce and a half, to two ounces, of these so-called oils in an Imperial quart. Today, in a great number of liquors, there is as much as two to two-and-one-half ounces of so-called fusel oil. What is done, is we actually shake it up. What we should do is siphon it off the top, because that part is really poison. These fusel oils—so-called—are deadly poison. What we actually do is shake them up, and we get it in a diluted form.

It is aged in oak, or in hardwood, over a period of years. As a matter of fact, in Ontario today the law requires them to age it for at least 2 years although the old distillers in England would say that was falling far too short of the mark: they say it should be aged 10 or 20 years; in fact, most of them like to age it for 20 years, because they want to give time for the oak to absorb the fusel oils from the liquor.

They are trying out experiments in Britain today. These experiments have not been used here in Canada as yet, and what they are doing is a form of electrolysis. They take an electric churn, and it is churned for a period of 3 weeks.

Some say that 3 weeks' churning in one of these electrolytic churns is as good as 60 years' aging in the wood. That is still in the experimental stage and must be proved. But in Ontario they are still storing it in wooden kegs not larger than 150 Imperial gallons, for a period of 2 years.

There is just one other thing I would like to say, and that is about our present hospital and clinic at 9-11 Bedford Road. At 11 Bedford Road we have 15 beds available for alcoholics. They are open to the people of Ontario—not only to the people of Toronto and the people of this particular district—but for everybody in the province. We have at the moment 12 beds for men and 3 for women—the usual ratio is 5 beds for men to every 1 for a member of the female sex. They have found that both in Canada and in the United States, to be a convenient division. As we study this problem we find that these people come into a hospital, or into a clinic and that afterwards, apparently, about 50 to 52 per cent. have remained sober. We call that a trend. We are not saying that they have recovered or are cured, but it is just a cessation of taking alcoholic beverages, as a crutch, for a period of time.

We hope that no chronic alcoholic will ever become a social drinker again. If he does, the chances are almost 99 out of 100 that he will go back to being a chronic drinker. So if you read reports which state these men, in 6 months, or 2 years, or 5 years, have been cured of chronic alcoholism, they can be regarded as misleading, because such people, if they are given even one drink, will probably go back to their chronic alcoholism.

I just want in closing, Mr. Speaker, to offer each and every hon. member an invitation to come to our clinical centre at 9-11 Bedford Road, where Mr. Archibald or one of his assistants will see that hon. members are taken through the hospital and clinic and are shown just what is being done there by the Alcoholics Anonymous which accounts for about 25 or 30 per cent. of our total. They have been getting more men and more women to come in for treatment.

Their great job is the rehabilitation of these people—it is not just a matter of stopping drinking. Under the rehabilitation programme it is a matter of seeing that they may once again enter their homes, their communities, and their industries, or wherever they work, and become normal individuals.

MR. F. R. OLIVER: Is there a waiting list of those desiring to attend for this treatment?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition mean, have we beds enough for them all? I rather think that we have. We have 6 beds. We have 2 beds in St. Michael's, 2 in the General and 2 in the Western Hospital for the acutely ill alcoholics. When they have been there about 5 days or a little longer they can be moved to our hospital. I feel that we have as many beds as we need at the moment. If I am wrong, I shall correct that statement tomorrow.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak concerning the passing of our friend, the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey). I am not in a position at the moment to give hon. members of the House the particulars concerning the date and time of the funeral, but I will do that just as soon as I can get the information. I know the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and hon. members of the House would want to join with me in making reference to our late friend and colleague whose unexpected death was a very great shock to us all.

Mr. Harvey was a man of great personality, and a sincere friend. He had been a member of this House since June, 1948, representing the great riding of Nipissing, which from the very earliest days of our history has been a crossroads, a place of meeting for people of different racial origin, and, to an extent, of different language; a gateway to the north going back to the days of the beginnings of this country and this continent, a crossroads for the voyageurs, traders and missionaries of those days.

Mr. Speaker, the late hon. member for Nipissing served his country well, in his own capacities as a private individual and as a businessman. He also served his country and his province in the Legislature. Elected, as I say, in 1948, he was for some years a commissioner on the Ontario Northland Railway, where it could be said he rose from the ranks, because "Bill" Harvey, to some extent, followed the great riding from which he came. He was a New Canadian. He was born in Scotland and came to this country about 40 years ago and after coming here, went through the course often taken by new arrivals in this country.

Like many other great men, he sold newspapers in his early days. He served as a fireman on the Ontario Northland Railway, the railway he was afterwards to serve as vice-chairman. He became a businessman, he became an expert in mechanics, flew his own airplane, and symbolized not only the fact that Nipissing has always been a part of our province which has welcomed newcomers to Canada, but that he was privileged as a New Canadian to rise to eminence in this country and in his own community, a tribute to the man and a tribute to this great country. It is wonderful to think that a man, born in another land can come to this country as a New Canadian, and, in his own lifetime, serve his adopted country in a variety of capacities, do well from a business standpoint, become a member of Parliament, and become a vice-chairman of one of our great undertakings—all that in the lifetime of one man.

It is a very great loss to this province and to this Assembly that this young man, with so much promise and so much ability and so much to give to this country should have been taken at such an early age. I am sure we all feel his passing very keenly and we want to join with you, Mr. Speaker, in the tribute you paid, and to extend to Mrs. Harvey and her family, our sincere and deepest sympathy.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would like to join with the hon. Prime Minister

(Mr. Frost) in his expression of the sorrow we all feel today in the passing of our friend "Bill" Harvey, the late hon. member for Nipissing. I think the shock comes more directly to us because of the fact that he was so recently among us, taking part in the deliberations of this session. I was going to the train on Friday night, and took the opportunity to talk with "Bill" Harvey a few minutes before entering the train. It does not seem possible that he has been taken from us in the prime of a very useful life—a man who, as the Prime Minister has said, has done many things in this country, has not been afraid of work, and has lived long enough to see the results of hard work, and the achievements which spring from it.

I think it emphasizes the uncertainty of life itself. Those of us who spoke with "Bill" Harvey in the past few weeks can hardly realize he is gone from us. I found in my companionship with him that he was a genial sort of a man, a firm friend and a good companion. He was a good representative from a good riding and—I think this is the thing he would like us most to say about him—he was never found wanting when it came to extolling the beauties, the possibilities and the potentialities of that great riding.

I join with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) in expressing our sorrow and our sympathy to Mrs. Harvey in the loss of a man who was one of ourselves and a great citizen of this province.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I join with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in expressing our very great sorrow and sense of shock at the sudden passing of "Bill" Harvey. He was a friend of all of us. We knew him for his kindly smile. He went around the building always with a genial word and a welcome to everyone he met. He will certainly be missed by all in the House. I also wish to join with the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Leader of the Opposition in extending to Mrs. Harvey and others in her family our very sincere condolences on their great loss.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): May I add my own expression of sympathy to the family of the late member for Nipissing who so suddenly passed away, and also to the government for having lost one of its loyal supporters, as well as to his many friends.

Mr. Speaker, we have been rather a lucky Parliament, in the sense that there was no loss in our ranks for the first couple of years. Some people remarked on that fact—that this present Parliament was very fortunate.

Unfortunately the spell was broken with the very sudden and untimely death of the former member for Simcoe East (Mr. McPhee) and now, so soon, the loss of another member. I hope that this will not be repeated in the life of this Parliament and that, politics apart, and leaving to one side the differences which we have, the hon. members who were elected will be enabled to complete their terms and to serve the electorate to the best of their ability.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

AMENDMENT TO THE MOTION IN REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. S. F. LEAVINE (Waterloo North): I extend to you, Mr. Speaker, my appreciation for the able and kindly manner in which you have fulfilled the duties of your office. I think that too often remarks that I and many other hon. members make in this Chamber are only too well illustrated by the "morning smile" that was published in today's Globe and Mail and I would recommend to all hon. members that they look at it when they get home this evening.

May I say that my training in life has been, insofar as one is able, toward attempting to make a reasonable diagnosis and applying the proper remedy, insofar as cure or alleviation goes. I suppose that we all regret the alleged irregularities that are supposed to have taken place in the Highways Department. I think that we will all commend the action of the Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in that they have acted in a safe, sane and salutary manner in this matter, and I think that in fairness to all, they are entitled to reasonable time to find a solution of the problem.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that we in Waterloo North are quite appreciative of all the work that has been done with regard to our roads system in the past year, or promised for the year to come, but I would like to make a case for the development of roads in Waterloo North almost as sound as that of the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope). May I point out to you, sir, that the City of Kitchener ranks fifth in industrial production in the Province of Ontario and if we include the thriving City of Waterloo, we rank fourth, and if we group the two communities together, we stand first in the per capita production of the value of goods manufactured in the Dominion of Canada. And so it is for that reason—and that reason alone—that I make an appeal for roads on each and every occasion.

We have of course the unfinished portion of the dual highway Number 8, from Kitchener to Freeport, which I think requires completion at an early date. We have, of course, that historic bridge at West Montrose which is still covered and which still necessitates the children disembarking from the school bus and walking across, because the bridge is not safe to transport them. These are some of the minor problems that I am quite certain will be solved at a very early date.

In the discussions pertaining to planning in the neighbourhood of Kitchener and Waterloo, we find one recurring theme, that is the question of controlled access roads. There seems to be a belief held by the majority of those interested in planning that this is, of necessity, to handle the traffic problem not only of our area but probably several others. They make this complaint—and it comes from a number of people—that they have no sure way of finding to which department of government they should turn, in order to get direction, that if they go to the Department of Planning and Development they are told: "Well, that is probably Highways" and if they go to Highways, it is some place else; and I am quite certain that at least the planners of my area would be very, very pleased and happy if some simplification of the procedure were introduced.

The safety campaign inaugurated in the County of Waterloo, in the fall of 1953, has been well publicized and I do not suppose that at any time in the history of Ontario more groups have been aware of the problems which exist as to highway traffic and the desirability of lessening the terrific loss of life, and I think we have the co-operation of every group, and I would say to the department, that the work they did thereon is very much appreciated.

Recently a local magistrate—and may I say a very excellent representative of the legal profession—in passing judgment in a motor accident case, had occasion to make reference to what he termed the "menace of black buggies." Now hon. members may or may not know that there is a religious denomination in our county who forego the use of any modernized means of transportation, and I think that I am quite fair in saying that it was not the intent of the magistrate to cast any reflection upon these great and satisfactory people, but I might point out if there is any difficulty with regard to the operation of vehicles by these people, that I would suggest some member of the Department of Highways talk to the leaders whom they will find to be extremely tolerant and understanding.

Last year I had occasion to make some reference to examination of drivers for permits. I would say that insofar as my own area is concerned, there is reasonable evidence that a more thorough job is being done, and while there has been a great deal of discussion as to the factors which precipitate accidents—and I can agree with the statement that the human factor plays a large part—and by “human factor” I suppose they simply mean our own selfishness, both in regard to the roads, and in regard to drinking—but I do think the department can very well accept that, and can see that there is complete enforcement of their own slogan: “If you drink, do not drive.”

Material damage is important but it is replaceable, but the loss of more than 1,000 human lives in the province last year is deplorable and I think that is admitted by all.

I suggest that the case for or against the motor car will ultimately be decided on whether the benefits outweigh this useless slaughter. I have at the present time a request to support any move which is made to lower the speed limit to 15 miles per hour in school areas. I am aware that petition has been sent around many times. I know many appeals have been made, but if you have had occasion to have a youngster killed in your area under circumstances in direct relation to a more than 15 mile-an-hour rate in a school area, I think you would very readily support it.

Inland municipalities, unless located in proximity to a body of water, are ultimately going to be faced with a problem of water supply and sewage disposal. This of course creates the inevitable problem of stream pollution, with all the possibilities of causing pollution and contamination of existing water supplies, property damage and deterioration of or interference with proper land use. In the past it has been believed that if an urban community located upon a body of water, be it lake or river, of sufficient volume to give dilution of sewage or of self-oxygenation, that is adequate. I think that we will admit that that is no longer fair. In simple justice the treatment of sewage must be carried to completion. Insofar as the Kitchener-Waterloo and Elmira areas are concerned, we presently have a rather adequate water supply from artesian wells, but if we are to continue to prosper—and I do not see any reason why we should not—we must look further afield for water supply. As to sewage disposal, we have a large monetary investment, but only to give primary treatment. The work accomplished is good as far as it goes, but does not go far enough.

I agree that treatment should be complete and if we are to have complete treatment, it is going to require a great deal more money. I observe that there is a move on foot in certain municipalities to appeal to the Provincial Government for aid in this regard. I will not dwell upon that phase of it at this particular time.

In common with other counties, Waterloo has made representation that it should be the site of the pioneer village first mentioned by the hon. member for Wellington North (Mr. Root). May I say that on the credit side we have a historical society which is probably second to none in the province and, secondly, we have on hand, at a conservative estimate, relics valued at over $100,000. I have at no time felt that there should be only one such village. I rather think that areas should get together and arrange to preserve the history of their own districts, and I would think if that were done, the government would find some reasonable means of giving fair assistance to those who have helped themselves.

In the fall of 1954, Waterloo County will be the site of the International Ploughing Match which, as most hon. members know, is growing in importance every year. In the summer of 1954, the City of Kitchener celebrates its Centennial. I would extend to all hon. members a cordial invitation to visit the County of Waterloo and see some of the characteristics of its people and even of its food.

The move toward unconditional grants by the province is one to be greatly commended. I have always felt that was a desirable move and was more than pleased when the government of the Province of Ontario introduced such legislation. I have also subscribed to a belief that there is a relationship between population and responsibility. However, coming back, sir, to the proposition that we have a water and sewage problem and recognizing that many other communities seem to have problems peculiar to themselves, I am rather of the opinion that some up-grading of the per capita grant is a much safer method of solving municipal problems than making specific grants to any particular item. The making of specific grants, particularly with regard to sewage—and I suppose it applies to most other things—simply means that if you do it for Kitchener you do it for Waterloo and you do it for every other place in the province, you do it for every village, you do it for every farm house, and I think they are entitled to it, if you do it on that basis; but I state again that I think every municipality, be it rural or urban, has some problem which is peculiar to itself and that there is some justification for an up-grading of the per capita grant.

Mr. Speaker, may I make a plea at this time for the decentralization of government. You know that we in Waterloo North have no purely provincial institution, unless you consider the liquor stores as such, and we have a regional welfare office which is doing a good job. I grant you that a liquor store is a very valuable asset and I rather suspect brings in a pretty excellent revenue—I will have to ask the commissioner some day what the profit from our area is—and I do not wish to compare it with that which Waterloo South has, or with that of any other riding, but I want to point out the philosophy which appears to have prevailed, and that is that when the Liberals were in power they could say with certainty: "What's the use, we win it anyway" and when, once in a generation, a Conservative wins, they can say: "Well, that's a freak, it will never occur again." Maybe that is true. However, regardless of Party, there is a feeling of neglect on this subject.

Relating to pensions for disabled persons from 16 to 65, this has been well received in my riding. From experiences gained, the Department of Welfare can no doubt make recommendations to the Federal Government for the extension of the type of case which can be reasonably included.

Home and office medical care provided through the Department of Welfare in co-operation with the Ontario Medical Association has worked well for the old-age pensioners, as have mothers' allowances and pensions for the blind. I recognize the difficulty with regard to that which I am about to suggest, but we must admit that there is a tremendous number of people who are hospitalized for just cause and in many of these cases it requires such things as a Smith-Petersen pin for a fracture of the hip, or some elderly males have operations peculiar to themselves and our specialists or those operating in that field, feel that there might be some token payment with regard to their services. Inasmuch as this does not apply to me particularly, I cannot say that there is a personal element in it.

There is another topic which I mentioned before, namely that there is a wealth of material in our homes for the aged. I doubt whether there is any caloric deficiency in the care of these patients. I do believe there is some evidence of dietary imbalance, and sub-clinical vitamin deficiency and I have suggested that a visiting dietitian should be available to instruct the chefs of these institutions throughout the province, because it is possible that we can do a great deal to further the study of geriatrics, diseases of the old, and I think that that is one group which is readily available. Furthermore I rather suspect that we might salvage from this group a reasonable percentage of people who could be returned to some form of activity or at least made much happier in themselves.

I think hon. members can all agree with the special grants which have been made towards the treatment of and research on the problem of cancer. I think we also can readily admit that radiology and surgery are not the complete answer to the problem, and it is for that very reason that I think the research phase should be stressed and I know full well that no person in the province will begrudge any sum which is spent upon this particularly great work.

I have suggested at other times that I thought some work could be done on research as regards rheumatism. I observe that we do make a grant in that regard. I think multiple sclerosis is another problem which needs considerable attention and I would direct a plea to the Department of Health that they should, at the first indication of success, make the poliomyelitis vaccine readily available to all the people of this province, again regardless of cost.

To the Departments of Health and Welfare, I bring this little peculiar problem, that is, of a number of defective children for whom possibly there is some hope in the future, but who at present are waiting admission to Orillia. They are in the meantime either admitted to a general hospital where they should not be, or they are kept at home, and if the latter condition happens to be the case, they create a problem within the family. Certainly it is not very stimulating to the other members of the family. This problem is creating a great deal of worry in many Children's Aid Societies throughout the province. I recognize the defect of decentralization of a great number of these children in Orillia, but I would rather suggest that small regional hospitals be constructed upon a basis to be worked out later. I should think that is the solution of the problem and I am not putting in a "plug," sir, for Waterloo North—I am putting in a "plug" for the service to this particular portion of the community.

In view of the development in a neighbouring province, may I say that I question whether any medical practitioner has had more children adopted during his practice than I have. I have found the demand greater than the supply, and the procedure and arrangements very satisfactory.

The indigent patient continues to be a problem with general hospitals. I know that the definition of "residence" is one of extreme difficulty, but may I suggest that if residence is established as being within a province, that it should be accepted by a province as their responsibility, and if without the province but still within Canada, that we make representations to Ottawa that they accept the responsibility which would be either that of the municipality or of the province otherwise.

I should think there is a case to be made out for an increase in the per diem rate in statutory grants. I think that is in order. I admit some municipalities are, by agreement, paying more than the required amount and I think probably it is desirable that we should all do that, or make it official.

I hope there is some virtue in repetition, because I return to an old subject, that is as to whether the cost of operating a training school bears any relation to the operation of a general hospital. I, for one, fail to see how in this day it does. In days of old, as the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) has mentioned, a year or two ago, you obtained services for training; at the present time the tendency has been mostly for didactic training or for demonstrations with a minimum amount of work, and that is probably as it should be, until you come to the straight clinical period; but to say that the cost of operating a training school should be charged to a general hospital, I cannot see that at all, and this is recognized in part by the fact that grants are made to special schools which are pioneering pilot plants to see whether they can speed up the training of nurses.

One of the more hardy perennials I hear mentioned from time to time: nearly everyone at some time or another has sponsored a plan for socialized medicine. I have nothing but support and appreciation for prepayment of medical services. I accept the desirability of the general population, along with the medical practitioners participating in the management of such plans. I would make this observation about the problem—and I say this based upon the fact that I have a practice which is probably over 60 per cent. social security or covered by insurance, and I know the amount of work this is entailed—I am not talking about the work common to the profession, but I am referring purely to the clerical work. There is no evidence that the government can do a better job than private enterprise, except when it has a monopoly and can be subsidized from general revenue or is tax exempt. Human nature being what it is, I do not think there can ever be a plan for socialized medicine that is complete and solvent at the same time. Some responsibility must be placed upon the individual to obtain screening from minor and nuisance demands. If that is not done the plan of complete service will become financially insolvent or unbearable.

We have had over the last few weeks a great deal of discussion as to the advantage of natural gas. I suppose we are all agreed that natural gas is very desirable to the Province of Ontario, although I am told by coal dealers that it is going to be a very serious blow to their particular phase of commercial activity. However, I think there may be some legitimate difference of opinion as to how the thing can be handled. In 1950 I supported a resolution asking that the handling of natural gas be a public utility. Ever since then, I have been thinking of this problem and I do not see how one can cross two or three provinces and still have it a public utility unless it is federal. Nor do I see how one can operate this hybrid plan of having the transmission a private enterprise, and the distribution a public utility. It would seem to me that that is a rather haphazard manner of accomplishing the desired end. I do not know how that could be done. Rather I should think if we had a complete Gas Commission, it would have some powers of regulation and that would be as far as we can go.

It has been stated that there is to be some change in our labour legislation. Representing as I do a labour constituency, I am quite interested in any legislation which may be introduced. It is quite true that I receive all the requests, including a request to discuss next Friday evening the problem of the revokable check-off, but the problem I wish to deal with is that of the vote for certification, which is one I have never been able to understand, I am waiting very patiently for an explanation, and that is, we will say 51 per cent., or a majority, has to support an application (51 per cent. of all employees must vote yes and failure to vote is a negative vote).

I am willing, as I have expressed before, to support compulsory voting, with the proviso if you have religious scruples against voting, or are absent, you may be exempt, but to say you must have 51 per cent., regardless of the practices which are accepted in general elections is wrong. I think, at least, we could have accepted the common custom.

We have presently observed our Federal Government voting an increase in pay for themselves. This practice that is common to all Parties, and all occupations, who have tried to cure their economic ills. I think it should be apparent at the present time, it is not an answer. They have adopted an easy-money policy, and this has, directly or indirectly, created depreciated money. This is a debtors' world, and the pay-off will come when grim necessity forces attention on the fact you cannot get something for nothing.

Income taxes, which I have considered the fairest of all taxes, if wisely expanded, have reached and continued at a level which breeds so-called "shrewd practice," such as the Loblaw stock gift of a few months ago, and all too many people turn to earning money outside of that which is taxable. This undermines character and respect for law.

Housing is a subject, of course, of considerable concern to all of us. It is only a few months ago that I heard a responsible building architect make the pronouncement that he thought houses should be built now, so they could be destroyed in six to eight months or a year. In other words, they are following the philosophy of the clothing industry—particularly of the female—and we will have a change of "clothing" for every season, and sometimes, for no reason at all. I do not think that is desirable, nor do I think the constant wasting of our substance will get us anywhere. I rather think what we have to do is to produce value for the money paid out. Up to the present time, it is questionable to me as to whether that has been so. I will correct that to the extent that I think the building contractors of the present day are more prepared to give you better value than possibly any time within the past 5 or 6 or 7 years. We come to the fact that we are going to have an altered position in the mortgage business, and, so far as I am concerned, this seems to me to be rather a peculiar sort of legislation. We take a group of people who are doing an excellent job in their own field, and ask them to go out into a field of which they have no knowledge. That is not within our province, of course, but it is all a reflection which must bear upon the average tax payer. I think what we need is more homes at lower costs, and the best way to get them is by co-operative building, with the stimulation of Credit Unions, which are interested in building. I can show you quite a number of people in my experience who have gone out and built their own homes—with the help of contractors, of course—but they themselves have been on the job, and have done a much better job, and are a great deal happier for it.

It seems to me educational plants have never been better. Our teachers and the Department of Education, are doing good work, but somehow there are certain basic qualities which do not, for long, carry over into everyday life. It may be we do not set a good example, or maybe we are stressing material values too much, but one thing is certain, we are not as happy, contented and honest individually, as we were a generation ago—and I hold no brief for the "good old days."

Happiness and contentment are a state of mind, and come from within. We need to recapture the spirit of the old. There is nothing this grand country needs more, and no problem it possesses, which cannot be served by greater production and lower prices, whether it be in your profession or mine.

MR. JOHN YAREMKO (Bellwoods) : Mr. Speaker, in rising to speak this afternoon, I should like to go perhaps a little more deeply into a subject which has already been touched upon by the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Leavine), and the other day by the hon. member for York West (Mr. Brandon).

You will recall, a year ago I expressed my concern over the increase of traffic deaths and accidents. Today, a year later, that concern is even greater, because rather than our traffic accidents and deaths decreasing, they have increased.

As the hon. member for Waterloo North said, since last year, over 1,000 people have been killed, and 25,000 have been injured. At that rate, Mr. Speaker, in the next 3½ years, there will be more people killed than live in your fair town of Amherstburg with its population of 3,700, and also at that rate in the next 25 years—God willing, within my lifetime—there will be 25,000 people killed, and over 500,000 injured.

Even last year's rate can no longer be used, because January, 1954, is up 12 per cent. over January, 1953.

Who are the victims? They are all ages, but especially the young. The other day, the United Nations World Health Organization reported in a survey that it is amongst the young, where the general death rate is usually low, that traffic is the number one killer, and that up to one-half of the young people who die between the ages of 15 to 24, die as a result of traffic accidents.

We are all agreed, I am sure, on the two common causes of traffic accidents. To my mind, the first is unreasonable speed, and the second, a disregard for the rights of others. I agree with the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) that the major element is still the man at the wheel. There are other causes, but I think we have a sufficient knowledge of those causes to be able to tackle them, with the hope of lessening the number of traffic deaths.

We cannot cure this disease by engineering alone. I agree wholeheartedly with the hon. Prime Minister when he states that our highways are second to none, and yet our hon. Minister of Highways, who, after having performed a wonderful piece of highway construction, known as Highway No. 401, must report that it has the worst accident record of any highway in the Province of Ontario.

If "Jimmie," now aged 15, is not to become one of the 10,000 who will die in traffic accidents before he reaches the age of 24, he must be taught proper driving methods, and his father, who should know, must continually be reminded of that necessity. I know of the hon. Minister's efforts in that regard and I urge him to expand and enlarge those efforts. If any individual does not want to learn, or does not want to put into practice that which he should know is proper, he should be taken off the highways.

I have seen great safety signs along our highways throughout the province. There is one which I would like to see more often, which says, "This is a patrolled highway; traffic safety strictly enforced."

Last week, Life magazine reported that a three-months' campaign, with no holds barred, in regard to traffic enforcement, reduced the number of deaths by 45 per cent.

We know that traffic enforcement is not popular, but I am sure when we note results like reduction in deaths of 45 per cent., there will be few voices raised in protest or complaint.

A year ago, I spoke on two items which were endorsed last week by the hon. member for York West (Mr. Brandon), two causes which I think should be tackled. One is the re-examination for physical fitness. Again I state my belief that some provision should be made at intervals of renewals for the examination of drivers, to make sure that no defects have presented themselves in the meantime. It is said that 10 per cent. of the accidents are attributable to this kind of thing. Let us go after this 10 per cent. also.

Secondly, may I refer to the re-examination of motor vehicles, Mr. Speaker. Note the result of an examination carried out in the City of Toronto less than a year ago, of some 2,376 vehicles. Of that number examined, only 58 per cent. were approved. Some 612 owners were summoned for defective brakes, and 185 had defective lights, or something similar, and 44 were removed entirely from the highways. It is not very comforting, Mr. Speaker, to know that 4 out of every 10 vehicles so examined were lacking in the minimum requirements of safety.

There is a field of responsibility which, to my mind, has not been sufficiently stressed, and that is in regard to the makers of these, the deadliest weapons of North America, that is, the responsibility of the car manufacturers.

Year in and year out, they unveil new models with tremendous and amazing engineering developments. A great many will be seen this week at the National Motor Show, at the Canadian National Exhibition. The latest I have seen is called the "Thunderbird," which is described as, "handsome and racy-looking, with power brakes, power steering, and push-button window controls," and, if you please, for the amateur racers, an elapsed time clock, and a tachometer. I had to look up the word to see what a "tachometer" is, and I discovered it is an instrument for measuring velocity. Plenty of advertising about all these things, but scarcely a word to the public about traffic safety. Where are the crash-proof doors, the plastic windshields, the flexible steering gear, and other safety devices? Surely engineers, who can devise a convertible top that goes up when a drop of rain comes down, can devise for us a frost-free windshield, and wipers which will give us a full field of vision.

And when a safety device is devised, why is it not put on all vehicles?

I would like to speak for a moment or two about the directional signals. We all know the value of hand signals, and the Department of Highways stresses their use. Your signal tells every other driver what you are going to do next, otherwise, it is bound to be a hit-and-miss procedure, and more often than not, it is a "hit" procedure. But, as we all know, the use of hand signals is not as extensive as it should be, and I am thinking particularly of the weather a couple of weeks ago, when we had the rain and sleet. Did many drivers, wishing to make a turn, roll their windows down, time and time again, and stick out their hands which could not be seen anyway? How much better, under such circumstances, to use a flashing light, which will indicate to everybody that the driver is about to make a right turn or a left turn.

Why is that device, recognized as a safety device, not a standard part of equipment on all cars? I believe the directional indicators should be a "must," and the chrome plating an "extra."

The same applies to these safety reflecting tapes. Surely the manufacturers of cars do not have to be told of the advantages of the safety reflecting tapes. How often do we hear of one vehicle plowing into another, because in the darkness, it was not seen. Surely the tragic accident, where the bus struck a parked vehicle might have been avoided if the parked vehicle had had on the rear, the safety reflecting tape, which would have reflected the lights from the on-coming bus. Why is this not standard equipment? Why is this not built right into the cars? Style is fine, but life and limb are more important.

The public demands style, and I believe the car manufacturers have created, to some extent, that demand. Surely, companies such as these, with their tremendous advertising and merchandising methods, could sell any safety device to the public if they wished. I urge these members of the public who will attend the National Motor Show, by the tens of thousands, to make enquiries about these items.

Mr. Speaker, I believe traffic accidents should be the concern of all hon. members of this House, in fact, of all the public throughout Ontario. It has become of national concern with our neighbours to the south, where President Eisenhower has called together men from all the states to discuss this problem.

Last week, we heard of some discussion in the House of Commons at Ottawa, to the effect that the Federal Government would be willing to meet with the provinces to discuss this subject. Mr. Speaker, Canada's rating as No. 2 in traffic accidents, among the nations of the world, is, to my mind, very regrettable.

I feel so strongly on this point, that I do not hesitate to state that I think this would be a proper matter for a Select Committee of the House.

The hon. member for York West (Mr. Brandon) also referred to the level crossings, and I agree with his comments in regard to the crossing at Dundas Street and Royal York Road.

I know it costs a considerable amount to provide overhead crossings, but it appears to me, as an ordinary member of the driving public, that slight changes would create a longer area of vision, and the hazards would be reduced, by such an increase in vision. I see no reason why representatives of all Parties concerned should not re-examine every railroad crossing in this Province of Ontario, and recommend the making of any necessary remedial changes.

Before I pass on, I would like to mention two related matters. To one interested and concerned about traffic safety, the accident reported on Saturday last, where a truck in Port Credit drove into a group of young children, was a most tragic one. Apart from that, Mr. Speaker, one of the amazing things to me was that a truck with a permissible load of 40,000 lbs. should have been overloaded to the extent of a further 7,000 lbs. I dread to think what trucks overloaded, such as that one, are doing to our highways in the Province of Ontario, and I urge the department to clamp down very strictly on those who are breaking the regulations regarding load weights, which may be very common.

I should like to express my pleasure that we are still retaining the two licence plates. I notice in the United States, they are doing with one. It is my belief that two are necessary and proper, and I believe here again that the car manufacturers should provide an appropriate place at the front of the automobile, so that a licence plate can be placed and stay there without being battered and beaten in ordinary traffic.

Mr. Speaker, it was my pleasure to join with the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Labour and other Cabinet Ministers and hon. members, at the official opening of the Workmen's Compensation Building. Symbolizing the tremendous development of workmen's compensation in this province, that building and its equipment should be a source of pride to the people of the province. The board is now provided with all necessary facilities to carry out a most thorough administration of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Now that is accomplished, I suggest we get on with a new, large, most modern building to either replace, or serve as an addition to the Rehabilitation Centre at Malton.

Our genial hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) whose genius is evident in the solution of labour-management problems, has, I believe, indicated a movement in this regard, and for all I know, he is so far ahead of everybody else, the plans may be already on the drawing board. But, in any event, I can assure him of my wholehearted support and, I am sure, the support of all hon. members of this House in proceeding with that building. Of some 3,769 patients treated in 1952, I was pleased to hear that 85 per cent. were returned to gainful employment, and anything which produces results such as that is deserving of the highest support.

Before leaving this, I should like to comment on the other 15 per cent. It is distressing to know that some 500 or more were not able to return to gainful employment. There may be reasons for that. If the reason is that men were physically unfit because of injury, then nothing further can be done, and the fund is there for their assistance; but, if there be some other reason then it should be overcome, and if the injured workman could have suitable or lighter employment or work, where his injury would not be a handicap, or if he could be trained to do some other type of job, I urge the fullest team work between the board, employer, and unions in order to assist that workman being so placed, for it is very difficult for an injured workman when he has to shift for himself to find employment even in times when employment is available. In times when there is unemployment he is cruelly handicapped.

It has been my good fortune to have been in close proximity during the past year to, what is in my mind, the finest rehabilitation centre in the Dominion of Canada. Lyndhurst Lodge, across the street from my home in the riding, is becoming famous for its accomplishments although those associated with it do not like to talk of miracles, to me, as a layman, the work being performed is indeed miraculous. To the lodge come those who are crippled by serious injury, those who are stricken by polio, those suffering from muscular dystrophy—they come in often hopeless and helpless, but they leave able to look after themselves, and filled with hope and spirit.

I have seen the skill and understanding of the staff. I have seen the super-human efforts of the patients which bring about these changes, the lodge's strongest feeling of accomplishment is when they are able to return the patients to a normal life. We owe the lodge a further debt when they completely rehabilitate the patient and return him to gainful employment of some kind.

I know that all departments which were mentioned in the Speech from the Throne have played a great part in rehabilitation in the past, and I am looking forward to seeing new measures which will be introduced, a development symbolic of the fact that this administration, not satisfied with what it has done, is always taking new steps forward.

Speaking of things done, of which this administration may well be proud, in my mind, there is one thing which this administration has not done of which it can also be proud, and that is in the words of the hon. Prime Minister, the Treasurer of this Province, no sales tax.

I was interested to discover only recently that this is a tax which five of the provinces, British Columbia, Saskatchewan, New Brunswick, Quebec and Newfoundland, have inflicted upon their people. Yes, one out of every $3 of all the dollars collected by those provinces is in the form of sales tax.

Mind you, Mr. Speaker, no province, with the exception of one, calls it a "sales tax." They call it, "Social security" and "Municipal aid taxes," "Education and hospitalization tax," "Social security assessment," but the dollars come out of the consumers' pockets just the same. Not so in Ontario, and may it never be so in Ontario. Yet, every citizen, I am sure, will agree that in the total sum of those services whose names are included in the naming of those taxes, the administration of this province is far ahead of the others.

You will agree with me, Mr. Speaker, that housing and planning for some years past have been two of the major problems which have confronted this area of Metropolitan Toronto. The hon. Prime Minister has rightly said that by virtue of the action taken last session in introducing Bill No. 80, a great many hurdles have been overcome. However, it seems to me that the type of housing and planning stressed both here and in Ottawa, has been the type which has been springing up in our suburbs, subdivision after subdivision; yea, even whole communities.

A home is not built in a vacuum. We all recognize that. As soon as a home is built, it needs all those services which we have discussed and re-discussed in this House, such as, hydro, sewers, pavement, street lights and the like. Even that is not all, because Mr. and Mrs. Jones, who live in the suburbs, have to get to and from the downtown area of Toronto, to work, to the Gardens, to Yonge and Queen Streets, to Sunnyside, to the Canadian National Exhibition. So, the Metropolitan Council has, and will have the problem of expressways on its hands, and the Parking Authority at the end of the expressways will have its parking problems, and Mr. Jones will "dig down" to pay for them.

I am not decrying the benefits of living in the suburbs. If Mr. and Mrs. Jones want that "dream home" in the suburbs, they should have it, and we are assisting them in doing so. But, I am afraid, we have all forgotten about

Mr. Smith. He is the man who enjoys living in the city. He wants to be able to walk to work, to the movies, to his church, to the shops; he wants to be able to walk, or at the most to "hop" on or off a street car or a subway. Mr. Smith is presently living in a flat, or a converted apartment. In many cases he could afford to build a new home without assistance, and, in many cases, he could afford a home with the assistance which is being rendered in the suburban areas, but he does not believe that the pleasures of the suburbs outweigh the disadvantages, the chief ones being long distances and the waste of time.

To my mind, the 40-hour week is not a great accomplishment if a man has to spend 10 hours travelling to and from his work. I am no expert on town planning, but I wholeheartedly agree with a scheme which was placed before the Board of Control of the City of Toronto, and which is now before the Metropolitan Planning Board. That is, we should not decentralize Toronto too much, but let us rebuild where all the facilities and services are already installed. Let us not drive all the "Mr. Smiths" into the suburbs today, battle over the problems which arise immediately, and then be "stuck" with the problem of central Toronto tomorrow.

In the place of homes spread over many acres, many miles away, Mr. Speaker, let us start building dwelling units, one on top of the other in the area. I am quite sure if assistance were rendered to "Mr. Smith" to enable him to acquire a home unit in an apartment-like dwelling, he would very gladly do so, and I strongly urge the Department of Planning and Development to watch very carefully the planning and development of home-dwelling construction which will be taking place in the Carlton-Yonge area.

In regard to the Regent Park housing, it has always surprised me why we have stopped at the third floor. Surely, where space is so valuable, where there are so many people, we should not stop at 3 or 6 floors, but go to 10 or 14 storeys.

If such a scheme is feasible for rental units, why should it not be feasible for people to own such dwelling units outright? I am sure there would be a great many people who would be willing to put a down payment on a dwelling unit in such a large apartment-like dwelling and have the privilege of paying it off in 15, 20 or 25 years.

Surely, the cost of the land for the optimum number of dwelling units in an apartment-like fashion would not exceed the cost of servicing the acres of land required for a similar number of detached dwellings. I envisage some day in the future, rising into the skies of Toronto, a great many apartment-like dwellings, housing a great many families who are content to be city dwellers.

Mr. Speaker, a great many factors enter into the industrial economy of today. I can never tell whether jobs and industry attract people, or whether people create jobs and industry. To me, they are two sides of a simultaneous growth, and one cannot exist without the other, and when one comes to a standstill, so does the other.

We, in the Province of Ontario, have had a tremendous industrial expansion, which appears to be on the same basis as our population. As has been pointed out we are to exceed the 5 million mark this year.

A great deal of that has been due to the natural increase in the birth rate, and a great deal has been due to the influx of many new people into the Province of Ontario. How are those who have come here, doing, Mr. Speaker? In short, and in truth, they are doing well. They are establishing their homes in this city, a great many of them in my riding. What that means to so many of them, who, for some 10 years or more, wandered through Europe with nothing they could call a home, and because they know that here in their homes they are the masters. They have taken homes which, because of age or lack of interest on the part of the owner who was about to move to another area, were in a state of disrepair and in a run-down condition, and they have practically re-made them. They have rejuvenated whole areas.

I spoke earlier of expansion in the suburbs. Many of those owners who live in the suburbs now, are owners for the first time, but many have previously owned a home in the city, sold it, and bought a new home. Often before a new home is acquired, there are a whole series of sales transactions, and often at the start the first link in this chain of transactions is a new-comer. Remove that first link and in a great many cases, there would be no one to purchase that home in the suburbs, and where there is no prospective purchaser, no home is built.

Expansion is a complex process and, for the ordinary chap like myself, it is difficult to put one's finger on all the factors. But, there is one point in expansion which has been very interesting to me.

As you know, a great many new-comers have come from Italy in the past two years. A great many of them are employed in the construction business for which they have the physical stamina and a certain innate ability and genius for it. A great many of them are staying in the city. They are buying their homes in the city. And to me it is a wonderful thing that, in buying their homes in the city, they are passing the down payments to someone else who is buying a new home in the suburbs, because it was in the building of those new homes that the new-comer obtained the funds to make a down payment on his own home.

New-comers, like many other Canadians, are confronted with the hurdle of the down payment, but a great many of them have found a unique solution. One will join with a friend or a relative, and with small savings, and small borrowings, together they will put a down payment on a home, and, lo and behold, they are then home owners. Within a year or two, sometimes not peaceably, but more often peaceably, one will buy out the other, who will then purchase his own place, and so a whole new series of transactions is completed again. The result is, new homes are built and other homes are re-built.

Mr. Speaker, from time to time one hears or reads comments that such-and-such be done in order to prevent the new-comer from succumbing to the wiles of the Communists. In fact, as I believe, there is no one group which is less susceptible and more anti-Communist, than the new-comers, for within those people there is still the strong remembrance of their experiences in Europe, and within those people still burn bright the hopes for those they have left behind who did not escape.

We in Canada and in Ontario are fortunate that our history has been such that there is no need of commemorations of days of independence. We have been fortunate that our history has disclosed an orderly development of our institutions and steps in the attaining of full sovereignty, and yet in Europe, within the lifetime of all of us here present, there have been many nationalities who stood up before the world and said: "We, too, are free men as all men should be." For some that freedom was short-lived. The Ukrainians, who declared their independence and freedom in 1918, were soon swallowed up by Communist Russia. For others, there were almost two decades or more of freedom. The Lithuanians, the Latvians, the Estonians, for some 22 years, until 1940, too, had independence and freedom, until they were swallowed up by Communist Russia.

Acting Speaker in the Chair.

Mr. Speaker, you will recall the tenacious determination of the small municipalities round about Toronto last year who were determined to maintain their little identities. Do you think that whole peoples would of choice commit national suicide and give up their independence as it is claimed the Baltic States did, and which I do not believe? Then there are other nations of which Poland is a prime example who retained their identity but whose proud free people now live in the shadow of the Kremlin. So, Mr. Speaker, you will see throughout this province from time to time peoples of various origins gathered together commemorating the day of independence of the country of their forebears. They meet to speak on behalf of those to whom the privilege in the so-called "people's democracies" is denied. I do not know whether their voices are heard across the thousands of miles that separate those peoples. They hope and pray that their voices are heard.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I think, really, that the hon. member (Mr. Yaremko) can do very well without reading. I do not think he should read his speech. I would not suggest this, Mr. Speaker, for another hon. member but the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko) can make a speech without reading and he should follow the rules of the house.

MR. YAREMKO: Mr. Speaker, if my hon. friend—he is not my friend—I withdraw that remark . . .

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member had that part of the speech prepared for him but he should not read it.

MR. YAREMKO: Mr. Speaker, I will gladly send a copy of these notes over to my hon. friend.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not interested in that.

MR. YAREMKO: The member made a claim that I was reading the speech.

MR. SALSBERG: That is right.

MR. YAREMKO: Would he like me to repeat the speech?

MR. SALSBERG: You certainly memorized the speech.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: If the hon. member is reading from his notes that is perfectly permissible.

MR. YAREMKO: Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) interrupted, he chose a very appropriate time. I am almost due to sit down, so his conscience can be eased.

Mr. Speaker, may I repeat, that throughout this province from time to time you will see reports of people gathering together, and may I say they meet to speak on behalf of those to whom that privilege in the so-called "people's democracies" is denied.

Their voices may not be heard across the thousands of miles. And I hope and pray as a great many other people in this province do, that they are, but if these voices are not heard across the ocean, they should not go unheeded within this province and so long as I am in this House I will never hesitate to bring that to the attention of hon. members.

Mr. Speaker, it has been a pleasure to me to get up to make my few comments on matters which have been of concern to me throughout the past year.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Little did I think when I dictated a few notes at my seat here this morning that I would come into the House this afternoon and find that the hon. Prime Minister was about to eulogize the name of the late hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey). I wish to join in the tributes which have been paid to his memory and to say that an hon. member who has been a watchman for the "Gateway to the North" has been called to his reward.

In speaking today I do not intend to take up much time of the House. It was not my intention to speak in this debate, but I do want to bring before the House one subject, but before doing so, I wish to join in the felicitations extended by previous speakers to the two new members and to endorse the good record of a good government under the leadership of a good Prime Minister and a good Cabinet.

Mr. Speaker: With the Lenten season close at hand this may not be an inappropriate moment to refer to a subject which I am glad to say is not too acute in our midst but which by reason of occasional excesses, does give cause for constant reflection. I refer to discrimination in my riding of St. Patrick which includes a very cosmopolitan section of the City of Toronto, there are residents of many races, creeds, and national origins and it is therefore natural for spokesmen on this subject to discuss with me this problem and to seek my sympathetic support.

May I refer to the Universal Declaration of Human Rights approved by the United Nations General Assembly in Paris in 1948 by a vote of 48 to 0 with eight countries abstaining—the U.S.S.R., the Ukraine, Byelorussia, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia, Saudi Arabia and the Union of South Africa.

This declaration is a statement of principles approved as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations. Article I, reads:

All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act toward one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

Article II:

Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this declaration without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status.

And then Article VIII:

Everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted him by the constitution or by law.

I will also mention Article XXIII, which declares the right to work, to free choice of employment, and to protection against unemployment, the right to equal pay for equal work; Article XXIV, the right to reasonable working hours and periodic holidays with pay; and Article XXVI, the right to education with the field of professional and technical higher education accessible on the basis of merit.

Canada subscribed to this declaration and I am sure the people of the Province of Ontario do.

There has been on the North American continent a good deal of legislation dealing with the subject of discrimination. I have had the opportunity of examining a compilation of states' law on race, colour, etc., published in book form 3 years ago at the instance of the Women of the Methodist Church in the United States, the second largest Protestant denomination in that country. The compiler is a California lady lawyer, the daughter of a principal of a Negro Public School.

We in Ontario have not stood idly by. In 1944 the Progressive Conservative Government of the day enacted The Racial Discrimination Act of 1944—prohibiting publishing or displaying any notices indicating discrimination because of race, creed, colour, nationality, ancestry, or place of origin of any person. Still another step was taken that year—the Labour Relations Act invalidating a union-management contract which discriminates against a person because of race or creed. Then in 1951 came the Fair Employment Practices Act prohibiting discrimination in hiring in all conditions of employment, and in union membership.

There does, however, remain the occasional discrimination in public accommodation and service—instances of which we have read of several times in our Ontario papers since the present Legislature came into existence. It is not necessary for me to name specific instances, or places in this fair province and no good purpose will be served by recalling certain notorious instances but there have been enough to cause this Legislature, Mr. Speaker, to think about this subject.

There are at least 18 states of the United States of America with legislation against this type of discrimination—discriminatory in places of public accommodation. For example in California, Maine, Massachusetts, Montana, New York and Utah, innkeepers are forbidden to refuse to receive guests without reasonable cause. Discriminating advertising to discourage racial or religious minorities from patronizing places of public accommodation is forbidden in a number of states.

Mr. Speaker, I have indicated what we have done in Ontario both before and since the Universal Declaration of Human Rights. Whether the time is approaching when we in this Legislature should enact legislation with respect to discrimination in public accommodation similar to that already in our statutes relating to the other types I have mentioned, all of which seem to me to be in the "ejusdem generis" class, is something for the government to consider and determine. I take this opportunity of drawing it to the attention of the House.

Perhaps it will not be inappropriate in speaking on this subject, which is the offspring of pride and prejudice, to quote, in doing, nay, to ask that we, who are the servants of the public, adopt the declared belief of a great Oriental Premier Chen Cheng of Formosa—he may now be vice-president—who very recently said:

My creed is the common good instead of personal self interest; fellowship and co-operation instead of ill-will and intrigue; mutual trust instead of mutual suspicion; and encouragement for one another instead of blame.

MR. A. G. FROST (Bracondale): Mr. Speaker, may I express my sincere regrets in the loss of another hon. member of our present Legislature. He was most friendly and very sincere. I am sure he will be greatly missed by us all.

Mr. Speaker, may I extend my sincere congratulations to the mover and the seconder of the motion for the adoption of the address presented by His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. The hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) represents a riding rich in historical association—a part of our province wherein 140 odd years ago the fate of this nation was decided. He presented to us a few days ago a brief picture of the amazing developments in his part of the province, more especially the development of the hydro enterprise without which Ontario could never have attained its present position in the Canadian scene.

It is a pleasure to welcome the hon. member from Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) to our ranks. His recent victory is a compliment to him personally, to the hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and to the administration. I am sure that the hon. member (Mr. Jolley) will make a worthy contribution to the work of this Assembly. The verdict rendered by the electors of Niagara Falls, I suggest, was a considered judgment expressing approval of the type of government which we have in Ontario today.

Mr. Speaker, may I also commend the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) for his contribution. He comes from the far northwestern part of Ontario, and it was indeed a pleasure to listen to his informative address. We in the south realize the immense contribution which the north makes to our provincial economy.

My congratulations also go to the hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby) who won a most impressive victory on February 8th, last. It was a personal triumph for him; it must have also been most gratifying to the hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and his colleagues. Simcoe East is a representative riding; it contains thriving towns which are a cross-section of the industry and commerce of Ontario; it embodies a rich agricultural district; it is one of the great centres of the tourist business.

It is, of course, with me as with all of us a matter of regret that this bye-election was occasioned by the death of a veteran member of this House who over a long period had endeared himself to all of us. He had rendered excellent service to Simcoe East and to Ontario. The sympathy of all our members goes out, I am sure to the members of the family of the late Dr. John McPhee.

It is good to see the hon. the Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) resuming his official duties even though his activities must be somewhat curtailed for a little time to come. I hope that coming days may see his early and complete recovery.

I think I should here interject a word of congratulation directed to our good friend, the hon. the Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar). In point of years he is senior, I think, to all of us, and there are very few of us who have seen as long a period of service in this House. His long experience in the municipal field has been brought to bear on his conduct of the affairs of his department. His efforts over a long period have helped to establish good provincial-municipal relations. His keen awareness of municipal needs and problems has been a major contributing factor in devising ways and means of stepping up municipal aid. I hope that he will be with us for many years to come. His genial presence is something which we all value in this Assembly, and which I valued very much during my 7 years' experience in Toronto City Council.

The government of today is contributing, in the form of municipal grants, as the hon. the Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) remarked the other day, about $130 million a year—and this without allowing for the per capita grants instituted at the last session of this Legislature. The figures speak for themselves. The record speaks for itself. And well do our municipal councils, our municipal officials and our municipal taxpayers know the facts.

Right now the biggest municipal experiment in the history of Canada is going on here in the Toronto Metropolitan area. The implications are of the utmost importance to Toronto and to the whole suburban area. In fact it is an item I have been personally interested in for many years.

I suppose most of our lesser centres of population are indeed enjoying a new growth resulting from the general healthy state of our economy. But at the same time, there remains the tendency for our big centres to grow still larger, bringing with this growth problems of housing, transportation, and services generally which require all our courage and ingenuity to face and to conquer.

Here, within a radius of 20 miles from where I stand, is the biggest concentration of industry, of commerce and of people in all Canada. In the general Toronto-Hamilton area more than one-third of our motor vehicles are owned and operated. This alone poses problems of the greatest magnitude. I may say a word about this a little later.

It was apparent 30 years ago and more, that a huge metropolitan problem was in the making—13 separate municipalities—with essentially common problems—running 13 costly, and in many cases duplicate establishments. A year ago, after a long period of intensive study, this administration enacted Bill No. 80. For the year 1953, the Metropolitan organization was being welded into shape. It is now, shall I say, a going concern which promises well for the future.

There has been a lot of give and take. There has been and will be much of compromise. But I suggest that the local councils and the members of the Metropolitan Council by their co-operation, their mutual goodwill, are going to accomplish great things for this great concentration of population living and working within the Metropolitan borders.

By the time this House meets again in regular session the Metropolitan-area organization will have been in existence long enough to give a demonstration of practical results. A large part of their effort will have been devoted to improvements along the line of through streets and highways. The rush-hour traffic, indeed the ordinary traffic in this city and its environs, yields a practical lesson in the need for such improvements as have already been projected.

In point of individual use, the motor car is recognized as something almost absolutely necessary to the ordinary family. However, to move people in the mass is another matter. An automobile carries a very few people in relation to its size. Hence, as our urban population grows, the problem of increasing motor traffic simply multiplies itself. That we need more and wider and longer through streets and highways in our population centres and their suburbs is elementary, but of themselves, they are not going to meet our problem. Street cars and bus services help to meet abnormal transportation problems, but again they are not sufficient.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate and express my sincere appreciation to our genial and very efficient Prime Minister for his advice and assistance leading up to the new contemplated Sunnyside Highway, which I said in my last address was a real "must." Many thanks, Mr. Prime Minister.

We are expanding at a commendable rate our highways system and one of its modern features is the limited access highway. This is in line with the modern engineering concept that through highways can no longer serve the dual purpose of expediting through traffic at high speeds and at the same time giving access to land.

Now we have radiating from Toronto in all directions—and the same statement applies in degree to all our larger centres—we have radiating existing rights of way of which we are making only limited use. I refer of course to our railways. If, 50 years ago, the railways had acquired the state of mind impelling them to realize that they should be in the transportation business generally, and not merely rail transportation, they would not have been in trouble today, as they so often are.

North, east and west, railway lines radiate from this city. They serve scores of communities which are within easy commuting distance. I need mention only Port Credit, Oakville, Cooksville, Newmarket, Aurora, Whitby, and a dozen others. Perhaps we might include centres as far distant as Barrie or Port Hope. Now I know the railways traditionally dislike commuter services. They say they do not pay. But they have them in England, the United States, and even Montreal, which I have used. A railway man said the other day there is a yearly loss of $170,000 on the Oakville-Toronto commuter service. But I ask, have the railways ever really attempted to make these services pay? I doubt it because they tend to use conventional equipment with conventional operating methods. Metropolitan Toronto is a big centre and it is getting bigger, perhaps a lot too big for this atomic age. The suburban growth demands new schools, new streets, new services all down the line.

I suggest that it would be better for Ontario and for the scores of thousands who work in this centre of commerce and industry if some of our thousands of workers were lodged in our smaller and nearby centres. It would be a good thing for the small towns and villages; it would be better for our workers and their families.

I suggest that our railways with their wealth of experience might devise commuter services that would be helpful to them while at the same time taking a big load off our existing streets and highways and lessening the demand for new and costly traffic arteries. Diesel driven cars, pulling 2 or 3 or 6 passenger units and operated by perhaps 2-man crews seem to me to be a distinct possibility. If some such services could be established on an experimental basis, I can see very many of our people living in our smaller centres, parking their cars at the local railway stations, coming to town by rail, and picking up their autos on their return in the evening.

In and around this city the building of a new traffic artery is an expensive job. Land values are high, indeed inflated, and where homes or business structures have to be removed the acquirement of a right of way runs into fantastic figures. Our railways must survive. They are the very basis of our transportation system.

The parking problem, too, enters into the matter. We see our streets and highways clogged, our buses filled to capacity, our conventional methods of transportation, generally, hopelessly overloaded. At the same time we see many trains running almost empty, rights-of-way used only at a fraction of their capacity. Is there not, I suggest, a great opportunity on the part of all the many interests concerned with the problem, to sit down around the conference table and find out whether much more use cannot be made of our railway facilities than is the case at present? The solution will not be an easy one. As I said before, I don't think that conventional railway equipment nor conventional operating practices will afford the solution. None the less I sincerely believe the whole subject is one worthy of the most searching investigation.

Here, perhaps I should mention another item in relation to our suburban development. First, let me say that the Regent Park development is an experiment which affords a fine example of governmental co-operation at all three levels. A huge depressed area in downtown Toronto is becoming an example of modern housing with many commendable features. It is centrally located; houses, churches and schools are already in existence; services are in place, and speedy transportation is conveniently at hand. Now out in the suburbs we have many examples of mass housing, including quite a number of apartment suites. Here, all the essential services have to be provided, resulting as is bound to be the case, in a formidable local tax rate. I think we should hear in due course from the hon. the Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Warrender) as to how he views the general housing situation. I am wondering also whether he could advise us as to any immediate or long-range plans whereby depressed areas in Toronto and other cities will be rebuilt. We agree, I think, that the detached house is the ideal family environment. At the same time there are thousands of business couples and older folk who find the apartment building more to their liking. Here in Toronto, shall I say on Sherbourne Street, Parliament Street and many other streets, are houses long past their prime. In so very many instances the land which is involved would contain an apartment structure housing a much larger population. I am sure the hon. the Minister of Planning and Development will let us have his views in due course.

Recent years have seen in this city a very large influx of New Canadians. Many of them live in my riding. May I say this. They are mostly hard-working, thrifty folk. Most of them have known poverty and oppression in the lands from which they came. They have an inborn love of the land; as a result very many of them have acquired their own homes in this city. Their thrift and industry enables them to work their way out of debt in a surprisingly short time. And, generally speaking, they take a great pride in their homes. Their programmes of renovation, painting and so on are making their homes a credit to themselves and to this great city, and I am sure we all welcome them in our midst.

Here in Ontario we have largely left behind us the age of exploitation. We have entered the era of conservation and of orderly development. The White Paper laid before this House a few days ago is an imposing document. It is a milestone in the march of progress as related to our natural resources of forest, lake and stream. Our natural resources are not inexhaustible. Far from it. They have found that out in the United States. Our neighbouring country has, in fact, become a "have-not" country in respect of certain essentials, wood-pulp and iron, to mention two of the most important.

No more important job has ever been undertaken by this government than that of terminating the export programme related to our forest products, a programme which arose out of the pulpwood agreements of 1936-37 and which are detailed in the 1938 Annual Report of the Department of Lands and Forests.

I am certain we shall await with interest a report from the hon. the Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly), on the development of our mining industry. The 2 major iron properties, Steep Rock and Algoma Ore Properties, Ltd., are already producing iron ore at the rate of nearly 2,000,000 tons a year. This is an entirely new item in our economy, for 10 years ago we produced no iron ore at all.

It is well-known that the iron-ore resources of the United States are wearing very thin. In degree, the same applies to zinc, lead and copper—all of these metals, as we know, being the very foundation of industrial progress. Again, in the Blind River area, investigation is being made of finds of uranium. It is evident that Ontario, long a leading producer of gold, is destined to be a most important producer of base metals. These facts are of much more than provincial importance. World conditions today demand that we remain on something approaching a war footing, and our possession of strategic minerals enables us to make an extraordinary contribution to the cause of freedom and democracy.

It is scarcely necessary to state that our supplies of forest and mineral wealth immensely improve our trade position and our bargaining position with the United States.

It is a pleasure to say a word of commendation on behalf of the work of the hon. the Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips). A few years ago we spent provincially, in the cause of health some $12 million. Today the annual outlay is nearly $50 million.

Aided by capital grants initiated by this government, our general hospitals have added 15,000 beds or thereabouts to their establishments. Special renovation grants are enabling many of these hospitals to bring their equipment up to modern standards.

One of the very big jobs of the department, and one of which we hear all too little, is the work of treating and caring for nearly 20,000 mental cases. It will be a matter of great satisfaction to our people in the north to see the mental hospital at the Lakehead brought to completion. A similar hospital is projected for North Bay. The construction of these large and costly institutions will be a great comfort to the people of the north. They will also, in the fulness of time, make available to this part of Ontario, the facilities of the excellent and large mental hospital at New Toronto, which, from time of its construction, more than 75 years ago, has been used almost exclusively for northern patients.

Our people of this city will approve of the 100-bed extension being made at the Toronto Hospital—999 as it is familiarly known. This construction, I understand, will be in the nature of a reception unit, and in degree will supplement the work of the Psychiatric Hospital, opened nearly 30 years ago as a result of provincial-municipal co-operation. I was alone viewing the work just a few hours ago. It is coming along very nicely.

The large extensions at Orillia and the huge new hospital at Smiths Falls, the extensions at Brockville, the renovations at Kingston, among other projects, will all improve the provincial establishment for the care and treatment of mental cases.

The high discharge rate in our mental hospitals, considerably better than 50 per cent. indicates the high standards of medical and nursing care which are available to those who suffer from mental illness.

In the public welfare field, it is gratifying to note that our Federal Government is proposing to initiate pensions for unemployables on a national scale. I have no doubt that the Ottawa decision was hastened by the example of this province. It is also gratifying to see the great improvements in institutional care for our aged people. This has been made possible by the provincial contribution in relation to homes for the aged. As you know, 50 per cent. of all costs related to these institutions are now borne by the province. I suggest that the warmest commendation should go to the hon. the Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) for his humane leadership and excellent administration. He has done a tremendous job in improving and enlarging the facilities required for those who for one reason or another are unable to care for themselves. But there is still a necessity for more accommodation and this morning they have a list of over 600 people waiting to receive admission to Lambert Lodge.

There is at this time a very considerable demand for so-called free hospitalization. If in the fulness of time we are able to develop some form of health insurance, it seems to me that it should be on a national rather than a provincial basis. But there are two important points among the many related to any such scheme. First, there is the necessity for facilities in the form of hospital, sanatoria and nursing home, also convalescent home accommodation. We are gradually building up these facilities here in Ontario. I have already mentioned the increase in the number of hospital beds. Second, no such scheme is free in any sense of the word. Right off the bat it means new taxation that hits every man, every woman, every home. Our revenues here are buoyant. They are however, no more than equal to our needs. We have been able to avoid provincial sales taxes and generally, provincial nuisance taxes. Most of the other provinces have them. Quebec has had to resort to a provincial income tax. In approaching the question of health or hospital insurance there must be the most careful survey of the subject; there must be a calculation of the cost; and there must be a determination of who will pay the cost and how it will be collected. And as a start, let us get away from the idea that any such plan is free. Ask them in British Columbia or indeed Great Britain if you do not want to take my word for it.

Before I take my seat I should like to say a word on one other subject, namely the traffic toll on our highways. As the hon. the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) explained the other day in his informative address to the Ontario Good Roads Association, there were 1,010 traffic deaths in 1952—and 1,082 such deaths in 1953. The injury toll was given as 23,364 for 1952 and 24,353 for the next year. In 1953, the estimated property damage was about $25 million.

It is a tragic thing for us to think that more than 1,000 people alive and well on January 1st of this year will be in their graves by December 31st by reason of street and highway accidents. I must commend the safety campaign which the hon. the Minister of Highways sponsors through press and radio, through safety literature and through so many local safety organizations. Year in and year out he suspends 20,000 and more drivers' licences. The courts are clogged with traffic cases. Perhaps the greatest single cause of traffic accidents is the wholesale violation of what I might term the code of good citizenship.

There is a heavy burden of work every day on the shoulders of our excellent Ontario Provincial Police force. The job of patrolling 10,000 miles of King's Highways is a very formidable task. To do this job adequately—to round up the drivers who violate every rule of safety, common sense and good citizenship—is beyond the resources of the traffic division of the provincial police as presently constituted. If the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) could deal with the subject of law enforcement on our highways I am sure we should all listen with the greatest interest.

The administration of justice in relation to crimes of violence is a big task in itself. I think, however, when we consider the loss of life and the property damage on our highways, and compare it with the loss of life and property related to crime in general, we should be sure to get a comparison which would astound us. I wonder if the hon. the Attorney-General cannot come up with some proposals, some stepping-up of administrative procedure, which will make 1954 the year of the big roundup for those hare-brained motorists who will not listen to reason nor observe the rules of common sense.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I should like to congratulate the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) not alone on his qualities of leadership nor on his accomplishments in the fields of legislation and administration. I should like to congratulate him on the renewed vote of approval and confidence as evidenced by the results of two by-elections in recent months. Simcoe East was his birth-place, the community wherein his earlier days were spent and where his late father enjoyed the respect and esteem of the whole community. It was natural enough that his own people should rally around the Prime Minister when he asked for a renewed vote of confidence. I think the hon. the member for Simcoe East will agree with me. I have heard many good things about him, and I trust we shall hear from him before this session concludes.

At Niagara Falls there was a somewhat different situation. Our Party was fortunate in having an excellent candidate who has already given a good account of himself in this House. But I think the Prime Minister and his colleagues appreciate in full measure the vote of approval which they received at the hands of a group of voters who, in the past, have very often chosen a representative of another Party.

I am sure, Mr. Speaker, that when the hon. Prime Minister again appeals to the people, he will again receive the same whole-hearted approval as was rendered him on November 22nd, 1951.

MR. C. G. MACODRUM (Leeds) : Mr. Speaker, may I first extend to you my thanks for the courtesies extended to me not only during this session, but between sessions. I was unfortunately delayed today, being in attendance at the Court of Appeal, and it was not until approximately three-quarters of an hour ago I learned of the unfortunate and untimely death of the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey). I wish to extend, in common with all other hon. members of this House, my sincerest sympathy to his wife and family, and I wish her and to them to repeat a little quotation :

To live in the hearts of those you leave behind, is not to die.

Mr. Speaker, I should like also to congratulate the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) and the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) for their excellent presentations when moving and seconding the reply to the Speech from the Throne.

When extending my congratulations,

I also wish to congratulate the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Cecile) for the innovation of having our "Red Coats" now engaged in the Provincial House. We are keeping pace with Ottawa, and I think it is a pleasant thing to enter this building and observe these young, trim red-coated ladies. I personally feel, and I feel that probably most of the hon. members of this House will agree with me, that it is but another indication of the high regard and high esteem in which the Frost administration holds the female sex. We are, at all times, looking after the rights of women, and this is but another indication that we recognize here a further sphere of service in which they can be active.

Mr. Speaker, we were all impressed by the Speech from the Throne. It is wide in subjects, not only dealing with human beings, but also deals with all animal and vegetable life, and the only worry I have in regard to the Speech from the Throne is—what has happened to the warble fly? I must assume that his wants have been attended to, as he has not been mentioned.

I should like to say a few words on the transportation of natural gas to eastern Canada. I may be wrong, but I do not think there is any more important legislation to be brought before this House than the transportation of natural gas to eastern Canada. In this regard, I wish to express my own appreciation to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) for the assistance which he personally has given, and the assistance his staff has given in my search for some information along this line.

I am anxious, living as I do in the Town of Brockville, in the great County of Leeds, to make sure that the constituents of my county have some appreciation of the magnitude of this development.

The cost of this development really staggers one's imagination, and I believe there are perhaps few hon. members of this House who realize that in actual dollars and cents this development will surpass the St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Development. I have had the opportunity of reading the report of Dr. G. S. Hume and also discussing the matter with provincial officials, and reading some reports of economists. By way of illustrating the magnitude of this development, these are figures which I have gathered as to the costs, because the cost is estimated at approximately $700 million—and that is a lot of money.

The main transmission line from Alberta to this province will cost approximately $300 million; covering lines and processing plants in Alberta, approximately $200 million; gas mains and transportation systems in Ontario, approximately $200 million.

I appreciate to some extent the difficulties which lie ahead, but again I do congratulate our hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Mines and his Cabinet for the foresight which they have already shown in appreciating not only the magnitude, but the importance of this work. There are some obstacles still to be overcome, and I do trust and I am confident that our sister Province of Quebec will, as she has done in the past, co-operate with us in bringing this Alberta line through to eastern Ontario, because, my understanding is, that without the co-operation of the Province of Quebec, the gas line will not run past the town of Brockville.

A word of warning, I think, should be sent out, and so I send it simply to my own County of Leeds, the municipal bodies and Public Utilities Commissions. I suggest they should be very wary, very careful before entering into any franchise with any corporation or persons for the supply of this natural gas fuel when it does come. I suggest to them that before they enter into any agreement by way of a franchise, they should at this stage, as of today, check with the Department of Mines.

I further understand there are three Acts apparently at the present time: The Fuel Supply Act, The Well Diggers Act, and The Natural Gas Conservation Act. These, I believe—although I am not sure—are to be consolidated into one Act in this Legislature, and I say there will be no more important legislation brought before this House, in my opinion, than the legislation having to do with natural gas.

I would like to say a word regarding the Department of Public Welfare. I wish to congratulate the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow). He and his staff are doing a magnificent job. I know something of that, because we have one of the largest institutions in the Town of Brockville. However, I would suggest—and I see that the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) is not here—so I can press rather strongly to the hon. Minister of Public Welfare that he give consideration to making Brockville the central point for his units, as they are scattered from the County of Frontenac on the west to Grenville-Dundas to the east from the Town of Brockville. It is a central point, and I say it would be economical as that the Town of Brockville is conveniently located to look after the needs of the people in all of those counties.

I wish to congratulate the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Griesinger) and I do that with much feeling. It was some months ago I contacted by telephone the hon. Minister and asked him if he could possibly see his way clear to come to Brockville, and look over the great work which is being done there in renovating and improving the General Hospital, and perhaps meet some of our men. In spite of his busy life, he consented to come. So we, in Brockville, started the next move, with the result that we had a banquet at which over 300 men attended, and, may I say, Mr. Speaker, that never have I in my somewhat lengthy years of public life, met a man who could circulate amongst men of all ranks, all walks of life, listen to their problems, and talk to them at their level, more than the hon. Minister. That is exactly what the hon. Minister of Public Works did, and when he left Brockville, it was with the feeling amongst our people that he was an hon. Minister of a government which is a government of the people.

I want to say just a word about the Eastern Ontario Hospital, and we are in hopes of getting two new buildings, the erection of which will soon be commenced. I put these "two new buildings" in at the end, because without any praise to the hon. Minister, we will get them, because we need them.

Just a word in regard to the Department of Education. This is a subject on which I spoke last year, and one with which I am very much concerned, because I feel there is no more important topic although there may be some equal importance—but none more important than the subject of education.

I am one of those who was brought up as a son of the Manse, and, of course, had no money, but my father always said, "All you have to do is to give a boy a good education, give him good health, and put him out into the world, and that is all you need to do." I believe in that philosophy.

The hon. Minister of Education has done much along the line of getting rid of the so-called "frills," which have attached themselves to educational courses like barnacles, and has come down to the basic essentials.

Putting a boy out with a sound body and a sound mind is not enough. We must surround him with good teachers, and that is the reason I said last year that I can strongly support the brief presented by the Ontario Federation of Teachers. That brief contained the following:

A reduction in the number of years on which is based the average salary used to compute the amount of the pension;

An improvement in the minimum pension and the addition of $120 to the pension of pensioners now receiving less than $1,200 a year, to a limit of $1,200;

The removal of the fixed maximum for a pension.

Those, Mr. Speaker, were in the brief last year, and of those three, last year the Legislature granted the removal of the fixed maximum for a pension which takes care of that matter. Now I think we should give consideration to the other two.

Then, Mr. Speaker, in regard to the superannuated teachers of Ontario, they are making a request which is two-fold, as follows:

That surviving dependents of pensioners who died before April 1st, 1949, be given the same consideration as is provided for the dependents of all other deceased pensioners.

That the average of the 10 best years be used as a basis for calculating the pensions of those pensioned between 1937 and 1949.

I do hope the remaining items in those two briefs can be taken care of before very long.

In all fairness, I must say the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) and the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the government, are doing, in my opinion, all that is possible at the present time. They must strive for these things, and I am satisfied that if at all possible they will meet the requests of these deserving teachers.

Now, a word in regard to the Department of Highways, a subject which is interesting to all of us.

I am not minimizing what happened up north, but I am not the least bit alarmed as to what did happen, and for this reason: It has been said—and rightly so—that the errors or discrepancies were discovered by the Provincial Auditor, and that the steps taken by the provincial government, under the able leadership of the hon. Prime Minister, are parallel steps to those taken by the federal authorities. I may say now, Mr. Speaker, that I think the federal authorities did a good job once they awakened from their lethargic state. I was at the Petawawa trials and I can speak with some knowledge, and I know that once they were seized of the seriousness of the situation, they did a good job as far as Petawawa is concerned, even though the conditions seem to be mushrooming all over the dominion.

I do not think there is any citizen in the Province of Ontario who would impute any wrong motives to an hon. member of the federal House or of this House. The citizens of Brockville were not disturbed, and not shocked. They know we have, in the Province of Ontario, a Prime Minister who is an honest man, and no one will be spared if wrongdoing has been committed, and for that reason, I say I am not disturbed, although I do not minimize the seriousness of it.

With respect to highways: I am sorry to see the hon. Minister of Highways has left his place but I am pleased he is now in the House, because I want to direct the attention of the hon. Minister to some of the thoughts and feelings of the people in Brockville, and in the County of Leeds. I think the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) will agree with me that we are not isolated in our thinking. We know we live in the grandest part of the province, and we know that other parts of the province have their problems and their difficulties, and we want to share those problems and difficulties with them. At the same time, we do not wish this government to be unmindful of the fact that we have running from Brockville to the county represented by the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) one highway, Highway No. 2, which is a very old highway. It has many twists and turns, and I doubt if there is any highway in Ontario which has any heavier traffic than Highway No. 2, because now it is taking the whole vehicular flow from Toronto, including trucks coming from Hamilton and other points to the west, as was evidenced by what happened during the very severe snow storm of a week ago.

In addition to the great number of trucks going over that highway, there are many motor cars. Perhaps not as many as travel the highway between Toronto and Hamilton, but there is an extremely heavy commercial traffic over Highway No. 2, and within the past year, we have had numerous serious accidents, and many deaths.

Editorials have appeared in the Brockville Recorder and Times, and the Cornwall papers, stressing the seriousness of the situation, and all I can say—and I doubt if the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) can do else but add his voice to the seriousness of this situation, because it is serious.

I am glad to see the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope) in his place, and I was pleased to listen to his remarks in regard to access roads. To my mind, there is no use in establishing more lines to these camps or mines, if you have not a trunk road which will handle the traffic. Similarly, today, we have from Brockville to Cornwall, a road which is presently not capable of handling the traffic which it must carry, and so we are stressing—and that emphatically—that not a year from now, but now—this year—a start be made in regard to a new No. 2 Highway between Brockville and Cornwall.

The hydro development and the seaway have been spoken about, and, as I have said, I am not under-estimating the value of that great work. Nor am I very much concerned, as I have already said, with the question as to where the locks may be built. I live on the banks of the mighty St. Lawrence, and I can come home and get into my swimming suit in the summer, and by taking just a few steps, enter the water, and the same holds true in regard to skating, when the river is frozen over. I can look across the St. Lawrence and see the great State of New York. There is no curtain between us, I can assure the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). Even on a foggy morning, one can see the great State of New York across that mighty body of water. It exemplifies mutual consideration and friendship, and I say let us get on with the job, and if our cousins to the south do not wish to join with us, let them get out of the way, and allow us to proceed.

I think, Mr. Speaker, that is all I have to say about the St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Development.

I find it rather difficult to speak extemporaneously, for the reason I am inclined to speak too rapidly, but I am trying to abide by the rules of the House, and not read a prepared speech, but I do feel that very often it is far better to have a man prepare a speech, and consume perhaps 15 minutes reading it, and tell us something, than to endeavour to speak without a prepared manuscript and ramble on for an hour, and say nothing.

Now, Mr. Speaker, a word with respect to the Department of the hon. Attorney-General. I do suggest that more study be given to the setting-up of a staff of competent parole officers. The system of parole officers is considered to be very important in certain parts of the United States, and it is working out well.

I had a case during the past year, of a bank robber, who received 12 months. There was a great hue-and-cry about it. I even received letters myself asking why this man should only have been given 12 months, and sent to a reformatory. Our local judge, who presided at the trial, and who, in my opinion, is doing an excellent job, said to me, "If there had been a proper system of parole officers, I would have put that man on parole," and he would have done exactly right, as you would have agreed once you heard all the facts.

I feel that money should be set aside for this purpose, because it will require money. A parole officer is not an ordinary man. He must be a man of many accomplishments; he must be trained, and educated, and if you secure the proper type of men, they will save their salaries in dollars and cents many times over, but, over and above that, they will be helping the poor unfortunates, for the reason I think that further study should be given to the setting up of a system of parole officers, and I am sure that money will be found in the treasury to carry on this great work.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like just for a moment to mention hydro, and I want to pay my respects to the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas, the Vice-Chairman of the Hydro Commission (Mr. Challies). He occupies a difficult position. I would like to say that during the past year, on many occasions, I have found it necessary to write or telephone to the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas, the vice-chairman of hydro, and at all times I found him not only sympathetic, but a man who had the ability to grasp a situation. As a matter of fact, he was the man who started me to thinking a little more in regard to the vast possibilities of natural gas, and what it meant to eastern Ontario.

And so I say that certainly his counties and this province are being well and truly served in having as the Vice-Chairman of the Hydro Commission, a man such as the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas.

MR. A. CHARTRAND: (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House. Tomorrow, the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) will bring in his report on the activities of the Select Committee appointed to enquire into the Cemeteries Act, following which we will continue with the addresses in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

When this report is brought in, if any member of the committee, or, in fact, any hon. member of the House, has any matter of interest they would like to bring up, I hope they will not hesitate to speak to it.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Could the hon. Prime Minister give some indication as to when the redistribution matter will be considered?

HON. MR. FROST: I will let the hon. Leader of the Opposition know at the end of the week.

MR. OLIVER: That is very good of you.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.50 of the clock, p.m.

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, MARCH 2, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Motions.

Orders of the day.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I might combine the last order with the motions and advise the House that the funeral of the late hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey) will be held at 2.00 p.m., Thursday, March 4th, from Trinity United Church in North Bay.

Mr. Speaker, I think out of respect for the late hon. member, the House should not meet on Thursday afternoon. On the other hand, that does not apply to the committees or other business of the House. The committees' meetings have been set and, no doubt, arrangements have been made. It may be, in some cases, witnesses have been called, so that the committee work will go ahead on Thursday, but the House itself will stand adjourned during that afternoon.

HON. MR. FROST moves that when this House adjourns on Wednesday afternoon, it stand adjourned until 2 of the clock on Friday afternoon.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, would you revert to "presenting reports by committees"?

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting reports by committees.

MR. JAMES N. ALLAN (Haldimand-Norfolk): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Report of the Select Committee appointed to inquire into and review The Cemeteries Act, the regulations made thereunder and related matters.

Mr. Speaker, before I comment briefly upon the Cemeteries Committee's activities, I would like to add my words of regret at the passing of my desk mate. I am sure that everyone in this House realizes that to be as closely associated with the late hon. member (Mr. Harvey) as I have been during my term in the Legislature, led me to become very fond of him. I learned to love him, to respect him and to admire him. I am sure that all hon. members will miss him greatly, and I would like to express to his family my sincere sympathy.

Mr. Speaker, before I proceed to point out some of the important decisions of the Cemeteries Committee during their deliberations, I would like to mention the fine work being done by splendid citizens of a great many communities in the Province of Ontario. I suppose it has not occurred to every hon. member of this House how important a cemetery is to a community, and how desirable that it shall serve as a memorial to those who have passed on, a sort of shrine which can be looked up to by the citizens of that community.

In our meetings, most of which were held in Toronto, and during our visits to some of the cities throughout the province, if you read the reports in the press, you no doubt saw mention made of the neglected cemeteries. I am sure the opinion of every hon. member of the committee is, after looking at a great many cemeteries, and after appraising the cemetery situation throughout the province, that we were bound to feel there were a great many fine cemeteries. There were many more well-kept graves than those which were ill-kept.

I would like at this time to give a word of praise and appreciation to those fine citizens throughout the province, who are doing such a grand job of maintaining very fine cemeteries in our cities, in our towns and in our smaller municipalities. This is not confined to men alone. We found instances where women and women's organizations of the community had undertaken the beautifying of what had been abandoned cemeteries, and it was a pleasure and a great delight to look at the work these people have done. I hope we will always encourage them, and will always appreciate their fine work.

Mr. Speaker, I would like, as chairman of this committee, to express my very sincere thanks and appreciation to every hon. member who served on that committee. It is my first experience with a Select Committee of this House, but I am sure every member on the committee appreciated the responsibility placed upon him when he was appointed. Each member approached the cemetery situation with an open mind, and a desire to be fair in the consideration of the problems, and to bring recommendations to this House which would assist in passing legislation which would help to improve the cemetery situation in this province.

In discussing our consideration of cemeteries I think it might simplify matters if I divided them into two parts, because the problem of cemeteries is itself divided into two parts—the situation of the cemeteries as they exist, and the question of which course to take in the establishment of new cemeteries.

I may say that all the members of the committee endeavoured to acquaint themselves with the problem which existed so far as the cemetery situation was concerned in the province, and after two or three sittings they came unanimously to this conclusion: that the condition which should be sought after in this province is that cemeteries should continue to be a memorial of those who have passed on, a resting place which relatives may visit, and at which they may find comfort, and that funds must be available to assure the continuous proper care and beautification of these cemeteries.

The committee also dealt with the possibility of these cemeteries becoming a charge upon the municipality. Most hon. members know that under our present legislation, when a cemetery has been abandoned it is the duty of the municipality to assume care of that cemetery. It is the hope that this committee may bring in recommendations which, when they finally become legislation, will prevent, or at least reduce to the smallest degree, the number of cemeteries becoming abandoned or neglected and, finally, reverting to the municipality and becoming a charge on the taxpayer.

With that in mind we proceeded, and as we looked at the problem of cemeteries presently established, and being used, we found that it was not desirable to bring in any recommendations which would upset to any great degree the work of the persons who have been conducting these many cemeteries, especially the smaller ones. So the recommendations which will seem most definite will be those which have to do with perpetual care of lots unsold, or the possibility of collecting perpetual care funds upon unused grave spaces. With that in mind, and with the hope of helping the cemeteries in this work, the committee has recommended the appointment of supervisors whose duties it will be to inspect cemeteries, to safeguard the plot holders, to obtain accurate records, and to assist the owners in programmes of improvement, maintenance and efficient administration. In explanation of that recommendation it is our hope that legislation will be introduced which will make available field men—who may be called “inspectors”—who will help in an educational way to solve the problems of the various cemetery boards throughout the province. In considering those boards that might be helped, our committee had mostly in mind the boards of smaller cemeteries, of small plot-holder cemeteries, of church cemeteries, of small municipal cemeteries and it was hoped that once these men became available, their encouragement and suggestions could very easily lead to a great many local groups becoming interested in cemeteries which have been considered as neglected. The result might be, as it has been in several instances of sites which we visited, that they will become real beauty spots in the community.

And so, having regard to neglected cemeteries, and with the hope that this is going to create a movement which will tend to reduce the number, these are the recommendations our committee present:

That every effort be made by the province and local governments to restore and maintain in satisfactory condition all those cemeteries which have been deemed abandoned and neglected.

The full extent of this problem is not known. That is true. There is no definite and correct record of every cemetery in the entire province and the committee is not able to make specific and definite recommendations. A survey is to be made as soon as provincial inspectors are appointed, and let me again suggest to hon. members that it is not the intention that these men should be inspectors in the sense of complaining and demanding, but rather that they should be educational officers, field men, who will help to examine this problem and it is believed that an educational campaign under the guidance of the provincial inspectors will go far to limit these unsightly patches.

With regard to cemeteries which are in another group, those which have many graves sold but not used; your committee has considered this, and suggested means whereby a cemetery board might, if it desired, pass by-laws which will require that the cost of permanent upkeep of an unused plot could be collected before an interment was permitted.

Those are pretty much the views of the committee so far as cemeteries which are being used and established are concerned. We want to give every encouragement to those persons who have been endeavouring to do a good job, many of them under difficult circumstances, to help them in every possible way and not to upset many splendid persons in rural communities who have conducted, through a small group, this endeavour to keep a respectable cemetery in the community.

With regard to the establishment of new cemeteries, that is where the committee felt they can make recommendations that would be most useful. They considered the question of ownership. As hon. members know, there are several types of ownership of cemeteries. They considered too that cemetery lots are not ordinary articles of trade and barter. They sought to make recommendations which would be helpful to maintain burial places which will be a comfort to relatives who have to visit them and a memorial to those who helped to build this province. They were of the opinion that religious cemeteries, municipal cemeteries, plot-holder cemeteries are the types which are to be most desired and encouraged. During the last few years we have had cemeteries of the type which were operated for gain, becoming established in the province, and the committee gave a great deal of consideration as to how they should handle these various types of cemeteries, with the hope of establishing something which would be permanently available to assist in the establishment of cemeteries, they have recommended the appointment of a three-man advisory board whose chief function would be to review and advise the Minister on requests for establishing and enlarging cemeteries, to control the sales and licencing arrangements of cemeteries and such other matters that the Minister might desire to be advised on.

Now, gentlemen, as I mentioned before, and as you would suspect, a great deal of consideration was given to these various types of cemeteries and we went back to the opinion we had in the beginning, that finally our cemeteries should be established as places of comfort and beauty. And with that in mind we made some rather drastic recommendations, and let me say in explanation of these that we do not feel we have injured anyone by making these recommendations. We have recommended setting aside of adequate funds—a very generous percentage of the proceeds from the sale of lots—be placed in perpetual care funds. We have suggested, so far as what might be called “cemeteries operated for gain” are concerned, that these funds should be placed in an irrevocable trust. It might be better if I read this to hon. members and perhaps explain some of the thoughts we had when we considered these matters.

The first recommendation in this respect was the licencing by the province and the bonding by the cemetery owners of all salesmen to prevent possible misrepresentation. Hon. members will realize that we had suggestions from individuals who appeared before our committee that “high pressure” had been used in the selling of some of these plots. And while I speak of the individuals who appeared before the committee, I had intended to say in the very beginning that we were greatly indebted to the groups and to the individual persons interested in the development and maintaining of cemeteries who appeared before those nine open meetings of the committee we held. They were most helpful, and some of the recommendations in the report are certainly due to the help we had from some of those who have taken a great deal of interest in cemetery operation and who were most helpful.

So in our report we have not said that there cannot be personal solicitation for the selling of cemetery plots. We have instead made recommendations which will certainly make it possible to prevent any high-pressure selling, because as I said before, it was the unanimous feeling of the committee that a cemetery lot is not an ordinary article of trade and barter—that there is something almost sacred about the last resting place of a friend. And we feel the restrictions we have placed on the selling of cemetery lots were justified for that reason. And so we recommend the licencing by the province and the bonding by the cemetery owners of all salesmen to prevent misrepresentation. In our consideration of this particular matter we went to a great deal of trouble and were helped in this by the opinions of many with expert knowledge of the situation. There was a great deal of discussion as to whether or not these cemeteries could be carried on without personal salesmanship and here the opinion of the experts we called in was of service. We consulted Mr. Alex Miller, manager of the Canadian Association of Advertising Agencies, Mr. L. L. Dunstall, the general manager of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada, Mr. Russell Frieman of the London Life Insurance Company, Mr. John A. Tuck, assistant general counsel of the Canadian Life Underwriters Association of Canada—also Mr. Frank D. Talchard and Mr. Murray Bosley, to endeavour to find from experts if this really was the fact. After listening to the opinions of these gentlemen and listening to the results of their experience, those were the recommendations. Provision has been made for the limitation of the number of salesmen at any one time for any one cemetery and our three-man board will have direct control in this regard if the recommendations of the committee become legislation.

We have also recommended the mandatory use of a prescribed sales contract or agreement which will contain a restrictive covenant, and it is suggested the contract should be written by the department which will administer this Act. Where the purchaser has been solicited and has not personally viewed and inspected the plot before signing the agreement to purchase, the money paid should be refunded if the purchaser so requests in writing within 60 days of the purchase contract. This is in the hope of completely discouraging “high-pressure selling.”

Then the next recommendation has to do, not with any suggestion that any person has been high-pressured, but rather with the persons moving away. It provides :

The cemetery owner be required to repurchase, until such time as at least 95 per cent. of the plots in the cemetery have been sold, any unused but fully paid for plot if the purchaser desires to cancel the agreement, and to refund to the purchaser an amount equivalent to that having been paid into the perpetual care fund on the plot concerned, together with the balance of the purchase price less such administrative costs as may be determined by the Minister.

I think you may realize this was taken from a suggestion by insurance men, and is comparable to the cancellation of a fire insurance policy.

The next is :

Where photographs, plans, maps or illustrations are used in selling plots they shall clearly indicate the name and the location of the cemetery referred to, and they shall also include representative material on the cemetery in which the plot is offered for sale.

You will understand the wisdom in that recommendation. It is to prevent misrepresentation. Then, No. 7 :

There be adequate supervision over perpetual care funds as to their amount, security and investment.

You will find, as I proceed, there are different methods of supervision for various types of cemeteries.

Then, the next recommendations are :

No plots be sold in any part of a cemetery until that part has been developed and made ready for burial purposes to the satisfaction of the Minister.

The owner of a plot have the right to purchase monuments, plaques, corner posts, and other needs from any source and to have these placed on his plot providing this material and its erection is in keeping with specifications contained in the by-laws or rules of the cemetery concerned as approved by the Minister.

The prices of services and supplies in the cemetery including interments, disinterments, foundations, markers and other common needs be controlled at a rate in keeping with those of other comparable cemeteries in the locality.

Where a plot is purchased on a pre-need plan or on a time payment plan the number or designation and exact location of the plot be specified in the contract and that the prescribed amount of perpetual care be paid into this account from each such payment made on the purchase.

Those are recommendations which have to do with the selling of plots. The other important consideration, as I have mentioned before, is the provision for an adequate perpetual care fund, and when considering this, may I say to the hon. members of this House, that the percentage of cost for a bereavement which is required by the cemetery, was felt by the committee not to be unreasonable, so that in requiring a generous amount to be set aside in a perpetual care fund, it was the opinion of the committee that it would work no great hardship on any person.

The next is :

Adequate provision be made for the creation of perpetual care funds for the maintenance of all cemeteries in the future.

It was the recommendation of the committee that no cemetery anywhere be permitted to be established without a perpetual care fund, whether it be a large or small cemetery, religious or not. Every cemetery must have that provision, because we cannot help but recognize that throughout the province, the cemetery problem has arisen, because of the establishment of too many small cemeteries. That was the reason for the recommendation, that before a cemetery may be established, this three-man board—if appointed—will have to be shown there is need for such a cemetery.

The committee further recommend that:

On all future sales of plots an amount be placed in the perpetual care fund equal to at least 35 per cent. of the total sale price of the plot or 35 cents per square foot of the plot, whichever amount is the greater, and that the Minister be authorized to increase this amount for any cemetery should it appear necessary to do so to ensure reasonable maintenance for the future.

That recommendation is proposed in the hope there will be certain to be a sufficient amount of money in the perpetual care fund, so that the income from that fund will care for the cemeteries in an acceptable manner, in the future.

Further that:

The appropriate amount for perpetual care be paid into this fund from all amounts as received in whole or in part payment for the plot.

Perpetual care funds be levied on the sale of lots only, not on other cemetery services.

Adequate supervision by the province be maintained over all perpetual care funds through examination of funds and securities, and supervision of the use of the income from these funds in the maintenance of the cemetery plots concerned.

We were very definite in that particular recommendation, because as I am sure all hon. members can realize, if a Cemetery Board did not have supervision, income from the perpetual care fund might be used for excessive salaries, payments, or for the payment of dividends or for some purpose other than the care of the cemetery. Supervision of spending as well as of collecting is therefore recommended.

The next recommendation is:

Perpetual care funds in all cases be invested in trustee investments prescribed by The Trustee Act.

Perpetual care funds, when collected by the owners of cemeteries, be deposited with a recognized custodian such as a trust company licenced to do business in Ontario or the Public Trustee under the terms of an "irrevocable" trust.

I will come back to that in a moment. The next recommendation is that:

The proposal for the custody of the funds apply to all cemeteries except:

- (i) Municipal cemeteries, and
- (ii) Religious cemeteries where the parent church organization operates 3 or more cemeteries in Ontario.

The thought behind that suggestion was that a municipality is a continuing organization, and a religious body, which has 3 or more cemeteries, is also continuing, and if, by any means, something should happen to this fund, you still have the municipality or the religious organization which may be held responsible for the care and upkeep of those cemeteries.

The next recommendation is that:

Annual financial reports in a form prescribed by the Minister be certified by licenced public accountants or municipal auditors and be submitted to the Minister by owners of all cemeteries.

All owners of cemeteries other than those operated for gain be required to make annual financial statements available to any plot holder on request.

Perpetual care funds, being in a sense charitable trusts, be audited in the same way as any other charitable trusts, namely before the local Surrogate Court judge, and that such audits take place at least once every 5 years and more often if the Minister or the Surrogate judge so directs, or if 25 plot holders so request, but with the following exceptions—

- (i) cemeteries having perpetual care funds of less than $25,000.
- (ii) religious cemeteries where the central church organization operates at least 3 cemeteries, and
- (iii) municipal cemeteries.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I come to a section which I have already mentioned.

In established cemeteries authority be given the owners of the cemeteries—

(i) to charge perpetual care against any unopened grave on which perpetual care has not been paid.

Just one more item, Mr. Speaker, and I will conclude. That is in regard to "taxation."

We had representations made to the committee to the effect there was a need for the taxation of cemeteries. I have no doubt persons who made that suggestion very probably had not considered—nor did they have in mind—how difficult it is to tax a cemetery, especially one in which the graves are filled, or nearly so. We found it is just not possible, because, after all, you have no means of collecting the taxes, and there would be no income to pay the taxes, except from the perpetual care fund, which was paid into by persons confident that the income from the perpetual care fund would be used for the maintenance and upkeep of the graves of their loved ones.

We decided it was not possible, but we did realize that cemeteries in some municipalities may be a problem, because as cities grow, the probabilities are that cemeteries will be established in neighbouring municipalities, and having had representations made to us, pointing out the need of certain money for taxation, and similar purposes, we formulated this recommendation, which we hope will be helpful:

Since taxation of cemetery lands has considerable merit, but is not without complications in its application, municipalities be given the right to limited taxation, especially in the case of cemeteries operated for gain. (This might include the right to require cemetery owners to pay to municipalities a sum not exceeding $1 per grave space as it is sold—that is to take the place of taxation.

—this would be intended to compensate for loss in general taxation and for local improvement works, and especially so in regard to cemeteries situated in certain municipalities but intended for use of citizens of other municipalities. It also would be expected that land approved for but not yet developed for burial purposes would be subject to all taxation.

That is not really taxation. It is a sort of service charge, although it may appear to the hon. members, as they listen to that paragraph, that it would not furnish much money to a municipality, it would help.

There are from 800 to 1,000 graves per acre, so that a municipality would receive from $800 to $1,000 per acre, money which they could use, or put aside and simply use the interest. The committee felt this would be of some assistance to the municipality in which the cemetery is situated.

Those are our recommendations, Mr. Speaker. I once again want to say to you, sir, and to the hon. members of this House, that it was a great pleasure to serve on this committee, especially with the personnel composing it, and we feel, after a great deal of serious, sound and fair consideration, that this report will be useful in formulating legislation by this House, and will be serving in some measure to solve the cemetery problem in the Province of Ontario.

MR. NORRIS WHITNEY (Prince Edward-Lennox): Mr. Speaker, in our country, to our people, the matter of cemeteries is really important. I think all hon. members, when they read the history of the British Commonwealth, are impressed by the fact that many of our most famous people have been interred in Westminster Abbey, and reading of that, brings us down through the years, and a little closer to the achievements by the great people of the past.

Similarly, I think we cannot help but realize that it is important to recall the fact that Sir John A. Macdonald was interred at Catarqui, and when we visited Brantford, we were deeply impressed by the fact that Joseph Brant and Pauline Johnson were interred near the only Royal Chapel outside of the British Isles, located at Brantford. These things have all left their impressions, and form an important part of the history of our people, and of our own background.

I, as were other members of the committee, was impressed with the great work done by many of our local people, who have taken a great deal of pride in the maintenance of our cemeteries. It is true that we find a neglected cemetery now and then, but, as our chairman so ably stated, in the over-all picture, certainly there are more cemeteries which are well kept, than there are those which are neglected.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that it was a great pleasure to serve under our chairman, and to be associated with the other members of the committee.

Our chairman, the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk, was fair, capable, and proved a very excellent chairman indeed. We are sure the people who came before us were honest in their presentations, and imbued with a sincere desire to be of assistance to the committee.

I only want to speak briefly, to say how great a pleasure it was for me to serve on the committee under the chairmanship of the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, what I would like to say may be in the form of a question. I understand that many graves having perpetual care, are marked with the letters "P.C.". One of the hon. members of this Legislature, in the course of his occupation, was asked to go to a cemetery, and put stones on certain graves, marking them with the letters "P.C.", and he was naturally suspected of having an ulterior motive.

I wonder if there is not a possibility of this being changed, or if the chairman of the committee thinks this should be continued.

MR. GEORGE T. GORDON (Brantford): Mr. Speaker, I also was a member of this committee, and I agree with the hon. member for Prince Edward-Lennox, that our chairman was indeed very competent.

In regard to the cemeteries we visited, may I say it was interesting to see some of them. One in particular, in a district we visited, contained only the graves of children. I think there was the body of but one adult person in that cemetery. It had been completely abandoned. All the children buried there had died, within a matter of a few weeks, as the result of a scarlet fever plague, occurring many, many years ago.

Abandoned cemeteries may constitute a problem, but I will say, Mr. Speaker, that in Brantford that problem is beginning to clear up. We proceeded in this way: before it was abandoned completely, and the stones overturned, and broken, attention was given to it, and it is today a very beautiful place. It has been made permanent, and is now a very lovely park, called "Tranquility Cemetery."

We were not always in full agreement in the committee, but we found it very easy to compromise, and we were able to bring in the report as you have heard it today.

On page 4 of the report, there is about one-half of it which would not have had to be written at all, if the committee had taken the advice of two or three of us, and not made provision for salesmen for cemetery lots. I do not think there is any more need for salesmen selling cemetery lots from door to door, than there is for selling caskets. As I say, this portion, on page 4, would not have had to be written if it had not been for certain sales methods permitted to be used in connection with some of the cemeteries.

As I say, we were able to compromise, and I think our chairman has brought forward a very fine report which will correct many of the evils which existed before.

MR. THOMAS D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, may I first express my thanks to our able chairman, the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan). I am very happy to have been associated with him and the other members of the committee. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, it was a privilege and a pleasure. I would also like to express my personal thanks to Doctor Berry, Mr. Walker, and Mr. John Scott of the Department of Health who helped so much in the deliberations of the committee.

Mr. Speaker, the report on our desks is not a voluminous report, and is certainly not cluttered up with a great many recommendations. While the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk has spoken on most of the recommendations, the one with which I am concerned the most, is in regard to the appointment of a 3-man Advisory Committee. That, I think, is the keystone of the cemetery problem today.

I have no wish at this time to be too critical of the division, because I believe Doctor Berry is one of the most capable men in the Department of Health, but I think the trouble is the division, so far as Doctor Berry is concerned, is under-staffed, and does not have time to pay sufficient attention to some of the problems. The present regulations provide certain conditions with which the cemetery operators must comply. One I have in mind is that the department must be notified, and the approval of the hon. Minister received for a change in ownership, or an increase in the price of a cemetery plot.

In my riding, we have 3 large cemeteries, and in one of the largest there was a change of ownership last July. Under the plan designed by the new owners, they agreed on an increase in price from $40 to $59, but permission and consent of the hon. Minister was not received up to 2 weeks ago, and those people are still operating. I think, Mr. Speaker, if the recommendation of the committee is approved by the House, they will appoint men who are capable and efficient to enforce, clearly and definitely, the Cemeteries Regulations. I believe, even with the increase in perpetual care from 15 per cent. to 35 per cent., the present cemetery operators, in the business for gain, will pass the increase along to the people buying plots, unless we have a 3-man board strong enough to prevent any increase in price.

The president of the Toronto Burial Trust Company, in giving information to the Select Committee, said it was his opinion that cemetery plots could be sold at $1 per foot, and maintained profitably and well. Mr. Speaker, that means a cemetery plot could be sold for $27, because the average plot is 3 feet by 9 feet. Yet, in my riding, we have 3 large cemeteries, in one of which a cemetery plot 3 feet by 9 feet can be purchased for $27, in another for $35, and in still another for from $40 to $59.

I think a 3-man Advisory Board, if appointed, would have a great deal of work to do. I am not opposed to people investing money in cemeteries if they want to, under our free enterprise system. They are entitled, I suppose, to a reasonable profit, but I think every hon. member of this House will agree the public should be protected by making sure these people do not make an unreasonable profit.

In respect to cemeteries operated by the municipalities; I think, Mr. Speaker, that the municipalities should be encouraged to enter this field. It is not a burdensome business for them, and I feel quite sure it could be put on a profitable basis. I hope the department will encourage municipalities to enter the field of cemetery operations, because I believe it fills a semi-public need.

Regarding the recommendations; as the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Gordon) has mentioned, there was some disagreement, but he and I and one or two others could see the other fellows' point of view, and I was very happy to go along with the recommendations, and support the report, but I would like to emphasize the need for the government appointing a 3-man Advisory Committee, at the first opportunity.

MR. J. ROOT (Wellington North): Mr. Speaker, this afternoon we have tabled this report, and as a member of the committee I want to make a few comments.

First of all, I want to say that it was a privilege to serve on the committee under a very able chairman. He was fair and gave every group which appeared before the committee a fair chance to present its views. He gave every member of the committee a fair chance to present his views, and, at the end, we agreed, by compromise, to the report which has been tabled today.

On the committee we had representatives of 3 political Parties, and I want to say it was a pleasure to work with every one of the members. In fact, I found all the members so broad-minded I sometimes wondered why the opposition members could not just move across the floor, close up the ranks, and make it a solid bloc on this side.

I appreciated the co-operation and assistance we received from the officials of the Department of Health, Doctor Berry, Mr. Walker and Mr. Scott. It was an inspiration to find, scattered all over this province, so many groups, councils, and individuals interested in providing proper burial facilities, and in keeping the burial grounds of this province in a way which will show respect for the pioneers who developed this province.

We listened to many representations and arrived at certain conclusions. There will be individuals who will not agree with everything we recommend, but I believe the recommendations in this report are fair and are in the best interest of the people.

There are certain recommendations in which I was particularly interested. Our chairman has dealt with most of them, but I feel the government should give full consideration to our recommendation that adequate perpetual care be provided in all future sales of plots, so that there will be an end to the abandoned cemeteries. I think it is right, if we are going to ask everyone to buy perpetual care when they buy a plot, they should have protection for the funds they have invested.

Another clause in our recommendations, which I do not think has been emphasized here, is the recommendation that perpetual care be made a legal charge against an estate. At the present time, if a person dies and makes no provision in his will for an amount for perpetual care, it is rather difficult to establish the Care Fund unless you hold the family up on the way to the cemetery, and that is something, I think, which should not be necessary. If this recommendation is implemented and perpetual care charges be made legal charges against estates, there will be no need for presenting a bill at a time when people are not in a condition to discuss such matters.

The recommendation with regard to a fee being collected in lieu of taxes, I feel, has a great deal of merit. At the present time, we are witnessing a great expansion in population in certain areas, for instance, in the Metropolitan Toronto area. We were told, in this area, there is no available land for the establishment of cemeteries, with the result that cemeteries could only be established in the townships surrounding this area, and that the same situation will develop in other areas. To my mind, and also in the minds of the other members of the committee, it does not seem fair to ask outlying municipalities to have ground removed from their assessment to provide services for another municipality. Therefore, the recommendation has been made that if a municipality desires to do so, it will be able to collect a nominal fee in lieu of taxes.

If any of our established cemeteries find it difficult to establish a perpetual care fund, there is in the report, a recommendation that local Cemetery Boards can, if they wish, pass by-laws which will place a perpetual care charge against all unopened graves.

Another recommendation is that they could repossess unused space in abandoned plots. In many of the old cemeteries, plots were sold with perhaps spaces for 12 graves. Possibly 2 of them were used, and the family moved on, so that at the present time the cemetery board is faced with the problem of cutting the grass and maintaining 10 empty spaces for all time. There is provision in the recommendation for a local Cemetery Board to pass a by-law making it possible for them to repossess the unused space in abandoned plots, but to hold that space for a period of time, and if no one then comes forward and establishes a perpetual care fund, the board would be in a position to sell it. I do feel this provision will make it possible for some of the old, established cemeteries to get their perpetual care fund on a more sound basis, and perhaps be relieved of the burden of cutting grass for all time on land which would not be used and could not be used, unless it be repossessed.

I particularly like the recommendation with which the chairman dealt very fully, dealing with protecting the public from misrepresentation when purchasing plots on a pre-need sale programme. I think that is sound. While some of the members of the committee felt there was no place for pre-need selling—and quite frankly, there is not—I cannot find any particular fault with a man providing for what is inevitable, but I do not think there should be any place in that programme for any misrepresentation. I think if the recommendations are carried out, that will be eliminated.

As other members of the committee have mentioned, I like the idea of an Advisory Board. If a group comes forward with a request to establish a cemetery, the board would be in a position to conduct a hearing to find out how many available grave spaces there were in that community at the time. It is not serving any useful purpose to create any cemetery in an area which is already overserved with cemetery plots.

I like the recommendation that there be a provincial field officer to work throughout the province. Many of our local Cemetery Boards are not aware of what they can do under the provisions of The Cemeteries Act. These field men would be in a position to assist groups who are anxious to clean up some of the abandoned cemeteries in the province, and advise them as to what could be done. They would be in a position to secure accurate information as to the number and condition of abandoned cemeteries. Perhaps after making a study of this kind, they could make suggestions to the government which would be sound, and would make it possible to work out some scheme whereby, in a short time, the abandoned cemeteries could be cleaned up. Instead of being in the condition they are now, they would be a credit to the Province of Ontario.

Another recommendation I like is that a clear definition be given of what is meant by the words "abandoned cemetery." I think the municipality has the responsibility of taking over abandoned cemeteries, and it is thus very necessary there be a clear definition of what is meant.

There is also the recommendation that local councils being given authority to deal with this problem in a practical way, after it has been established that a cemetery is abandoned.

Mr. Speaker, again I want to say it was a privilege to serve on this committee under a very able chairman and to work with the hon. members of this House, who are all so broad-minded and who all made great contributions. I hope the government will act on the recommendations contained in this report.

MR. THOMAS PRYDE (Huron):
Mr. Speaker, may I be permitted to take a few moments to add a few words to what has already been said regarding this subject.

I think we must all appreciate the very fine explanation of these proposed recommendations given by the chairman and supplemented by other members of his committee, and I will endeavour not to repeat too much of what has already been said.

If there is one thing which has been emphasized by each one of the committee, it is their realization of the fact that the creation of adequate perpetual care funds, properly safeguarded, is the crux of the whole question of caring for cemeteries in the province. They apparently have given it much time and thought, and received many representations. I hope the government will take steps in the very near future to amend the Cemeteries Act so it will be mandatory to place an adequate percentage of the selling price of the plot in a trust fund. The 35 per cent. suggested by the committee seems to me to be the very bare minimum which is required for this purpose.

Another point which has been very strongly stressed is the matter of supervision. The recommendations respecting the appointment of field men or supervisors, seems to me to be the only solution. I make bold to say that the Department of Health, which supervises the cemeteries in the province, has no idea of the total amount of perpetual care funds collected by the cemeteries in this province, how they are invested, or how the revenue is expended. The management of cemeteries is comprised in the main by men who are honest, and invest the funds in a legal manner, but it is undoubted that some at least are unaware of their responsibilities in this respect, and field officers would certainly be of great assistance in cleaning up this situation.

They have also said it is a matter of education, and with that I agree. Field supervisors, or whatever they may be called, should be men of tact and good judgment, who would not go into a community with the idea of telling people what ought to be done, or how they ought to operate their local cemetery, but would go in, as the chairman well said, more or less as helpers to advise them with their problems.

I think a supervisor ought to be a person who could address County Councils, for instance, and arouse the interest of municipal bodies all down the line, Municipal Councils, as well as local interested groups. I was very pleased to hear the chairman pay tribute to these numerous bodies throughout the province, for instance, Women's Institutes, Service Clubs, and those who have done so much to clear up and put in good order many of the smaller cemeteries throughout the province. From my own observations, I have seen much of that done, and I think the words of the chairman were well chosen.

In the matter of the establishment of new cemeteries, an application for a charter to establish a new cemetery should be very carefully scrutinized. Public interest, in my opinion, should be the very first consideration of the establishment of public burial grounds, because any excess of the anticipated needs of a municipality will inevitably lead to trouble.

Regardless of the law, if a commercially-operated cemetery is not paying dividends, it will soon be abandoned, and the responsibility will fall upon the municipality. It will then become either an eyesore or a further blot upon the landscape, and will inevitably fall back as a charge upon the taxpayers.

The committee has pointed out the evolution of cemeteries since the early pioneer days of "God's little acre" to the present time. They said something about these larger commercial-type cemeteries being established only nearer the larger centres of population.

That of course is so and that is what makes the problem all the more difficult, because if these are extended beyond the needs of the municipality, they are just going to complicate matters in the question of town planning and the extension of city boundaries, so I say before a charter is granted to establish a new cemetery some careful scrutiny should be made.

That brings us to the appointment of the Advisory Board. This is something, Mr. Speaker, I have advocated for many years, and I hope the government will soon be able to interest a number of able citizens who will give their time and effort to serving on a board of this nature and advising the hon. Minister on matters of this kind.

I do not think I should go on and take up much more time. We have to realize that cemeteries or burial places have existed since the beginning of time and they will always be with us. It has been said that the reverence shown to the dead marks the rise and fall of civilizations. The heathen placed their dead in the trees and the vultures had ample opportunity to consume the bodies and we remember during the last war, when Hitler committed many of his atrocities, that public condemnation was aroused by the disrespect shown to the dead. Today we have advanced very far from that and we in this country show reverence to our dead. When we bury them we want to think their last resting place will be a place of beauty which will be cared for long after we have passed from the scene. I think that should be one of the most important objects of the Advisory Board, to see that is brought about everywhere in this province. It has been the custom down through the ages to mark the last resting places of our dead. The Pharaohs of Egypt erected those great tombs and monuments to their own memory. That is the only record we have of those ancient civilizations and even today excavation and research is going on all the time, so we shall get further knowledge of those ancient civilizations.

It is futile for us to say that we do not care what happens to us when we have passed from the scene. I think most of us do care. In this connection I would like to ask hon. members a question. On panels in this building appear the names of every member of every Legislature from Confederation down to this day. Many hon. members may not know this. These panels are in the north building. I would go as far as to say that if any of the hon. members' names were left off that record, I am quite sure the hon. Minister of Public Works would soon hear about it. They want to be remembered, the same as others.

This is all leading up to what I believe is something that we all want—to think that our last resting place will be cared for, and we shall be suitably remembered as the days pass by.

Mr. Speaker, you may not have given very much attention to what I have had to say in this respect, but may I close by suggesting we might remember what a very great British statesman of a past age, who was very well regarded in those days, had to say on this subject. The great British statesman the hon. William Ewart Gladstone said this:

Show me your churchyards and I will tell you the character of your people.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I want to take a somewhat unusual course at this time. I do not think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) nor the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) have ever heard of the adjournment of a debate in connection with tabling a report. But we are living in a new day and a new age and I think perhaps we should consider that innovation.

There are some hon. members here who have expressed to me a desire to have an opportunity of reading the report and then giving it further consideration later on. The hon. members who have spoken, of course, have spoken unanimously in favour of the recommendations.

There may be some who have questions to raise and I think that perhaps it might be a good thing to adjourn the debate at this point. Therefore I move, Mr. Speaker, seconded by Mr. Daley, that as some of the hon. members may desire to speak on this report after they have had the opportunity of considering it, that the discussion be adjourned to a later date and that an Order be placed on the Order Paper for further consideration.

I may say, sir, I do not suppose, since the days of Walpole, has there ever been a motion like that.

MR. SPEAKER: I think, however, it will have to be by unanimous consent.

Motion agreed to.

ON THE AMENDMENT TO THE REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, in rising to address this House, I believe I would be remiss in my sentiments, if I were not to offer you, Mr. Speaker, my compliments and felicitations with regard to the fairness and impartiality you have displayed at all times in the discharge of your duties, and assure you of my entire co-operation in complying with rules as laid down in this House, so as to assure you the maximum enjoyment during the tenure of your high office.

May I also extend my congratulations and felicitations to the mover and seconder of the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. I believe every hon. member in this House will agree with me when I say they have displayed exceptional talent in extolling the virtues and accomplishments of the government, while minimizing, to the point of oblivion, its frailties, its misgivings and its failure to live up to the expectation of the citizens of this great Province of Ontario. I do not wish, however, at this juncture of the proceedings to join issue with the previous speakers, who have expressed sophisticated opinions of a very doubtful and debatable nature. I am rather inclined to discuss two topics which have gained a great deal of momentum in public opinion in recent times.

In the first instance I would like to bring the matter of public health to the attention of the members of this House. I believe it is generally conceded that the expectancy of life since the turn of the century has increased by from 10 to 15 years. The advancement of medical science, new techniques, painstaking research, early diagnosis of ailments, and appropriate treatment at the proper time, together with greatly increased hospitalization, have all contributed their shares toward the attainment of this goal. Aside from the humanitarian and social significance of this attainment, can we for one moment consider, imagine and visualize what this prolongation of life expectancy has meant in the way of the fulfillment in the field of cultural, spiritual and material advancement, and enhancements of this country of ours, and of this province in particular? If we could only devise a means of preparing a complete, total computation and assessments of benefits conferred, it would stagger the imagination. And yet we are told on good authority, that we have not reached the end of the road and that we may still expect a greater expectancy of life, if we have the will and the determination, and the courage to take the necessary steps at our disposal to achieve that most desirable goal.

So far as public health is concerned, what will tomorrow hold? What line of advance shall we follow? That, to my mind is the paramount, if not the greatest, challenge of our day and age, which offers itself and awaits its solution from our public bodies and more particularly from our government.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, we have heard much in this House in the past about compulsory hospital insurance plans. I have no doubt that much will be said about them in the future. It is a subject such as provoked Mark Twain's famous comment about the weather: "Everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything about it."

The reference is, of course, to this province, for already at least two other provinces in Canada have done something about compulsory hospital care. It is not my intention, Mr. Speaker, to deal with the merits or demerits of the plans which British Columbia and Saskatchewan have adopted. Perhaps there is no such thing as a perfect plan of hospital insurance. But at any rate, they have done something about it and the fact remains that the plans are still in operation and the people of those provinces apparently are satisfied with them.

I understand the Quebec Legislature is also seriously engaged in dealing with proposals for early action on health and sickness insurance plans for that province. A few weeks ago, the Quebec College of Physicians and Surgeons, an organization with 4,600 members, presented a 20,000-word brief to the Quebec Royal Commission on Constitutional Problems advocating a contributory sickness insurance programme which would provide complete hospital and medical care.

I have not seen the brief, Mr. Speaker, but I learn from the Canadian Press report about it that the sickness insurance would be part of an over-all programme which would include a health insurance plan sponsored by the provincial government. The government programme would cover the treatment and cure of such things as tuberculosis, venereal diseases and mental illness, and cover such things as workmen's compensation, immunization against certain diseases, health inspection of schools, infant and maternal hygiene, health statistics and aid for indigents. The government would be called upon to pay sickness insurance benefits for indigents. The brief said the programme should be exclusively provincial, and should be operated by private enterprise on a non-profit basis.

Mr. Speaker, one of my reasons for bringing this subject up at this time is to point out that other provinces in this country are accepting their responsibility in relation to health insurance, but Ontario is not. As far as I know, this government has no compulsory health insurance plan. The only thing on which we have any assurance is that Ontario would be willing to participate in any conferences with federal government authorities dealing with a national health plan. Just another instance of the favourite pastime of this government to "pass the buck" or place the onus of responsibility on the government at Ottawa.

I say, Mr. Speaker, if we are ever to get a national health plan, we have first of all to accept our own responsibilities and devise a plan adaptable to the individual problems and needs of this province. Any other procedure is putting the cart before the horse. It isn't right or proper to expect the Dominion Government to do this for us. I think the provinces are all agreed that matters of health should remain exclusively under provincial jurisdiction. I know the hon. Minister of Health of Ontario (Mr. Phillips) has been quoted frequently in the newspapers as favouring an insurance plan worked out for national direction and financial support, but run by the individual provinces. I accept that view, Mr. Speaker, but I submit the provinces must take the lead in formulating such a plan before any conferences are held with Dominion authorities.

I note, from newspaper reports in recent weeks, that the hon. Minister of Health for Ontario (Mr. Phillips) has mentioned a health plan he has in mind, similar to deductible auto insurance. He said Ontario officials had been working on such a plan, but admitted they had not gone very far, but had given it a great deal of consideration. It is some satisfaction to know the hon. Minister is thinking along the lines of a plan, but the fact remains there is no definite plan, nor any assurance that the government contemplates any action beyond the thinking stage.

Mr. Speaker, I suggest it is time this government gets away from vague talk about health schemes and gets down to some definite planning. A Select Committee should be appointed to study health insurance plans and obtain some reputable statistical data covering the cost of a workable plan for the people of this province. Armed with such information, some progress could be made, in the first instance, on a provincial basis and, later on further factual data could be secured. Thus we could engage in any discussions with federal authorities regarding a Dominion-Provincial Health Insurance scheme, on a much sounder basis of approach.

As I see it, the delaying factor in any over-all national health programme is the cost. Nobody seems to have come up with the right answer. I understand that original estimate of the cost of the plan in the United Kingdom was £230 million annually. But this figure increased to £277 million, when the scheme was put into operation. Since then, the British Government has seen fit to put a ceiling of £400 million annually for this purpose.

I am informed that slightly over 60 per cent. of the people of Ontario have hospital insurance under existing company plans. That percentage might shrink considerably in the future because of the rising costs of this insurance. Just a few weeks ago, the Blue Cross Hospital Plan announced a 26 per cent. increase in its rates, effective April 1st. We are all aware of the general protest raised when this announcement was made, particularly by the labour unions. We must keep in mind, too, that health insurance under any private company plan is limited in its coverage.

Its sole purpose is to bear a major part of the expense of the individual during any period of sickness.

I think the increasing interest in health schemes, as shown during the past 10 years by the rapid increase in the number of Canadians who have signed for such security with private companies, points to the need for government action to make a close study of the whole question. There are thousands upon thousands of people in this province who cannot hope for hospital treatment, or hospital insurance, simply because they cannot afford it, and are unwilling, and rightly so, to accept the other recourse, that of being classed as indigents and dependent upon the municipality.

At this juncture may I point out, recipients of old-age pensions, mothers' allowances, blind pensions, and certain other types of social aid, receive comprehensive medical and hospital care in Alberta, British Columbia and Saskatchewan. In Saskatchewan and Alberta, the government also pays for dental care, and in Saskatchewan and British Columbia the government pays for drugs. In Ontario the programme is restricted to the services of physicians in the homes or offices. All these services are provided on a means-test basis. They represent an assumption by the Provincial Government of part of the traditional responsibility of municipalities for the care of indigents.

It should also be borne in mind at all times that the indigent, the aged, and the uninsurable are the three groups for which it is well-nigh impossible to provide assurable protection. I submit this government should be interested in the welfare of these people, and a health security plan be made available for them, at the same time relieving the municipality of the burden of the cost for their hospital treatment.

I have no doubt, too, that under such a scheme, our hospitals would be placed in a much better position financially. It is a generally accepted belief that hospitals operate at a loss. I have no doubt this belief is well founded. But have we ever asked ourselves why? Surely it cannot be for lack of business. Most hospitals seem to be operating at capacity. In many of them, surgery cases have to be booked days and often weeks ahead to secure accommodation. I am sure it is clear to all of us that hospital deficits occur because of the large numbers of patients who, by force of circumstances, must be classed as indigents. Hospitals operating at a loss are an increasing burden on our already overstrained municipalities, which have to make up such deficits out of the taxpayers' money.

I believe that any government plan of hospital insurance must be directed primarily toward these people, and if made compulsory, must be grouped accordingly. By that, I mean a range of premiums with a ratio of corresponding benefits.

Another matter I want to bring to the attention of the honourable members, Mr. Speaker, is that of hospital costs.

This government is fond of frequently boasting of the amounts it is contributing toward hospital maintenance, the construction of new hospitals and additions to older existing ones. In connection with construction, I note, it is always careful to refrain from mentioning that the Federal Government contributes a similar amount, dollar for dollar.

I admit readily that the costs of hospital construction are tremendous, but it is equally true that they are tremendously burdensome.

Some publicity was given recently in the newspapers to claims of overcharging and extravagance in hospital administration. I submit it is the duty of this government to investigate such reports, and ascertain if they are unfounded or not. If there is maladministration in our hospitals, the sooner we do something about it the better for everyone. Such charges cannot and must not be ignored.

Where government spending is involved, it is the duty and responsibility of the government to make certain the money is wisely administered, and used for the purposes for which it was intended. All the more reason, then, for a Select Committee to enquire into matters of public concern when there are whisperings of irregularities.

In bringing my remarks to a conclusion on this topic, I cannot too strongly recommend that the government appoint a Select Committee of this House to inquire into and investigate all phases of medical care and hospitalization, with a view of recommending a public-health insurance scheme in this province which will be in the best interest of the people of the province, and that it be put into effect at the earliest possible date.

I wish to deal now with a subject which, only on rare occasions is ever brought up in this House. I admit it is a delicate subject to some extent—one that might have wide repercussions politically. Perhaps, that is why so many hon. members refrain from mentioning it, no matter what their feelings about it may be. However, I rush in where others fear to tread. If you have not guessed it, already, let me say I wish to deal with the subject of the sessional indemnity. Perhaps I should qualify that somewhat by saying that I intend to deal with a particular aspect of sessional indemnities. I want to make it abundantly clear that this is my own idea entirely. I speak for no group, nor for any other hon. member of this Legislature, and am under no compulsion whatever.

It is publicly commented on in Ottawa that the late Gordon Graydon, Q.C., M.P. for Peel, in a letter written to another hon. member of the Federal House just a few days before his death, said that he had been in politics a long time, had given to it his best years, his devotion, and his health. "I am dying a poor man," he wrote, "but I have made many friends. What in the world would we do without our friends?"

No loftier ideal could be expressed, and no greater admiration aroused by such a dying declaration. At the same time, serious-minded and level-headed people are questioning the wisdom of the opinion entertained among a large number of people that public-spirited and gifted citizens should devote their time, energy and talents to public life, for the sheer glory attached to it, jeopardizing their personal future, their health and the welfare of their dependents.

In this House in the past, there have been numerous cases of public servants who have been left in dire financial circumstances, after giving long and useful years of service to this province. At the moment, I understand, there are hon. members of this House, even Cabinet Ministers, who are in failing health, and their unfortunate predicament brought about in the line of duty from heavy responsibilities and the burdens of their duties which, no doubt, played some part in bringing on the illness with which they are afflicted.

At a time and age when social security is paramount in the public mind, in all walks of life, and pension or annuity for a rainy day or provision in advancing age, are the great concern of every individual, I believe the time has come when we should re-examine our position in this House and make provision for those amongst us who may become casualties or suffer some calamity in the future.

I am in a happy position to speak on this subject because I have no expectation of being accused of having any axe to grind. I believe I can well take care of myself, and any dependents I may have in the future. I am, however, quite concerned about the matter from a political standpoint because I believe the trend of events will drive us irresistibly towards one of two choices—either we remedy this situation by granting some financial security to public-spirited citizens with relatively little financial means, or the political arena will become, generally speaking, the preserve of people of affluence, or of political adventurers. I think the citizens of this province would be the poorer in the event of the choosing of the second alternative. So I earnestly urge the government to give my suggestion serious consideration and to seek a solution for a pension plan which will be in accordance with the paramount and long-range interests of the people of this province as a whole. I am sure that no hon. member of this House will object to contributing to such a plan, and upon that basis I am convinced that public opinion will look upon it as the natural outcome of a most deserving cause.

Mr. Speaker, in bringing my remarks to a close, I realize I have taken more time than I anticipated. I do not know if my contribution will be considered in any way worth while, in shaping the future policy of this government. I wish, however, to assure you, Mr. Speaker, and also hon. members of this House, that all the suggestions I have brought forward were actuated and motivated solely by the desire of giving due recognition to the rightful claims of some of our most deserving citizens. I am very grateful for the opportunity afforded me to express these views and for the attention I have received from all hon. members of the House to my remarks today.

MR. R. M. MYERS (Waterloo South): Mr. Speaker, I propose to say a word or two about the industry which is Canada's largest employer of manufacturing labour and one which is now experiencing hard times due to no fault of its own—the textile industry.

The textile industry in Canada—which actually comprises two industries, the primary and the secondary industry—is located mainly in Ontario and Quebec, the number of mills in each province being about equal. The industry employs 200,000 workers, of whom just over half are women. One in every 6 persons employed in manufacturing industries in Canada is a textile worker. No other industry employs so many women.

Most of Canada's textile plants are situated in small cities and towns and the prosperity of these communities is dependent upon the employment provided by the industry. Hespeler, in my riding, is a typical example of an Ontario textile town. It has been predominantly a textile town for more than 90 years. In the early days the inhabitants made a coarse linen cloth manufactured from flax grown in the area, as well as woollens, but in late years the manufacture of linen was abandoned. In Hespeler is situated one of Canada's largest mills. The town has a total population of about 3,780 of whom 1,100—or almost 1 in 3—is employed in its textile plants. Many third generation men and women in this town, and some of the fourth generation, are textile workers. The welfare of the people of Hespeler is dependent entirely upon the prosperity of Canada's textile industry.

The textile industry in Canada is modern and efficient and the workers are skilled. It is estimated that the industry has increased its capital investment by more than $300 million in the period 1946 to 1953, and almost all of this money was spent for replacement of machinery and equipment. I am told that the products of Canadian manufacture cannot be distinguished from British goods after even the most exacting examination.

The use of textiles in Canada has been constantly increasing. Textile sales in 1953 exceeded any other year and it seems likely this increase will continue. In 1936 there was in Canada an average per capita consumption of textiles of 35 yards. In 1953 this per capita average rose to 48 yards. In the United States the per capita consumption in 1953 was 80 yards.

Canada's textile workers receive higher wages than textile workers in any country in the world except the United States. It would appear from a recent item in the press that workers in a Hespeler plant receive an average wage of $1.11 per hour. By way of contrast the average wage of textile workers in the United Kingdom is but 41 cents per hour or 40 per cent. of the Canadian rate. Textile workers in Japan (which has a completely modern industry and is the largest exporter of textiles) receive only 9.3 cents per hour. It is apparent, therefore, that the Canadian industry cannot be expanded by building up an export trade.

By way of summary it may be said of the textile industry in Canada that:

1. It is located in small communities and is already decentralized at a time when governments are stressing the desirability of decentralization. It pays fair wages and it provides congenial occupations for a great many men and women.

2. The use of textiles has been constantly increasing with increasing national income, and there is every prospect of further increase.

3. Canadian textile mills are modern, efficiently operated and produce an excellent product.

4. Because of the very much higher wages paid in Canada than any other country except the United States of America, there is no possibility of building up an export market.

It would seem from what has been said that the future of the textile industry and of the textile worker in Canada is extremely bright, but the reverse is the case.

Many Canadian mills have been operating at a loss in recent years. 14 mills in Ontario have been closed in the last year.

In April, 1951, the total man hours worked in the industry stood at 4.5 million. In April, 1953, the total was 3.5 million or a decline of 22 per cent.

Before the war Canadian workers made 73 per cent. of the textiles used in Canada. In 1953, this percentage dropped to 51 per cent.

In December, 1952, there were 10,500 unplaced applicants in the textile industry and in December, 1953, this number increased to 22,000 and represented a ratio of unplaced applicants to the number of workers of 11 per cent. and this at a time when general employment in Canada was at an all-time high. In one large woollen mill in my riding, which at one time employed 1,200 men and women, only 505 employees remain.

The principal reason for this distressing condition in the textile industry is the fact that for the past 15 years Canada has been consistently reducing its import duties on textiles with the result that the Canadian market has been all but captured by goods of foreign manufacture. Our customs tariffs now are about one-half the 1933 level and are less than half of the world average. Canada's import duties on textiles are the lowest of any important country in the world, and one-sixth of all fully manufactured textiles imported into Canada in 1951 came in duty free.

The increase in imports, to the detriment of the Canadian textile worker, has accelerated very much in recent months. For instance during the first 10 months of 1953 imports of wool cloth increased more than 40 per cent. over imports during the first 10 months of 1952. In the same period imports of rugs and carpets increased 80 per cent., and imports of cotton yarns and piece goods increased by more than 20 per cent.

Fifteen years ago Canadian mills supplied 3 yards of fabric used in Canada for every yard imported. Today Canadian manufacturers barely match imports yard for yard. Imports have increased in the past 15 years by 131 per cent.

In addition to many of our textile workers being totally unemployed, many more are on short time.

I suppose foreign countries will not purchase our goods unless we, in turn, buy theirs. This is easy to realize, but it is difficult to understand why Ottawa should have made a sacrifice of the industry which gives employment to more of our people than any other. Other countries faced with the same problem have met it practically by the provision of safeguards to protect their textile industries. The United States undertook to lower duties on wool products, but its duty is 36 per cent. as against a mere 15 per cent. imposed by Canada and the United States retained the right to increase the rates if imports exceed 5 per cent. of the domestic products. Other commonwealth countries have actual quotas on textile imports.

The textile industry and our textile workers realize that in order to promote an export market for Canadian goods, foreign products must be permitted to enter Canada. They believe, however, that the goods imported into Canada to balance exports should be of many varieties and there should be a limitation on the quantity of any one kind of import to the end that no Canadian industry should be ruined. Our textile industry and workers believe that Canadian textile industry ought to be permitted to supply at least 70 per cent. of Canada's requirements and that if further inroads of foreign goods in the Canadian market must be made, the additional inroads should be to other industries.

In the Galt area, which includes the City of Galt and the Towns of Preston and Hespeler, there have been as many as 3,341 textile workers. Now 50 per cent. of these have been laid off and of the balance 42 per cent. were on short time on February 12th, 1954. It is interesting to note that last Sunday there was a meeting of the employees of a large mill in my riding and they voted to voluntarily accept a substantial wage reduction in order to permit the mill to operate.

I have been asked by the textile workers in my riding to bring their unhappy plight to the attention of the House. So far as I know Ottawa has never indicated it is prepared to assume any of the burden occasioned by the distress it caused in the industry. It seems to me proper that the Government of Ontario should make it clear to both Ottawa, and to the people of Ontario, that the responsibility for the present state of the industry and for its improvement lies with the Federal Government. It might be advisable now for the province to enter into negotiations with Ottawa to determine what is to be done when substantial numbers of our unemployed textile workers have exhausted their unemployment benefits.

In other words, it should be made clear to all that if Ottawa chooses to single out the Canadian textile industry, and sacrifice it, in order to permit the sale of Western Canadian wheat and other raw materials abroad, then Ottawa, and not the province, should be faced with the responsibility of meeting the disastrous results which are being experienced by both workers and owners in Canada's oldest and largest industry.

After all, we must remember that it is not the workers in other countries, making goods to be shipped into and sold in Canada, who live in houses built by local bricklayers and carpenters, who wear out the doorsteps of local retailers, queue up at the local movies, subscribe to the local newspapers, who render public service for the development and betterment of the local community, or who call in the local physician to ensure "happy landings" for new Canadians. It is gainfully employed Canadians who ensure the activity of Canadian municipalities.

MR. ARTHUR J. CHILD (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, in joining with my colleagues in speaking in the debate on the reply to the Speech from the Throne, I would first like to congratulate both the mover and the seconder on their addresses, which I consider were extremely well presented.

Mr. Speaker, there are a few remarks I would like to make today concerning matters which have been brought to my attention by a number of persons in my riding, and I believe the matters which have been brought to my attention, are very well taken.

Turning to the Department of the hon. Attorney-General, I would like to point out that today we still have, under The Fire Departments Act, a maximum work week of 56 hours. Considering the trend of labour in the last 10 years, this appears to be somewhat outmoded. According to the latest figures from the Canadian Statistical Review, the average work hours per week in manufacturing across Canada is 41. At the same time, most municipal employees work less than 40 hours. I do not see why firemen, who risk their lives to protect our families and property, should be singled out for a 56-hour week maximum, and I suggest that serious consideration be given to reducing it to a maximum of 48 hours which, in my opinion, seems to be very reasonable.

Another item which comes under the same Act, is the establishing of a fire college for the purpose of teaching the theory of fire fighting, and to give full courses in the practical method of fighting fires. The standardization of equipment is a step in the right direction, but a college is a definite need today with the added hazards which are encountered including those from chemicals. This brings me to another very important matter, that of oxygen apparatus. The fact that firemen are often called on to work in the presence of toxic gases which can do irreparable harm to a man's lungs, suggests to me that there should be added to the present legislation entitled the Fire Departments Act a provision that all fire trucks should carry a minimum of two approved self-contained oxygen or fresh-air masks.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to turn to a matter that concerns the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar), namely, a section of The Municipal Act. I spoke on it last year, because I believed it to be undemocratic, and since that time it has been proven to me beyond a shadow of a doubt that this is true.

I refer to Section 20 of The Municipal Act which gives a municipality the right to apply to the Ontario Municipal Board to annex territory from a neighbouring municipality without the consent of that municipality, and, as a matter of fact, over the protest of the council, and the majority of the citizens in the area desired to be annexed. I consider this to be the worst type of land exploitation, when one municipality can take choice land away from another, even though the annexing municipality needs it for survival. I know of two municipalities adjoining the City of Hamilton which have been affected by annexation. One is practically bankrupt, because a recent annexation took practically all of their water mains, and a large percentage of their assessment. The other township is fighting for survival against annexation which, by the way, the whole council unanimously opposed. Approximately 80 per cent. of the people in the area to be annexed signed a petition opposing the annexation, yet, in spite of this opposition, the Ontario Municipal Board saw fit to grant the application for annexation. The municipality annexing practically

"blackmailed" the residents of some of the area to be annexed into signing a statement that they would not oppose annexation if the city sold them water.

In the other township adjoining the City of Hamilton, a number of wells were polluted and the parents had no water with which to care for their babies and older children. Yet, in spite of this, the city said,

We will not supply you with water unless you sign an agreement not to oppose annexation at a later date.

I would like to read into the record an extract from a letter addressed to me by the township clerk of Barton, dated February 23rd, 1953:

There are 13 families involved in the application for water for Wellington Street. In return for the privilege of supplying these families with water at a price of 30c. for the first 1,000 gallons, 22½c. per 1,000 for the next 240,000 gallons and 18c. on all per 1,000 gallons over 240,000, and, in addition, the charge for meter service for a 12-inch main. Also, the council must agree to the city establishing a 156-acre garbage dump in Barton. They must also agree as a township that they will not oppose the annexation of the area supplied with water and, further, the property owners must also sign a declaration that they will not oppose annexation of the area supplied with water. To the end that you have documentary evidence of the requirements of the City of Hamilton, we submit herewith Exhibit "A." By-Law No. 6926.

Signed, A. Broughton.
Township Clerk.

Mr. Speaker, this gives a pretty clear picture of the extent to which some municipalities will go, under the present legislation and how unchristianlike it can act to a neighbouring municipality. It also shows how easily they can forget the Golden Rule and the Ninth Commandment, "Thou shalt not covet—" etc. These are conditions which parallel the days of the old water barons who controlled the water courses in the West

100 years ago, and when cattle ranchers could not pay the exorbitant price they asked for water, their cattle died of thirst. As long as Section 20 of The Municipal Act remains as it is, these conditions will continue to exist. Under the Act, at the present time, there is no protection for the owners of land in the annexed area and especially for the farmers. There is no protection for the small home owners whose property could depreciate because of industrial rezoning in the area. It is, in fact, expropriation without compensation, and it enables builders, real estate agents and land speculators to make a "killing." The transcript of the Ontario Municipal Board Hearing for the Hamilton Saltfleet annexation, will prove that outside the civic officials, and one or two indirectly connected to the city, who presented briefs in favour of annexation, the majority of the evidence for annexation came from people who were in a definite position to make money out of the "land grab."

Many people stay away from these hearings because they are unable to get up and express themselves in public even though they are violently opposed to annexation.

And that brings me to another touchy point. A large number of people both in the City of Hamilton and the Township of Saltfleet, asked me to oppose annexation on their behalf, for a variety of reasons, but, by and large, the main reason was that they feared increased taxes which they could not afford.

Mr. Speaker, in spite of the many requests, and my willingness to act, the Municipal Board ruled, after receiving objections from the city solicitor, that I could not speak on anybody's behalf, other than my own, as a private citizen. Had these people hired a lawyer, he would have been able to speak for them and cross-examine witnesses, yet a member of this House, whose responsibility and duty it is to work in the interests of the people he represents, was denied this right. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that anybody the people choose to represent them before the Ontario Municipal Board, regardless of his profeSSION, should have the same rights and privileges as a paid lawyer.

Past experience has shown these people residing in a number of areas annexed to the city some 5 years ago, that the roads and local services are far worse than they were when they were looked after by the township, as was given in evidence at the Ontario Municipal Board hearing.

Yet these people have to pay increased city taxes for worse conditions. I suggest, first, the municipality annexing should be made to buy these lands at the going market price, or, secondly, the farmers—and I have received a number of letters concerning this—should receive a fixed assessment, to compensate them for the imposition and restriction. Thirdly, the city should guarantee to find an industrial buyer for the land immediately. Under the present legislation, the mighty can "gobble up" the weak, without compensation. The foundation of the Act may be sound, as the hon. Minister stated a few days ago, but it appears to me the superstructure of the Act could certainly stand some repairs, and I respectfully suggest to the hon. Minister that this be taken under advisement during this session, and that the Act be amended to give the people in the area to be annexed a vote on the matter. I submit, when we stop trusting the people, we are heading for dictatorship.

For the past year I have been gathering information on what I consider one of our major problems and one upon which opinion is unanimous among the people I have the honour to represent, and that is, it is time something constructive be done to reduce the highway traffic accidents.

Last year 1,082 deaths were reported from accidents, and at the rate we are going it is a fairly "safe bet" that it will exceed 1,100 in 1954, unless something is done now.

My colleague, the hon. member for High Park (Mr. Cowling) mentioned in the House last year that it is human nature to have the urge to speed. That urge, I might add, is fostered by the automobile industry, in their advertising campaigns to sell power, power and more power to the public.

The Department of Highways, thanks to our accident-conscious hon. Minister, has a safety campaign under way all over the province, stressing that "speed kills," and statistics prove this to be so. Our budget, I understand, for the safety campaign is in the neighbourhood of $200,000 per year.

On the other hand, the automobile industry spends millions of dollars through radio, newspapers and television advertising, trying to "sell" the public on high-powered cars, and "power" means just one thing to the public—speed. Such slogans as "this year we have the greatest power-house on wheels" or "powered for modern driving" or "behind that grill is 235 horse-power," "new engine of tremendous horse-power." "our car has been accepted as the official pace-setter for the famous Indianapolis Speedway," "buy it today and you have a car with real speed" or "our new model has broken 165 stock car records," are constantly read and heard. Some car manufacturers advertise that they have a car that is "almost automatic." "You just have to sit behind the wheel and drive," etc.

On television they now show pictures of standard production line cars doing 90 miles per hour on curves and 110 miles per hour on the straight-away. Add to this tremendous campaign all the thousands of car salesmen also selling speed, and it is not very difficult to understand why we are having so many accidents in which speed is a factor, or the direct cause.

During the Canadian National Exhibition, I spent two evenings in the Automotive Building going from one automobile display to another, asking questions as to why cars are manufactured with such high horse-power, when the speed limit was 50 miles per hour. One sales representative said: "We had to increase our horse-power because our competitor came out with one model at 205, so ours was then increased to 210." Another sales representative told me it was for modern driving, and I reminded him the speed limit was 50 miles per hour and he replied: "Who drives at 50 miles per hour today? Just a few old 'fuddy-duddies.'" Another salesman said: "If we did not drive over 50 miles per hour, we would be taking the thrill out of driving."

There were other answers to my questions, but all along the same line as the ones I have just mentioned.

Mr. Speaker, just as long as we are faced with high-pressure advertising campaigns put on by the various automobile manufacturers, we will continue to kill hundreds and eventually thousands of people in Ontario every year. This "rat-race" of the automobile manufacturers for power and more power, is actually a race which will eventually end in death. Incidentally, the latest car on display is a 300 horse-power model.

It is another question of Mr. John Q. Public being "caught right in the middle" again. He helps pay for his provincial safety campaign, through taxes, and he also pays for a counter-campaign to sell high-powered cars included in the price of the car he purchases. The net result is that we are having an ever-increasing safety problem, in spite of the fact that our Highways Department is building dual lane highways wider and straighter which are supposed to be the ultimate in road safety.

Highway No. 401, the dual lane highway from Highland Creek to Oshawa, has the worst accident record in the province, in spite of the fact that short, sharp curves and short-vision hills have been eliminated. Yet, in spite of all our precaution, the death toll continues to rise. Speed and bad judgment are the main factors. Bad judgment enters into it, because people generally are not qualified to drive at high rates of speed, although unfortunately most of them think they are.

I have heard many suggestions for stopping traffic accidents, by controlling speeds of cars—which I personally do not believe would be a bad idea—and employing more highway police in white cruiser cars, and to institute driving courses in our schools.

I am firmly convinced that whatever action is taken will have to be drastic if we are going to save lives, but when 1,082 citizens are killed in a year, and another 25,000 are injured, many of them crippled for life, then I say it is time for action, regardless of however drastic it may be, or regardless of whose business it may interfere with.

At the rate cars are being put on the road today, and increasing number of visitors and taking into consideration the new roads we are building, the actual road space per car on the highways is getting smaller and smaller every year, so that it is imperative we act now. If we continue at the present rate of accident increase for the next 20 years, it is quite safe to say that practically every person in the province will be affected, directly or indirectly, by a death or accident to their relatives or friends.

And speaking of the number of injured in traffic accidents brings me to a point I believe will interest the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips). One of the problems we have heard debated at great length in this House is the question of hospitalization, and the lack of hospital accommodation required for our sick. Actually, we have more hospital accommodation in the province than we need, to take care of our bona fide sick cases. The trouble is we have not enough room to take care of the bona fide sick cases and our accident victims. When doctors apply for a hospital bed for one of their patients say, on a Friday, they are invariably told, "there are no accommodations available." Yet every week-end, anywhere from 5 to 25 accident victims are admitted to the very hospital which told the doctor "no accommodation was available." It is obvious that hospitals have to keep beds available for a number of emergency cases, which they know from past experience will occur during week-ends.

One accident victim often occupies a bed for from 3 to 6 months, and with 4 or 5 victims in a crash, one accident could quite easily result in a hospital bed being occupied from 300 to 400 hospital days. In a 3- or 4-months' period, which is quite common for an accident victim, 10 or 12 gall bladder cases, or the same number of pneumonia cases, could have used the same bed, but because of an accident they all must wait, and only the most urgent cases can be accepted.

Ninety per cent. of all our bona fide sick cases admitted to hospital stay less than 3 weeks. The average stay in Ontario is 9.23 days. This is an era of new drugs in connection with hospitalization. Actually we should economize in the heavy tax burden everybody is carrying today instead of spending more money.

By eliminating accidents, we are in effect doing the same as building hospitals and beds, and there is no question but it would be much cheaper. If we cut our accidents by one-third, we would have more hospital beds available in Hamilton than we would actually need for the bona fide sick cases.

I know if we had an epidemic which took more than 1,000 lives a year, the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) would have medical experts from all over the North American continent, if not from all over the world, working on a solution to halt the epidemic, who would continue their efforts until the epidemic had been successfully conquered. Yet we kill over 1,000 citizens a year and the figure will be growing year by year, but up to the present time, we have not come up with any workable solution to reduce the number killed. I will admit, that on paper, our theoretical figure of the number killed per million miles of travel has been reduced, but in terms of cold bodies going to the morgues, the number is increasing.

I believe it should have been the responsibility of the automobile industry to give leadership to this important matter of accident prevention. Although at times they do make token efforts, with what they call "safety campaigns," they seem more interested in making money by selling cars by this "rat-race" for power. The 210-235 horse-power cars are now known as the "bankers' hot rods." In fairness to one manufacturer, who by the way is located in Hamilton, Mr. D. C. Gaskin, president of the Studebaker Corporation, has openly spoken against excessive horse-power and has stated today's 200 horse-power automobiles will someday be instruments of death in the hand of a person who buys them second hand and cannot afford to keep them in repair.

The automobile industry in the United States, from which we take our leadership in car manufacturing, seems to be working on a research programme for the purpose of designing cars for crash survival. In other words, they are not doing anything to eliminate the cause of the crash, but are working on devices to protect the occupants in a car when a smash-up occurs. Such things as safety belts, foam rubber cushioning and windshields which are released under certain pressure are some of the devices being experimented with. It seems they will do almost anything, so long as it does not interfere with their selling points of "power" and "speed."

In a nationally circulated magazine, a copy of which I have before me, is an article dealing with the automobile industry, entitled, "What is new in cars?" and the first word following that title is "speed." Why should we have cars on our highways which will do 100 or 120 miles per hour, when our highway speed laws only permit 50 miles per hour, at the same time, when our roads are not designed for high-speed traffic, and the majority of the public are not capable of operating cars at a high rate of speed?

I firmly believe, as I have stated before, that cars should have controlled speeds, either by means of a gear ratio or governors or by some means which would limit a car to a maximum speed of 60 miles per hour, and I suggest "60" because the extra 10 miles may be required to get a driver out of difficulty, although you usually find that the only time that a burst of speed is required is when a driver has got himself into difficulty, because he has exceeded the speed limit. I believe the records will show that trucking companies which have governors on their trucks have a very low accident record.

I believe it would also help to curb the stealing of automobiles, as thieves would not be so inclined to steal a car that is governed to 60 miles per hour, when special emergency cars, such as police cars, have unlimited speed. There have been a number of stolen-car chases in the past year, varying from 80 to 120 miles per hour, some involving a running gun battle with law enforcement officers, and in some cases our enforcement officers have been killed or injured in these chases as the result of a crack-up.

Frankly, I believe it is time we stopped being so smug about this whole ghastly matter, and admit that a number of us do at times exceed the speed limit—inadvertently perhaps—but nevertheless we do speed, mainly because we do not realize the rate of speed we are travelling. I understand from safety prevention authorities in both Canada and the United States that this is called "speed blindness" and is becoming an ever-increasing problem.

I realize my suggestion will not help me win a popularity contest among the big car owners, who love to speed down the highways at 70 or 80 miles per hour or for that matter with the automobile industry. But frankly that is not my purpose. The people of Wentworth, whom I represent, are more interested and concerned with the ever-increasing number of highway accidents and fatalities, and it is on their behalf I am bringing this to the attention of the hon. members of this House.

Originally, Mr. Speaker, I had intended to ask the government to consider a Royal Commission to investigate this important matter. However, since hearing the opinion of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) on Royal Commissions, I hesitate to do so, but I strongly urge this government to appoint a Select Committee with full powers to study this question and bring in necessary recommendations, which will tend to reduce accidents, regardless of how drastic the recommendations may be. I suggest the committee should enquire into the question of the differential speed limit of 10 to 15 miles per hour between cars and commercial vehicles, which I suggested in the House last year. I have just read in the local papers that Quebec has adopted this provision in their Highway Traffic Act.

Secondly, the passing of legislation to make it illegal to sell a car which is mechanically defective.

Thirdly, more strict licencing of drivers.

Fourthly, increasing the minimum age at which licences may be issued.

Fifthly, legislation to make it unlawful for trucks to operate without rear bumpers.

Sixthly, making it compulsory for all vehicles to have signal directional lights, and driver-education courses which I believe should be made a mandatory course in our high schools, as it is in some of the states of the United States, which plan, I understand, is meeting with great success.

There is one other phase of safety concerning our Highway Traffic Act I would like to mention and that is the lack of legislation making it illegal to pass railway protective devices. Every year motorists are killed because they ignore warning signals and try to beat a train across a crossing. 20 were killed in Ontario in January. This is the case when in order to tie in the race you usually forfeit your life, and at the same time endanger the lives of the train crew and passengers. If there was a heavy penalty for this folly, I feel quite confident this practice would cease. Hamilton police, I understand, charged a number of motorists for crossing against warning signals in Hamilton, but they were all able to "beat the charge," simply because there was nothing in the Highway Traffic Act to prohibit it. Warning devices should be placed in the same category as our flasher lights on the highways.

By the same token, I believe there should be a much heavier fine against railway companies which obstruct traffic for more than 5 minutes, or when warning devices are in operation for more than 5 minutes at a time, unless they can show mechanical or electrical failure.

The question of the 20 mile-per-hour speed limit crossing railway tracks is not at the present time being enforced, and I would suggest to the hon. Attorney-General that it should be enforced on all of our highways, and that all policing agencies in Ontario should be reminded that such legislation is in the Highway Traffic Act, and should be strictly enforced.

Mr. Speaker, I must apologize for speaking at such length on this problem, but to the people I represent and to myself, this is the most important and urgent problem to confront the government, and I believe it should receive top priority in the government's deliberations—that is, to appoint a Select Committee. Certainly in the past, committees have been appointed to enquire into far less serious matters.

May I respectfully request that this be given the government's immediate attention?

MR. J. P. ROBARTS (London) moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves the adjournment of the House.

He said: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow the committee appointed to enquire into lake levels will present its report, which I think will be somewhat voluminous.

Following that the House will consider Order No. 24 on the Order paper of today, "The Dairy Marketing Act." It is desirous of sending that bill to the committee as soon as possible.

When consideration of that bill has been completed, we will proceed with the addresses on the amendment to the reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6.00 of the clock p.m.

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 3, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We are very glad to welcome today students from the Brantford Collegiate Institute, George Harvey Vocational School in Toronto, and particularly pleased are we to have the members of the Kiwanis Club of Niagara Falls, Ontario. We welcome students to our assemblies whenever they find it possible to come, but this is really a unique occasion to have such a splendid representation from one of the great service organizations of our country, and of the world, the members of the Kiwanis Club.

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): I beg leave to present the third and final report of the Standing Committee on Standing Orders, and move its adoption.

CLERK-ASSISTANT: Mr. Dempsey, from the Standing Committee on Standing Orders, presents the Committee's third and final report as follows:

Your committee has carefully examined the following petitions and finds the notices as published in each case sufficient:

Petition of the Corporation of The Sudbury Community Young Men's, Young Women's Christian Association praying that an Act may pass changing the name of the Association to Sudbury Young Men's Christian Association.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of Hamilton praying that an Act may pass validating certain employees' retiring allowances, and for other purposes.

Petition of the Corporation of The Home for the Friendless and Infants' Home praying that an Act may pass dissolving the said corporation and authorizing the transfer of its assets to Hamilton Hospital Associates Inc.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of London praying that an Act may pass confirming an Order of The Ontario Municipal Board annexing part of the Township of London to the said city.

Petition of the board of the Royal Botanical Gardens praying that an Act may pass enlarging the membership of the said board.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of Niagara Falls praying that an Act may pass authorizing by-laws classifying and regulating tourist establishments.

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of St. Marys praying that an Act may pass confirming a by-law of the town regulating a fixed rate of taxation for farming lands in the said town.

Petition of the Corporation of The Ross Memorial Hospital praying that an Act may pass increasing the membership of the board of governors to 17 members, and for other purposes.

Petition of Argue Martin, Q.C., Frank P. Goldblatt, et al, praying that an Act may pass incorporating The Hamilton Foundation.

Petition of the Corporation of the Township of Scarborough praying that an Act may pass providing that the council of the township shall be composed of a reeve, a deputy and six councillors and providing for the method of its election.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough praying that an Act may pass confirming the purchase of certain lands for industrial sites by the city.

Petition of the Corporation of the City of Ottawa praying that an Act may pass increasing the membership of the Ottawa Transportation Commission, and for other purposes.

Petition of the Corporation of the Township of Sandwich West praying that an Act may pass terminating the corporate existence of the Town of Ojibway and restoring the lands contained therein to the said township.

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Fort Erie praying that an Act may pass validating an agreement between the Corporation, Canadian National Railway Company and The International Bridge Company.

Petition of the Corporation of the Town of Oakville praying that an Act may pass authorizing the council of the corporation to issue local improvement debentures; and for other purposes.

Petition of the Corporation of St. Michael's College praying that an Act may pass empowering the college to confer degrees in theology including honorary degrees.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

THE CHILD WELFARE ACT, 1954

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to consolidate and revise The Children's Protection Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents Act, and The Adoption Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this bill for first reading, I feel I should give some explanation to the hon. members of the House with respect to the content of this legislation.

As the title indicates, it is a consolidation and revision of The Children's Protection Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents Act, and The Adoption Act, all of which will be repealed and superseded by this new Act, which will be entitled, "The Child Welfare Act, 1954."

There has been a feeling for some years there should be a complete revision made of the existing legislation in connection with child welfare in this province. Great strides towards improvement in the protection of children coming under these Acts, and in the supervision of our child welfare. It was felt necessary to make a complete review of the existing Acts, and revise them, all of which has been done, and is included in this new Act.

I might say there has not been a revision of the Child Welfare Acts in this province in over 60 years, since these Acts came into effect. It was felt necessary, in order to complete and bring about the new legislation that all parties concerned with child welfare should be brought together and given an opportunity to express their views in connection with the improvements which should be made.

In the first instance we established an informal committee which was comprised of Mr. Goff, Secretary of the Children's Aid Societies for the Province of Ontario, representing as he did the Association of Children's Aid Societies; Mr. Frame, Welfare Administrator for the City of Hamilton, who has had many years of experience in welfare and could bring into that committee, the municipalities' point of view in connection with child welfare, and we also brought in Miss Jackson, superintendent of the Simcoe Children's Aid Society, as the lady on the committee, and also as a member of a society which represents a cross-section of a particular part of Ontario which might be considered representative of both rural and urban interests.

This committee sat almost continuously for a period of over one year and interviewed people engaged with child welfare, not only in the societies, but also the people engaged by and connected with the municipalities, and they also studied legislation in effect in other jurisdictions outside the Province of Ontario. I want to pay tribute to this committee and the officials of my department who worked with them, for the work they have completed and which we hope has resulted in a Children's Welfare Act which is at least equal to, if not better than, any piece of legislation of this kind to be found in any jurisdiction.

We do not say this is the last word, because we never reach perfection in any particular piece of legislation, but it will be our intention after this Act is in effect, to hold further sittings and consider progressive improvements from time to time on behalf of the neglected children of this province. I think it is right to point out to the House that this Act is not only a consolidation of existing Acts but that new principles have been brought into the Act which, we feel, are for the betterment of child welfare in the Province of Ontario.

I do not propose this afternoon to go into this in detail, but only to point out some of the more important principles and policies which have been incorporated.

We feel it is important there should be a very close relationship between the Children's Aid Societies across this province, and the municipalities which share to a great extent the major part of the cost of child welfare in the province, and also our Child Welfare Branch, working through and with the municipalities, and the Children's Aid Societies in connection with child welfare.

The Director of Child Welfare, of the Department of Public Welfare, will be the director charged with the administration of this Act. We have deleted any reference to "superintendent" as found in the old Act, or "provincial officer," as was designated in the old Act. In this Act the Director will refer to the Director of Child Welfare. We are giving some assistance to the Children's Aid Societies by the introduction of a new policy of giving some financial assistance to the societies in the districts, in view of the work they are doing on behalf of the province in connection with neglected children in the unorganized districts. We will set up, by regulation, ways to prescribe special assistance to societies in the districts which need additional assistance, due to the fact that it is not possible for them to carry on the work they are doing, because they do not have the sources of revenue from private subscriptions which are available in other areas.

We are incorporating in this Act for the first time a principle in connection with child neglect, which will include incompetence on the part of parents, as well as emotional neglect. It was felt this was advisable because we have cases from time to time where, through emotional neglect, and incompetence on the part of parents, a child's welfare is adversely affected, but it has not been possible in the past to convince a court there was actual physical neglect.

Under the new Act a section has been incorporated which will limit the period of temporary wardship. There has been a practice in some jurisdictions for children to be taken in, and temporary wardship was given. The tendency was for that temporary wardship to be extended from one month to another for 6 months, and perhaps a further 6 months and then a further period of wardship was granted. In the interest of the child it was felt advisable that the full period of temporary wardship should not exceed 24 months. We felt that after 2 years, the court should be in a position to decide whether a child should be made a permanent ward of the society or should be handed back to the parents. That is in the interest of the child.

It has been the practice for discharge of wardship to be made by the societies. We change that in this Act, and the wardship can only be terminated by a judge of a responsible court.

The age limit for guardianship has been reduced from 21 to 18 years. We felt that in most cases there is no necessity for retaining guardianship over a ward until he or she is 21 years of age, unless there are special circumstances in the case of that particular ward. We have made provisions in this Act whereby the ward can be transferred from one jurisdiction to another. The present practice is that a child might be resident in one area, say the Parry Sound District, and yet might become a ward of the Toronto Children's Aid Society. And, as a ward of the Toronto Children's Aid Society, there has been no provision for that child to be taken back to the municipality which has financial responsibility for the maintenance of the child. In other words, a child might be a ward in a jurisdiction where the per diem rate is $2 a day and yet he will be charged back on a municipality where the cost per diem might be only $1.50 per diem.

Special provincial aid will be extended to towns and villages in the districts and provisional counties which find themselves faced with large expenses for maintenance of wards. We shall be able to assist them at provincial level. In the past this has only applied to towns and villages in territorial districts. We have found two or three instances where towns have been financially embarrassed, due to the large number of wards which have become their responsibility. It will now be possible for us to assist these towns at the provincial level.

We are providing under this Act that an application must be made to a judge in order to establish per diem rates before February 15th in each year. If an application is not made before that date for a change in rates, or to establish new rates, then the rates in force will remain in force until the following year. This is to assist municipalities in assessing their budgets early in the year. In the past they found themselves embarrassed by having applications made for a change in rates any time in the year when a society may have seen fit to apply.

For the first time we are introducing in this Act the right of a children's society, or municipality or any interested person, to appeal in connection with the wardship of a child, providing that the appeal is made within 30 days of the time the judgment is handed down. We feel it is in the interest of the child, of the parents, and of all concerned, that there should be recourse to a Court of Appeal in connection with wardship. We propose to extend the same rights and protection to all religious faiths.

We propose in this bill to make it an offence to leave children under 10 unattended for an unreasonable length of time, and we provide a suitable penalty.

We also provide in the bill to extend the natural relationship of an adopted child. As hon. members are aware, at the present time an adopted child has the same inheritance rights as a natural child from the adopting parents. But that does not hold true in regard to a grandchild, or an inheritance from grandparents or other relatives. In this bill, a grandchild who is adopted, without being mentioned in the will, will automatically inherit the same as a child born naturally. We feel that this is being fair to the child, and that it does not interfere in any way with the wishes of anyone expressed in a will. I may also say that the succession duty people have been consulted on this, and the Succession Duty Act will be amended accordingly.

In case there should be any sharp practices or black marketing of babies in the Province of Ontario—and we are happy that there is none, or, at least we are under that impression—but in case there should be we are inserting a section into this Act, a provision for very stiff penalties to be imposed upon anyone convicted of accepting any payment or reward in connection with an adoption.

I might say that most jurisdictions in the United States have this provision to protect children.

After all, we are more or less dealing in human flesh, and we feel we should have penalties which will protect children who might become victims in connection with any adoption which did not have the approval of our own Child Welfare Department, and also of the various Children's Aid Societies under our jurisdiction.

HON. R. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the 22nd annual report of the Department of Public Welfare for the fiscal year 1952-1953.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

MR. WARRENDER (Hamilton): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, there is something to which I would like to call to the attention of the hon. members. This morning the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) met a delegation from the Eastern Ontario Associated Boards of Trade. There were about 28 or 30 men and women altogether who came to the hon. Prime Minister, and had a very interesting discussion. They are concerned about industrial development in their area. This in spite of the fact that the Department of Planning and Development has already been doing quite a good job for them.

They are in an area roughly forming a triangle from Pembroke to Kingston to the Quebec border and back to Pembroke. They pointed out there had been some talk about decentralization, and they wanted to see more of it.

The hon. Prime Minister made it clear that one of the policies being followed by the Department of Planning and Development was toward the decentralization of industry. We believe in that, because we know that an industry going to a small community can do very much to tone up the economy of that community, by helping with the assessment, hiring employees and by the creation of greater purchasing power. It, therefore, follows, generally speaking, as I said, that it keys up the whole tone of the economy of that community.

So there is a policy already in force, whereby we agree on decentralization. But the delegation was also concerned about those parts of the province with which they had to do, and they made the point they would like the provincial government to do more to assist them.

The Department of Planning and Development has been trying to do that for all parts of the province, and, as a matter of fact, an office was opened in Chicago because of the great number of calls coming from the Midwestern states. The business we have had come through that office has been overwhelming. We cannot actually say that as a result of this we have attracted an industry from the Midwestern states to Ontario, but we can say we have been very active in getting a great many industries located in the Province of Ontario.

We do not tell them to what part of Ontario they should go. But we analyze their product carefully, we consider also where they must get their raw materials, and the labour force which they will require, and we also have to consider the market which should be readily available. All these things have to be taken into consideration, and we have agreed to help this Eastern Ontario Associated Boards of Trade.

While they were speaking, it occurred to me this was a very appropriate time to announce to hon. members what the Department of Planning and Development has had in mind for some time, many details of which have already been worked out. That is an over-all regional plan for the whole Province of Ontario region by region. We have not yet worked it out thoroughly, nor have we thoroughly defined the regions which will be drawn up, but there will be, at the most, eight of them. Those chiefly concerned with these regions are going to be called to Toronto, or a convenient spot, and we shall meet those representatives, members of the planning boards, industrial commissioners, and others interested in the development and planning of our area, and we shall try to help them take a long-range view of the things which seem to be needed in this great Province of Ontario.

As I have said, this area, whose representatives were here this morning, is the area we have chosen for our first conference. We have already set the dates. As a matter of fact, we hope to have these people here in Toronto on May 11th, 12th and 13th, at the King Edward Hotel. We have space arranged and are ready to go on with the first regional conference.

Generally speaking, we have a two-fold objective, one, at the provincial level, broad, orderly regional development with optimum land use involving general designations for heavy industry, light industry, agricultural areas, and so forth.

Secondly, at the local level, more specialized zoning and planning of community lay-outs.

As I say, Mr. Speaker, we feel the direct benefits will be many, including more informative municipal campaigns for the attraction of new industry, whereby types suitable to a municipality and which a municipality could absorb, would be analyzed, and, secondly, the designation and demarcation of urban problems and rural or agricultural problems, at the municipal level.

Thirdly, the optimum land use, labour force use, raw material use, and the relation of industry to markets.

Also, equalization of assessment as an objective for residence, business and industry in all municipalities, along the line of the recommendations of the Provincial-Municipal Relations Committee, in its report of December 19th, 1952.

We also hope for closer working relations between transport officials and local officials in the matter of intra and inter-area development.

Mr. Speaker, I think that will give to the hon. members of the House the broad picture which we hope to present to the first regional conference, and we do hope, as the result of it, there will be the opportunity of looking into the future, and seeing what can be done to further industry, and also to provide industry for our growing population, as we feel that perhaps many hon. members will think something should be done, and perhaps something should have been done a long while ago. We also hope to discuss the question of potential industrial areas for regional development, which we feel sure will occur in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I have taken this time, which I think is appropriate, to announce the first regional conference, something which has never been attempted before, and I hope that out of this conference we will have the opportunity of considering these areas, region by region. We are in hopes that a little later perhaps direction will come from the government in regard to these areas over the province, so they may all be helped by a utilization of the many resources we have here.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) whether, in view of the fact that a deputation of the Boards of Trade of the eastern townships, which appeared before the hon. Prime Minister this morning, came to ask assistance primarily in solving the acute unemployment problem which has beset the textile industry, whether the hon. Prime Minister, or in fact, any hon. member of the government, would care to inform the House what, if anything, the government has done to bring about any relief for which the deputation asked.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the relief asked for by the deputation was along the lines about which the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) has spoken, the diversification of industry, and the substitution of other industries to take the place of the one which has been so hard hit in that area—the textile industry.

Of course, we cannot escape the fact that there are other industries which may also be affected in the Province of Ontario, such as the gold industry. This is an attack on a broad front, not a palliative, not an aspirin tablet, such as might be suggested by the hon. member for St. Andrew as a remedy. It is an over-all cure.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The remarks by the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Warrender), Mr. Speaker, bring to our minds certain prophecies which were made at the time the Department of Planning and Development was formed. The hon. Prime Minister has said this is an attack on a broad front—

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. OLIVER: We thought, in former days, the activities of this department were to be attacks on broad fronts—

HON. MR. FROST: They have been.

MR. OLIVER: I think, Mr. Speaker, seriously, we can all pretty well agree that up until now the net result of the department's activities—and I am not placing any blame on the hon. Minister by this particular reference—but the net result has been pretty well to make the large centres larger, and bring only a very small measure of relief to the outlying areas, which really need these new industries.

I am quite aware of the complexities of the problem; I am quite aware of the difficulties which stand in the way, and I am hopeful that what the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) has suggested today, will be beneficial in bringing in not only a master plan, but a master plan which will work, for the people and the areas outside of the large metropolitan districts.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, if the large metropolitan areas are growing larger, it is not by any design on our part. There is a very active campaign underway for the decentralization of industry throughout the length and breadth of the province. But when industry comes to us, we cannot say, "You go here" or "You go there." All we can do is to endeavour to guide them, and by not directing them, they cannot come back and say, "You advised us definitely to go to one spot, and it did not work out."

Our object is to assist and guide them, but we do not tell them where to go. It is only by coincidence that many of the larger centres are growing larger, and I think the reason may be due to the fact they have the ready raw material, greater labour forces, and a more ready market, and many of the essentials which will inevitably result in the further growth of the metropolitan areas.

Our policy is, and has been, one of decentralization.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, perhaps I may be permitted to refer to the remark by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). I would ask him to compare the Ontario of 1954, with the Ontario of 1944, when the Department of Planning and Development was formed, and would ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition to look at the mighty development of this province in that 10-year period.

MR. OLIVER: With which the Department of Planning and Development had very little to do.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. Leader of the Opposition is like Rip Van Winkle; he has slept for 20 years.

MR. OLIVER: Ontario has gone ahead in spite of this government.

HON. MR. FROST: No, sir; onward with this government.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, here, there, and all over.

MR. SALSBERG: In that case, they are responsible for the slump.

HON. MR. FROST: Despite the grumblings of dissatisfaction which come from the hon. members sitting opposite, may I ask them to remember the House will be adjourned tomorrow, out of respect to the late hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey), whose funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon.

The committees of the House will carry on as usual.

In regard to the Orders of the day for Friday, when the House will convene at 2 o'clock in the afternoon; there will be consideration given to any of the bills on the Order paper, subject to this: if any hon. member, the hon. Leader of the Opposition or the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) desires that any bill be held over, I shall be glad to acquiesce.

There will also be a continuation of the addresses on the amendment in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

I think, Mr. Speaker, the order might be that, first, we will have the addresses on the amendment to the reply to the Speech from the Throne, followed by consideration of the bills on the Order paper. If there is anything of a nature which requires explanation, or which is contentious, I would be glad to agree to have it held over.

For today, Mr. Speaker, I would like the House to adopt a procedure which is a little unusual: but, after all, we are in the year 1954. Instead of calling the next Order, which is "Presenting reports by committees" which would afford the opportunity to the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Villeneuve) to proceed with the presentation of this voluminous and no doubt fine report, I should like to call Order No. 33, Bill No. 68, with respect to the dairying industry, after which I would ask that we revert to the presentation of reports by committees.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, I do not know how urgent it is that Bill 68 be moved on to the committee, but I think the hon. Prime Minister will agree that this is a very important bill.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. OLIVER: It is the amalgamation of nine Acts which have been on the Statute Books for many years. It introduces a number of new principles, and deals with a very controversial subject. May I say to the hon. Prime Minister, Mr. Speaker, that I have not had an opportunity to look at the bill, as it only came on my desk about 15 minutes before the House met. I do not think this House should be asked to give second reading—which is, in reality, an endorsement of the principles of the bill—until we have an opportunity of looking into it, and ascertaining whether we are in agreement with the principles involved.

It surely would not hold things up very much to have this bill delayed until at least Friday, when we shall have had the opportunity of looking into it, and I would ask the hon. Prime Minister not to proceed with this bill today, unless there is very real urgency for so doing.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the desire is to bring this bill before the committee where it can be given the most thorough consideration, and the suggestion to advance the bill at this stage is to enable that to be done. I think an explanation given by the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) of this bill at this time, would closely follow what was said by him the other day.

Mr. Speaker, this could be held over, but if it is, it will mean a delay of representations which are to be made in connection with it.

I can quite understand the statement by the hon. Leader of the Opposition, that he feels adequate time has not been given to consider the matters involved. May I assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition that our idea is to give the hon. members of the House, the members of the dairy industry, and others, every opportunity to consider this bill. That is the purpose of asking that it be advanced today.

I think it could be done. The hon. Attorney-General tells me a bill can be referred to a committee on the first reading, but it is not usual. As I say, I imagine the remarks to be made by the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) will be closely related to what he said last Friday, when the bill was introduced.

Of course, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. Leader of the Opposition insists, I will acquiesce, and hold the bill. On the other hand, I can assure him that our intention would be to send this bill on to committee, and there leave it for 3 or 4 weeks, and after the Agricultural Committee has thoroughly considered it, the hon. Leader of the Opposition would be at liberty to give it his utmost consideration.

May I say to the hon. members of the House, and to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, that we feel this bill is a safe step, but it is not a step which commits us to any specific future act. It provides the framework upon which action may be taken, as circumstances and conditions dictate, with the full co-operation of the industry.

I appreciate the position in which the hon. Leader of the Opposition finds himself. I will agree not to press second reading of this bill. Perhaps we might do it this way, if he agrees; proceed with second reading, and then the bill will go to the Agricultural Committee and there remain shall I say, for at least 3 weeks before it is reported, in order to provide the greatest opportunity for full consideration.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I am inclined to agree with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), that we are not following the proper procedure in sending this bill on to the committee without having a debate.

The hon. Prime Minister made a suggestion which I think is a good one. If it is possible to legally send this bill to the committee after first reading, that would be a very fine procedure.

In the past, we have discussed these bills, in fact, the entire debate on any bill has been on second reading, but the practice now, Mr. Speaker, since we are referring these bills to committee on second reading, it automatically shuts off all debate which should take place in the House.

If the bill can be referred to the committee on first reading, and then come back to the House, we can have the general debate, and I think that would be a more satisfactory arrangement, Mr. Speaker.

HON. MR. FROST: I am quite satisfied to do that, if the hon. members opposite are in agreement. If so, I will move the necessary motion to refer it to the committee, and be returned to the House later for consideration, on second reading.

I move that Bill No. 68 be now referred to the Committee on Agriculture for consideration, and that the rules of the House in that regard be suspended.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, on the motion: I have no objection, except to raise a rather important point in regard to the responsibility of the House. I would like to elaborate on that by saying it is conceivable that a bill could be defeated on second reading, when the principles of it are under discussion, and then there would be nothing to send forward to any committee.

If we resort to the method of forwarding a bill to a committee after first reading, we are really delegating a degree of responsibility which this House has, to non-elected people, who would come and express opinions on a bill which we might, in our wisdom, decide no longer existed, and therefore, there would be nothing upon which to express an opinion.

Under ordinary circumstances when a bill goes to a committee, the citizens of the province may come and express opinions, and it could conceivably be that they would be expressed in regard to a matter which we might decide should not be referred to the committee at all.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that this procedure is the one which is followed in regard to all Private Bills. A Private Bill may go to the committee, and subsequently be defeated, or amended, in the House.

In regard to this particular bill, the idea is to afford the hon. members the opportunity of securing the judgments of the best people available in connection with the problem, which is a very difficult one.

If the Agricultural Committee does not report this bill, I am satisfied the House will never pass it. In the alternative, I am satisfied that the consideration the committee will give to this bill, will improve it, and will extend the knowledge of the people as to what is meant by the bill, and when it comes back to the House, the hon. members will have a better opportunity for debate. If at that time there are points which are in issue, we can give them more intelligent consideration.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting reports by committees.

MR. O. F. VILLENEUVE (Glen-garry): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the report of the Select Committee appointed to study the matter of lake levels in the Great Lakes and waters affected thereby.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the report I have just tabled is a detailed and comprehensive study of our terms of reference, which has been made possible only by the keen interest and co-operation of many people including lakefront residents, municipal officers, civil servants of the Governments of Ontario, Canada, the United States and of some of the State Governments bordering the Great Lakes: therefore, Mr. Speaker, I wish on behalf of the Lake Levels Committee to express to all who have co-operated in the work of this committee, our sincere appreciation.

I also wish to pay tribute to the contribution made by Dr. G. B. Langford of the University of Toronto as consultant, and also to every member of this committee. From the day of our first organizational meeting to the very last, this committee worked in harmony—our only desire being to bring to this House a unanimous report which we hope will clarify to all the hon. members and to the interested public the complex and difficult problems involved in shore protection—problems made more acute by the recent high water levels in the Great Lakes.

I have appreciated very much the opportunity of working with the hon. member for Grey South, the Leader of the Opposition and also with the hon. member from Ontario, a member of the CCF Party as well as my own government colleagues and I do want to single out for special mention the committee's sincere appreciation and gratitude to Mr. H. F. Crown of the Conservation Branch of the Department of Planning and Development who acted in the capacity of secretary to this committee and made my task as chairman very pleasant indeed.

TERMS OF REFERENCE

During the winter and early spring of 1952 the levels of the Great Lakes rose to such an extent that serious damage was done to the shoreline and in many cases to buildings and homes. In addition some areas bordering on the Great Lakes were flooded, with the result that hundreds of residents were driven from their homes and in many cases these were destroyed or made uninhabitable.

Following this widespread damage, many representations were made to the Ontario Government requesting protection against a similar occurrence in the future and to assist in repairing the damage which had been done.

Accordingly, the Government of Ontario, realizing that high lake levels may repeat themselves in the future, considered that it was both expedient and necessary to review its powers to deal with this problem. Therefore, on March 28th, 1952, the Legislature of Ontario appointed a Select Committee to study these matters.

The terms of reference for this committee set out 6 specific items for inquiry and consideration. These, with the sections in which they are dealt with in this report, are as follows:

- (1) The causes of the variations of water levels.

Section 5—Factors Affecting Lake Levels, sections 4, 5, 6.

- (2) The effect of such water levels on shore erosion, silting and conservation generally.

Section 4—Factors Affecting Shore Erosion, section 4.

- (3) The present method of control of water levels.

Section 5—Regulation of the Lake Levels in the Great Lakes, section 7.

- (4) Under what jurisdiction such controls operate.

Section 5—Regulation of the Lake Levels in the Great Lakes, section 7.

- (5) To study and report on the laws of Canada or any jurisdiction fronting such lakes and which affect such levels, erosion, silting and conservation.

Section 6—Jurisdictional Aspects of Shore Protection.

- (6) The means presently adopted in the various jurisdictions to cope with the problems mentioned in paragraph 5.

Sections 7-12—Shore Protective Measures.

The committee has been impressed with the lack of fundamental information that is available on the processes of shore erosion and the application of effective means for its control. Throughout its study the problems of shore erosion and inundation have been considered in the light of all the other uses of water of the Great Lakes, some of which have national and even international significance.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I do want to stress the fact that our study of these terms of reference and the recommendations that have been evolved, have been guided by a cardinal principle of resource management—the greatest use, for the greatest number of people, for the greatest length of time. In other words, we have considered the use of the waters of the Great Lakes in the light of navigation, hydro-electric power, water supply and sanitation, recreation, fishing, and at the same time having in mind the interests of the riparian owners along our Great Lakes shoreline.

Just to revert to that, Mr. Speaker, it is of great significance to know that through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, both Canadian and American, twice as much shipping has been recorded passing through these waters in one year as has been recorded going through the Panama Canal.

The Hydro-Electric Power System is of economical importance to this province. The development on the St. Marys River, the Niagara River, and the proposed St. Lawrence River certainly must be considered.

There are 107 municipalities bordering the Great Lakes, whose water, either all or in part, comes from the lakes. Some 63 municipalities use the lakes, or its waterways, for the discharge of their sewage systems.

One thing which is even more important, and which this government or future governments will have to consider, is the fact that within 25 miles' distance from the shoreline of Lake Huron to the City of Kingston, which is situated at the mouth of the St. Lawrence River on Lake Ontario, there dwell today $2\frac{1}{2}$ million people. Recreation is of great importance. We have now adopted the 5-day week, and facilities for public parks are becoming more pronounced from day to day. Therefore, that is an item which must be considered.

Last on the list, the fishing industry, is an industry of $6 million magnitude, made by commercial fishermen in these lakes.

I would like to point out, Mr. Speaker, that it is by no means an easy task to visit areas suffering from erosion and inundation on the Great Lakes and then to sit down and make an impartial analysis of the technical information available to determine the responsibility for this damage. Having satisfied ourselves that the responsibility for this erosion and inundation lies predominantly with the vagaries of nature and very little with men or with governments, it is most difficult to formulate recommendations that will lead to an orderly and sound solution of this problem and yet be within the financial ability of our province to undertake.

ORGANIZATION AND METHODS

In studying a subject of such a technical nature as the causes of the variation of lake levels of the Great Lakes, methods of control of lake levels and shore erosion and the jurisdictional responsibilities involved required that the committee obtain sound technical advice. Accordingly co-operation and submissions were received from senior officers of our own departments of government, namely the Attorney-General's, Lands and Forests, Highways, Public Works, and Planning and Development. Similarly discussions were held with officials of the Dominion Departments of Mines and Technical Surveys, Transport, and Public Works. The many years of experience of the State and Federal Governments of the United States of America with regard to shore protection problems was made available to us. The committee spent 2 days at Chicago with the division engineer of the Great Lakes Division of the United States Corps of Engineers. Here the committee discussed the problems arising from high lake levels and the part played by their Federal Government in shore protection from erosion and inundation. The Corps of Engineers were most courteous and obliging and toured the committee along the Great Lakes shoreline of the States of Illinois, Wisconsin and Indiana to show the types of protective measures employed in these states and how these measures were financed. From observations made by the members of the committee, it was the concensus of opinion that many hundreds of thousands of dollars were simply poured down the drain and had little or no remedial effects in many instances.

In order that we may have a picture of the state participation in this work the committee visited the State of Ohio and were guests of the Shore Erosion Division of the Ohio Department of National Resources. Along the Ohio waterfront we observed the efficiency of practically every type of beach protective work known. On that occasion we were also privileged to participate in a conference with the American Shore and Beach Preservation Association at Toledo, at which time valuable technical discussions were held on many aspects of shore erosion and inundation as it pertains to the Great Lakes.

Having equipped ourselves with a minimum amount of fundamental information on the problem of shore erosion and inundation, the committee visited every section of the Ontario shoreline where damage was of such an extent that local public opinion was aroused. In many cases we were able to pass on to municipal representatives and property owners information on the effectiveness of protective measures and their costs. In some cases, we were able to point out the municipality's responsibility in zoning these areas subject to erosion and flooding from building purposes, and in all cases we were able to let the people who have suffered damage know that this committee of the Legislature was cognizant of their problem.

ANALYSIS OF THE REPORT

The topic matter of this report is presented in 7 divisions, namely:

- (1) Physical Characteristics of the Great Lakes.
- (2) The Great Lakes in Ontario's Development.
- (3) Shore Erosion and Inundation.
- (4) Lake Levels.
- (5) Jurisdictional Aspects of Shore Protection.
- (6) Nature of Provincial Participation.
- (7) Lakeshore Protective Measures.

Mr. Speaker, I shall not attempt to cover all of this report in detail because other members of our committee will deal with various phases of its contents later in the debate. It was my intention to highlight some important points and I would respectfully suggest that the hon. members of this House read and especially study the parts of this report under the headings of:

- Shore Erosion.
- Lake Levels.
- Jurisdictional Aspects of Shore Protection.
- Nature of Provincial Participation.

Our recommendations are summarized in the yellow pages at the front of the report.

In this report are:

- 7 Original Maps
- 25 Plans and Diagrams of Shore Protective Structures, and
- 64 Selected Photograph Illustrations of Problems Connected with our Terms of Reference.

Mr. Speaker, our committee was fortunate in having the services of Mr. J. W. Murray, a civil engineer with the Conservation Branch of the Department of Planning and Development who made a study and brought together engineering data on shore protective measures.

This section of this report is the first of such a publication in this province. It contains the plans, specifications and costs of 24 different types of shore protective works and comments have been made on the conditions under which each is most effective. This section will be of particular interest to lakefront municipalities and riparian owners in the province and it is the hope of the committee that this section of the report at least will be made available to the public.

SHORE EROSION AND INUNDATION

I would like to draw your attention to the map following page 21 which shows the relationship of the physical characteristics of the Ontario shoreline on the Great Lakes to erosion and inundation. It is estimated that, of this total of the 3,000 miles of Ontario shoreline on the Great Lakes, approximately 670 miles are affected in varying degrees to erosion and inundation. On pages 21-30, your committee has set forth cases where accurate data on rates of erosion are known. These rates of erosion have varied from less than 1 foot per year to 21 feet per year depending on the level of the lakes.

It has been made very clear to the committee how little information we have on the factors affecting shore erosion and shore build-up. Little is known on currents in the Great Lakes and how they affect the shoreline. For instance, the Corps of Engineers at Chicago advised that, in one of their studies on the Illinois waterfront, the offshore currents moved as high as 90,000 cubic yards of beach-forming material per year.

Studies of lake currents, particularly the littoral currents, have been lacking in the Ontario waters of the Great Lakes and it is of fundamental importance in the design of sound beach protective measures that they be undertaken immediately.

Your committee therefore recommends:

That since studies of lake currents have been lacking in the Ontario waters of the Great Lakes, and since an understanding of these currents is of fundamental importance to sound beach protective measures, and since the gauging and soundings of the Great Lakes is now being carried on by the Dominion Government, the Government of Ontario through the Department of Planning and Development enter into an agreement with the Government of Canada to undertake studies of currents in the Great Lakes.

There is a similar dearth of data on the effect of dredging lake bottoms and beaches and conflicting evidence was submitted to our committee, a summary of which is found on pages 32-36. We have been careful to study the policies of the American States bordering the Great Lakes and have found wide variations of policy. We have, therefore, recommended:

That the Beach Protection Act be amended to provide that everyone who wishes to remove sand or gravel from the beaches or beds of the Great Lakes be required to obtain a licence, in order that the province may exercise control over all of these operations. Page 38.

That studies be made by the Department of Planning and Development to determine the minimum depth of water and the minimum distance from shore that dredging operations can take place without harmful effects, and that studies be conducted on all existing and proposed dredging operations to determine their effects on shore erosion. Page 39.

That the Beaches and River Beds Act of 1912 be repealed. Page 39.

LAKE LEVELS

I think what I am about to read is the crux of the whole problem. You will find in Chapter 4 our findings on the causes of variations of lake levels. These data are all from the Precise Water Levels section of the Dominion Department of Mines and Technical Surveys and have been thoroughly checked by officials of this department. I want to say at this time that only when precipitation is persistently above average or persistently below average for a number of years does it raise or lower the lake levels. Excessive precipitation in only one year following a period of average or below average precipitation has little, if any, effect on the levels of the Great Lakes, as much of the water is retained in the soil, and the natural storage areas of small lakes and swamps. Similarly only one dry year following years of average or above average precipitation has little effect in lowering the lakes as the land will deplete its storage into the Great Lakes to maintain their levels.

A combination of precipitation and evaporation is the major factor causing variations in lake levels. During the period from 1890 to 1951, the average annual precipitation on the Great Lakes drainage basin was 31.18 inches. Table No. 8 shows the total precipitation for each year in this period and the amount it was above or below this long-term average. From 1900 to 1936, the total of average precipitation in the form of rain or snow would have been 1,154 inches; however, the total of actual precipitation in this period was 28 inches less than this amount. In 1936, and in the 4 years previous, all the lakes, except Superior, which is artificially controlled, were experiencing levels considerably below their averages. Hon. members will recall that everybody at that time was complaining about the diversion of water into the Chicago Drainage Canal.

From 1937 to 1947, a 10-year period, both inclusive, the total of average precipitation would have been 343 inches; the total actual precipitation was 16 inches greater. In 1947, high stages were being experienced on all of the Great Lakes.

The high stages of 1947 were followed by average precipitation in 1948 to 1949, and again excessive precipitation in 1950-1951. During these 2 latter years alone, there was a total of 10 inches of precipitation higher than the 1890-1951 mean of 31.18 inches. The result was that in 1952 the lake levels rose to elevations even higher than the high stages of 1947, and in the case of Lake Ontario, higher than any previous record.

It is interesting to note that during the two years 1950-1951 the precipitation on the Great Lakes drainage basin of 298,000 square miles averaged 17 per cent. above the 1890-1952 average; and from a layman's point of view one can readily understand that with such a large surface, heavy rainfall would easily produce levels that high. In the same 2 years the loss of water to evaporation from the drainage basin was 8 per cent. less than average.

May I say the following has not been given to us as official, but from studies it has been indicated by competent technicians that, under favourable conditions in a dry year, it is estimated that a body of water like Lake Erie could lose as much as 3 feet of its depth due to evaporation in one year; therefore the effects of evaporation and precipitation are of considerable importance in the final analysis on lake levels.

Your committee attaches considerable importance to the above data, and submits that this combination of persistence in above mean precipitation that has been building up since 1937 and accentuated in 1950 and 1951, together with a decrease in the past 2 years of 8 per cent. in the amount evaporated from the drainage basins, is undoubtedly the major cause of the 1952 high water stages on the Great Lakes.

Much has been in the press about the effects of the artificial factors affecting the levels of the Great Lakes. Mr. Speaker, you will find on page 59 a summary of the combined effects on each of the lakes of:

- (i) The Long Lac and Ogoki Diversions.
- (ii) Lake Superior Regulation.
- (iii) Chicago Sanitary Diversion.
- (iv) Gut Dam and Channel Alterations.

I want to particularly stress that the net effect of these artificial factors is measured in fractions of inches, compared to the natural factors which cause variations as great as 6 feet.

EFFECT OF THE PROPOSED POWER DEVELOPMENTS ON THE LEVELS OF LAKE ONTARIO

In the early part of our inquiry in 1952, the committee were deeply concerned over the proposed method of regulation of the flow of the International Rapids Section of the St. Lawrence River to meet the requirements of power and navigation.

During the summer of 1952 the Governments of Canada and the United States requested the International Joint Commission to report on all factors affecting the levels of Lake Ontario. The International Joint Commission accordingly appointed top hydraulic engineers from both countries to study these factors, including Gut Dam and the proposed method of regulation of the flow of the upper St. Lawrence River.

The International Joint Commission has not at this date reported on this reference but at its final hearing at Hamilton in November, 1953, General McNaughton, the chairman of the Canadian Section of the Commission, stated most emphatically that the commission is directing its efforts to obtain the best system of regulation of the levels of Lake Ontario for all the users of this water and for those with riparian rights. The committee has implicit confidence in the personnel composing the International Joint Commission Board and feel that in their wisdom and judgment, they will arrive at a satisfactory solution to this complex problem.

JURISDICTIONAL ASPECTS OF SHORE PROTECTION

Mr. Speaker, the jurisdictional aspects of governments on the problem of shore protection have received much consideration from the committee. We have found that the State and Federal Governments of the United States provide for 2 bases of participation:

- (i) Through research programmes.
- (ii) Through construction and maintenance of protective structures on public property only.

Your committee wishes to point out that, although each of the states bordering the Great Lakes has a very much less shoreline frontage than has Ontario, and that the problems of erosion and inundation are in most cases more acute by reason of the greater density of population and of shoreline development, and that they have tax revenues in excess of this province, it is most significant that not one of these states has established a policy of spending public money on the construction of protective measures for private lands.

Mr. Speaker, you will find on pages 79-82 a very important section of our report, dealing with the use of municipal zoning by-laws to limit the damage caused by erosion and inundation along the lakefront. Our Municipal Act and Planning Act gives the municipalities power to zone and regulate the development of land within their municipality. They are also empowered by these statutes to prevent development of lake-shore property until adequate protective works have been installed.

In many sections of the Great Lakes people have ignored nature's past performances and have built on lands that are naturally subject to inundation.

In the course of the committee's inspection of seriously affected areas, instances were noted of building actually in progress with the lake lapping at the doorstep. The Statutes of Ontario make no provision whereby those who, in spite of these immutable laws of nature and our records of them, build on unprotected land that is within the zone of the natural ranges of lake levels and this committee is strongly of the opinion that no such provision should be made and feel no indemnification should be made out of public funds to redeem their poor investments.

At Long Branch, only a short distance from here, at one time the homes were constructed primarily for summer cottages but quite understandable, housing conditions being what they are in the city, these people winterized their homes and used them all year round. We have seen what a great storm in winter can do. It demolished some 28 homes completely, it piled up on the shore for a width of 20 feet flat, round stone to a depth of 30 inches or more. This damage was caused by a severe windstorm from the east.

We cannot control the actions of Providence, one never knows when such storms may occur. I use that simply as an example.

Afterwards, the local municipal authorities passed a by-law putting into effect a law which is already on the Statutes prohibiting any building there. The result is one which perhaps any local council is confronted with under the same conditions; in spite of that by-law, individuals saw fit to construct homes there and in one particular case, during our visit, the owner was quarrelling with municipal officials who would not allow him to live in the premises so constructed. The by-law was enforced, he was not allowed to live in the home he had constructed himself and from then on it would appear there was no more new construction, because unless they spent a great deal of money on protective works, it was utterly impossible to assure those homes reasonable protection.

Your committee therefore recommends:

That wherever on the shoreline of the Great Lakes in Ontario land is subject to such erosion or inundation as in the judgment of the Minister of Planning and Development makes it unsuitable for private development, the Minister be empowered to restrict or prohibit the use of such land until suitable protective works have been installed.

and

That wherever on the shoreline of the Great Lakes in Ontario the use of land is restricted or prohibited because of the threat of erosion or inundation, the municipality or the Valley Conservation Authority, if such has been established in the area in which such land is situate, be empowered to acquire these lands for park, recreation, or protective purposes, and that power be given the municipalities and authorities to expropriate such lands and that suitable legislation be provided.

The employment of adequate shore protective measures depends on the following factors:

(i) The relation of the cost of protection to the enhanced value to the riparian and adjoining lands.

(ii) The degree to which it is in the public interest to protect the shores of the Great Lakes.

Inasmuch as erosion and inundation on the Ontario shoreline of the Great Lakes has in some years caused widespread and serious property damage and loss, this committee is of the opinion that the Provincial Government should have an interest in its abatement. The degree of this interest is contingent on whether the land is of a private or public nature, and is tempered by the fact that Ontario has approximately 3,000 miles of Great Lakes shoreline on the mainland alone. In formulating recommendations the committee has studied the policies of the Great Lakes States. Each of these states has but a fraction of the length of Ontario's shoreline, and yet no state has spent public money on the installation of lakeshore protective works on private lands.

This report has brought together facts on the costs involved in adequate shore protection. Some measures such as concrete breakwaters will cost up to $500 per lineal foot of shoreline protected.

This report has also emphasized the urgent need for fundamental data concerning engineering aspects of protective measures, and for knowledge of lake currents and beach-forming processes.

I would like to draw the attention of hon. members to page 146 of the report wherein we have set out the details of a particular case where the government of this province in 1951 carried out an engineering survey of the protection requirements for 8,000 feet of shoreline at the Village of Long Branch on Lake Ontario. The estimated costs for the protection of this section was $464,000. Although the type of structures recommended was among the least expensive, the municipality was unable to proceed with this work.

The committee is of the opinion that participation by the Provincial Government in shore protection should initially be limited to conducting studies, amassing information and publishing data on all aspects of shore protection, and it is recommended:

That for the purpose of obtaining information regarding the effectiveness of shore protective structures, all persons who are desirous of constructing protective works along the shores of the Great Lakes file written plans with the Minister of Planning and Development of such works and that no protective works be undertaken until such plans have been so filed.

and

That owing to the lack of published data on the effectiveness of various types of beach protective measures and the conditions under which each is most efficient, the Department of Planning and Development correlate and publish all pertinent available information.

Having in mind the desirability of protecting lakefront property that has a reasonably intense public use, the committee recommends:

That where a municipality or group of municipalities own lands on the shores of the Great Lakes and connecting waterways which are used by the public and are prepared to undertake part of the cost of protecting these lands from erosion and inundation, the Provincial Government may grant financial assistance for the construction of approved remedial measures.

In connection with the construction of beach protective measures there is a great need in the province to have information on the effectiveness of various types of protective structures under different shoreline and lake current conditions. The committee feels that this need can be most effectively met by constructing various types of protective works on Provincial Government properties at selected points on the Great Lakes where erosion and inundation is a problem and it is therefore recommended:

That for the purpose of demonstration and experimentation protective works be constructed on Provincial Government properties at selected points on the Great Lakes and connecting waterways where erosion and inundation is a problem.

The regional nature of shore protection problems generally requires that protective measures for one particular property must be considered in relation to its effects on adjoining properties. The committee has witnessed cases where the protection of one property has been rendered ineffective by the lack of protection on the adjoining properties. Cases have also been noted where the protection of one property has accelerated the erosion of adjoining properties. In view of the regional requirements of effective shore protection measures it is therefore recommended:

That where on the shores of the Great Lakes a group of contiguous, privately owned properties are considered to be an operating unit by the Minister of Planning and Development, and where the majority of such landowners petition the municipality for assistance in planning remedial measures, the Minister of Planning and Development on the application and recommendation of the municipality may make a survey and prepare a plan and report indicating the type of protection required and the approximate cost involved.

To sum up, Mr. Speaker, your committee has dealt with every aspect of its terms of reference and is submitting to this House a report which we hope will be most useful to the people of this province. We have attempted to set forth a basis for provincial participation in shore protection that would be compatible with the fiscal responsibilities of the government of this province. I commend the study of this report to every hon. member of this House.

MR. R. M. MYERS (Waterloo South): Mr. Speaker, I came from the work of the committee with a great affection for all its members and an immense admiration for our efficient and very tactful chairman.

My part on the committee has been to deal with the historical aspects of the Great Lakes. Before I comment on those aspects, may I say I was amazed at the number of people who came before the committee expecting the government was about to grant them compensation if they had suffered at all from erosion. It might perhaps be timely to say a few words about the history of the Great Lakes.

The forerunner of our present Great Lakes system was Lake Iroquois, which began to form about 25,000 years ago.

At the beginning of the glacial epoch, all the eastern part of the continent was 2,000 feet or so higher than is at present the case; and although there were a few well-defined rivers, there were very few lakes.

During the last ice age, Canada and the northern part of the U.S.A. were covered by an ice cap one or two miles thick. The weight of the ice depressed the land until much of it was below the level of the sea. At that period, much of what is now Lake Ontario was an arm of the sea.

After a time, the climate changed and the ice began to melt and retreat. The melted water formed a lake known as Lake Iroquois, the outlet of which was to the south—at one time by way of what is now the Hudson Valley—at another time by the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers.

As the weight of the ice cap was removed, the depressed land rose and the Great Lakes began to form. The outlet to sea for all this water changed from time to time with the rising land and difference in flow. At one time the outlet was the Trent River—later on the French and Ottawa Rivers—and the St. Lawrence came into being about 16,000 years ago. The Great Lakes reached their approximate present form and levels 5,000 years ago.

The beaches made by the sea when it covered what is now Lake Ontario are now 600 to 700 feet above sea level because of the fact that the land rose with the removal of the weight of the ice cap—and this rise still continues, the rate of rise at Kingston now being about one inch every hundred years.

The Great Lakes always have been, now are, and will continue always to be unstable—in fact instability is a quality of all lakes, large or small. The erosion this committee viewed has been going on for thousands of years, and doubtless will continue to do so for a long time to come, although man-made works can doubtless slow down the process.

In conclusion, I shall read a short passage from the diary of Mrs. Jameson written in 1836 and contained in a book entitled Winter Studies and Summer Rambles in Canada. It is a delightful volume, and is in the Legislative Library.

A wide space between the building lots and Lake Ontario has been preserved, very properly, for a road or esplanade, but I doubt very much whether even this will be wide enough.

One of the most curious and inexplicable phenomena connected with these immense inland seas is the gradual rise of the waters; and even within these few years, as I am informed, great part of the high bank has been washed away and a carriage road at the foot of it along the shore has been wholly covered. If this process goes on, and at the same rate, there must be a solid embankment or quay raised as a barrier against the encroaching waters, or the esplanade itself will in time disappear.

That is the condition which existed in 1835 and it is the condition as it exists today.

May I say in concluding my remarks that the very nature of the Great Lakes or any lakes large or small, is instability. As long as we have lakes we will have erosion and it is well for the people who live on lakes to remember that passage. Thank you.

MR. R. MACAULAY (Riverdale): Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer for one or two moments to the City of Toronto and how the Lake Levels Committee Report affects the shoreline of Toronto Island.

The average height of the water in Lake Ontario between 1860 and 1952 was 245 feet. These measurements, Mr. Speaker, are quite important, and the reason for them will become evident, particularly in the case of Toronto Island. Some 245 feet and a few odd inches was the average over that period of time. The highest level occurred in 1952, during flood waters, when the water rose to 249.12 feet. The lowest was in 1934, when the height was 242 feet, so in short Lake Ontario from 1860 to 1952 has fluctuated between 242 feet and 249 feet, with an average somewhere in between, at about 245 feet.

In relation to Toronto Island—this is one of the most important points—no part of the island is higher than 249 feet and yet Lake Ontario itself, in 1952, rose to over 249 feet. At one time, Mr. Speaker, Toronto Island was one long sandbar, joined where the Eastern Gap now is, to the hook or a part of Scarboro. In 1860, or thereabouts, there was a great storm which created a gap.

and after much dredging and taking away of sand at that entrance, a water entrance was driven right through the sand bar. There never was what is called in Toronto the "Eastern Gap" before. It was the result of a freak of nature.

In approximately 1881, there was a report by the Federal Government in relation to the Department of Public Works recommending that that Eastern Gap be closed, but that report was never acted upon. The important point is this, as the report indicates—and I may be going somewhat beyond it—but the effect is that one of the greatest problems facing Toronto Island now in relation to inundation by high waters is due to the fact that the Eastern Gap exists, and I will show hon. members photographic proof in a moment, to which I would ask them to turn.

At one time there was a lateral flow through the gap itself, that is, the water flows along Toronto Island from the east to the west, and carries great quantities of sand, which built up sand bars and wide beaches, which protected Toronto Island. The following is not found as part of the recommendations of this committee because it was not part of our reference to consider it, but in connection with it I wish through you, Mr. Speaker, to plead to the Federal Government on behalf of the City of Toronto—or in any event the part that affects my riding, for my riding borders on the eastern part of the Gap—that the Eastern Gap be closed to navigation for this reason, that out of the Eastern Gap every year 40,000 tons of sand are dredged by the Federal Government, to keep the gap clear. If that 40,000 tons, which seeps into the gap, were to be carried along the beach of Toronto Island, I respectfully submit—and I think the evidence will bear me out—that there would not be the inundation of that land, which occurs every time there is high water.

There are more than 3,000 people living all the year around, in over 600 houses on the island. It is not a question of just a summer resort. There is a great need for that housing, and when the water rises to above 249 feet, which is the height of the highest section of the land, it is quite clear that even if it is a foot or two below that, people are walking on soggy ground.

In 1926, the Joint Board of Engineers said that if the water went above 248 feet in Lake Ontario, it had reached flood level. Now in 1952, as I say, it went over 249 feet and there was a tremendous flood level created as far as Toronto Island is concerned. I submit if the sand were not dredged out of the Gap and the Gap was closed, Toronto Island's problems would be considerably lessened.

Would hon. members of the House do me the favour of turning to page 31 of this report, and they will see a photograph which immediately precedes page 31. This is an aerial photograph of the Eastern Gap and hon. members will note the map, which it immediately follows. It shows how the sand drifts into that channel and chokes it up, and why it must be dredged out. As I said before, the photograph comes immediately before page 31, that is, the photograph appears on the right-hand page.

My very small contribution in dealing with this matter, Mr. Speaker, is to make that recommendation and, in closing, to thank the chairman of this committee for his example of humility, kindness and leadership, which he gave this committee. I think we are all very grateful to him. He is indeed a very fine man. A great honour was conferred upon me, and it was a great pleasure for me to have been permitted to be associated with hon. members of all Parties of this House, on that committee, and I am very grateful to the government for allowing me to sit on the committee. I feel I have learned much about the problems which face all the residents along the borders of this lake, and I sincerely hope the recommendations which have been given so much attention by this committee, may merit some consideration by this honourable House.

MR. A. J. CHILD (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, in joining with my colleagues in reference to the report, I would like to say I am very pleased to have had the opportunity to sit on this particular committee. I believe we can be considered one of the most travelled committees in the Legislature. We covered pretty well all the territory between Gut Dam in the St. Lawrence River to the Ogoki Diversion in the Lake Nipigon area, at the Head of the Lakes. We also covered the area between Buffalo and Chicago on the American shore, discussing with officials and residents in all of those areas the various problems and the results of some of the protective works which they had installed.

I am very pleased also to say that since the committee was formed, we have not had any complaints of high water, although possibly I should mention that Mother Nature has been working with us very well.

The pressing demands which were made on the International Joint Commission, and which were supported by the public who were affected, seem to have had considerable influence, and the commission saw fit to set up a Board of Engineers to study, for a period of 10 years, the problem of controls which will go into effect at Iroquois, regulating the locks in the St. Lawrence River. This is to be worked in conjunction with the hydro development. This particular board—and I think it is very important that this be noted—will be able to put into effect the regulation governing the level of the lake, and this is over and above any influence which hydro may have. In the past, hydro has been subjected to considerable criticism in respect of their efforts in this respect, but once these locks are installed, it will be solely a matter for the Board of Engineers.

I think our second recommendation, regarding the Beach Protection Act, will be of great interest to people at the end of the lake, in the Niagara and Hamilton area. That was one of the points strongly brought out by residents in that area, who protested the removal of sand from the beaches and the dredging from the lakes. We were given many examples of how dredging operations, carried out even at considerable distance offshore, resulted in sand bars—upon which these people had relied for many years for protection—in the event of storms being eventually washed away, or sucked away, as the case may be.

Most of us feel somewhat relieved in that area, as hon. members will recall it was the area around Hamilton which bore the brunt of the storm in 1952, when many of our home owners had their property washed into the lake. The figure of 245 feet, although not absolutely official, has been agreed upon and I strongly support that figure, in view of the fact the 92-year average, which my colleague just mentioned, works out to just 245 feet plus the odd-inch. Being at the end of the lake, we receive the brunt of the storms, and the water quite frequently rises to a height of an extra 2 or 3 feet. Had the water level been set at a much higher figure, say, 246 or 247 feet, it will be easily realized that we would then have a water level at that particular point somewhere in the neighbourhood of 250 feet, which is far above disaster level.

Once the level is set, it will enable us to put into effect protective projects which will, we hope, be successful in building up our shores again, both as an added measure of protection and for recreational purposes. Most of the people there, at the present time, I believe, are looking forward to better St. Lawrence control regulations, which have been very unsatisfactory. They have put in various types of protection, but unfortunately due to the variation in the lake levels during the past few years, they find that one year they are completely lost in water, and a few years later they may be so far out that they are receiving very little good from the protection to their property.

I would like to say in conclusion that I am very happy to have been associated with a very unique and fine report. I believe it is about the only one of its kind with such a wealth of information which will be available to the people when they are in difficulty.

I would like to join with my colleagues in congratulating our chairman, who gave us very good leadership. It has been a pleasure to have worked with him.

MR. W. MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Select Committee appointed to study the lake levels in our Great Lakes, I want to add a few words to what has been said by the others, and to express my appreciation to the chairman of our committee, the hon. member for Gengarry (Mr. Villeneuve). I think the success of any committee depends on the action of its chairman, and I know that the little success which I think this committee had, can be attributed to the capable and vigorous manner in which the chairman carried out his duties, and conducted the meetings and public hearings.

Two years ago, when the House was in session, newspaper pictures were passed around and we found that tremendous damage had been done in Ontario at that time by erosion and inundation.

In my riding of Essex South, Mr. Speaker, the Point Pelee onion marsh of approximately 600 acres was entirely inundated by the high water in Lake Erie. Some 40 homes, as well as farm buildings, were completely surrounded by water to a depth of 4 feet. Farm implements, seed potatoes, and fertilizers stored in the barns were completely ruined. And it was felt, at that time, that the flooded ground would be in no condition to produce a crop that year.

Along the shore of Lake St. Clair to the north, conditions were equally serious, and many high-class residential areas were completely flooded.

The high water, combined with March winds, was biting large chunks from the shoreline around the entire country. To a greater or lesser degree, the same condition existed along the shores and properties adjacent to the shores of all our Great Lakes.

This Select Committee was appointed as a result of the damage, and went into the matter of lake levels very thoroughly. We realized, as one of the hon. members has mentioned already, that erosion and inundation are not new problems, but they are problems which have been with us for a long time. I think once we made up our minds we were going to try to gauge the effect of nature, we must be prepared to face the vagaries of nature also.

In Essex County, our committee called meetings in the City of Windsor, and in the southern part of the county, in the Township of Mersea, and, as in other places, all the people interested, as well as municipal officers, were invited to the meetings to express their views, and to give us any practical advice they may have gained from past experiences with high water.

Mr. Speaker, one fact which stood out more than any other in all our meetings was the blame which was placed on the Ogoki diversion, and the Gut Dam for the high levels in our lakes, but from all the information we were able to obtain—and our inquiries and studies, as I say, were quite extensive—we found that the real factors affecting lake levels were evaporation and precipitation.

Mr. Speaker, I believe in Essex County, since our committee met there, steps have been taken to fight this high water. In Mersea Township, around the onion marsh, which I mentioned, they have just finished building a sea wall which, I think, will protect them for a long time in the future. To the north in Essex County, around the shore of Lake St. Clair the municipalities have finally realized that when water comes over and onto their land, and the land is low, the only way they can get it off the land is to pump it back into the lake, and they are doing that, since they have started. I am sure they will be able to tackle this problem much better in future.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, with our terms of reference and our recommendations in this volume, and with the 6 chapters dealing with descriptive and technical details, and the 6 chapters dealing with lake shore protective measures, the 35 maps and diagrams and the 23 tables which we have included, this single volume contains more information than has ever been published at one time on this subject before.

Hon. members who served on the committee will know what a lot of work it was, and I do hope that some day in the future this will be ordered to be printed, so that the information may become available to all those who may be interested.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario) : I would like to compliment the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Villeneuve) on the able way in which he presented the report to the Legislature. It was a pleasure and a privilege for me to be associated with him and the other members of the committee. I am quite sure of one thing: It was a committee which was entirely non-political, animated by a sincere desire to do a good job for the people of Ontario.

The hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) mentioned that the level of Lake Ontario in 1953 was 249.2 feet. Mr. Speaker, that was the year in which the Select Committee was appointed, and the significant fact to notice is that the level of the lake has decreased since that time. The hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) was much too modest to refer to that.

On the question of erosion; the committee was greatly impressed with the protective measures undertaken both by individuals and municipalities. A large amount of money has been spent however on protective structures which were quite ineffective. No thought had been given to the location of currents or prevailing winds. Consequently in a very short space of time those structures toppled into the lake.

I think the committee will remember that during our visit to Chicago, we found the city had laid a stretch of sidewalk along the lake front about 12 feet wide, for a distance of 1½ miles, which had cost the people of Chicago $1½ million. It was laid in 1951, and the committee was there in the fall of 1952. In that year the whole thing was a heap of rubble. It had collapsed and gone into the lake. We saw much evidence of public and private money being wasted in building different structures. And, therefore, I would like to stress, Mr. Speaker, the recommendation which was read to the House by the hon. member for Glengarry (Mr. Villeneuve), appearing on page 88, that the department should secure the services of experts, so people could submit plans, and obtain approval of their projects from people with some knowledge of engineering.

Mr. Speaker, we were in complete agreement with some of the representations made by people with property on the lakefront which was suffering from the effects of erosion, and the high level of the lake as it was in 1953. At the outset, it was quite evident these individuals were opposed to the construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway, and to the Ontario Hydro Commission's project, because they feared these would aggravate their difficulties. But I am pleased to say that with the sympathetic attention given to the problems of these people by General McNaughton, the chairman of the Canadian section of the International Joint Commission, their fears have now been allayed, and I am sure that the other members of the committee would like to join me in paying tribute to a very able gentleman in the person of General McNaughton. I do feel that Canada and Ontario are well represented by a person of the calibre of General McNaughton.

MR. H. A. BECKETT (York East) : It is my pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to join with other members of the committee in extending thanks to our worthy chairman. He certainly showed great leadership, and "cracked the whip" and made us work hard. I would also like to express appreciation of our worthy secretary, Mr. Crown, who did very valuable work for the committee. I want to tell the hon. members something about Scarborough Township. Possibly you do not know where it is. It is at the eastern end of the City of Toronto, and extends 10 miles along Lake Ontario. Quite a bit of it has gone into the lake in the last 10 years, and that is one of the points on which the committee has expressed its views.

If we had had a Planning Board prior to 1946, it would have created a green belt along the shores of Lake Ontario. We then, perhaps, would have preserved those lands and avoided the situation which has grown up in the last few years, as a result of which quite a few houses have slipped down the bank into the lake. We are now trying to remedy that situation. As a matter of fact the Township of Scarborough is considering today a local improvement scheme whereby we could build groynes out into Lake Ontario, charge a percentage of the cost to the township as a whole, and the balance to the properties which will be directly affected.

Unfortunately it is difficult at this time to get contractors to take on the work. That is due, not to high water, but to low. When the water was high, the contractors were able to bring their barges in and unload the rock which weighs, they say, from 4 to 6 tons, to build groynes in the lake. So that scheme is not being proceeded with at this time.

Scarborough Township and its famous Scarborough Bluffs are perhaps a little different from much of the shore line of the other lakes. When I was a boy I used to swim in Lake Ontario off Scarborough Bluffs. I want to tell hon. members, many years ago, there were sand bars about 200 yards out in the lake, and as the hon. member (Mr. Macaulay) said about the lake level at Toronto Island, a large part of that island was, in fact, built up from sand from Scarborough Bluffs.

AN HON. MEMBER: Shame.

MR. BECKETT: As a result, the waves, instead of breaking on the sand bars, now break at the foot of the cliffs. This has been going on since 1910 when two great sand suckers came out every day and sucked up the sand from the Scarborough Bluffs, and took it away, and built up the island. The washing of the waves at the bottom of the cliffs has tended to take away all the trees and the protection we had on those banks. We have had very great erosion along Scarborough Bluffs. Hon. members must remember that the Scarborough Bluffs extend for a distance of 10 miles.

The formation starts at water level by the City of Toronto, creeps up to 300 feet about half way down the shore line and then drops down to a low level again, and it is a big problem to try and protect such a shore line. Some form of protection, if it could be worked out, might be provided by the planting of trees or shrubs. As a matter of fact, one man at the lake has planted poison ivy which has tended to conserve the soil, and prevent it from slipping into the lake.

There is a legal matter in connection with the construction of groynes. There was a case recently reported in the Ontario Weekly Notes, concerning a man who strung hydro wires from the mainland, over to Stoney Lake. He did not get a permit. A plane struck those wires, and he was sued for damages. The Supreme Court held that he had caused an obstruction to navigable waters, and I would say that the construction of groynes is something that juts out into navigable waters. That is a question to be looked at very carefully from the standpoint of getting proper permits, and even if you do get a permit, you still might be liable for damages.

However, Mr. Speaker, I think that this report is well worth consideration and study and that a great deal of good will come out of it for the benefit, not only of those who live along the shore, but for all the province.

There was one feature which came out of the sittings. One day we were told that the earth was tilting, and that the tilting of the earth had the effect of raising the water level. The gentleman who told us was asked, "What difference does it make if you live on the axis or a little removed from it?" His reply was, "No matter where you live, everybody tilted now and then."

Mr. Speaker, it was a great pleasure for me to serve on the committee and I hope that a great deal of good will come out of the discussion.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): In common with the other hon. members who have spoken in this debate—if I may call it so—I would like to commend the chairman of the Select Committee for his fairness in dealing with the matters under discussion.

I have only one or two comments to make. This is rather natural, after all, in view of the debate which has taken place on this committee's report. I would recall to the minds of hon. members the fact that when this committee was appointed, there were two or three factors, and special conditions in operation at that time. There were floods in some sections bordering on the Great Lakes, down around Windsor, and in various parts of the province, and I think the government felt at that time a committee should be appointed, and that it should study the matter from all aspects and from all angles.

There was, on the part of many people who have suffered damage, a feeling that the Provincial Government or the Federal Government, or a combination of the two governments, should in some way indemnify them for the losses they had sustained.

In the committee's examination of this problem we were unanimous in the decision that no government, either provincial or federal, could be expected to come to the financial aid of those who might suffer from the elements in respect of their houses or other property.

Anyone reflecting on that for a moment will perceive, I think, that it would just be impossible financially for any government to indemnify against losses of that kind. And the committee, I think, was strengthened in their decision by the fact that in the United States, where the density of the population is greater than it is here, and where the ability to pay is perhaps just as great, if not greater than obtains in this country, the authorities at government levels do not pay for damage of this kind unless it is damage to public or government property.

So I think we can accept at this time, as the decision of the people in this province, that we could not be expected to indemnify these people who suffered damage from storms and erosion.

I just wanted to make one other point. I think the government has a responsibility, and an opportunity, through the Department of Planning and Development, to advise people who live along the shore lines of our lakes as to the appropriate type of protection they might employ against the rushing waters of Lake Ontario, Lake Erie, and other lakes. At the present time there is wide variation in the methods used in trying to fight off the water of the Great Lakes by people who live along these lakes and hundreds of thousands, yes, millions of dollars, have been wasted by people who own property along the lakes, in building some sort of a cement or earth structure, without any knowledge as to whether it is the appropriate type of structure, one capable of holding off the water and protecting their property. I would say to the government and to the House that the Department of Planning and Development has an opportunity here, and a field for exploration and experimentation, and it can, I think, by using the resources it now has in its possession, put itself in the position of being able to advise the people along the lakes of this province as to the best type of construction, and the best methods they can employ to protect their property.

In the United States, as one hon. member said this afternoon, we found evidence of varying types of structures, and in most cases it was evident they were not effective. I think we in this province could render a great service by putting our Department of Planning and Development to work on government property which borders on the lakes, and having it construct various types of structures, in order to decide which would be the best type to meet particular conditions.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that as far as I am concerned I have not only enjoyed working on the committee, but I feel that in the report tabled today there is an abundance of information, and that among the recommendations made, there are those which the government can accept with benefit to the people of this province.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I am sorry I cannot start by saying I enjoyed working with the committee and that it was a pleasure to have been on it, because I was not on the committee.

If I rise now it is only because I was the only one who was opposed to the appointment of the committee, and I feel I should say just a couple of words—not to inject an unpleasant note. I do not think I will do that, and I certainly have no desire to—I enjoyed, as did every other hon. member, listening to the report given by the very affable, friendly, and universally-liked member for Glengarry (Mr. Ville-neuve), the chairman of the committee.

I must say, Mr. Speaker, that I did slip up on one or two occasions on the precipitation data in some areas. But I will see the hon. member privately, and get the correct figures. I may say I was not the only one. I sent a note to the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) and asked him to help me with the figures I missed. But he was as helpless as I.

I believe, as do all hon. members, that the result of the work of the committee can be of some value, and I rise to appeal to the government to utilize whatever is constructive in the report, to make it worth while. It is true, Mr. Speaker, that when this committee was appointed, I was the only member who voted against its appointment, not because I had any objection to the committee, but I maintained that there was nothing the Governments of Canada nor Ontario needed to know, which could not be ascertained right there and then.

On that matter of lake levels, I suggested that all the relevant material facts and data were in the hands of the two governments, but this House thought otherwise, and the committee was appointed and they have done their duty, as do all hon. members of this House, when they are appointed to committees.

There is, of course, a question as to why this report, which was ready a year ago, was not presented earlier but I imagine, there are some very high politics involved, and I am not going to embarrass anybody by stressing this question. However, it is a question.

The report was available exactly a year ago, and it is not the fault of the committee, nor of its chairman, that we and the public at large were deprived of the valuable contents of the report. But, as I said before, this is a matter of high politics, and I am not going to press the government on that score.

I can only say this, Mr. Speaker, that aside from the valuable contents of the report, it contains a very definite lesson for us. That is this: When you are in a government, and faced with a situation such as this government faced two years ago, when hundreds and hundreds of property owners—lake shore residents—were clamouring for help because their houses had been inundated, and had been partially or totally destroyed—when you face such a situation, there is a way out, and to paraphrase an old saying, Mr. Speaker, I think we could say that when you face Hell because of high water, you appoint a committee to study the high water. Then you await until the high water has receded, and the old levels re-established, and even the cries of the people who suffered die away.

And so I hope, Mr. Speaker, the report will not be pigeon-holed. I hope the labour of the members of this committee will not have been lost, but they will be of some benefit in bringing protection to people to whom we have failed to give protection in the past.

I felt, Mr. Speaker, that these few words ought to be said on this occasion.

HON. MR. PORTER moves the adjournment of the House.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, MARCH 5, 1954.

2 O'CLOCK, P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I am very glad to welcome the students from the Jesse Ketchum School, the Central Technical School, the Port Hope High School, and the Stratford Teachers' College.

We welcome those who may be the teachers of those who are in this Chamber this afternoon, and we are glad to have them come to our city, and to attend the Legislature, as it may give them some idea of how the laws of the province are made, and how we try to carry them out, even though perhaps with some of them we do not entirely agree.

We are very glad to have these students as our guests here today.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Nickle, I beg leave to present the third report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Nickle, from the Standing Committee on Private Bills, presents the following as the third report:

Your committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments.

Bill No. 16, An Act respecting the City of St. Catharines.

Bill No. 26, An Act respecting the City of Toronto.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I would like to direct a question to the government.

The Globe and Mail, on the 4th of this month, carried a news item which was headed "Ontario To Back Consumers' Plea For Gas Import."

The news item reads, in part, as follows:

Ontario Government representatives will go to Ottawa early next week to support the Consumers' Gas Company's application to bring United States natural gas to Toronto, it was learned at Queen's Park yesterday.

Mr. Speaker, I ask the government whether, in view of the importance of this intended action on its part, they do not think it would be more appropriate to take this House into its confidence, since the House is now in session, and bring the government's definite policy on the natural gas question to the House, before going to Ottawa to support a measure which may not coincide with, nor be helpful, in the long run, toward achieving an objective which the majority of the House may hope to achieve.

Doesn't the government think, before committing itself by going to Ottawa in support of the Consumers' Gas Company's application, it should not ignore the House but should at least attempt to ascertain the sentiments of the hon. members of the Legislature in regard to this question?

I will leave the answer for the government, instead of my answering them.

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, if the hon. member can answer the question himself, I do not know why he asked it—whatever the question may be. I do not know what the question is.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, if the spokesman for the government does not know the question, I will have to repeat it.

MR. SPEAKER: We have had a long and involved question once, and I am sure the hon. members of the House do not want to hear it again.

HON. MR. PORTER: I will attempt to answer the mixed statement and question, as best I can.

MR. SALSBERG: It was not mixed at all; it was very clear.

HON. MR. PORTER: In the first place, there has been no decision made to go to Ottawa next week in regard to this matter. If any appointment is desired in Ottawa next week, we shall be quite ready to go and discuss any questions in connection with the gas pipe line with the federal authorities there.

I may say the decision as to whether gas shall be imported from the United States to assist the Consumers' Gas Company to build up a natural gas market over the next 3 years, which will put them in a position to absorb a large quantity of Alberta gas when the line is completed—within the next 3 years—is a question, and the decision will only be made by the Ottawa Government. The Ottawa Government has complete jurisdiction as to whether gas should be imported into this country or not.

Our position at the moment is simply that we have, in collaboration with the Ottawa authorities—the hon. Minister of Trade and Commerce, who is charged with this problem—made very exhaustive enquiries into the possible markets for Alberta gas, once the pipe line is completed, and I may say at this stage it is quite apparent that during the intervals between the present day and, perhaps, 3 years hence, it will be essential, in one way and another, to build up as large a market as possible in eastern Canada for the consumption of natural gas. It is a question as to whether that can be done from resources within this province, or whether it may be desirable and essential to provide for some importations during that period.

We have made enquiries which have been of a considerable breadth, and of an exhaustive nature, and are prepared to lay all the information we have before the Ottawa Government, in order to assist them to come to some definite and practical conclusion in the matter.

MR. SALSBERG: When will you lay it before the House?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know that this is the proper time to debate this matter. It is a matter of information for the Ottawa Government, which we have agreed to obtain and supply.

MR. SALSBERG: Why not inform the House of your policy?

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: We would like to know the government's policy.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

ON THE AMENDMENT TO THE REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. J. P. ROBARTS (London): Mr. Speaker, in rising to join in this debate, I would like to add my congratulations to those by other hon. members in this House, to the mover and seconder of the motion, and on the very excellent speeches which they delivered.

I would like also to congratulate the hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby) on his election, and to add my personal welcome to him, upon being admitted to this Assembly.

Mr. Speaker, I am aware of the very wide latitude, as far as subject matters are concerned, when speaking in this debate, which is permitted to the hon. members.

I have read the address delivered by His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, and I found several points which I considered to be of great importance, and of interest to the residents of my riding of London, particularly to that great area of Ontario, commonly referred to as "Southwestern Ontario."

The hon. member for High Park (Mr. Cowling) assisted me in one of the points which I would like to impress upon the government, when he referred to a forecast for a new parks policy in the province, and he referred to an area, known as "The Pinery." I think I may be able to give this House a little more information in regard to that part of Ontario than the hon. member for High Park.

The Pinery is a stretch of property on the eastern shore of Lake Huron, extending from Grand Bend in the north, to Port Franks in the south, and is the last piece of land deeded by the Crown to the Canada Company in the last century, and which was sold by the Canada Company to various settlers. As I say, Mr. Speaker, this is the last remaining piece of property of that grant.

The property itself is quite valueless for commercial uses; it has been burned over several times, and is covered with scrub and sand, but it does represent the final stretch of shoreline left, from the Bruce Peninsula southerly to Sarnia on Lake Huron.

It is my opinion—as I know it is an opinion held by many hon. members from Southwestern Ontario—that the government would be well advised to acquire this property, and hold it as a public park, on behalf of the industrial and rural inhabitants of Southwestern Ontario.

We are anticipating, Mr. Speaker, a very large increase in population in that part of Ontario. In fact, the population is increasing every day, and if this property is permitted to be subdivided and sold in lots of 50 or 75 feet frontages on the lake, I maintain it will be lost to our people forever, and I think we owe it to the present industrial population, and that which we shall have in the future, to preserve at least some of this heritage, which should be made available to be enjoyed by all our citizens.

The London Chamber of Commerce sparked this move in the first place. I have attended many meetings with various municipal bodies, and I know the hon. members for both the Lambtons, Middlesex North, Middlesex South, and Huron, at one time or another, have endorsed this project, and I am sure I am speaking on behalf of those hon. members when I say I do hope the government will see fit to do something about this area, before it is lost for all time.

Mr. Speaker, I noticed also in the speech delivered by His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, reference to the development of the hydro-electric scheme in the St. Lawrence Seaway. I realize the hydro-electric scheme has nothing to do with the waterway, as such, but I think it is part and parcel of the same project, and I am very happy to see that they are proceeding with it. I feel the seaway will make a tremendous difference to Southwestern Ontario.

Eighteen miles south of London, we have a place known as Port Stanley, which has had a long and varied history in connection with Southwestern Ontario.

Last year, there was constructed on the dock side of Port Stanley, 5 grain elevators, which shipped soya beans, coarse grains, and wheat for export by water.

I understand there are another 12 going to be constructed this year, and it appears to me this will provide a new era for that part of Ontario. After all, if we could ship from Port Stanley directly to Hamburg and various ports in Europe, the saving in transportation charges is going to be immense, and I can foresee that the port of Port Stanley will serve the very wealthy and rich counties of Elgin, Middlesex and Kent and I can also foresee that in due course the St. Lawrence Seaway will lead, in the same manner, to an immense increase in the shipment of products from Southwestern Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, in taking part in this debate I would feel very remiss in my duty if I did not pay tribute to this government, to the government in Ottawa, and to the many far-sighted men in my City of London, in connection with the construction of the Fanshaw Dam. During the last 3 or 4 weeks we had a series of flash floods in London in the Thames River. I remember very well in 1937, which was the last time we had serious floods in London, watching people leaving their flooded homes by boat, and afterwards seeing them shovelling silt out of their front windows. I saw houses where every stick of furniture was lost, besides household goods and clothing, and I know, professionally, that the flood has affected the real estate market in that area of London ever since.

That flood in 1937 was caused by heavy snow falls combined with very heavy rains, and rising temperatures, and we had the same situation in London during the last few weeks. The city engineer of the City of London, and some of the experts from the Department of Geography at the University of Western Ontario, have stated had it not been for the Fanshaw Dam and the control exercised over the flood water, we should have had a similar situation this year.

Mr. Speaker, I feel that in terms of money and in the avoidance of discomfort and human misery, the Fanshaw Dam has paid for itself and will be there for a long time to come. It might be of interest to hon. members to know that the large lake which has been formed by this dam is being put to a very wide recreational use. It is covered with sail boats in the summer time—no power boats are permitted—and in the winter it is used for skating, and, I believe, there was some ice boating there this past winter. It is proving to be of tremendous benefit for the whole area of Western Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I want to speak for a few moments on a subject which I consider to be of general interest to the whole province. It does not concern my riding particularly, but I feel this is a problem we are going to have to face. The problem is simply that of our older citizens who are forming an increasing percentage of our population. According to the Canada Year Book—hon. members will excuse me if I read—in 1881 there were 15 adults in the province for every person aged over 65. Today there are 7 adults to every person over 65, and by 1971 it is estimated there will be about 5 adults to every person over the age of 65.

This in itself is certainly not a problem. In fact, I would consider it to be a matter for general congratulation that the medical profession, and the research activities generally, have been able to control disease, and that you and I are going to be given the opportunity to live a good deal longer than our parents and grandparents did. In addition, the death rate, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has declined from 16.3 deaths per 1,000 between 1921 and 1925 to 8.6 deaths per 1,000 in 1952. So hon. members can see the death rate is decreasing, preventive medicine is making strides, and we are gradually developing population living to a greater age.

That in itself is not a problem, but the problem which arises is the question of the employment of these older people. To illustrate my point, between the years 1946 and 1953, the number of workers over 65 in the labour force increased by 9 per cent. During that same period the members of our population aged over 65 increased by 31 per cent., which means an increase in the number of people not gainfully employed. These figures are taken from the commercial letter of the Canadian Bank of Commerce for the month of February, 1954.

The next question is: Why are these older workers not acceptable to industry generally throughout Canada? This is a problem which has been given a tremendous amount of study in the United States because their number of older people among the population is much greater than ours and they realize this is going to be an extremely serious question. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that a great many of these older workers are caught, in what I might call, an "actuarial vise." In other words, actuaries set up a retirement scheme to which the worker and industry contributes. According to figures, and according to actuarial plans, the worker must retire at the age of 65, otherwise he will disrupt the complete scheme. It does not matter whether he is able to continue working or not. In order to fit into the pattern he must retire at that age. Another reason for this development, I believe, goes back to the depression days of the 30's when there was continuous pressure to get rid of the older workers in order to provide jobs for the young men, coming along and supporting families. That idea has carried over to the present time and, of course, in our economy today it is quite false.

There are several other prejudices against the older worker. Many employers say that an older worker is not adaptable to new techniques, that he cannot learn fast. Employers believe that an older worker tends to be absent more than a younger man, and they also feel that he is more prone to accidents. Various research projects have proved every one of these prejudices to be absolutely wrong. As a matter of fact, the only place that a young worker is superior to an older worker is in a job requiring brute physical strength, and 9 times out of 10, an older man has enough know-how to overcome that disadvantage as well.

It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, that when these men are in the prime of life and are able to go on and work for another 8 or 10 years, that they should be permitted to do so. Instead they are forced to retire on a pension that invariably means a pretty sharp drop in their standard of living. Apparently we are always going to have to live with inflation, so we can expect that no pension will be worth as much as it was originally as the years go by. Thus we have the spectacle of our older citizens forced to spend the declining years of their lives not gainfully employed, with nothing to do, and living on a much reduced income. All in all, it is a relatively sad picture.

The next question, of course, is what can be done about this. It seems to me, Mr. Speaker, we must arrive at the point where we will treat these men as individuals, and not as mere ciphers. It may be there are men aged 65 who should retire for physical reasons, but if a man is able to work, and wants to work, I say he should be permitted to work. It may be that a man who continues to work could not expect certain benefits past a certain age. He may lose hospitalization and other insurance benefits, but he should be permitted to continue to work—to earn his living—and feel that his pension might be that much higher when he needs it, because he did not use it until his youthfulness was really at an end.

I am afraid the alternative will be that the ever-increasing section of our population which will not be employed in a productive capacity. Nobody can deny that this group is becoming larger and larger every year, and I am sure that as time goes on, they will become an increasing burden on our taxpayers, and they themselves, as I have pointed out, will be living rather unhappy, mal-adjusted lives. I feel, Mr. Speaker, that the government might be able to take the lead in some action on this matter, because the retirement age for civil servants is 65. It seems to me that everybody wants to suggest that Select Committees of this House be appointed, but in all seriousness, I say that this whole question does merit very close examination and that such an examination could be made by a Select Committee of the House. Such a committee could collect information which would be of tremendous value to private industry, because fundamentally this is where this situation will have to be corrected.

What little research I have done has revealed to me nothing but misconception on the part of industry as to the position of the older worker, and such information would be of value both to the government, with its own large labour force, and to private industry, providing the information was disseminated. We might then be able to "scotch" once and for all, the idea that a man's usefulness ceases when he reaches the age of 65.

MR. H. F. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine): I hope, Mr. Speaker, you will pardon me if I wander a little in my speech this afternoon, because I am making a speech now that I was supposed to be making next Thursday.

It is good to be back in this Chamber. It is good to be back with all the hon. members, including the opposition, because we are all such a friendly group here. Men are like boys, I suppose. Men are just boys who have grown up.

I have listened with great interest to the hon. members speak on the great developments in their ridings, gold mines, pulp mills, uranium mines, hydro developments, etc. Well, not a thing has happened in Woodbine riding, except we have more termites this year than we had last.

MR. SALSBERG: That is a matter for the government.

MR. FISHLEIGH: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) says that is a matter for the government. I have tried and tried, and when hon. Mr. Kennedy was Minister of Agriculture I wrote to him, and he very kindly put me in touch with a Professor Osborne from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, who went back to Guelph after promising to try and procure enough money so as to isolate two houses infested with them, but as yet I have not heard from him. I have contacted the present hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas) but to date, no action has been taken. It seems, according to the professor, there are many kinds of termites, but they all live on cellulose material or dead wood. The Woodbine variety is one-eighth of an inch long, and red in colour. They live underground, and when they hit the air they die. They go up a wall in a small tube of clay about the size of a lead pencil. Once in the house it is almost impossible to exterminate them. They can eat the floor away. Occasionally they leave a little sawdust on the basement floor, if there are millions at work.

How they got into Woodbine riding, nobody knows. It is thought they came there in sand thrown off as ballast from some foreign ship. The professor told me that once a year the termite colony sprout wings and they have one queen, and they take to the air and follow her. I suppose that is the way they got here. Let us suppose that the queen takes off from Woodbine with her billions of followers and starts circling Ontario and she looks down and says: "What city is that down there?" and the boy termites say: "Why, that is Ottawa!" The queen says: "There is a great deal of dead wood down there. But there are too many Liberals." So they go circling round, and then she looks down again and she says: "What city is that?" The boys say: "Why that is Lindsay, where the hon. Prime Minister lives." The queen says: "Boys we are going down." Zip, zip, zip, and they land in Lindsay. They eat up all the churches and the city hall.

Do you think we would get any action then to destroy termites? Do you think, Mr. Speaker, that we would get a little action in Woodbine riding? Why Mr. Murdock told me you could make your speeches here, and nothing would be done about it. It took me 2 years to learn he was absolutely right.

Talk about bridges disappearing in the north country. Why in Woodbine the termites almost destroy houses.

I am now going to bring to the House one or two new suggestions, though I do not suppose anything will be done about them. One is the quality of Canadian bacon sold to the Canadian public. When the hon. members' wives cook it in the morning, the smell is so bad you lose your appetite. It has been in cold storage so long there when you eat it, it tastes of saltpetre.

I fear if we keep serving this bacon to the public in Canada, it will soon get tired of eating bacon and eggs, and will just eat eggs.

The other day we had some very fine bacon for breakfast, and I asked my wife whose make it was, and she told me it came from Denmark. What do you think of that? Canadians ship thousands of pounds of bacon abroad, but they have to send to Denmark if they want good bacon. I think it is time we investigated these storage places to find out how long the bacon is kept there and how it is cured, so the people of Ontario can have their own bacon.

I could give a long discourse on how to raise pigs because I was on a farm in days gone by, and one of my chores was to raise pigs. We had a litter of pigs, and it was my job to fill the trough. There was only room for 4 pigs to eat, and we had 6. We had a man to do that work, but he quit, rather than make a new trough a little longer. It became my job to feed the pigs. It is remarkable the amount of swill a young pig can eat, and feeding them really keeps a boy busy after school. And pigs are not easy to raise as you would presume.

If a pig's tail sticks straight out, that pig is not very well. That is probably due to black teeth. If your pig has black teeth that is probably due to bad feeding—too much swill and not enough hard grain. In order to get rid of the black teeth, you have to get the pig on its back and then two or three people have to keep it on its back, which is no easy job, while the black teeth are pulled out. After the black teeth are gone, the pig will have a curly tail again, and be restored to health.

That was my experience raising pigs on the farm.

MR. SALSBERG: I think it is easier not to eat pigs at all.

MR. FISHLEIGH: There is another subject which I think should be taken up by the government. Far too many people in Ontario and Canada are going to Florida every winter. It seems to me that Ontarians are becoming soft and are "hot-house flowers." All winter long people have been asking me "Have you been down?" A fellow asked me that, waiting for an elevator, and I said, "No, darn it, I am going up." You cannot do any business in Toronto because people are either going or coming back from Florida—wearing themselves out. I do not propose to stop this nonsense because it is healthful for the very old, but it seems to me that to counteract this outflow we should develop our own assets here and promote Ontario.

What could be prettier than the Blue Mountain at Collingwood? The skiing and other winter sports, the sun on the snow. It is invigorating to young and old—a perfect health resort. The government should promote a hotel up there and other places. We should have Americans coming in here by train, by plane and by bus to ski. Glamorize it—spend a little money! I had an advertising man tell me that for $1 million he could make 75 per cent. of the men wear bow ties. When I was growing up I used to eat about a peck of apples a week. There are as many vitamins in an apple as an orange, but through advertising, Sunkist people have made Canadians the largest consumer of oranges per capita in the world. During the war the women said, "You can take everything away from us but oranges." As a result, the apple orchards of Ontario are not what they used to be. I believe that Ontario should be promoted for winter tourists. If it is nice here in the summer, it is just as nice in the winter. This tourist business would go a long way to rehabilitate Bruce and Grey Counties, both of which have 6,000 less residents than they had 50 years ago.

Speaking on housing, I will agree that Bill 80 opened up large tracts of land for housing. The building of the by-pass highway also opens up isolated territory. I believe that the Ontario Government has been extra good to Toronto, and I hope the people in this great city realize the important part the government has played. Housing is entering another phase. Just after the war homes were built by small builders who built 5 or 6 a year. Later this was stepped up to 50 per year. Now, we have the entry of large English and American builders who are undertaking 500 or 600 per year, such as the Trust Steel Co., The Taylor Woodrow Co., with Swiss apartments such as at Church and Yonge Streets, and large 14-storey apartment houses.

This company, one of the largest in England, is planning now to build a plant for making electricity with atomic energy. It is to be the only plant in the world which makes steam from atomic energy—enough to generate light for a city of 60,000 people.

Housing has changed, and also apartment houses. We have huge Swiss apartments going up between Church and Yonge Streets, just north of the Arena Gardens, 18-storeys high. We have nothing in this country to touch the appearance of these Swiss apartments. They do not even have basements in them. They say, "We would not have our women go down in the cellar to do their washing. They must do it upstairs where there is light." They have the lower apartments efficiently turned into rotundas, where you can sit and chat with your friends.

The whole complexion of building and accommodation is changing, and it changed still more last night. I heard while in a hotel, that a man had $300 million to invest under the National Housing Act in mortgages in Canada. The only problem was that the money is coming from the United States. He is taking this problem up with the authorities, but he loses 3 per cent. If he could stabilize that, so that after 20 years, when the money fell due, he would not lose the exchange, he would invest the money in Canada.

It is unfortunate at the present time, in this respect, that our money is at a premium. If it could be stabilized, we would have all the money we need, and money is the only thing which is holding up housing today. There is no money available for housing. The country is expanding so rapidly that there is no money for housing.

Money could be made, I know, but that would be inflation, and would throw our whole economy out of kilter. So it is uneconomical and impractical to have inflation, and we will have to make some agreements so that people bringing funds in will be protected.

MR. SALSBERG: Government mortgages.

MR. FISHLEIGH: Government mortgages is another form of inflation, in the sense that you are just borrowing money and paying it back.

At the present time the demand for housing has changed from $30,000 and $25,000 class of homes to about $12,000. People want homes today at about that figure. The demand for the other class has been filled, but there are thousands of people still coming into this city at the rate of 10,000 a month.

I remember when I was on City Council, we had a motion to stop people coming in. We were going to stop them at the station and send them back to whence they came. We made such a laughing stock of ourselves, we had to stop it, and since then we have let as many come in as wanted to.

That is the reason for conditions as they are today. We have seen people flocking into this city. It seems impossible to secure accommodation for so many people.

The demand now is for the $12,000 home, Mr. Speaker.

If any hon. member has an old house, now is the time to sell it. An old house, on a 17 foot lot, 35 or 40 years old, can be sold for $12,000 or $13,000 and the vendor can then go to the outskirts, and buy a brand new one, on a 40 foot lot, with all the modern facilities they are including in new homes now, for the same amount of money. The only difference is, one is in the city and closer to transportation, and the other is further out. Rent control has caused that condition.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: How wide is that lot?

MR. FISHLEIGH: A 40 foot lot. A 40 foot lot is wide enough for anybody, because the extra cost of a larger lot, means they have to pay another $500 for the lot, and the purchaser would much rather have an old car or a TV set, than the extra 10 feet which the government is trying to force upon him.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I agree with you, 100 per cent.

MR. FISHLEIGH: Good. I was going to go off on a tangent, and I am very thankful I did not have to do it. The point is there are hundreds of people in the city needing homes. I feel sorry for the young man with a large family. No one wants him in their apartment house, and no one will rent him a home. He cannot save enough money to make the large down payments required. Consequently, what happens to him is this:

An agent will advertise an old down-at-the-heel house with an outhouse, worth about $7,000 for $12,000 with $1,000 down, and the poor fellow has to live somewhere, so he buys the house. The vendor immediately discounts the mortgages and buys a brand new house with all the conveniences for $12,000. As a matter of fact, this also applies to almost all old houses. You can sell a 35-year-old semi-detached house, on a 17 foot lot, for $12,500 in the city, and buy a brand new home on the outskirts for the same money. This is due to the rent controls, as you have to pay extra for possession. In the United States, when controls were removed, the older houses went down in value, and I believe the same thing will happen here.

In regard to the second mortgages which the Provincial Government instituted after the war, to benefit the returned men—Ontario has not lost a cent on them. I said last year that they should be reinstated, and I say so again! I had many phone calls and a number of letters expressing the hope that the government would take action. The need is still great. We read in the press of fires, and then it is divulged that 4 and 5 people were living in one room.

There are many people who say a new house is no good. Actually, a new house is a better house, in my opinion, today than the house built 30 or 40 years ago. They did not have the inspection they have now. Today, houses are inspected by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, by the township or city in which they are built, by the mortgage companies, and so on. A house today is well inspected, and the working men today do a much better job with better materials. They have proper plumbing, oil heating, good shingles and so forth. The workmanship is much better, and all-in-all today you get a much better house than you did 30 or 40 years ago.

A year ago I recommended the government institute land assembly, and sell the land at a profit to the builders. At that time I sent copies of my speech on this matter to a number of people who should be interested. Now that we have land assembly, I have had a deluge of people condemning me for it. Some are our own hon. members here today; others are my own partners, who claim land assembly will ruin our business. My reply was that I had to put the people of Ontario first, before my own personal profit, and the land assembly scheme is the only answer to mass housing. I do believe that the lots should sell at a profit and the profit applied to fire halls, police stations, etc.

Malvern is 20 miles from the centre of the city, and you would have to build a city the size of Guelph and put in all the facilities. According to Mr. Gardiner, you could sell the lots for $200. That is utterly impossible. Those lots will cost $3,000 when we consider all the services must go in. They will have to be paid for now, or in 20 years' time, but the cost is there. The Thistletown proposition is much better because it is closer to facilities, and can be developed more cheaply as you do not have to build fire halls, a city hall, public libraries, or such things which are necessary in a modern city.

Regarding 40 foot lots, I would like to say a word on this subject. Builders do like 40 foot lots. They are trying to force 50 foot lots and a master plan on Scarborough. The reeve out there wants to have a sewer put down in Highland Creek, and the Mayor of Metropolitan Toronto said: "No sewer, unless we have 50 foot and 60 foot lots and the master plan."

They do need a master plan out there so far as roads are concerned. I will admit, but when it comes to subdivisions for industry, a man from the United States wishing to establish an industry might go out and look at a farm and say, "I will take that, it is just what I am looking for." They will arrange for sewer, water, and roads, and although the farm might have been zoned as "residential," they go to the local planning board and change it to "commercial," and everybody is happy because it is changed immediately.

However, if they have to go to the Municipal Board to have it changed, it takes so long to put it through that the prospective purchaser buys some place else.

In North York they have a master plan which was put on before the Metropolitan Council was set up. They made all the land industrial so that the builders could not build houses — if they built houses they would need schools. All this will have to be changed.

They might not want gas stations on Yonge Street, so they put through a by-law that gas stations must have lots 200 feet in depth, and they know, "there is no such animal." They do not make lots that deep as a rule, so there will be no gas stations.

I read in the paper recently that Dominion Stores had been stopped from building a large marketaria at the corner of Dufferin and Lawrence Avenue, because a small shopping centre one-and-a-quarter miles away learned that this corner was not zoned for commercial purposes. The reeve of the township found it was very cumbersome and difficult to take it before the Municipal Board to have it changed. As a result, the Dominion Store has been stopped temporarily until the zoning by-law is changed.

These are cases where zoning by-laws and master plans do not always work, and I think we should leave Scarborough and the eastern part of Toronto to work out their own salvation, so far as industry is concerned. However, as I said before, so far as roads are concerned, a master plan is vital.

But the Metropolitan Council will succeed. It took 100 years to build the Toronto City Council to the efficiency it has today, and it will take many years to weld the Metropolitan Council into an operating body, but its efficiency will attract industries from all over the world. The City of Toronto, in my estimation, is very well managed. The Welfare Department, the Works Department, the Parks Department, are very well managed, and it will take the Metropolitan Council a long time to reach the same efficiency which has been worked out over many years at the City Hall. There is no reason why, as time goes on, it should not work out, and I believe it will.

Before closing these remarks, I wish to draw your attention again to the poor acoustics in this Chamber. The press boys have to lean forward striving to hear what is said. The children who come and sit in the gallery only stay a few minutes as they cannot hear. During the inaugural my wife and daughter sat in the corner over there and they could hardly hear a thing. You will remember I advocated a speaking system to be put in this Chamber several years ago, similar to the one in the House of Commons, London, England. What has happened? The Liberals in Ottawa installed the same system in the House of Commons. It is very difficult to hear the hon. Prime Minister when he sets the date of the next meeting, and considering the amount it will cost, I think we should have speakers in this Chamber. The hon. Leader of the Opposition has a loud-speaker of his own. Everybody can hear him. Those of us who had the privilege of hearing the service at the Coronation in Westminster Abbey heard every word the Queen said. Once again may I impress upon the government, the necessity of loud-speakers in the Chamber.

In closing, I would like to say that the hon. Cabinet Ministers and the employees of the Province of Ontario have done a very fine job. We have a surplus of $58 million from a total revenue of $350 million. It is a very large amount. That is not due to "back benchers" like myself, but the efforts of the employees of this great Province of Ontario, at Queen's Park. They all work hard and have done a good job. It is also due to the efforts of the hon. Cabinet Ministers, some of whom work even to the detriment of their health.

For my part, I wish to thank them most sincerely for a job well done.

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, in continuing the debate on the Speech from the Throne, first of all, I would like to congratulate the mover and seconder of the address, both of whom I consider made very able speeches.

I want to compliment you, Mr. Speaker, on the manner in which you conduct the proceedings of this House. There is no doubt about it, I believe you are really "tops" in the position you occupy.

I do not want to take up too much time. I was called out in a hurry, and had a great many things to attend to, and had no time to prepare any data, but I would like to say a few words about the riding in which I live.

In 1945 I was elected to this House. At that time, the riding I came from was neglected. Roads were in a deplorable condition; only 5 per cent. of the people had hydro, and everything seemed to be in bad shape. However, today things have changed so much with the good help of the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) who has seen fit to give us plenty of good roads, but we still need a few more, which I do not want him to forget. However, he has done very well, all-in-all.

I would like to say something about hydro in my riding. I worked with hydro 35 years ago. In the good old days there were no such things as trucks. We had wagons and sleighs. If we had heavy materials to move, we either had to load it on to the wagons, or build sleighs of our own to transport the material.

I know something about it because I have followed it closely for a good many years, and the changes which have come about in the building of plants have been terrific as you can appreciate, when you see the way they build them today, as compared to the way it was done long ago. In those days, everything was done by hand, but nowadays a tank will come in with loose cement, and it is dumped, and is picked up and whisked across the river quickly and easily. In those days it was hard on the fingers handling the material, but the improvements have been terrific.

When you see, as I have seen, the growth of hydro, you appreciate the work which has been done. Many of those men who were there 35 years ago, are still carrying on, and I want to say a good word for them.

I would like to mention Forgan, Mitchell, etc., those fellows whom I consider to be the best construction men in the world. They have given their lifetime to this job, and deserve a little commendation from someone, because too often they are unnoticed there, and I think someone ought to say a few words on their behalf.

Young men go up there, and take a great interest in their work, and the first thing you know they are old men, are broken down, and no one to say anything on their behalf or the work they have done. So a word here should be spoken in their behalf. These men are the best in their trade, and could command the highest wages on any project, any place, and I think the hydro has been lucky to have them.

I want to say a word about the progress of hydro in my own riding. When I came here, there were only 5 per cent. of the people with hydro, and now we are up to the "Jones" and there are 55 per cent. who have hydro. We are getting on an equal footing with the rest of the province, and I feel very happy about the whole situation.

I want to thank the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) for what he has done.

There is more to come, but I know we can count on him. I know he can do it.

I also want to say a few words in favour of the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley). I have had deputations come to me about labour, and they all assure me the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) handles them well. They say he is a "comic" with them, and laughs with them, but does something about it, and they go home with a good taste in their mouths and everything is fine. I could speak of every other hon. Minister but I will confine my remarks to those whose departments affect my riding the most.

I think the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is a very commendable Minister. It is a pleasure to see the way he takes care of the old people, the children, and the disabled. We do not have very many complaints about his department, and I think he is really keeping abreast of the times.

I will not say too much about the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar). We all know him very well in my riding, and it is not necessary to mention his name but very little. He has always been a friend of our section of the country.

Possibly, in speaking about the different members of the Cabinet, I may have missed some of them, but those of whom I have spoken, are the ones to whom I like to give a little praise.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is one thing I do want to mention. I have been accused by one of the newspapers of calling Toronto "Hog Town." I was called a "pip-squeak politician." I do not even know what it means. This came from the Globe and Mail, and if I were to make a guess as to the meaning of "pip-squeak," I would guess it was an insignificant sort of fellow, who does not amount to very much. I have been accused of making this "crack" by Frank Tumpance—and I will name the gentleman. I do not think he is entitled to say what he did about me. I do not, and never did, like the words "Hog Town," because I live in Toronto for at least 75 per cent. of the time, and I like Toronto very much and think a great deal of it.

But I do feel the people in Toronto think they belong to a privileged class, and that our government should not give them more privileges than anyone else, and should not give them a larger subsidy than is given to other places. In fact, Toronto gets twice the subsidy the people in my riding get in my own town. That looks a little peculiar to me. I do not see why the people of Toronto deserve this.

This very building in which we are sitting at the moment is assessed by the city, and the government pays taxes on it, and yet we have a million acres of land in Renfrew County, also owned by the government, which has sold the timber, and acreage for tourist resorts, on which the government has paid no taxes.

There is one other thing, Mr. Speaker, which concerns the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas, the vice-chairman of the Hydro Commission (Mr. Challies). In my riding we have 4 large power plants, 2 of them supplying a considerable portion of the power available, and they have been assessed at $40,000. But, the Hydro Commission itself assesses them; they do not allow our assessors to do that.

In the meantime, when they are doing any constructing work, what they do to our roads is a shame, and if it were not for the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) who provides the necessary funds to repair the roads, they would be in very bad shape.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, the people of Toronto are a privileged class, and I am sure that they are well looked after. I should think that every seat in Toronto would be occupied by a "Tory" because there is no doubt the government is leaning over backwards to help them.

I will not say very much more, Mr. Speaker. But I never have had it explained to me why the City of Toronto should get $4.00 as a subsidy, while the other parts of the province only get from $1.50 to $2.00. I have been told by different people that there are more poor people here. I doubt that very much. I do not think there are any more poor people here than in my town, comparing the populations.

I would like to say in closing, Mr. Speaker, that I appreciate all they are doing for me. Conditions are on a much higher plane. We are very happy down in my riding about the way things are going. The people are satisfied. We all come here to do a job, and we appreciate the consideration and the help we get from those whom we contact here. After all, we are all here on the people's business. As a matter of fact, I think I have a large Liberal vote in my riding. The opposition sent a representative to Ottawa with a majority of between 2,000 and 2,500, and I came here with the same majority when it was my turn, so there must be a number of Liberals who voted for me.

MR. SALSBERG: Or a number of "Tories" voted Liberal.

MR. DEMPSEY: Yes, that is true. Perhaps some of the hon. members may think there is something wrong down there, but I do not agree.

I want to congratulate the government on the way they are carrying on the business of the province today.

There is one person I would like to mention.

We had a man who was born in my riding, by the name of "Art" Mills, who apparently has become mixed up in something concerning the roads, and one headline appeared, saying that he had stolen $5 million.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, that he was always a well-respected citizen of the Town of Renfrew, and neither myself nor many people down there, believe that he ever stole $5 million or even $5,000.

I do not think a man should be publicly condemned before the entire story is told. I was told the other day by the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Wardrope) that the whole contract only amounted to $12 million, so I will say that "Art" Mills was "quite a man," if he stole $5 million. I do not believe any newspaper should "blast" anybody before they know all the circumstances.

What will happen to this man, Mills, if he is found not guilty? Even then, his family will have to take all the "dirt," which he has to take, and all the insinuations about his father being in jail, and other things of a like nature, none of which is very nice. I believe, in my soul, that "Art" Mills did not steal $1 from anybody. I know that he has had plenty of opportunities to go "crooked," but he would not do so.

I would like to defend Mr. Mills, and I do hope that his reputation will be "whitewashed," and I would like to see the department take him back, and even give him a better job, because he has come "through the mill" the hard way. The people to whom I have spoken are unanimous in thinking he did not do anything.

I was sitting in my hotel the other evening and a man came in and sat down beside me, and he said: "Is this not awful about 'Art' Mills?" He said: "I was with him on the Alaska Highway, and I did not go up there for my health. I went up there as an inspector of culverts, and I thought I would try a bit of bootlegging, and I offered Mills $50 for a bag of sugar to make a little brew, and he said: 'Get away from me; I am not selling any sugar.'"

I will conclude now, Mr. Speaker, but I do want to thank the government of the day for what they have done for my riding, and I assure you I cannot make very many complaints.

Once again I thank you.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston), moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

Motion agreed to.

THE TERRITORIAL DIVISION ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 32, "An Act to amend the Territorial Division Act."

He said: All these bills will go to the committee.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE OPERATING ENGINEERS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. DALEY moves second reading of Bill No. 54, "An Act to amend the Operating Engineers Act, 1953."

On section 1.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr Speaker, I would like to have the hon. Minister tell us if he intends to send this bill to the Labour Committee.

HON. MR. DALEY: I had not intended to, Mr Speaker, because it is such a simple bill. It is to make more certain regarding two little points in the new bill, which was approved last year, and which went through the committee at that time, at which the operating engineers and others were present.

These two items are simply to clarify the provision dealing with re-examinations, that is, where an operating engineer fails on his first examination, the intention is to make sure he is given another chance.

The second provision is to secure the certificates which were held before this Act came into being. We do not want them discontinued, and we feel that an operating engineer, who possessed the required qualifications, still remains an operating engineer.

That is all there is to this bill, and I see no point in sending it on to the committee.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not want to take up much of the time of the House, but there is a matter of principle involved here.

Last year, when the engineers bill was passed and sent to the committee, the union of stationary engineers was not aware of the bill which was before the House. It was found the department had notified the head of the union in the province, who failed to notify the local organization, with the result there was a great deal of ill feeling engendered, not directed toward the government, nor the Legislature, but amongst themselves.

We had to agree, as a result of that, to postpone action on the bill, to give the union an opportunity to study it and bring in their recommendations. I think that is a good, sound principle with a bill of this character, even though it may not be too important, that we give the union every opportunity to acquaint themselves with the contents of the bill, and give them an opportunity to appear before the Labour Committee and express their opinion.

I would strongly urge the government to agree to that procedure.

HON. MR. DALEY: What the hon. member says is partially correct. There was a group last year, during the formulating of the bill, which came in later and intimated their particular group did not know of it. Therefore, we held it up. At a further meeting, they came in and were satisfied. So the bill is, as I say, a complete bill. We might really have gone along without correcting these two little things, but I wanted to be sure there was no possible chance anyone could take a man's certificate away from him, and that he would not be placed in an unfortunate position if he failed on his first examination.

MR. SALSBERG: Did the unions know about it? Were they made aware of the bill?

MR. DALEY: I cannot say.

MR. SALSBERG: If that is the case, why should we not notify them now and give them the opportunity to appear?

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I have to take some responsibility when I bring bills in here, and I am advising hon. members that all there is in this bill is what I have intimated. There is no change in principle. There is no necessity for any further debates.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker—

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: I have not spoken yet, I have only asked questions.

MR. SPEAKER: I will rule the hon. member has entered into this debate, and has certainly spoken.

Order. It is the pleasure of the House the motion carry?

MR. SALSBERG: No.

Motion agreed to.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 55 intituled, "An Act to amend the Department of Municipal Affairs Act."

MR. SALSBERG: Is this going to the committee?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes.

Motion agreed to.

CONVEYANCING AND LAW OF PROPERTY ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 57 intituled, "An Act to amend the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act."

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER: Bill No. 57 will be referred to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE PARENTS MAINTENANCE ACT, 1954

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 58 intituled, "The Parents Maintenance Act, 1954."

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I would like to speak on the bill. I am a bit worried about it. I have had some experience with this bill on another occasion, when it was amended. The history of this Act is one of continuous amendments which tend to increase the powers of the government, and its agencies, to coerce members of a family into doing something which they feel they cannot do, or punish them for failing to do what they claim they are unable to do. The original Act, which came into being in 1921, was very simple. It specified, and I am quoting, that: "A parent shall be deemed to be dependent, when, by reason of age, disease or infirmity he is unable to maintain himself."

That was the definition at the time. The purpose was to make children responsible for the maintenance of parents in those circumstances. Later, in 1936, an amendment to the bill was brought in which added the words: "Or where he is destitute."

Mr. Speaker, I recall distinctly appearing before a committee of the Legislature, and arguing against the amendment. I pointed out that the enactment of the amendment would result in a great deal of hardship to many younger members of families in the province. I was not the only one, Mr. Speaker, who argued against the amendment. There were other groups represented before the committee, who pointed out the same fact—that it was designed to force younger members of a family to assume responsibility for their parents during the period of depression and mass unemployment.

And I recall full well the Minister of Welfare at the time replying to me, and to others, with an assurance that the government had no intention to enforce the law against such persons as I mentioned. Our experience, however, was that they did enforce it, precisely in the manner in which we feared they would.

What happened, Mr. Speaker, was that in a home where a father was unemployed, a young boy or girl would be compelled to contribute a share towards the maintenance of the home, if the boy or girl worked. And I stand before this House and speak without fear of contradiction when I say that this piece of legislation resulted in scores, if not hundreds, of youngsters leaving their homes, often with the approval of their parents, because of the strict manner in which the law was enforced. It was quite common under that Act for a girl earning $10 or $12 a week to be asked to contribute towards the maintenance of the family, that it left very little for herself.

MR. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Why should she not?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) asks why should she not. I want to remind him that it was precisely the groups for which he is supposed to speak in this House, who opposed this provision. It was bad because it left that young boy or girl almost nothing on which to keep themselves in a position similar to that of other young boys or girls who were working. Otherwise their parents were denied relief. And very often the children left home rather than continue to work. It was much too strict, and I am much concerned lest the further amendment we are dealing with should result in undue hardship on people who are least able to bear it.

On grounds of principle. I do not question the correctness of a measure, about the responsibility of a member of a family taking care of other members, when they need it. Of course, that is what is done. Most people are decent and most people do the decent thing. There may be a very rich person who can afford to take care of his parents, but may refuse to accept that responsibility. But it is not a person who usually gets the law after him. My recollection, in the period of unemployment, was that it was the young worker who had the law after him, and that will also apply in the future.

I am especially worried about this amendment because it comes at a time when we are faced with rising unemployment in the province, and it almost looks as if the law is being tightened up to provide the authority for stricter enforcement of what appears, on the surface, to be a very innocent and just sort of legislation. It is meant to force. I suggest again, those in lower income brackets to take on more than they are able to bear for the maintenance of their parents, before relief and other assistance is given, and I am not in favour of the amendment.

HON. MR. PORTER: I wish to answer the criticism by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). I do not know whether he has read section 4 of the bill . . .

MR. SALSBERG: I have.

HON. MR. PORTER: . . . which provides that:

where a parent is dependent, information may be laid before a justice of the peace and the justice of the peace may permit an examination or may issue a summons against one or more sons or daughters and that if during the hearing it appears that the parents are dependent and that one or more sons or daughters have sufficient means to provide in whole or in part for the parents, the judge or magistrate having regard to all the circumstances of the case may require the payment of a sum not exceeding $20 a week.

Mr. Speaker, if as the hon. member suggests, the principle of this bill is sound, I must say that he can have no objection, because the word "destitute" is included. If it is the proper thing in our society to impose some responsibility upon children of parents, who can afford to contribute to the support of their parents, I do not know why there should be any exception, just because the parents are destitute, and not ill as a result of disease or infirmity.

The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has made some broad statements about cases with which he is familiar, which occurred some years ago. Of course, like many of the broad statements which the hon. member has made, it might be well if we had the opportunity of examining some of these cases in detail to see of what they consisted.

The principle of the bill is a sound principle which has been on the statute books for many years and has served a good and a sound purpose.

MR. SALSBERG: A harmful purpose.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member has spoken on the second reading of this bill, and has no further right to speak to it.

MR. SALSBERG: The "hon. member" will be governed by Mr. Speaker and not by the hon. Attorney-General.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am submitting that is the rule with regard to second reading.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister is not even the House leader.

HON. MR. PORTER: That may be.

MR. SALSBERG: Remember it.

HON. MR. PORTER: I will remember it. The hon. member will do well to keep quiet.

MR. SALSBERG: It is hard when you speak.

HON. MR. PORTER: There are other words I could use which have not as many syllables as "keep quiet," but which are not quite parliamentary. This bill involves a sound principle, which no Legislature should shirk. It has served a useful purpose in a number of cases in the past, and when the amendments, as they are, and the general revision are passed, I would expect they would serve an equal, or even more useful purpose in the future.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER: This bill will be referred to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE BEES ACT, 1954

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 59 intituled, "The Bees Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to, second reading of the bill.

THE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETIES ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 60, "An Act to amend The Agricultural Societies Act."

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Minister if this legislation was asked for by the agricultural societies?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: It is in conformity with their desires in this respect?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Yes. This was discussed in Agricultural Committee last week.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE PLANT DISEASES ACT, 1954

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 61, "The Plant Diseases Act, 1954."

MR. SALSBERG: I am sorry and I apologize for rising again. I want to say a word or two on the bill. I have a right to, but I have been getting on my feet too often.

Regarding the nurseries which are dealt with in this bill, I am sure that I will be expressing the sentiments of a great many people when I say that the average person is not protected sufficiently against "fly-by-night" nursery operators who sell plants and seeds which are advertised as "miraculous, astounding, and 'flabbergasting'." The innocent purchaser sends $1.00, $2.00 or $3.00, and gets packages of seeds or bulbs, which turn out to be the very opposite of what were advertised.

I am ready, in this instance, to support the government in instituting some control over the operation of such companies.

There are undoubtedly reputable well-established concerns in this business.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We get the same thing in connection with mining stocks.

MR. SALSBERG: Many can be relied upon. It is the firms which usually advertise by the use of the catchiest phrases, and with the most promising pictures. The innocent person, usually at this time of the year, sees those pictures and falls a victim. I have done it on a few occasions. You send your money and get in return something which does not live up to any of the promises made.

Either the Association of Nursery Operators will exercise some control in the matter of advertising, or the government should introduce some legislation which will provide a degree of protection to the public which I think is now lacking.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member may have been fooled. I am sure the hon. members of rural ridings would not be.

MR. SALSBERG: I am speaking of city people.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE LIVESTOCK AND LIVESTOCK PRODUCTS ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 62, "An Act to amend the Livestock and Livestock Products Act."

MR. OLIVER: Is this bill going to committee?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Yes, they are all going to committee.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS QUIETING ORDERS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 70, "An Act to amend the Municipal Corporations Quieting Orders Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL DRAINAGE ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 71, "An Act to amend the Municipal Drainage Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE VITAL STATISTICS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 72, "An Act to amend the Vital Statistics Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Before the adjournment, I would like to make doubly sure that when these bills come back, we will be able to speak on them. We have permitted them to go to the different committees, but it is understood when they come back and are reported by the committees, we can debate them again. I think that was understood some time ago.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. Prime Minister made that statement.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That assurance was given by the hon. Prime Minister the other day. We will be able to consider them, clause by clause, at that time.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 3.52 of the clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

MONDAY, MARCH 8, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Motions.

Introductions of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I wish to make a statement in connection with the alleged irregularities in construction contracts in the Fort William division of the Department of Highways.

I wish to inform the House that search warrants were executed by the Ontario Provincial Police at 10.30 a.m. this morning at the business premises of the following contractors: Tomlinson Brothers Limited, Hacquoil's, Hewitson Construction Company Limited, H. J. McFarland Construction Company Limited, Bergmann Construction Company Limited, and Wolfe Construction Company Limited.

The examination of the books and records seized is being made by Messrs. Clarkson, Gordon and Company, under the direction of the Provincial Auditor.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I would like to ask the government at this time when it intends to convene the Committee on Public Accounts, so that the committee may organize and busy itself with the conduct of the business with which it may decide to deal?

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, the Committee on Public Accounts can, of course, be called by any member of the House, including the hon. member for St. Andrew. However, it is our intention, in any event, to convene the committee within a few days at which time the Provincial Auditor will be available to make a statement.

Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I desire to table answers to Questions 3, 5, 7, 10, 11, 13, 15, 16, 19, 24, 25 and 27.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to ask the hon. Prime Minister if he could expedite the tabling of agreements between the province and the federal government in relation to the Trans-Canada Highway?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: That was asked for, and it would help the House, as a whole, if it could be tabled.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, it will be.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting reports by committees.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Report of the Select Committee appointed to study the problems of reformation of delinquent individuals, and all phases of custodial questions, and the place of reform institutions therein.

Mr. Speaker, I hasten to express on behalf of the Select Committee on Reform Institutions, appreciation to the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. members of this House for the confidence reposed in the committee.

Personally, I wish to express appreciation for the privilege of association with the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition (Mr. Oliver), the Leader of the CCF group (Mr. W. J. Grummett) and all members of the Select Committee on Reform Institutions, and for their valuable contributions of professional knowledge, business experience, constructive interest and co-operation.

The hon. members of the committee (other than myself as chairman), were indeed an excellent selection of hon. members, especially well qualified for the duties involved by their professional qualifications and associations in daily life, in which they have earned distinction.

Each member was assigned to a definite responsibility for which he was very well qualified.

Upon entering an institution for inspection, a study was made and a report furnished to the committee after such inspection; the hon. member for Grey South (Mr. Oliver) on "farm administration, hogs and beef"; the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) on "dairying and general farm practices"; the hon. member for Renfrew South (Mr. Dempsey) on "lumbering"; the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), a barrister and solicitor, on "discipline and segregation"; the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle), also a barrister and solicitor, on "commitments and sentences"; the hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Leavine), a medical doctor, on "medical and dental services and diet"; the hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer), an Anglican clergyman by profession, on "spiritual matters, release and reformation of inmates"; the hon. member for Parry Sound (Mr. Johnston), because of his experience in the Active Army

Provost Corps, was assigned the duty of "custodial care and punitive aspects"; the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde), due to his experience in his own line of endeavour, as well as his other business experience, was assigned "quarries" and "industries"; the hon. member for Carleton (Mr. Morrow), who is a school principal, was assigned "education, vocational training and recreation"; all of whom are recognized leaders and authorities in their own fields of endeavour.

All members of the committee interviewed each member of the staff in each institution, and also a number of inmates. We inspected the institutional buildings and equipment, and looked into the cause of riots, where same have occurred.

To the hon. Minister of the Department of Reform Institutions (Mr. Foote) I wish to express my appreciation, as well as that of the committee, for his interest, his co-operation, as well as that of his department, and his friendly attitude, impartiality and non-interference with the work of the committee.

To the Deputy Minister, I wish to express our appreciation for his co-operation and contributions of detailed knowledge of the department. The committee would have me congratulate the hon. Minister on his good fortune in having such an experienced officer, one who at all times has been noted for his loyalty to his hon. Minister and his department.

The committee would have me thank the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) for his co-operation and the valuable assistance of Mr. Magone, Q.C., Mr. Common, Q.C., and Mr. Coughlin. The hon. Attorney-General correctly interpreted the wishes of the committee, and anticipating its recommendations, increased the personnel of his staff of probation officers. He has very rapidly increased the staff since the committee commenced to function.

Mr. Speaker, the committee has had a "free hand." There has been no interference or direction from the hon. Prime Minister of this province, and I am delighted to present an unanimous report. Copies of the report will be placed on your desks after the completion of the explanation.

I am pleased to inform the House that all meetings of the Select Committee were public, open meetings, other than when examining inmates, and in the preparation of the report. We advertised in the daily papers asking any organizations or persons who wished, to appear. Some availed themselves of the opportunity, and presented briefs and various viewpoints.

My sincere thanks to my colleagues for their loyalty, co-operation and unselfish service and efforts for many days—yes, and many nights. We spent long hours in our work, and many of the hon. members devoted their time to the work of the committee, to the detriment of their own personal affairs. Some were able to attend nearly every sitting. We regret it was not our good fortune to have others as often as we would have liked, but I wish to assure you, Mr. Speaker, and the hon. members, that throughout all our hearings never, at any time, under any circumstances, was there any partisan colour, discussion or decision.

The motion for an investigation by a Select Committee moved by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has been justified, and the affirmative decision of the Legislature for an inquiry, we believe, was well merited.

Appreciation is justly due to our very efficient secretary, Mr. Bruce Byrnes, and to our Hansard reporter, Mr. Ralph Sturgeon, for their good services and co-operation. It was their efforts and co-operation which made possible the presentation of this report on time today.

The committee would have me express appreciation to the John Howard Society, Elizabeth Fry organization, Canadian Council of Churches, Salvation Army, and the organizations of the Roman Catholic faith, and many "after-care" associations, which it was our good fortune to contact. They presented briefs and rendered us a great service, and their attendance at our meetings was greatly appreciated.

I would like at this time to express sincere appreciation of the goodwill, co-operation and kindness we received at the hands of the officers of several American institutions. Also, to give thanks to another group seldom heard of, that is to former inmates of our institutions who came forward of their own free will to express appreciation of treatment they had experienced in our institutions. We gave them every evidence of willingness to listen to what they had to say, and we were glad to have their contributions.

Mr. Speaker, as you know, we wrote to every hon. member of the House for his opinion, asking if there was any institution which we should inspect in his riding. For the response which members made to this request, and for their co-operation, we are grateful. A great and valuable service has been rendered to Ontario by the press. The city and provincial papers kept the public well informed on the subject matter of our endeavours.

Mr. Speaker, the committee inspected 3 training schools operated by the department, 5 Roman Catholic training schools, 4 industrial reform schools, 3 industrial refuges (Roman Catholic), 1 industrial refuge at Mercer, 4 reformatories, 8 district jails operated by the department and 22 of the 45 county and city jails. We were at the Don Jail, we were at Hamilton, and also had the happy experience of going through the Peterboro City Hall and seeing the splendid facilities in that city. Some of these institutions we visited a number of times. Delegations of our committee visited 10 institutions outside of Ontario: Quebec, New York State, Michigan, Ohio, Detroit, Pennsylvania. Delegates also visited the Toronto police courts, and the detention home on Jarvis Street. The hon. member for Dufferin-Simcoe (Mr. Downer), while in England for the Coronation, made an inspection of a number of institutions in the Mother Country at his own expense. All the officers of our institutions were examined separately so that no officer suffered the embarrassment of his senior officer being present.

As we walked through the corridors, I met a number of inmates who could call me by my first name. I met a number of persons in prison who expressed their desire to see us. When they did so, the secretary listed their names and they were called. When they came before the committee, some were given a cigarette and put at their ease. One man stayed for 1½ hours while we listened to his story. We told them they were free to complain or to discuss any matter which was on their minds.

Mr. Speaker, like others on the committee I was deeply stirred on many occasions to see young boys and girls starting out in life with one strike on them. There were some with more. In our jails, industrial farms and reformatories the committee saw young men, middle-aged men, aged persons—all somebody's sons and daughters. And often we remarked to one another as we saw them filing out to work: "Yes, but for the Grace of God, there go I." That was the mental attitude of your committee. Never at any time in any circumstances in any institution we inspected was there a jeer, a groan, or a resentful attitude. Not a discordant note was expressed by any of the inmates. They were glad to see us and to know we were looking into conditions in the institutions, and many of them, of their own free will, expressed appreciation of the treatment they were receiving.

The committee was honoured, through the good offices of the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) to attend a conference with Chief Justice McRuer. We had the benefit of the views of a number of judges, magistrates and sheriffs and some recognized authorities on penology.

The women's organizations have taken a deep and constructive interest in all matters pertaining to the problems of reform. As a committee we appreciate their interest. We gave consideration to the various ideas they presented. When hon. members receive the report they will, on examining the index, see the many different avenues of our approach to the problem. There are recommendations throughout this report. Hon. members will find for convenience there is a recapitulation in the back of the report which will, I believe, save time in getting to the recommendations.

Some people may be concerned with the cost of this investigation. The cost of effort, the cost of time, and energy and the financial cost of the inquiry are, I submit, infinitesimal as compared with the cost in dollars alone that has been caused in a number of instances by inmates' destructive demonstrations and the damage to property and even to human life which they cause. The committee held 153 meetings, many since the House opened. Some of the meetings, when out of town on inspections and examinations, lasted from early morning until late at night. We examined about 400 witnesses. We attended the convention of American Prison Societies. While in Toronto, we had the benefit of attending a conference with various committees, with the clergy, and with the After-Care Association. We invited them to hear an address given by an outstanding world authority on penology, the Rev. Martin Tinker of England.

May I say, with all the emphasis I can command, Mr. Speaker, that it is not our intention in this report to suggest for a moment any personal criticism of the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote) or of any former Minister, nor of the government or of any former government. Further, we do not claim to know all the answers to this major problem. Our report is submitted respectfully as a constructive, critical analysis of the department. Any criticism in the report is based on the three words "Is it fair?" The committee interpreted the terms of reference to mean that the House wanted an unbiased, honest examination of the department. That is what we have striven to put before hon. members. Twenty-five years have elapsed since the last examination of the department. The present report contains 142 recommendations and a tribute of appreciation for the commendable achievements of the department, such as the two reformatories at Mimico and Brampton and the industrial farms at Guelph and Burwash. The reformatory at Brampton, Ontario, is outstanding, in the opinion of the committee, and of anyone who has ever visited it. The Alexander G. Brown Clinic for the Treatment of Alcoholics at Mimico, created under the present Ministry, enjoys a highly creditable record of achievement in salvaging our human resources. Brampton is a notable achievement, as is the clinic at Mimico, and both institutions can be claimed as outstanding. They are portents for national good, reclaiming and restoring to society the nation's greatest asset—human resources. There is also a comforting measure of confidence due to the present Minister, who is also a Minister of the Gospel as well as of the Crown, a man who by service in Her Majesty's Forces knows well the prisoners' view, for he has himself been a prisoner of war. For courage and bravery in the field he received the highest decoration the Crown can bestow, the Victoria Cross.

Mr. Speaker, we, the committee salute the Minister as a great soldier, and a man of courage and valour. We also salute the former Minister and the governments down through the years who have been responsible for the finance and administration of the department. Our past is a heritage, the future is our responsibility.

In our travels, Mr. Speaker, we found no evidence of political domination or motivation in the management of any of our institutions; no evidence of inhumane treatment; no evidence of brutalities; no persecution; no oppression; no holes, no pits and no dungeons for punishment.

I well recall one recidivist who claims acquaintance with me. He has a record of 37 convictions. He asked to come before the committee at Burwash. He said: "I have been coming here for years. You are leaning over backwards in providing comforts here. No one is afraid to come, and many do not want to leave."

Mr. Speaker, there are two schools of thought about treatment of prisoners, both tending to go to extremes, and neither of which your committee believes, in the extreme, to be correct. One group stresses rigid preventive treatment to the last letter. The other is composed of social idealists with ivory-tower ideals and theories impractical to carry out. Such policies, if applied to inmates, would turn our institutions into rest homes. In some cases, the committee thinks that to a degree in some places they have, indeed, succeeded in having them turned into rest homes. Reasonable punitive treatment, we believe, is essential, but it has tended, in some cases, to be palliative to the detriment of reform.

A reasonable measure of both policies, administered with common sense and measured by experience can provide good results.

Ontario cities and counties have a number of antiquated pre-Confederation jails. However, the housekeeping is good and the meals sufficient. The province operates 8 district jails which are outstanding as compared with the county jails. They are well ventilated, the housekeeping excellent, and the meals good. Mr. Speaker, the committee believes that the idea of industrial farms is sound leadership and that more farms are urgently needed—farms that have plenty of arable land. Some of the industrial farms have only improvised buildings, converted army huts. The idea is sound, but the accommodation is not what it might be. Burwash—and we believe that institution is ably governed—should cease to be known as an industrial farm, and be designated and operated to house only recidivists and the non-reformable type, with sufficient hours of labour imposed on the inmate to constitute a good honest day's work. Henceforth, that place, your committee recommends, should be known as "Burwash Provincial Prison." Hard labour is almost a forgotten term. I remarked to a magistrate one day, "You never hear of a sentence now carrying the words 'Hard labour.'" He said: "That is right, you don't." I said: "Perhaps it is all right. I do not know if we could give it them if you did order it." In other jurisdictions, like those in the United States, they have put up costly buildings established and especially designed for the purpose.

However, Mr. Speaker, there is no jurisdiction that the committee knows of that surpasses Ontario's institutions for food, well prepared, excellent as to quality, sufficient and plentiful in quantity. No institution surpasses Ontario's for the physical care of its inmates or provides greater educational opportunities for trade training, and more humane treatment, maintenance of the decencies of life as far as they can be accorded to incarcerated persons. The prisoners in Ontario institutions are treated as persons by the department, whose sole desire is to create wholesome conditions of social life in our training schools and reformatories.

One of the causes taxing the accommodation in our institutions is juvenile delinquency. Your committee examined every possible avenue to determine the cause, and the possible cure, but we do not offer a complete solution, and the report does not claim to have any panacea. There are many people crowding our institutions who began committing offences while juveniles, many of them long before they reached maturity. There is, we believe, a regrettable lack of any procedure to deal adequately with adolescents.

We believe youth is a good time for reform. A campaign to impress the parents with their responsibility to their children would, we believe, lead to a great deal of good. Having been mayor of this city for 4 years in the dark days of depression, I know how homes are shattered by hardship. Law-abiding people had to live in conditions of the utmost want and distress. We had a Welfare Department and I remember well going into the hostels and being with men who had served overseas. They were housed in separate hostels. I have travelled across the rails from Sudbury to Chalk River in the work camps. When I think how law-abiding citizens had to struggle to get a living in the days of the depression and see today even the prisoners are living a great deal better than the many law-abiding personnel were living, on relief, I am bound to reflect how times have changed.

We have conditions where parents do not assume responsibility. In some cases parents have been attracted to lucrative fields of employment, and the mother is employed and the children are running the streets. Another factor which contributes largely to juvenile delinquency is the housing shortage—families have to live, eat and sleep in one room, or too few rooms. Another factor is the severance of church connections and the lack of spiritual guidance which parents should give their offspring. We have gone through great changes. Years ago a family went to church as a family. In the next decade the children were sent there. Now nobody seems to care whether the children go or not.

The factors which produce juvenile delinquents, who help to fill our institutions, include amongst others, shattered homes, widowed mothers or mothers who are receiving mothers' allowances, and forced by the high cost of living to take part-time employment. The welfare costs of various kinds paid by this province to those in homes broken by the incarceration of a parent, run annually to about $250,000. A breakdown of that figure shows: direct relief by the municipalities, more than $200,000; mothers' allowances and Department of Welfare costs $40,000 annually.

Another contributing factor to juvenile delinquency, we believe, may be referred to as educational deficiencies. "There are some boys who just will not go to school; they are unable to assimilate an academic course. Your committee believes if they had an opportunity to work at a trade or skill which required the use of their hands, they could be held for the time required to enable them to complete their education.

Other causes of delinquency which came to the attention of your committee, are the comic books which glorify crime, and depict a flagrant disregard for law and order; radio and television programmes which feature fictional crime of a serious nature; the pinball machines; and gambling with all its attendant evils. While I cannot elaborate fully upon it now, I think it is high time we gave closer supervision and inspection to vending machines and the type of products which they are offering for sale. Without going into the subject further, I would point out that in states not far distant, a sub-committee witnessed what is being sold in slot machines, and I may say that we do not want it in Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, I shall give only the highlights of our recommendations; and, if I may, refer hurriedly to but a few of them.

First, there is the division of responsibility as between the Dominion of Canada and the Province of Ontario regarding the housing and custodial care of prisoners. The basis of division—which has not been revised since 1859—provides that prisoners sentenced to 2 years less a day shall go to the jails, and for 2 years or more, to a federal institution. It is of interest to note, Mr. Speaker, that in the fiscal year ended March 31st, 1953, a total of 4,870 inmates in Ontario reformatories and industrial farms were convicted for offences under the federal statutes; and of such federal offences, 3,515 were indictable and 1,355 were non-indictable. On further investigation, it is shown to be a fact that, in 1953, 23 persons were sent to provincial institutions with a definite sentence of more than 2 years. They receive for the first offence 2 years less a day; 2 years for the second offence; and then the third, fourth and so on, which may aggregate 10 years, and yet they go to an Ontario institution. Had the sentencing magistrate or judge said they were to get 2 years or 3 years, the prisoners would have gone to a federal institution; but by the way the sentences were imposed, the prisoners became a provincial responsibility.

It may be of interest for the hon. members to read the Archambault Report of 1938. It is not included in the report of your committee, but I have an extract from it here.

The Archambault Report, of 1938, recommended that:

The Federal Government take over the administration of all prisons, the provinces retaining only a sufficient number to provide for offenders against provincial statutes, prisoners on remand, and those serving short sentences.

Mr. Speaker, what an exodus of prisoners we would have, if that recommendation were ever implemented.

In a brief presented to the hon. Minister of Justice, we recommended a division of responsibility. The committee informed the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Attorney-General that we proposed to go to Ottawa. The committee went to Ottawa and was graciously received by the hon. Minister of Justice, who gave us an attentive and kindly hearing. We presented many matters which we thought should receive consideration, and he has invited the committee, at its earliest opportunity, to file a brief, which he in turn will hand to the federal committee which has been appointed to look into the matter of penal reform.

I turn now to the subject of "divided authority over the inmates in our own institutions." I would point out, Mr. Speaker, we have the right to grant parole to prisoners serving an indefinite sentence; however, we have nothing to do with tickets-of-leave or remissions of definite sentence. Your committee believes we should have control in our own institutions in its entirety. This question was discussed with the hon. Minister of Justice, and we believe if we can release those under indefinite sentence, we should have authority regarding those under definite sentence. To the credit of the Department of Justice of Canada, applications for tickets-of-leave are referred to the Reform Department of Ontario for an expression of opinion before such leave is granted. I think I am correct in that statement.

Further, we have recommended that in the case of an inmate receiving consecutive sentences, not aggregating more than 2 years, the prisoner should not become a provincial responsibility. We have in our institutions habitual criminals, many recidivists, and many more who have served penitentiary terms, and some who have been in an institution on a number of occasions. I submit to those learned in the law that the Criminal Code—which I may say is difficult to understand on the question of habitual criminals—should be clarified. We believe a person who has served a term in a penitentiary, or who has been in one of our reform institutions for, say 3 terms, is not reformable material, and should not be permitted to contaminate those who may be reformed. We are asking for some provision as to the proper way of dealing with such persons.

I turn now to the recommendation of longer indefinite sentences. The governors of our Mercer Reformatory, our jails and industrial farms, tell us it is futile to sentence a person on a drug charge for 30 or 60 days. There is little more to be done than house him. As to the habitual drunkard, who turns up in court every few weeks, and whom we are virtually keeping, we are asking for a longer indefinite sentence. In that way, this type of person may be sent to a place where he can be put to work and completely "dehydrated" and get a new outlook before returning to society.

There are, in our institution at Brampton a number of splendid young men who are not there long enough to complete their training or to learn a trade. It is an excellent institution, and many of the chaps would like to stay on for a longer period of time. I know the hon. Minister is in sympathy with this recommendation; but as matters now stand, these prisoners cannot stay one minute beyond their sentenced time. We are making a definite recommendation that something should be done for the young man who wants to stay on in the institution in order to learn a trade or complete a reasonable measure of apprenticeship.

In passing, I should like to express the appreciation of the committee for the complete co-operation and response we received from organized labour, and its attitude toward the young people who are taking their punishment in our institutions in giving credit to them on required period of apprenticeship.

Those learned in the law tell us there should be clarification and definition of "mental illness" and "insanity." It is 80 years since last defined.

On the question of "time off for good behaviour," I should like to point out that the man who is sentenced to jail for 6 months cannot get a remission of 1 day for good behaviour. We think he should be given the same consideration, and reward for good conduct, which is given to men serving their sentences in our industrial farms or reformatories.

I turn now to the recommendation of the "expunging of records," but it is rather difficult to explain briefly the details as to how this recommendation can be implemented. Your committee agrees unanimously, as they do on every point, in the recommendation that where a young person, following conviction, has gone straight for a period of 5 years after his discharge, he should have his record expunged. As you know, that record now turns up against him many years after he has served his sentence. For instance, when he goes to get a job, or when his son or daughter suggest they take a trip across the border to the United States, he is faced with his record, and he knows there are certain things he cannot do. We think that encouragement should be given to him to "go straight." This recommendation does not apply to people who have been convicted of major offences, but rather to those who have served time on minor offences. We believe that after good behaviour for a period of 5 years such a person should be given a clean bill of health.

The committee recommends there be established a central place of execution. I may say that we have not been flooded with applications from any hon. members that such an institution be established in their ridings. We discussed this matter at some length, and in our brief we are suggesting the Criminal Code be amended so that the matter of a central place of execution be left at the option of the province. In that way, a prisoner condemned to death would not return to the place from whence he came, but go to a place designated as the central place of execution. The committee further recommends that if a central place of execution is established, it be in one of our existing institutions, and that a separate institution be not set up for that purpose.

As hon. members know, our jails serve many purposes; they are used as lock-ups, they are used by people serving sentences, they house persons on remand, they provide accommodation for mental cases; they even serve as a depot for persons being held by the Immigration Department for deportation. Your committee believes there should not be such a variety of uses for our jails.

Further, Mr. Speaker, in our brief to the hon. Mr. Garson, we ask for an enactment in the Criminal Code to make riotous conduct in a custodial institution an offence. At the present time, there is no legislation which deals with those guilty of riotous conduct. This should be regarded as a major offence.

Concerning the drug peddlers—those who cater to the unfortunate persons who are slaves to the habit and who are condemned for life—your committee believes there is no penalty too severe for those who traffic in drugs. We would like to see the Criminal Code provide a very severe penalty for that offence. Our recommendation, Mr. Speaker, and through you, to the hon. Prime Minister, is that these matters be studied, and that at the earliest possible moment, a brief be placed before the hon. Minister of Justice for further consideration.

There are a large number of recommendations in our report with which I shall not take time to deal now. They appear at the end of the report, and you can read and study them when the report reaches your hands.

As an encouragement to the Brampton institution, which is doing such a splendid job, your committee, Mr. Speaker, recommends that that place cease to be known as a "reformatory." While the men who go there are sentenced to the reformatory, we think that some name other than "The Ontario Reformatory" be placed on the gate.

The question of salaries has been a factor in the large turn-over of guards in our custodial institutions. In areas where private enterprise adjacent to an institution is looking for trained men, there is a constant drain on the institutional staff; and men often take jobs as guards, merely to tide them over until something else turns up. We think something should be done to provide more attractive salaries to induce help to remain with the penal institution and dedicate their lives to the work.

Your committee also recommends that where custodial officers have displayed great valour or bravery, in discharge of their duty there should be some departmental recognition of it, not in dollars and cents, but in some other way. We suggest that where a man wearing a uniform has shown exemplary service, some recognition, such as a chevron to be worn on his sleeve, should be given to him.

Burwash is a self-contained municipality occupied in its entirety by our own staff. Housing is a problem. A number of guards at Guelph drive many miles each day to and from their homes. Others get home at week-ends only. But housing is certainly a problem. They cannot pay the prices asked, and if they could pay, the houses are not to be had. This matter was discussed at length by our committee. We do not think the government should go into the housing business; we do not believe in that system; but we do think that representations should be made to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, or one of the building companies, whereby they could acquire land adjacent to these institutions. If this were not practicable, sell them a corner of our property to build houses of the type and price the guards could afford to pay. Sell to them on the condition that as long as they remain in the employ of the institution they can occupy that property, but when they sever their connection with the institution and wish to go elsewhere, the property would revert back to the vendor on terms agreed upon at the time of sale.

We recommend that reforestation work at Burwash be extended and that more arable land be purchased at various places for extended farm operations. We would like to compliment those responsible for the inauguration of these activities, which tend to take the pressure off jails and relieve the problem of idleness—the greatest curse to which these institutions are exposed. More farms, with good arable land, are urgently required. Temporary structures, in the form of army huts, have been utilized. It was a splendid idea, but we think that wherever possible these should be replaced with permanent structures. Such buildings should contain individual cells; Your committee is against the dormitory plan in adult institutions.

We believe our custodial institutions should be fully modernized with adequate appliances for safety, gang locks including fire alarm boxes where there is an adjacent civic fire alarm system. Another recommendation is the holding of periodic fire drills, which has not been the rule hitherto. There should be a definite liaison between the department and the civic and provincial fire inspection departments.

Also, chaplaincy facilities should be provided at all the major institutions. Referring to Guelph, the idea was mooted, not by the Minister, but by others, that the second dining room, which sometimes is not in use, should be converted into a chapel. To this suggestion your committee is strongly opposed, because when the institution is taxed to capacity it is better to have two dining rooms rather than to experience discontent among men who are waiting to get their meals and cannot be accommodated in the one dining room.

We think that the vacant hangar at Burtch might be used for the purpose of light industry. There are a number of men for whom no employment can be found, and are hanging around in idleness. As for medical attention, one is lucky to get a doctor to take on the care of any of these institutions on a part-time basis. If an inmate says: "I am a sick man," he just does not work. There is not any light employment. We think at the hangar at Burtch, light industry could be started and everybody required to do something.

At Mimico there are a number of "hostel inmates." We think they should be taken away from the reformatory there.

We also recommend that the Alex G. Brown Memorial Clinic for Alcoholics be enlarged sufficiently to accommodate all inmate volunteers in the province who are likely to benefit from this treatment.

Also, that the Department of Reform Institutions sell all the vacant land there other than the clay deposit from which is made our bricks and tile. Vacant farm land is too valuable not to be used in that area, and we think that it should be disposed of.

Further, that the Department of Reform Institutions sell the Andrew Mercer Reformatory property when the time is opportune, and build another institution which would provide a section having accommodation of the cottage type to house inmates.

We further recommend that the buildings and land at the Training School for Boys at Cobourg be disposed of. They are costly to operate and unsuitable for the purpose for which they are used. Your committee believes that to replace this institution a new school should be built at Bowmanville to house both groups of boys at the one location and that the Cobourg property be sold.

For the incorrigible boy not amenable to the opportunities provided in the Training School for Boys at Guelph, we think recourse should be had to some type of industrial school such as they have in England, where a boy gets lots of exercise and employment under supervision in an industrial school.

The multiplicity of controls of jails and reform institutions, through the sheriffs, the Department of Reform Institutions, and the municipality, is not, in our opinion, conducive to their best management, and we recommend that control be taken over by the Department of Reform Institutions. The question of cost is one to be determined by the government.

As I remarked earlier, a number of jails across the province are antiquated, and little used. If the government were operating the jails, consideration could be given to the consequences of these conditions; and the municipalities would be brought to realize the necessity of some change if they had to contribute to the cost. A number of these places might well be closed.

Also, jails should be used to house only adult persons on remand and those serving short sentences.

The Department of Reform Institutions should provide better facilities for visitors. Jails and institutions have made the best use of the facilities at hand, but they are far from what they ought to be. The best facilities of this kind that we saw were in a jail in New York City, where the prisoner can sit in a cubicle, with an interviewer at one end, and shatter-proof glass between them, with a communicating phone. The parties talk to each other in private; nobody is listening, and yet there is absolutely no chance of passing contraband.

Complaints have been made by the clergy and others as to the facilities at the Don. On the other hand great improvements have been made in facilities for interviewing prisoners.

We recommend that the examination of incoming prisoners be more thorough, using, where practicable, such devices as the fluoroscope, to intensify precautions against the entry of contraband.

As regards mental cases, we note that it has become the habit of magistrates to look at the procedure outlined in section 25 of the Mental Hospitals Act in dealing with suspended mental cases. However, although "a safe and comfortable place" as called for in that section of the Act has been considered by some magistrates to mean to the jails. There are no facilities in the jails to care for mental cases, other than, perhaps, a bed or possibly a special ward. The Department of Health makes a grant of $8,500, and the Federal Government a grant of $1,500, for every hospital which will install a bed in a detention ward. We must encourage hospitals to extend this provision, but they will not do it unless they get some consideration in the way of maintenance grant, which, I think, the department is considering. It comes to this: if you are sick from the eyes up, you go to jail; if sick from the eyes down, you go to a hospital. Section 35 of the Mental Hospitals Act supplies the answer. Mental cases can be remanded to the hospital for attention. The Department of Health is building such facilities as the outdoor clinic at the Ontario Hospital, on Queen Street.

Your committee is very much concerned about the housing of mental cases in jail. It is not fair to the person who is mentally ill, nor is it fair to the rest of the inmates. Another recommendation we are making is that there be established a full-scale reception centre where a psychiatrist and a doctor can examine those who go there. At Elmira, in New York State, they have a reception diagnostic centre, at which all first offenders there, of the ages 16 to 21—now being raised to 25—are given daily observation, and a 6 weeks' examination by a psychiatrist, a doctor, a chaplain, a school teacher, a guard—everyone on the staff—who, at the end of 6 weeks, sit around a board room and discussing the case and the best method of dealing with it. A measure of this kind, by diagnosis of the cause of offence and prescribing the remedy, will help to break down the influx to our jails.

As regards segregation, the department, to the limit of its facilities, is doing what it can, but the inadequacy of segregation facilities is a great handicap to successful operation. We believe particular care should be taken in the segregation of sex deviates—perverts, homosexuals—the mentally afflicted, drug addicts, and psychopaths. Certainly, these must be segregated, and we must keep the reformable type separate from the non-reformable types. At no time in these institutions should there be any intermingling.

We are against the policy of dormitories in adult institutions.

Idleness is one of the greatest problems the department has to meet. In the jails, particularly, there is nothing other than housekeeping for the inmates to do. To give them due credit, some of the inmates have said: "Let us get something to do." There is, of course, the other types you have to take by the scruff of the neck and the seat of the pants to make them take a breath of fresh air in the middle of the day; they just want to lie on their bunks and smoke cigarettes.

We believe there should be an exploration of the facilities for providing hard labour. The department has a number of productive operations by which money is provided to offset the expenditure of operation.

One thing we are recommending strongly is that greater emphasis be placed on spiritual guidance in custodial institutions. We are glad to learn the Minister has investigated this matter and, I understand, is instituting a chaplaincy course of training in some institutions. A chaplain is now taking a special course. We cannot recommend too strongly that the chaplaincy services be extended.

We also urge that the police station is the place where, at the time of an arrest, the slightest evidence of illness or injury be immediately investigated by a medical doctor, rather than defer the examination until the party arrives at the jail.

A word as to security. There have been a number of escapes from the Don Jail; but since the committee started to function a steel mesh enclosure has been constructed alongside the front door. When the patrol wagon or other means of transportation pulls up to the jail it drives in the enclosure, which is locked, and there is no means of escape. In our journeys across the province, this was the only place where we saw an enclosure at the place of the reception or discharge of prisoners. This is a measure of security which, we think, should be generally adopted.

We are also asking in our report, Mr. Speaker, for the same opportunities to be extended to female reformables as are given to males, at Brampton.

We ask for the extension of alcoholic facilities, and consideration of the lowering standard of the I.Q.'s for people, to enable them to receive treatment, so as to embrace a greater number. We are also asking for longer sentences for addicts in order to effect cures. We are asking for research into the problem of the sex deviates in other jurisdictions. In some institutions we were told the only answer to the problem they knew was "incarceration and throw away the key." Apparently, from our investigation, there is no known medical or surgical cure as yet. We do not believe that lengthy incarceration is the complete answer. We are asking the government to give consideration to the investigation by top-flight medical men, and scientists, to study the problem and endeavour to find a solution. We also recommend that sex offenders be given indefinite sentences.

One highlight of our report is in regard to probation. We are recommending a Commission of Correction be established, to be composed of 3 outstanding persons. Now probation is being extended, and ably administered by the Department of the hon. Attorney-General.

It is a growing service, as is counselling, rehabilitation and parole, under the Department of Reform Institutions. Then you have this recommendation for a reception diagnostic centre.

Your committee felt that a commission of 3 could well supervise the work of these services, and be established as a semi-judicial body.

Under the Department of Reform Institutions would be the functions of the counselling, rehabilitation, parole, probation, and the diagnostic centre. It is evident that the greater the measure of probation, the more parole may be diminished.

We are asking for a semi-judicial body, and we recommend there should be some provision for appeal from the decisions of the Parole Board, to some authority. At first, we thought the appeal should rest with the Minister, but later, we felt that perhaps it would be better if the appeal were heard by the Commission on Corrections, if one be established.

In further connection with probation: pre-sentence reports should be furnished in all cases of first offenders, before sentence is passed. I understand that when the committee started to function, the probation services were not large in number, but now have been stepped up to about 35 officers. Mr. Speaker, in and around Greater Toronto, there are roughly about 100 persons on probation, and it may be interesting to the House to notice that the costs have not yet been brought to the lowest degree of refinement, but, at the present time, for 44 cents a day you can supervise a person on probation.

Then, too, he has not the stigma on his name of having been in an institution: he is self-supporting, and is able to support his family.

On the other hand, if a man is convicted and sent to an institution, it will cost, roughly, $4.00 per day for his keep, plus what it may cost for the maintenance of his family while he is incarcerated.

We think it advisable to endeavour to keep a number of people out of the institutions by placing them on probation.

We believe the Parole Board should not wait until shortly before the date a man is due for discharge before being interviewed, but he should be interviewed progressively, so when time comes for his hearing, and for their decision, they will be familiar with the case before them.

We think that after-care service should be intensified. Mr. Speaker, we made a study of this, and the ratio between jail reformables is about 30 per cent. as against 70 per cent. who are not reformable. In our provincial institutions, about 20 per cent are reformable, while the other 80 per cent. are not.

We recommend that the efforts of the rehabilitation officers in caring for the reformables should be intensified, and confined, in a large measure, to those who are considered to be reformable. The other 80 per cent. have had their chance; they have been given job after job; the department has endeavoured to secure work for them.

When it comes to one who has had several chances, he has worn out his welcome, and continued efforts on his behalf will serve no purpose.

The committee feels if a man has gone through the rehabilitation process once, and comes back as a recidivist, he should then be sent to some institution where punitive treatment will be provided. Of course, upon his discharge, he should be given after-care, meals and lodging for a reasonable time until he gets a job: this will help to put him back on his feet. I repeat, Mr. Speaker, that the efforts in regard to the 20 per cent. should be intensified. We felt that this group are well worth considering. We also believe that after-care and rehabilitation are definitely the responsibility of the Department of Reform Institutions, and should not be delegated to outside bodies, to be subsidized.

We recommend we continue to accept co-operation from volunteer organizations. If they succeed, well and good; if not, the responsibility then falls back on the department, and we believe it should take the responsibility of after-care, at the same time welcoming all co-operation from outside agencies.

Your committee found a condition in the north country, in and around Sudbury. The department is unable legally to provide people with transportation back to their homes, upon being discharged either from the institution or by the court. There were cases brought to our attention which came from as far as 300 miles from Sudbury, and upon discharge, there were no means available to return them to their homes. We feel it is to the everlasting credit of the Ontario Provincial Police, who assist in helping these people toward their homes as far as it is possible for them to go. But there are many people coming there from areas which are not accessible by highway. The railroad is the only means of transportation, and they have no money with which to pay their fares.

Then, too, some have been brought into Sudbury, appeared before a court, and found innocent. They are left penniless many miles from home. It is a sad picture to see a man or woman standing on the street with no money in his or her pocket. There is only one thing you can expect. They will be coming back into custody shortly. Your committee feels there has to be some half-way care provided for these people. We firmly believe that a first offender, if placed on probation, is more likely to reform, and to stay out of further trouble, than go into an institution, and then have us try to make some effort to reform him.

In a word, we are recommending the tightening-up of our institutions; recommending an adolescent court, to deal with adolescents. We are further recommending in our juvenile institutions, the issue of tobacco be cut off. We think that a bit of pampering which can well be stopped.

Mr. Speaker, I think I have given you a rough outline of what is in the report. I earnestly recommend the report to the careful consideration by all hon. members of the House.

I would like to say through you, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. Prime Minister, that there are but two alternatives in dealing with reform institutions.

We studied the statement by the provincial economist, who gave a forecast of the next decade in regard to the school population. If the incidence of crime continues on the present basis, and the population increases as forecast, in another decade we will require 50 per cent. more accommodation in our institutions—or else. What is the alternative? The alternative is to take the pressure off the front doors of these institutions by stepping up corrective measures in regard to juvenile delinquency, for an extension of probation services, and matters of that kind.

May I say that in this province, one out of every 175 of the population is represented by a conviction, whereas, in the Old Country one out of every 1,259 of population is convicted. I want to make that clear. I am not saying that one of every 175 is arrested and goes to jail, because of that 175, many may have been in many times. We met an inmate at North Bay, whom I asked, "How many times have you been arrested?" and he said, "Do not be silly." I asked him again, "How many times have you been arrested? Twenty?" and he said, "Oh, talk sense." I asked again, "How many?" and he said, "Figure it out for yourself. I have been in some jail every month of every year since 1929." A man of that kind, would, of course, constitute more than one conviction.

As I say, Mr. Speaker, if the same set of figures continue in the next decade we will require 50 per cent. more accommodation, or a change in our methods, and have fewer convictions.

There has to be a great awakening of people to a deeper sense of their responsibility to the church of their faith, to the state, and to the three levels of government; there has to be a restoration of the family circle, a greater appreciation of home life, which is really the backbone of the nation, and we have to realize that to a much greater extent, and to appreciate our freedom, and our opportunities. It is our opinion definitely that probation can be productive of greater results than incarceration, and any attempt for reformation and after-care.

Recidivists are a major problem. From 65 to 80 per cent. of the inmates are recidivists, and, therefore, are considered unreformable.

I gave you the figure a moment or two ago about the number of institutions. We believe that in order to further reduce the inmate population, there should be segregation, particularly of the psychopaths, of the reformables from the non-reformables, of the sex deviates and perverts, the homosexuals, the recidivists, and a complete segregation of the younger offenders from the older.

In this province, the counties and cities are spending $10 million a year, in round figures, for custodial institutions, plus the welfare costs of direct relief to maintain the families of those who are incarcerated.

At the training schools, the costs amount to about $4.00 a day for boys, and from $5.00 to $5.50 for girls. We feel that perhaps some of these girls—while we believe in giving them good environment—may be acquiring habits and tastes which people in ordinary circumstances may not be able to afford.

If you look at the report by the hon. Minister, it will reveal the variations of costs in the operations of jails, running from $2.90 per inmate per day up to $12.90 per day. As I say, in the province, the counties and cities have spent over $10 million in custodial institutions, and the department has received from farm and manufactured products, for use only in other government institutions, something over $2 million—at least, that was the figure last year.

In the schedules attached to the report will be seen tables setting out clearly this information for you in detail. If the hon. members will study the schedules, and break them down into their various headings, they will see there is a great variation in comparative costs, which, in the opinion of the committee, calls for rigid budgetary control, and review. However the department is producing by its treatment either reformed or unreformed persons.

May I say to you, Mr. Speaker, and through you to the hon. members of the House that human values cannot be measured by a dollar standard. The inmates should not be kept in idleness, but whether in an institution or on probation, facilities should be provided for work, so that the inmates, especially, will not be forced to spend their waking hours in idleness.

In only one jail in the Province of Ontario did the committee find facilities for work for the inmates, and that was in the Frontenac County Jail in the City of Kingston, where they are making cement tile for municipal use.

In closing, I would like to leave this thought with you, Mr. Speaker, and with the hon. Prime Minister: the jail farm at Langstaff has been taken over by the Department of Health, and your committee feels it should be returned at the earliest possible moment to the City of Toronto, to take some of the pressure off the Don Jail. The government is getting it for $1.00 a year—we may think. Let us look at the facts. It is to the credit of the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions to endeavour to avoid further trouble and demonstrations in the Don Jail, and unless the overloading is relieved, there is always the danger of further trouble. Again to the credit of the department, it can be said that a great deal of the pressure has been taken off. How? By transporting prisoners who should be on the jail farm to provincial institutions, at a cost of nearly $500,000 to the Province of Ontario. To be fair, it may be said of the City of Toronto that it has a great capital investment there, and perhaps $500,000 may represent a fair return, but let us not delude ourselves into thinking we are getting Langstaff for $1.00 a year.

Also, you must consider the harm that may come through overcrowding the Don Jail. We, as a committee, feel that this requires very early consideration.

The motion for the investigation endorsed by this House, and I think the report we bring in, if hon. members study it and consider it they will see the House was justified in accepting the motion and going on with the investigation; and on behalf of the committee it has been my privilege to be associated with, if at any time the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) or the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Foote) would like to discuss any of the recommendations, I know every member of the committee will be very happy, ready and willing to give whatever service he can.

Again I would like to remind you, in regard to the recommendations we have presented in the hope of improving our service that when you study them, do not lose sight of the fact that no one surpasses the Ontario institutions for humane treatment, kindness, good food and opportunity, and I know the department and the committee will agree we are trying to build a social edifice worthy of the builders, and in Ontario, prisoners are still treated as persons.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) moved the motion which was later accepted by the government, and this committee was constituted, I am sure neither he nor the government had in mind they were going to "get" anybody, nor that they were out to severely criticize the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote) in charge of the department. The whole purpose of the hon. member by the motion was there should be an exacting examination of the Department of Reform Institutions, and the policies emanating therefrom, and that this committee should report to the House in an unbiased way, and with recommendations which would tend to increase the efficiency of the department on the one hand, and point out the deficiencies in policy in respect to reform institutions on the other.

May I say, first of all, Mr. Speaker, that all the members of the committee agree with me, I am sure, when I say that no committee this House ever set up has had as its chairman a more energetic person than the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Stewart). Ever since the committee commenced its sittings, the hon. member for Parkdale has been "on the go" and has constantly been trying to better conditions existing in this Province of Ontario.

It would be useless, and would serve no purpose, to go over the various aspects upon which the hon. member for Parkdale has touched, this afternoon. Therefore, I want simply to emphasize what, in my opinion, are the outstanding recommendations contained within the report, and may I say to the House, in concurring with what the hon. member has said, that so far as the institutions are concerned, and so far as the care of the prisoners and the meals served to the prisoners in the Province of Ontario are concerned, the committee has no criticism of any great consequence to offer. I believe we are caring for the people who have been sentenced to those institutions in a manner which would meet with the approval of the great majority of the people of this province, and the recommendations in this committee's report do not bear very heavily on this aspect of the situation, but rather have to do with the policies in effect at the present time governing the Department of Reform Institutions.

As I see it, Mr. Speaker, the Department of Reform Institutions has a twin obligation to anyone who is sentenced to one of their institutions. In the first place, their obligation is to ensure that the person is detained in custody while he serves the sentence meted out to him by the court. In the second place, they have the responsibility of trying to reform the individual while he is in detention, so when he leaves the institution he will go back into free society with the idea in mind that he has erred, and that he is determined to correct those errors, and live a decent honest life.

Of those twin obligations the Department of Reform Institutions has, the one concerning the detaining of prisoners, I would say to the House, has been well looked after; so far as reforming the prisoner once he is in the institution, I think we have a right to expect a much better deal than we have had, and much better results than have emanated from the policies in vogue. Outside of Brampton, I would say to the House that our policy of the reformation of prisoners has fallen far short of what we have a right to expect. Brampton is a pilot scheme. It is an experimental place which looks to all of us as if it is going to be something really worthwhile. But so far as the other institutions are concerned, I am quite candid in saying to the House this afternoon that so far as the reformation of prisoners is concerned, we just have not gone very far. I think we have wasted a lot of money in the attempt, and I will tell you why.

Before you can have reformation of prisoners within institutions, two things must be apparent. In the first place, you must have proper segregation before you can have any hope of ultimate reformation. Segregation in our institutions today simply does not exist, I am frank and candid in saying to the House this afternoon. The segregation of prisoners is a myth, it is a thing we give lip service to, but in actuality and practice, it just does not exist and, therefore, without proper segregation and classification of prisoners, we cannot expect to have a beneficial reformation of the prisoners themselves.

The hon. member (Mr. Stewart) mentioned—and it struck the committee very forcibly—that one cannot expect the money we are paying for rehabilitation, for psychiatrists, and all these people we send in to the prisoners to tell them how to live better, is going to be well used, unless it is directed primarily to the particular group which it is possible to reform. What is happening in our prisons and reformatories in this province is we send these men in, paying them decent salaries, and telling them to go in and sow the good seed, and reform those who have been bad; but they go into the institutions, they are dealing with 100 per cent. of the institutional population. There are, I suppose, only between 20 and 25 per cent. of that population whom it is possible to reform, yet our efforts are directed towards the 100 per cent.

I suggest to the House, to the hon. Prime Minister, and to the government this afternoon that we are not going to get the full benefit of our reformatory efforts, unless we direct our money and our talents and our man power to dealing with those whom it is possible to reform, that is, the 20 or 25 per cent. That is where segregation enters the picture again. It is just like pouring water over a dam, unless we segregate the prisoners to the degree that we know pretty well those who are capable of reformation, and those on whom we are throwing money away in trying to reform them. It seems to me we have a very long way to go in this province in that regard.

The only other point I want to touch upon is that of "probation." I believe once a chap goes to jail, the chances of reforming him have pretty well disappeared. You can do a lot more toward getting a young chap back on the straight and narrow path if you put him on probation, rather than sending him to jail. Once he has been contaminated with the environment that is prevalent in all our institutions, his chances of reformation are very slim indeed. So in that respect, at least, what we can do in regard to probation should be examined very carefully. I think it is easier to reform a man on probation than after you put him in jail.

On the other hand, from a purely mercenary point of view, I agree with the hon. member, that unless we do something to tackle this problem of the jail population, we are going to be in a very difficult position in this province within a very few years. If present trends, as indicated by the figures, continue, one of two things has to happen, either we will have to spend money to build new jails and new accommodation throughout this province, or we have to devise a policy which will reform a number of those whom we have in our institutions and, in addition, step up our probation system, in order to keep out of jail those who should not properly be there.

This is not a new thing. Other countries in the world have gone a long way with respect to probation and keeping people out of jail. We on the committee were told that when the probation services really got going in England many years ago, they had to close a lot of the jails because there were no candidates for admission.

I do not say we should put everybody on probation but I do say to the House this afternoon that we could not spend more wisely than to give to the Department of Reform Institutions $500,000, or $1 million if they need it, to set up in this province a proper system of probation. I believe if we did that, not only would we keep out of jail many men who should not be there, but we would have a better chance of those young men getting on the straight and narrow path. From a purely mercenary point of view, we would be saving a great deal of money for the Province of Ontario, because you can keep a man on probation for one-tenth of the cost of keeping him in jail. These things, it seems to me, are very important, and stand out as highlights of this committee's report.

May I say, as I take my seat, Mr. Speaker, that I noticed in the paper this morning some criticism of a report of another committee of this House.

Certainly the same sort of criticism cannot be directed against this committee and its report, for I think we have been fearless in making our recommendations to the province, and to this Legislature. We have not "played politics." I think all hon. members of the House will agree that was not our purpose in asking for the committee. We felt there was a problem here. We thought there were solutions to be found, and each member of the committee worked assiduously to find those solutions, and we believe in this report the solutions to a great many of these problems are contained. If some of the report tends to criticize the Department of Reform Institutions, that is only incidental to a very large problem; it just happened that the policies in vogue at the present time do not meet with the views of the members of the committee. I do not think this government appointed the committee to "whitewash" the Department of Reform Institutions; I believe they appointed it to do a job and that is what the committee tried to do.

This is my last word to the House in this respect, Mr. Speaker. This committee's report, together with those of other committees, will be useful only insofar as it is implemented by the administration in power. I have great faith in committee work in this Legislature, I am very strong for Select Committees of the Legislature to deal with particular problems, but we are only going to maintain interest in such committees in the public mind if the government and the department concerned implements the recommendations of the committee. If the department ignores the committee's report, then the next committee which sits will not have public confidence behind them to the same degree, because the public will be apt to say: "Oh well, the last committee which sat made a very fine report, but nothing came out of it by way of legislation."

I think the hon. Prime Minister is seized with the importance, not only of saying that this is a good report, but of implementing it, insofar as it lies within the power of the government, and within the judgment of hon. members of the House.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, in saying a few words in connection with this report, I wish first to congratulate our chairman on the very fine address he made this afternoon, in fact, Mr. Speaker, he has been so complete in his report, that I have been made to feel I am in a somewhat similar position to a person who on a platform says: "so and so has stolen my thunder." Mr. Speaker, I believe the chairman this afternoon has "stolen the thunder" of every member of the committee. He has covered the report very, very fully.

I wish also to say that it was a pleasure to serve on this committee. The members of it were interested, each one paid a great deal of attention to the work of the committee, was present on every possible occasion, and assisted at our hearings.

I wish particularly to refer to the work of the chairman. I know if meetings were called for 10 o'clock, and I had occasion to be in the buildings at 8.30 or 9 on other work, I found the chairman "chasing around" getting ready for the meeting of that day. He devoted a great deal of attention to the committee's work and I am sure every member of the committee, as well as all hon. members of the House, owes a debt of gratitude to him for being one of the finest and most energetic chairmen we have ever had on a committee.

Mr. Speaker, I presume by now hon. members will realize that, roughly speaking, our reformatory institutions fall into 4 distinct classes. Firstly, we have the reformatories; secondly, the industrial farms; thirdly, the training schools; and fourthly, the district and county jails. The first 3 are reformatory in outlook, and in practice; the fourth is custodial only. The chairman has dealt very fully with the work of all 4, but I want to say a few words about our county and district jails.

The 8 district jails are very fine buildings. They were built by the province within the past 25 years, and they are doing a good job. They are up-to-date, and well constructed for the purpose for which they are used. But as regards our county jails, I am afraid their day has come and gone, they are antiquated, obsolete, old "bastilles" in many cases. I had never had occasion to be in any of them prior to my work with the committee, but I was startled and surprised when I went into some of these old county jails, to see the type of construction. Some of them have long rows of cells, maybe two and a half feet wide or a little more, with walls between the cells of about an equal width. Every one had a separate lock, a turnkey who wanted to unlock one of the cells would go along with a long key, somewhat similar to the tool used by motorists in taking the wheels off their cars, and push it into a wall about a foot and a half wide and "fiddle around" for a while, until it clicked in the lock, and then he would turn it and in that manner could release the inmates.

I would like to tell hon. members of a rather funny incident which happened in one of the jails. We were examining the width of these cells and some of us were trying to see just how wide they were. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) when walking into a cell, had to turn sideways to get in where the bed was. The beds are the exact width of the cells. There is no space on either side of the beds, there is a little space of about a foot at the end. I believe the beds are pulled out and made up, then pushed back in, and when the men get in, the doors are locked behind them and they are left there until next morning.

It so happened that in one such jail, a very stout female was brought in one evening and ordered into a cell. After some persuasion they got her in. During the night the turnkey heard a lot of screaming and shouting. He notified the matron, who raced in to find what the matter was, and it turned out this stout female had tried to turn over in her bed, and was stuck.

In these antiquated old jails there is no ventilation whatsoever, and the lighting is very poor. There is no work provided. All the prisoners have to do is to sweep the corridors and clean out their cells each day. I think the time has come when the province could very well take over the management of these county jails, and perhaps consolidate 8 or 10 counties into one jail district and build a decent jail in each district. These old buildings have served their day and should be demolished.

Another point which was very forcibly brought to the attention of the committee was the question of salaries. I do not believe there was one institution we visited but after a while, the guards and custodial officers got around to mentioning to us the question of salaries.

As you know, as has been explained by the chairman, the custodial officers and guards were brought in and permitted to talk to the committee freely. They discussed their problems with us, and, invariably, before leaving they stated there was one more matter they wanted to mention, and that was the matter of salaries. In every institution, the question of salaries was brought up. I think it is time we, in this province, paid a decent salary to those who are doing the job the officials of the department are doing.

We visited several institutions in the United States. We found in Wayne County, Michigan, I think it was, guards were paid a great deal more than some of our senior officials. Guards were getting higher salaries as guards in Wayne County Jail than our senior officials are in Ontario. That will illustrate one of the reasons why we have the tremendous turn-over in personnel.

In Guelph, the turn-over is practically 50 per cent. per year. That does not tend to give us good administration. What we desire, Mr. Speaker, is, when a guard is employed, he will accept his appointment, determined to make it his life's work, and that he is going to remain with that department, and not just make it a "stop-gap," while he looks for another job in industry.

Another thing we found was the temporary nature of the buildings at our industrial farms. I know, Mr. Speaker, the department has done a great deal of work in setting up industrial farms, but I think the time has come when we should destroy all the temporary buildings, and construct permanent buildings at our industrial farms. The old army huts which have been used are not conducive to good reformatory measures. They are, as was mentioned by the chairman, of the dormitory type, and we, as a committee, are completely opposed to the dormitory-type of custodial care.

Mr. Speaker—and this has also been referred to by the chairman, and by the hon. Leader of the Opposition—we have in our reformatories too many men receiving reformatory measures, who are not reformatory. In other words, about 80 per cent. of the inmates of some of our institutions should never be in reformatories.

The committee believes the institution at Burwash should be made an Ontario Prison, and those who are not reformable should be sent to that institution, so that officers attempting to reform men can concentrate their efforts on the 20 or 25 per cent. who are reformable.

It is useless to attempt to reform men who have been in the penitentiary 3 or 4 times, or men who have been in our reform institutions 8 or 10 times. I know the committee, as a whole, was surprised quite often, when questioning some of the inmates, to find the number of times some of these young fellows had been in an institution. We asked for their opinion of the treatment in the institution, and so on, and later on we asked them for particulars regarding their committals, and, quite freely, they admitted they had been in institutions on different occasions, and sometimes even in a penitentiary. Upon checking their records in the office, we were startled to find that quite often some of these bright young fellows to whom we had been talking, had been inmates of our reformatories 8 or 10 times, and also inmates of a penitentiary 2 or 3 times.

Men who have served more than 3 sentences in a reformatory, or a penitentiary, should not go back to a reformatory. That was very strongly brought to our attention by an old prisoner at Burwash.

This man had requested permission to come in and speak to the committee. He was a man of 65 or 67 years of age, and when he got in, he sat down and said: "Gentlemen, I did not ask to come here to speak on my own behalf. I want to talk about the young chaps. There are some young fellows here in Burwash whom you can do something for. There are others for whom you cannot. Do something to segregate those prisoners. Take the young fellow who has not been in an institution before, and keep him away from the rest of the prisoners in the institution. Take, for instance, my own case. I am now serving my 37th sentence, and what the devil am I doing in a reformatory?"

That man was putting it plainly to us. What was a man doing in a reformatory who had served so many sentences? The committee, as a whole, believes a separate institution should be constructed, preferably at Burwash, to where men who are not reformable can be sent, and there serve their terms of imprisonment. At the same time, those men should be given hard labour.

In our courts we quite often hear the convicting magistrate or judge sentence a prisoner to "hard labour." Mr. Speaker, there is no such thing as "hard labour" in our institutions today. A man may be in our county jails and considered serving a term with "hard labour." All he has to do is sweep out the corridor and his own cell, perhaps. That is not "hard labour."

We think that in each institution some industrial plant should be set up, so these men can be given work which will keep them busy. If they are not reformable, then "hard labour" and a greater degree of punishment will induce these men to decide they will not come back again in the near future. If we make our institutions too much of rest homes, then these men will come back as repeaters. They do not mind coming back. The man who is caught for a crime today does not fear a term of imprisonment in our institutions.

I would just like to stress one or two of the major suggestions made by our chairman, and also by the hon. Leader of the Opposition, the first of which is in regard to a Commission on Correction.

Our committee is very, very strongly "sold" on the setting up of a Commission on Correction, which would administer probation, the rehabilitation of prisoners, or, as we call it in our report, "after-care," and also the reception centre, as recommended in our report. We believe the reception centre is one of the finest things which can be introduced into our penal system. We saw it in operation in Elmira, New York, and it was very impressive.

I know the members of the committee who went to Elmira and saw the work of this centre, were very much impressed. We were given seats in a room where about 12 or 14 specialists were sitting around a table. As explained by the chairman, these specialists had spent about 6 weeks considering the case of each applicant with whom they were to deal. The psychologist had spent a great deal of time with them; the educational director, the custodial officer, and so on had spent sometime with every prisoner, and each one had prepared a written report.

This written report was turned over to a secretary, who condensed the written reports and prepared a composite report, which he sent to each member of the committee.

On the day appointed for the hearing, the committee, consisting of about 12 or 14 men, discussed the case of the person appearing before it, as to what institution he would be sent to serve his sentence. The discussion, in some cases, did not amount to much. Some of the cases were clear-cut. The majority of the committee agreed, and the case was disposed of in 10 or 15 minutes.

However, those on which the committee disagreed on some of the points, took a considerable length of time. One case we heard took an hour and ten minutes, I think it was, for the committee to decide what was to be done with the inmate. The discussion was very, very interesting. We heard the viewpoints of the different men. They would argue with each other, and battle for their particular viewpoint. That lasted for about an hour and ten minutes until eventually the chairman put the question to a vote as to where this inmate would go, whether to a certain type of institution, or to a more severe type. The vote was a tie, forcing the chairman to vote on this question.

That to me—and I believe to the other members of the committee—was very, very interesting, and something which we hope will be introduced in Ontario. That is a very, very necessary institution.

As for the Parole Board: our committee feels this board should be reconstituted. At the present time, it consists of 9 members who are part-time employees. The committee feels the Parole Board should be full-time, and should consist of 5 members; that it should not merely consider the case of an applicant for parole a few days or a few weeks before his release, but the very moment a man goes into an institution, the Parole Board should be made aware of his presence, and should start, at that time, to assemble data on his case. They should meet the man while serving the definite period of his sentence, and form an opinion as to his capabilities and the type of man he may be, and then when the time comes for the man to be released on parole, on the expiration of the definite period of his sentence, they will know all about the man with whom they are dealing.

At the present time the board has not the time nor the energy to give proper consideration to the question of parole.

Another point, which I believe the chairman of the committee did not touch on, was the Training Schools Advisory Board. We believe that this board, though it has rendered wonderful services, is not required and that its duties should be taken over by the Parole Board. This Advisory Board is, as hon. members know, not paid. It is a voluntary service. The 5 members have served for many years. Some of them have been on the board, I believe, for as many as 20 years. As a general rule they meet once a week, every Thursday, I believe, and they consider cases for placement of juveniles and so on. But they do not see the applicant. They do not confer with the placement officers. They could not. These men are businessmen who are giving their time freely and voluntarily and they could not be expected to do what ordinarily would be required of them. So we believe that this work should be taken on by the Parole Board. To give you an idea of what are supposed to be the duties of the Advisory Board, I will read what the Act requires:

The board shall, by visiting, inspecting and otherwise investigating training schools, ascertain the condition thereof and of the boys and girls therein, particularly as to the matters of moral, scholastic, occupational and recreational natures and as to their wardship, care, health, treatment, conduct and discipline and shall make such reports to the Minister as he may require together with any recommendations which it deems advisable.

Mr. Speaker, no voluntary group of men could carry out all those duties, so it is recommended that these duties should be taken over by the Parole Board. I wish to express once more my appreciation of the privilege of having served on this committee under so able a chairman, and with so fine a body of men.

I do not know whether the House realizes the extent of the work the committee had to undertake. I believe that 153 meetings were held. I think I attended somewhere around 135. I wonder if it is realized that in attending those meetings during this past year, I travelled in the neighbourhood of 40,000 miles. This was distance travelled in carrying out the duties of this committee. I repeat that I appreciate the privilege of serving with a fine group of men who constituted the Select Committee.

MR. D. H. MORROW (Carleton): It was my pleasure to serve on this committee under the able chairmanship of the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Stewart) and I would like to join with former speakers in reciprocating his kindly and complimentary references to the members. I congratulate him, as well as the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) for their able presentations on this report. I found the work of this committee most interesting and, regardless of the critical nature of some of the passages of this report, it was a great source of pride to travel through the various reform institutions and see at first hand the wonderful work that is being done.

I think we have made remarkable progress through the years and I am sure that if some of the recommendations of this report are implemented, still greater progress will result.

Generally speaking, the academic educational training being carried out in our institutions appears to be adequate. The training schools have regular academic curricula up to grade IX, and provision is made in outside schools for those progressing beyond that grade. This academic training is given full credit by the Department of Education.

At Brampton—a specialized institution with specially selected personnel—there is an excellent academic school, extending up to and including grade XII. The inmates spend one-half of each working day in the school, and the other half-day in their vocational training. There is no academic training at all in some of the industrial farms, and the reformatory at Mimico, because of the type of inmate in these institutions. The Guelph Reformatory and Burwash Industrial Farm limit themselves to the teaching of illiterates.

Mr. Speaker, there are two schools of thought on academic training in our reformatories and industrial farms. One school of thought feels there should be full-time classes throughout the day for all those properly motivated to attend such classes. The other school of thought thinks that anyone in such institutions, who wishes to further himself academically, should do so in his own time at night.

I wish to subscribe to this latter point of view, and the committee endorses it.

There is no reason why those confined in custody should enjoy the special privileges of daytime education which cannot be enjoyed by those active in a free society, where thousands wishing to further their educational status do so by taking night-school courses in their own time. However, I think illiterates are a group deserving of special consideration. Wherever they are incarcerated, I think it is essential they should receive sufficient education to enable them to read and write, and means to this end should be provided at all our institutions.

Such teaching would play an important part in eliminating illiteracy in the general population of this province as well as helping to destroy one of the contributing factors towards crime. If a person can neither read nor write he is far more apt to react to force in order to reach his ends. Utilization of his leisure time, without the ability to do any reading or writing, poses a problem that sometimes leads to criminal acts.

In regard to vocational training, many of our institutions, particularly the training schools and the reformatory at Guelph are equipped with excellent vocational training shops and staffed by well-qualified vocational trade instructors. There is a good vocational programme in such trades as construction, machine shop, motor mechanics, welding, painting, radio, sheet metal, wood-working, and cooking.

On release, the inmate who has taken trade training is given a letter from the superintendent and the trade training instructor, showing the time spent in training. This is accepted by the Department of Labour and serves as a credit on apprenticeship training. Organized labour has displayed good co-operation in this regard.

At Galt the girls receive vocational training in home economics, hairdressing and some crafts. At the Mercer, training is given in beauty culture, needle craft, general domestic science, and household economics.

The chairman has asked me to say something about "hobbies and libraries."

Mr. Speaker, one of the greatest difficulties confronting young people today, is the inability to organize and properly utilize leisure hours. This has been a factor in the delinquency of a great many juveniles as well as a great many adults. In my opinion, one of the most effective ways of combating the leisure-time problem is to become interested in a hobby.

A few institutions, such as the Guelph Reformatory have excellent programmes in this respect. Others have few or no hobby projects.

It is not valid to suppose that inmates should only be taught that which will mean a better living after discharge, but it is also important that they be given instruction in things which will teach them to live better. It is in this category that hobbies should be considered.

Essentials could easily be provided in all institutions without too much expense, and a good programme established.

The female population in our institutions and jails, both doing creditable work in many places, could very well spend more of their leisure time on needlework, weaving, leathercraft and other such hobbies.

Libraries in the majority of institutions visited by the committee were inadequate, and only a few could be classed as being very good, notably Brampton.

Libraries in the reformatories and jails are a part of the educational programme, and should form a part of the rehabilitation process. A good library, properly established and housed, can do much to improve the education of the inmates, and provide a release from emotional strain, besides being of help in occupying idle hours and leisure time.

Many libraries require a drastic weeding out of old, damaged and useless books. All institutions should evolve a definite and practical system for providing good books, keeping them according to index, and making them available to inmates.

In the selection, emphasis should be placed upon books which will transfer the interest of the inmates from sensationalism, to that of a better grade of book. Subversive literature and that depicting sex and crime should be considered contraband.

Along with a more refined segregation and the establishment of a reception and diagnostic centre, I believe the recommendation for a more widely extended probation, parole, rehabilitation and prison after-care system, forms one of the most important recommendations of this committee. Like the other members of the committee I am convinced that, if our probation system, in particular, were more fully put into operation, with competent and well-trained personnel, within a few years our prison population would be considerably reduced, and our recidivism problem would show great, and gradual improvement, in the generations to come. This report submits strong statistical evidence to substantiate this viewpoint.

As has been stated by our worthy chairman, the member for Parkdale, the figures on recidivism in Canada are disturbing, and I think it is time that a new approach to this problem is taken. As has been stated, it is sound economics to appoint a few dozen more probation officers to look after certain types of offenders, under strict supervision, particularly the juveniles, on the outside, rather than employ several hundred guards to look after them on the inside, and perhaps keep their families as well. This is the monetary aspect of the problem, without saying anything about the human values involved, which of course cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

Mr. Speaker, there is another subject mentioned in this "pocket-sized" edition of the report, of which I would like to make special mention, and which our chairman touched on briefly, and that is juvenile delinquency.

This is a subject with which I am brought in close contact from time to time, in my duties as a school principal, and which, appears to be quite prevalent in our larger centres of population. From evidence submitted to the committee, it appears that Toronto is the only centre in the province where there is a full-time clinic, investigating the problems of juvenile delinquency.

Dr. J. S. Atcheson, Director of the Juvenile Court Clinic, and his staff, deserve a great deal of credit for the contribution they have made, from their clinical services, not only to the Juvenile Court, but also to our training school at Galt and to the local court probation officers.

The fact that the Juvenile Court in this city utilizes the clinic's advice in at least 90 per cent. of its cases, speaks for itself. It is refreshing to know that every child sent to one of the province's training schools from the City of Toronto has been seen by this clinic, and a full investigation report has been given to the Juvenile Court officials, prior to any committal arrangement.

One could enumerate many of the causes of juvenile delinquency, such as broken homes, poor home relationships, both social and economic, poor personal relationships, defectiveness, emotional instability and so on, but it takes a great deal of clinical observation and work to diagnose the reasons for every act committed by a delinquent boy or girl. Such a study takes a great deal of time, Mr. Speaker, and one knows that a judge or other official cannot possibly explore all the facets of the child's behaviour within the time at their disposal and, therefore, the clinical report of such a body is of immeasurable value. Like the presentence report of the probation officer, a clinical-investigation report of a delinquent boy or girl, submitted to a Juvenile Court, enables the officials to assess the delinquent act in relation to the child, and prescribes proper treatment.

Although it is not recommended in this report, I am of the opinion that it would be a most progressive step if all the Juvenile Courts in this province, particularly those in the larger centres, established such a clinic. I am aware of the difficulties of securing qualified personnel for such work and of the economic factors involved, particularly in smaller centres, but what I am saying is that such facilities are the scientific way of effectively coping with this problem.

If the government in its wisdom sees fit to implement the recommendation covering the establishment of a reception and diagnostic centre—and this is definitely a step in the right direction for the scientific classification and segregation of all our incoming inmate population—then perhaps a wing of such a centre, with a separate organization, could very well be designated to carry on a parallel work with our youthful delinquent population. The court, after determining the guilt of any particular act, could refer the delinquent to such a centre, which would act as an observation centre, to undergo clinical study and diagnosis before any committal arrangement was made.

It is difficult to say, Mr. Speaker, if there is more juvenile delinquency today than, we will say, a decade or two ago. I think there is definitely more discussion and concern about it today, which of course is all to the good.

Although one may hear quite frequently that parents are not facing up to their responsibilities, and this is quite true in large measure, it has been my experience in the schools that the great majority of parents are genuinely interested in the progress and behaviour of their children, and are most anxious to co-operate with their teachers and other authorities in every possible way. However, I would say much more parental education on the subject would be in the public interest. We live in a very complicated society today, with many social problems, and things we perhaps did—and now boast about doing in our younger days—went by relatively unnoticed, and little was done about them, whereas, today such acts would perhaps warrant investigation for delinquent behaviour.

There is no doubt that, no matter how much money is spent in diagnosing and endeavouring to solve this problem, juvenile delinquency will never be fully grappled with until responsible citizens in the various communities take a hand in the problem themselves. Responsible citizens, the church, parent organizations, and other groups, could do much in this regard, and thus aid in taking the pressure off our courts and institutions alike.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the hon. members of the House for their attention, and once again express my pleasure at being appointed a member of this Select Committee.

The Acting Speaker in the Chair.

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I should first like to say that it has been my pleasure to serve on this committee during the entire period of its sittings. I take this opportunity to congratulate the chairman, the hon. member from Parkdale (Mr. Stewart) for the fine report that he has presented here this afternoon. The hon. member was, I may say, intensely interested in this subject; I think I am safe in saying that during the entire period the committee held meetings he did the work of 3 men. Certainly, he was not afraid to work long hours, and I am quite sure he did not belong to a union; he had no thought of an 8-hour day or a 40-hour week.

For the members of the committee, this is our day of emancipation, for the chairman was known throughout our sittings as the slave driver. Today, the slaves are free. Nevertheless, I should like to say that through it all the chairman was kindly, generous and friendly, and that he got more information out of the witnesses than could any other man. Many a time he poured oil on the troubled waters, and as a result we have today a unanimous report.

I should like to pay tribute to the hon. Minister of the Department of Reform Institutions, for I believe with all my heart that he is trying to do a real job under the most difficult and trying conditions, with limited facilities and a lack of appreciation on the part of the public as to reform, and reformative methods.

The present hon. Minister is labouring under a legacy that has been created over the years; poor buildings, lack of segregation and all the other things that enter into the picture.

It seems to me that the Department of Reform Institutions has always been the unwanted child, perhaps due to the fact that the department was not a revenue-producer. Yet this department should be of interest to every citizen in the Province of Ontario; and it should be of interest to every hon. member of this House, for it spends $10 million a year, $1½ million of which is returnable by way of products from the farms and industry. But it costs the Province of Ontario $8½ million to administer this department each and every year.

The present hon. Minister and his officials have given excellent leadership, and I am sure they appreciate the spotlight that has been thrown on the difficulties they have had to contend with over the years. A year ago the hon. Minister laid plans before this House which would do much to improve the reform situation in Ontario. He told us what he proposed to do in the way of buildings and segregation. It is my opinion that the hon. Minister has not had a full opportunity to prove himself. I am quite sure that he will be prepared to carry out proper plans as soon as this report is inwardly digested.

I should like also to pay tribute to the Deputy Minister. I do not think I have ever met a man who had at his fingertips the information he has. Every time he came to the committee, I was reminded of that passage in The Deserted Village by Oliver Goldsmith, when speaking about the school teacher, he said:

Still they gaze,
And still the wonder grew,
That one small head
Could carry all he knew.

That can truthfully be said of the Deputy Minister, for we gazed and gazed, and still our wonder grew, that one small head could carry all he knew.

To a former hon. Minister, now the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar), I must give credit for the creation of the institution at Brampton, and all that it has done. Like the Leader of the Opposition, I think it is the only institution in the province that has shown any results by way of reformation, apart from the Alex G.

Brown Clinic at Mimico, which operates in a very limited scope. Not only do I say that the present hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs is responsible for Brampton, but he has given us the industrial farms at Burtch and Rideau, and he began the very important work that the report is now advocating. Whatever building was done over the past 20 years, was done during that period when the present hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs was Minister of Reform Institutions.

The committee is recommending that more industrial farms be established in the various parts of Ontario to take the pressure off the jails, and to provide work for inmates. We believe that every inmate should work while he is incarcerated.

While we are paying tributes, I should like to mention the hon. Attorney-General, for it was under his department that the probation system was set up. To this government goes the credit of the probation system, and all that it means: I think it is the answer to many of the problems of reformation. Many changes have been made over the past years, and still more will be made in the years that lie ahead; but I make this definite assertion, that no administration anywhere is more humane or gives as kindly and generous treatment to the inmates of its institutions as does this administration.

I should like to speak for a few minutes on two or three other subjects.

First, as to rehabilitation: there should be plans, much more elaborate than we have ever had before, for the rehabilitation of ex-prisoners. These men must be brought back into the ranks of normal citizenship, and given every assistance towards this objective.

How are we going to do these things? First of all, transportation should be provided for every ex-inmate to his place of arrest. If necessary, clothing should be supplied. He should have means sufficient to provide for himself, until he is established in a job. And—this is very important, indeed it is a vital necessity—a job should be found for the prisoner before he is released. Finally, society should be ready to receive him. Society at the moment is not always willing to accept the ex-prisoner.

All this can best be done by the Department of Reform Institutions and social workers paid by the government, with the co-operation of volunteer workers. The real test of any reformatory system is what happens to a man after his discharge, not what happens when he is in the reformatory. The purpose of training and treatment of prisoners should be to establish in them the will to lead a good life, so that upon their release, they will be ready to fit into the pattern of normal society.

I do not think we are going to reform prisoners unless we segregate the reformable from the non-reformable. Those who cannot be reformed—and there are many in the Province of Ontario—should be placed in preventative detention, not in a reformatory proper, but in a separate institution. By this means you protect society from them, and that is all you can do.

Secondly, I would like to speak about chaplain services in the institutions. In the Archambault Report, 1946, the Royal Commissioners had this to say on the subject of religion: "Religion touches the deepest springs of human conduct, for it can furnish to the weak and unstable the highest ideals and sternest inhibitions."

Formal religious services in our reformatories and jails are not enough. Nothing can take the place of personal work, individual counsel, constant guidance. I believe the chaplains should be permitted greater freedom in dealing with prisoners; and I believe they should be given the opportunity to render assistance in other than spiritual matters. At the present moment we have no chaplaincy service in any of our institutions. We have chaplains working on a part-time basis. But I would like to congratulate the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions upon the fact, of which he has informed us on one or two occasions, that he is setting up a permanent chaplaincy service. I believe, sir, that is a step in the right direction.

Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe, Home Secretary of Great Britain, has said that "one of the most important causes of the increase of crime and the decline in moral standards is the lack of religion in daily life."

The fundamental work of the chaplain is to recreate a sense of the spiritual; and I believe that only the chaplain can do that adequately.

Then I would like to speak for a few moments in regard to work. I think we should emphasize the dignity of work, and make adequate provision for it in all types of institutions. At the present moment we find the inmates of reformatories have considerable work to do; and when it comes down to the lowly jails, all the inmates have to do is housecleaning. As a result, they get out of the habit of working. If every adolescent had in the background the experience of hard work, there would be far fewer criminals in this province. When work is neglected, it soon is despised; laziness is exalted, vice and crime are encouraged. We need a good work programme in our institutions. Indeed, good work habits should be a cardinal principle governing all institutions in the Province of Ontario.

A word about recidivism. In all countries, including our own, recidivism has increased to an alarming extent. The only jurisdiction where it has not increased is Great Britain. There it has not only been checked, but reduced.

There are only a small percentage of the inmates of our reformatories who do not leave more criminally inclined than they came in. This is a severe indictment, but it is a just indictment. Although the reformatory purpose of reformatories was given statutory recognition a few years ago—

MR. SALSBERG: May I ask a question? I want to be sure if I heard the hon. member right. Does he, in this connection, refer to the work of the department, not only recently, but over the years?

MR. DOWNER: I am referring to the record over all the years, not just recently. In fact I think it is a little better today than it has been.

Although the reformatory purpose of reformatories was given statutory recognition many years ago, practically nothing has been done to give that purpose effect during all the years reformatories have been in existence. We know that a man who goes into one of these places should come out a better citizen. That is, or should be, the aim of detention, the objective of any reformatory programme. We are interested not so much in punishment as in reformation. But most places of detention are just "colleges of crime." It will be far better for Ontario when we can point to a place of detention and say, "That is a hospital where the misfits of society are being cured, and where the incurables are being cared for."

A last word, about probation. We all know the story of probation in Great Britain. What has happened there in this respect can happen here. The probationary system was introduced in England in 1907. In that year 185,000 persons were committed to prison. In 1950, in spite of an increased population, only 34,825 were committed. In the same year, 34,000 adult offenders were placed on probation. This technique, practiced since 1907, has resulted in 75 per cent. rehabilitation; it has also caused a tremendous decrease in recidivism.

I contend, Mr. Speaker, that it is far better economics to appoint 12 probation officers to look after people before they get to jail, than to hire 24 officers to look after them in prison. Britain has 1,100 probation officers. We have, at the most, 40. Our lack of a probation system has resulted in 70 per cent. of the inmates of our jails and reformatories becoming repeaters. In England, the practice of probation has resulted in a reduction of repeaters of 75 per cent. Viewing this only from the standpoint of economics, people must be convinced that the use of probation in the case of offenders who have not developed serious criminal records is a potent means of reducing the size of prisons and the number of prisoners. Probation, as the chairman of the committee has said, will take the pressure off the front doors of our jails, and perhaps will avoid the heavy costs of maintaining people in them. We do not want more reformatories; we want fewer committals than we now have. We do not want to go on building reformatories in every county of Ontario. We want to keep people out of such places; and the only means of doing so are, first, probation; second, segregation; third, teaching the duties of citizenship. We must not continue to tolerate the conditions which exist today. We cannot afford the unnecessary wastage, in actual cash, in man-hours of production, or in the deterioration of human resources which are the consequences of placing too many offenders into overcrowded jails and reformatories.

Properly administered, probation will eliminate much of the work of rehabilitation, as well as the stigma which falls upon the prisoner and upon his family. It will eliminate the bad associations which are formed, even in the very best of jails, and which are responsible for a great deal of recidivism. It will eliminate the idleness one finds in jails, and the ill-effects of such idleness. It will eliminate a great deal of the costs of incarceration. The experts tell us that probation costs about 40 cents per day. In other words, it costs 40 cents per day to keep a man on probation, but it costs $4.00 per day to keep him in jail.

In my opinion, once real probation is effected, we shall cut our prison population in the Province of Ontario by one-half, and I am quite sure that the incidence of repeaters will be vastly reduced.

You will never change a man from being a criminal to being a law-abiding citizen merely by sentencing him to jail, any more than you can make a man good by legislation. If we are to arrest and control the criminal habits of our fellow men, then we must plan and diagnose the positive reformatory plan for each individual.

In our report, we are bringing forth such a plan. I hope, along with all the other members of the committee, that this report will be given the attention it deserves. We hope it will not be pigeon-holed, but implemented, so that we will not have to build new and larger institutions, but will be able to contain our ever-increasing number of prisoners, as a result of our continually growing population, within the walls of the present institutions.

I believe if we follow out the plan set out in this report, we will be able not only to contain them within the walls of our present institutions, but we will be able to do away with some of those presently existing.

Mr. Speaker, I have taken up a great deal of time, but I am especially interested in this subject. Before I sit down, I would like to congratulate the government for setting up this committee and for giving us its blessing.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston) : I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST : Mr. Speaker, I move that as some members may desire to speak to the report after they have had an opportunity of reading it, the discussion be adjourned to a later date and an Order be placed on the Order paper for its further consideration. That will fit into the motion made by the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle).

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST : Before moving the adjournment of the House, may I say we will continue with the debate on the amendment to the reply to the Speech from the Throne tomorrow. I would like to complete the debate on Wednesday, so we may introduce the budget on Thursday.

I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.50 of the clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, MARCH 9, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I am very glad today to welcome students from Norway Public School in the Beaches District, and also a group of 14 Kiwanians from the City of Stratford. I assure you, it is a very great pleasure, on behalf of the hon. members of the Legislature, to welcome these groups particularly the members of the Stratford Kiwanis Club.

I beg to announce that the Committee on Private Bills will continue its meeting at 7 o'clock this evening, in Committee Room No. 1, and as many members as possible are asked to attend.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister) moves that a Select Committee of 11 members be appointed to consider and to fill in the schedule in a bill to be introduced respecting the representation of the people in the Legislative Assembly, with all convenient speed, such committee to be composed as follows:

Mr. MacOdrum (Chairman), Messrs. Allan (Haldimand-Norfolk), Collings, Downer, Grummett, Herbert, Nixon, Noden, Oliver, Porter and Whitney.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that when this House adjourns the present sitting thereof, it stand adjourned until 2 of the clock tomorrow afternoon, and that the provisions of Rule No. 2 of the assembly be suspended insofar as they might apply to this motion.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: This is a precautionary measure. I am hopeful addresses on the amendment to the amendment to the Speech from the Throne may be concluded tomorrow, in order that the budget can be introduced on Thursday, and it seemed wise to call the House at 2 o'clock in case the extra hour be required for the addresses. If we require still further time, I may ask the indulgence of the House and yourself, Mr. Speaker, not to look at the clock, but let us continue past 6 o'clock, in order that the debate can be concluded without a night sitting tomorrow. That is the purpose of the motion.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): If the hon. Prime Minister is making plans to conclude the debate tonight, there will be no necessity of calling the House at 2 o'clock tomorrow.

HON. MR. FROST: I am not counting on the addresses being concluded tonight, but I am hoping they will be tomorrow afternoon. The budget will be introduced on Thursday.

MR. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like your guidance on a question of privilege, or procedure, whichever you may call it. I was taken off guard, unfortunately, and did not quite understand the meaning of the previous motion which was before the House a few minutes ago. Is that the motion dealing with the Select Committee on Redistribution?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. SALSBERG: In view of the fact I was not prepared and did not expect it, could I say a word or two on the motion now, even though it has been formally carried?

HON. MR. FROST: I will be introducing the bill in a moment. Perhaps the hon. member might more properly speak at that time. A debate on first reading is out of order, and I think the hon. member might wait for second reading of this bill, when he can speak all he likes.

MR. SALSBERG: Except that the principle is set up by the adoption of the motion to set up a Select Committee, and I was going to suggest another procedure, so that now, or a few minutes ago, would have been the best time to raise it.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out this is the traditional method. It has been done this way ever since the beginning of time, and I think it is the right way.

MR. SPEAKER: I am afraid we cannot revert back to a motion which has already been carried. If we broke that rule our procedure would be completely thrown overboard. I feel I gave ample time and opportunity to the hon. members for discussion, before I announced it was carried, and I think I must abide by that very governing and guiding rule of the House.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston) moves that the Order for the House to resolve itself into committee to consider Bill No. 24, "An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Conventions of Ontario and Quebec," be discharged, and that the bill be referred back to the Standing Committee on Private Bills for further consideration.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of a bill intituled, "An Act respecting representation of the people in the Legislative Assembly."

He said: May I give this explanation. This bill is complementary to the motion a moment ago. The practice in the past, in connection with redistribution, has been to introduce a bill, the important part of which is the schedules and it has been the practice to leave the schedules blank so the committee may fill them in. That is the method, I believe, which has always been followed in this House. Indeed, I believe it is the method followed at Ottawa.

If hon. members will note the motion, they will see it refers to the appointment of a Select Committee to consider and fill in the schedule in a bill to be introduced respecting the representation of the people in the Legislative Assembly with all convenient speed. Nothing has been completed, nothing has been filled in. The schedules have all been left blank, and as a matter of fact, the membership of the House has been left blank as well, the entire matter being for the committee to consider.

It is the intention of the government that the Select Committee to which these matters will be referred, should consider the question during this session and report their findings, so the matter may be dealt with during the next 3 weeks.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Is it the intention of the government to have an over-all redistribution or simply to add 7 or 8 seats to the present membership?

HON. MR. FROST: May I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, to answer his question, that I do not want to prophesy what the committee will do. After all, the committee is appointed with powers to deal with this matter. If the hon. Leader of the Opposition wants my personal opinion—and I suppose that that is in order—

MR. OLIVER: I imagine it would carry a good deal of weight.

HON. MR. FROST: —I have no hesitation in saying that redistribution which cuts people away from their moorings is a great mistake. That is my opinion. With regard to added representation in this House, I think that is a matter for the committee to determine, but I think the cutting up of historic ridings and disturbing historic associations is a mistake. I give that opinion to the committee for what it is worth.

MR. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): On the motion for first reading of this bill, I would like to say that I think the motion which preceded the bill is very undemocratic and an extremely partisan action with which we should not proceed.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know whether this is the place for the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) to indulge in comments of that nature. They should be reserved for second reading.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to make this comment on both readings.

MR. SPEAKER: The motion has not yet been put.

Has the hon. member a question?

MR. SALSBERG: The "hon. member" will put it any way you insist. I will put it as a question.

MR. SPEAKER: Not an involved question.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to put a question to the government at this stage of the proposed legislation and ask whether, in view of the fact that the Conservative Party members in the Manitoba Legislature only a few days ago, argued against the setting up of a Select Committee of that Legislature to study and deal with the question of redistribution because, they argued, such action was partisan, would not this government agree—since this is a Conservative Government—that the arguments advanced by their colleagues in Manitoba are sound, and that it should not resort to such a partisan method of redistributing the ridings—a method which invariably leads to the gerrymandering of ridings?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, in regard to the question, may I say I have not seen or heard anything about the resolution in the Manitoba Legislature and even if I had, it would not have made any difference.

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

PROVINCIAL PARKS ACT, 1954

HON. MR. CHALLIES moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Provincial Parks Act, 1954."

He said: The importance of a new provincial parks policy as it will favourably affect every citizen of the province is such as to warrant a full explanation of its objectives.

The purpose of the new policy is outlined in section 2 of the new Act:

All provincial parks are dedicated to the people of the Province of Ontario and others who may use them for their healthful enjoyment and education and the provincial parks shall be maintained for the benefit of future generations in accordance with this Act and the regulations made under this Act.

The Provincial Government is aware that there is a need today for an enlarged provincial park policy and has given careful consideration to the problem. Increased economic productivity and prosperity have given the average Ontario family more leisure and greater spending power than ever before. The wide-spread adoption of a shorter work week, paid vacations, and retirement pensions have contributed to this leisure and spending power. At the same time, the extension of paved highways and the great increase in the number of motor vehicles have given easy access to areas once considered remote. Our cities have grown larger and the proportion of urban dwellers in our population has greatly increased. The social and economic changes taking place in our province call for a reassessment of the present parks programme and for an enlarged policy dedicated to the people of Ontario.

Such a policy must look two ways—to the acquisition of new recreation areas and to the continued improvement of existing areas. Along the St. Lawrence River and throughout most of Southern Ontario, very little land has been retained by the Crown for public purposes. With few exceptions within 100 miles of our great urban centres, the week-end vacationer is unable to turn from the highway to relaxing and attractive recreation sites. Ontario, however, is in the enviable position of having many potential park sites, now privately-owned, but which could be acquired. The Ottawa River Valley, the Rideau Lakes, the banks of the St. Lawrence River, and the shores of the Great Lakes all offer natural advantages not easily found elsewhere.

Proposals for new parks and recreation areas must be made with the requirements of future years in mind and recommendations must be weighed in the light of anticipated conditions. The proposed development of the St. Lawrence Seaway and power project will bring new demands as well as new opportunities. The industrial expansion that may well follow would produce new urban concentrations. New residents will seek recreation areas that are readily accessible and will increase the burden on existing areas. The growing tourist industry is already taxing parklands and recreation areas to the limit. Intelligent appraisal of future needs will permit simultaneous development of outdoor recreation facilities and the great economic and social expansion taking place in our province.

AIMS OF ENLARGED POLICY

The provision of recreation centres and parks must take into account the protection of natural advantages. Ontario has exceptional scenic beauty, great expanses of lake frontages, innumerable inland waters, and extensive forest lands. These must be preserved and protected for the people of Ontario and for future generations. Such a programme need not be inordinately expensive. Much of the potential parkland is not adequate for successful farming. Soil conditions are poor, the land is rough and rocky, or eroded and neglected. Such land, though unsuitable for agriculture or industrial use, has not lost its scenic beauty or the charm of its natural state. It has a wilderness atmosphere that can be enjoyed without the actual hardship of remote wilds. Some of these sites could become wild life sanctuaries or game preserves. Through conservation they could render a service to the community measurable not only in dollars and cents, but also in mental health and happiness.

Recreation centres require recreation facilities. These include beaches for adults and for children, fishing areas, wharfs, picnic and camping sites, scenic drives, hiking and riding trails, nature study areas, youth hostels, swimming holes, golf courses, and historic sites. The requirements of winter recreation should not be overlooked. Ski trails, toboggan slides, and ice fishing add to winter fun.

Ontario has a fascinating and varied history. Every locality has its own relics of early settlers, and records of remarkable men; the memories of our pioneer forefathers can be preserved in park museums, reminding us of their trials and hardships and encouraging us in our own advancement.

Control of parking facilities and careful supervision of camping grounds and concessionaries will protect the natural attractions and permit greater enjoyment. Unrestricted vehicle movement and camping can destroy vegetation and natural beauty. Indiscriminate granting of concessions can lead to exploitation of the travelling public by

"get-rich-quick" operators. Strict limiting of the amount of privately-controlled land in the park areas can preserve the parks' public character. Ontario parks can perform a dual function—protecting and conserving natural advantages and providing recreation for all our citizens.

PRINCIPLES AND EMBODIMENT

The principles it is proposed to embody in new legislation may be found within the Provincial Parks Act and the Presqu'ile Park Act. Recreational areas must be developed without discrimination and according to needs.

There must be long-term planning; consultation and co-operation with local authorities must be continued. There must, above all, be a benefit and service to the people of Ontario. While large parks such as Algonquin Park or Temagami Forest provide ample space without crowding, their facilities best serve the vacationer on an extended holiday. Today the development of smaller parklands close to urban centres where population pressures are greatest is most desirable.

Before these principles can be implemented, an overall classification covering the various types of parks in Ontario is required. Class I would include such large parklands as Algonquin, Lake Superior, Quetico, and Temagami. In Class II is the group of recreational areas such as Rondeau and Presqu'ile Parks within easy reach of urban centres. This class includes existing and proposed recreational sites conveniently located permitting the motorist to reach them quickly from his home or place of work. Facilities in such parks should be designed for week-end vacationers, families arriving to spend the day, or casual afternoon visitors. Here the outdoor barbecues, picnic sites, tables, benches, and bathing beaches are most important. Class III parks, like those in Class II, should be located within easy reach of urban centres but they will be smaller and less elaborately equipped. Such a park will provide a quiet and convenient place where a motorist may stop for a picnic lunch or a rest or where a family from the nearby city may enjoy a quiet afternoon away from crowds and traffic. Class IV includes park areas sponsored by counties or municipalities. These are more local in character and while the Provincial Government takes an interest in them less directly, the facilities of government departments are available for advice and technical assistance.

The administration and control of parks within Class I would remain under the jurisdiction of the Department of Lands and Forests. Parks within Classes II and III, gradually acquired and developed, would be placed under the authority of a designated Minister. He would determine the form of park administration suitable to each park. He would be given power to acquire private lands by direct purchase or through expropriation for park purposes. Such a scheme of administrative control would permit a co-ordinated and effective park programme of developing recreation centres where needs arise, bringing the beneficial advantages of recreation to new areas and greater numbers of our people.

FACTORS FOR CONSIDERATION

In the development of such a programme it is well to point out for consideration 3 important factors. Population pressures in Ontario are already great, particularly in the southern part of the province. Recreational areas of sufficient size to accommodate local requirements during most of the year are often overcrowded in the summer by large numbers of visitors. Congestion detracts from the natural advantages of any parkland. The Point Pelee National Park is an example of overcrowding and its destructive effect. Last summer, almost 500,000 people visited the Park, which is 6 square miles in size. It has lost much of its natural beauty and appeal. This is a blow not only to nearby urban dwellers who use the park on a daily or weekend basis, but also Ontario's tourist industry. Recreation areas should be of sufficient size to allow for seasonal fluctuation of population. Planned parklands must consider every aspect of population requirements. The reservoir area to be created by the St. Lawrence development is a perfect example of this need. Along this new waterfront there will be new opportunities for the practical application of a sound parks programme. Recreation areas must serve visitors and tourists as well as citizens residing in the immediate vicinity.

Shifts and balances in population and their effect on recreation areas must be viewed in conjunction with the requirements of Ontario's tourist industry. Because this province has so many outdoor recreation attractions, the income derived from this industry is of very great importance in our economy. During 1951 American citizens paid 24,900,000 visits to Canada. A major proportion of these visitors came to Ontario. The tourist industry affects every section of the province from border towns to north-land areas where many people derive their total incomes from tourist expenditures. While the industry is thriving and growing, it is comparatively young. With foresight and planning, recreation areas for the people of Ontario can develop with the tourist industry. New recreation areas will add to the appreciation of our natural scenic advantages and attract greater numbers of visitors. Roadside parks and picnic grounds at convenient and attractive sites are popular features of the tourist industry. The parallel development and growth of the tourist industry and provincial recreation areas will add to the prosperity of our people as well as to their healthful enjoyment.

The acquisition and development by the province of publicly-owned parklands and recreational facilities is not to be construed in any way as an interference with private enterprise or rights. What is sought is a simultaneous growth of allied interests. Industry and recreation must expand together. The average citizen must not be prevented from enjoying the natural benefits of the province. Within recreation areas themselves, privately-held property must be kept at a minimum to protect both owners and visitors. Private holdings within parks in Classes I and II must not interfere with the purpose of general community enjoyment. It must not be frustrated by indiscriminate leasing or sale. Summer cottage colonies must be controlled and made a part of overall recreational planning. Picturesque sites and easy access to beach areas are not the prerogatives of the few. If these factors are kept clearly in mind, the development of particular areas in a co-operative and community spirit will continue to keep Ontario in a leading position in the field of outdoor recreation attractions.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I ask my hon. friend whether these parks are to be set up under a department as yet undesignated, or are they to be under the Department of Planning and Development?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: As you will recall, under the old Parks Act, the larger parks were under the jurisdiction of the Department of Lands and Forests; in the past, we have had to have a separate Act for each one, such as one for Presqu'île and another for Long Point. As I have said, all the parks will be brought under the new Act.

Whether the parks will be under a commission or a superintendent, is a matter to be decided by the hon. Minister. The new Act provides for both types of administration. The administration will be under the Minister of one of the departments.

MR. OLIVER: Would you say by which Minister they will be administered?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That has not yet been decided.

MR. OLIVER: Surely that point should be included in the bill. Can you not make up your mind about it?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I think it is a matter of government responsibility; the government will have to say under which department it is to come.

MR. OLIVER: The question has to be decided sometime.

MR. SALSBERG: Will it be administered by hydro?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: They would do a good job.

MR. SALSBERG: Since you introduced the bill, is it your intention to have hydro look after it?

MR. SPEAKER: The question has been answered.

MR. SALSBERG: But surely, Mr. Speaker—

MR. SPEAKER: The Minister has given his answer to the question.

MR. SALSBERG: But, Mr. Speaker, my question was, since he introduced the bill—

MR. SPEAKER: In answer to a question by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), the hon. Minister has said that the matter is in the hands of the government. I do not think there should be any further questions on that point.

THE PROVINCIAL AID TO DRAINAGE ACT, 1954

HON. G. H. DOUCETT moves first reading of a bill intituled, "The Provincial Aid to Drainage Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill is a revision of the present Act, and is designated to simplify the procedures with respect to application for aid to drainage works.

The Act will henceforth apply to all the channels of a drainage work. This will simplify procedures because, while at present only trunk channels are included, most branch drains are in themselves trunks and in the past separate applications have been required in respect of these. Now one application only will be required in respect of the whole drainage work.

The Act will not in future apply to either open or covered drains, or to sections of a drainage work into which domestic sewage is discharged.

Where a drainage work on which a grant is paid includes a work toward which a grant is payable under another Act, the latter grant will be reduced accordingly. In this respect the bill is similar to the Act, but the new Act will clarify the matter somewhat.

The application procedure is simplified from the standpoint of the municipalities in that they will be enabled to apply after passing the by-law for undertaking the work. Under the present Act application is required before the passing of the by-law, and compliance was often difficult. In addition, a special provision is made for applications where emergency work is required to be performed and the work is commenced before the application is made.

THE HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT AMENDMENT ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves first reading of a bill intituled "The Highway Improvement Amendment Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill would make four small changes in the present Act.

Firstly, it would permit county councils to consolidate their by-laws, subject of course to the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

Secondly, at the present time, councils or local municipalities have power, subject to the approval of the Municipal Board, to pass by-laws regulating the use of land abutting on any designated highway or part of a highway. The amendment would confer the same power on county councils with respect to land lying within 150 feet of any limit of a county road.

Thirdly, these amendments, which are designated to ensure that the free movement of traffic on controlled-access highways will not be impeded, will prohibit persons from erecting racetracks, drive-in theatres, etc. on land within one-half mile of a controlled-access highway without a permit from the Minister. Any land now used for the purposes mentioned will not be affected. This bill would give to municipalities where the need exists, the same privilege respecting controlled-access highways.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask my hon. friend, did he not previously have control over the building of outdoor theatres and racetracks?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Only within a certain distance of the highways. We require this further amendment relating to controlled-access highways.

THE TREES ACT

HON. WELLAND S. GEMMELL moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Trees Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, apparently under the present Act certain municipalities have found themselves unable to pass by-laws controlling the cutting of trees within their boundaries. The purpose of this bill is to extend to all organized municipalities, townships, and towns throughout the Province of Ontario, power to pass such by-laws.

The bill would also give such municipalities power to enact regulations and to employ persons to enforce them, in respect of the cutting of trees. At the present time, certain municipalities in some sections of the province are faced with the problems of persons using fire, bulldozers and other means to destroy wood lots, as an excuse for clearing the land, and then use it for other purposes than that for which it was intended. This measure would give to such municipalities and townships the privilege of passing by-laws and enforcing them, to prevent the indiscriminate cutting of trees.

THE HIGHWAY TRAFFIC AMENDMENT ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Highway Traffic Amendment Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in this bill we are suggesting an amendment be made to make it clear that a built-up area includes not only dwellings and buildings for business purposes, but also schools and churches.

At the present time, it is an offence under subsection 1 of section 4 of the Act to make a false statement in an application or other paper-writing made in order to procure a licence, permit or certificate of registration. This amendment makes it an offence to make a false statement in any application or paper-writing required under the Act.

The present Act requires two separate attaching devices when a motor vehicle is drawing a trailer, wagon, or other conveyance on the highway. Under the proposed amendment, such provisions would become applicable to farm tractors drawing trailers or other vehicles on a highway.

The amendments also provide that the council of a city, town or village and the trustees of a police village may prescribe a speed limit of 25 miles per hour within the municipality and that the council of a city, town or village, the council of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto and the trustees of a police village may authorize a speed limit up to 50 miles per hour on any highway under its jurisdiction.

The proposed amendment under section 6 makes it clear that when two vehicles approach a crossroad or intersection, the person in charge of the vehicle to the left is under a duty to yield the right-of-way to the person on the right.

Under section 41 of the present Act, signals are required only for left turns. Under the amendments proposed herein, signals will be required for right turns and stopping.

It is at present provided that traffic, before entering a through highway, shall stop immediately before entering the nearest crosswalk. The proposed amendment provides for stopping before entering an intersection where there is no crosswalk.

At present, the depositing on highways of nails, glass, etc., which may be injurious to motor vehicle tires, is prohibited. We propose to add to that provision the words "and rubbish."

Provision is made for a greater penalty for a first offence of failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

At present, a penalty collected for an offence on the King's Highways is paid to the Department of Highways and a penalty collected for an offence committed on a county highway is paid to the treasurer of the county. The pertinent amendment provides that a penalty collected for an offence committed on a King's Highway within the limits of a city, town or village or on a county highway shall be paid to the local municipality in which the offence was committed.

The present Act provides that a person in charge of a motor vehicle involved in an accident must report the accident if the damage exceeds $50. It is proposed to amend the Act to increase that amount to $100. This amendment is necessary by reason of the fact that since 1930, or thereabouts, when the Act first came into force, the relative cost of repairs to damaged motor vehicles has greatly increased.

SCHOOLS ADMINISTRATION ACT, 1954

HON. W. J. DUNLOP moves first reading of a bill intituled, "The Schools Administration Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill is the third and last instalment of the consolidation by which we are attempting to put 11 education acts into 3, and this particular one deals with school terms and compulsory attendance; with the duties, rights, and qualifications of teachers; with the boards of reference required sometimes by trustees and teachers; with the duties of school boards and trustees; with auxiliary classes; school sites; offences and penalties. This bill, after second reading, will be referred to the Committee on Education.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Public Schools Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This bill takes out of The Public Schools Act as it at present exists those sections which have been put into The Schools Administration Act. The same arrangement applies to another of these bills.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Separate Schools Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill provides for taking out of The Separate Schools Act as it is at present those sections which have been put into The Schools Administration Act, in order that all may be, so to speak, under the same roof. It is proposed that, after second reading, both bills shall be referred to the Committee on Education.

THE TEACHERS' SUPERANNUATION ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Teachers' Superannuation Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This bill will also go to the Committee on Education after it has been read the second time. I should like to explain at least two of the sections.

The first section provides that teachers who are employed by the Government of Canada and who hold Ontario certificates and are teaching members, or former members, of Her Majesty's Canadian Forces, whether they are employed by the Government of Canada or the Government of Ontario, may, if they wish, enjoy the privileges given by the present Superannuation Act. The second section provides that, in computing the pension of a teacher who is about to retire, the term on which the computation is made should be reduced from 15 years, as at present, to 10 years, the last 10 years of his or her teaching. Other less important sections can be dealt with fully on second reading, and by the Committee on Education.

THE WOLF AND BEAR BOUNTY ACT

HON. WELLAND S. GEMMELL moves first reading of bill intituled "An Act to amend the Wolf and Bear Bounty Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: The intention of this bill is, first of all, to encourage the destruction of wolves, and with special reference to Northern Ontario. It has come at the special request of those who have spent a considerable time at this work. Up to the present, the regulations have been to the effect that anybody destroying a wolf must, to claim a bounty on it, produce the whole carcass of the animal. The purpose of the bill is to relieve him of that responsibility and require him to produce only the head of the animal. He will thus be relieved of the obligation of dragging these animals down to civilization in order to claim the bounty.

THE CROWN TIMBER ACT, 1952

HON. WELLAND S. GEMMELL moves first reading of bill intituled "An Act to amend the Crown Timber Act, 1952."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: As I explained in the House the other day, under the Crown Timber Act, 1952, the Department of Lands and Forests demands of all licenced operators in this province holding concessions of over 50 square miles that they supply the department with cutting plans for the next succeeding 10 years. The plans so submitted are known as "master plans"; and each year, of course, operators must submit to the department their cutting plans for the year. Both plans must have the approval of the Division of Timber Management of Lands and Forests. The concessionaire will, under this bill, be required to submit to the department information as to how he is going to handle the regeneration and reforestation of the cut-over area covered by the concession. The bill will also give the Minister the power, if the submission does not accord with the wishes of the department, to insist on further work to ensure the regeneration of the timber on the lands help by the various concessionaires.

THE WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

HON. CHARLES DALEY moves first reading of bill intituled "An Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This deals with some internal affairs in the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Some years ago an amount of $100,000 per year was authorized to be set aside in respect of the rehabilitation of injured workmen. In view of the ever-increasing industrial activity in the province and consequently increased number of injuries, this amount is now deemed to be insufficient and the bill provides that it shall be increased to $200,000.

By another section it is provided that were, for any reason, the secretary of the board is absent, some other officer may be appointed to certify copies of extracts from the board's books.

A further section provides that assessments in respect of a certain class of industry need not necessarily be the same. In other words, an employer who does not make what is regarded as reasonable provision for protecting from injury the workers for whom he has that obligation, may be penalized. That provision, of course, can work in reverse: where the record in an industry is extremely good, and injuries are avoided through the exercise of adequate maintenance, proper care, good housekeeping, and the rest, the board, if in its judgment such action is deemed advisable, may reduce the assessment.

MR. SALSBERG: Will the bill be referred to the Standing Committee on Labour?

HON. MR. DALEY: I do not think so.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I should like to ask whether it is not customary to send a bill of this character to a Standing Committee?

MR. SPEAKER: The answer has been given.

MR. SALSBERG: Is the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) afraid to refer the bill to the Committee on Labour?

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) must accept the answer that the Minister has given. Any hon. member has a perfect right to ask questions, but when the answer is given, that is sufficient.

ON THE AMENDMENT TO THE REPLY TO THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston): Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate very sincerely the mover and seconder of the resolution of thanks to the Lieutenant-Governor for the Speech from the Throne.

One of the first things I would like to say is that, when His Honour opened this session of the Legislature, I was very happy to notice that he wore on his coat a medal which has been bestowed by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II upon many important people through the length and breadth of what is known as the great British Empire. I thought it was a marvellous tribute to Her Majesty that her representative in this House should wear on the left breast of his tunic, on that eventful day, the medal to commemorate her Coronation.

I would like to say, if I might, Mr. Speaker, for the record, that I think the letter which was written by our leader, the hon. Prime Minister, and the little booklet which was issued at the time of the Coronation, is something which should not be quickly forgotten, and I would like to read into my remarks a copy of the letter, in which the hon. Prime Minister said:

I wish to send my cordial greetings to the teachers, young men and women, and boys and girls in the secondary and elementary schools of Ontario. On Tuesday, June 2nd, 1953, when Queen Elizabeth is crowned according to ancient custom, she will solemnly pledge herself to serve the people of the British Commonwealth and Empire as her illustrious father did for many years; and that impressive ceremony is distinctly significant because it typifies and publicly emphasizes the foundation of the liberties which we cherish and which we propose to maintain. While you will enjoy a holiday on Coronation Day, I know you will learn in advance as much as you possibly can of the significance, the romance, and the true meaning of the Coronation of our Queen Elizabeth, the Queen of Canada.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that in the crash of thrones, many of them built on unrighteousness, others propped up by a brittle fabric of convention, the throne of Britain has remained firm. Her Majesty the Queen in her great broadcast at the time of her Coronation, said:

Parliamentary institutions with their free speech and the respect for the rights of minorities, and the consideration of a broad tolerance in thought and its expression—all this we believe to be a precious part of our way of life and outlook . . . These principles are as sacred to the Crown and Monarch as to its many parliaments and peoples—and I ask you to cherish them—and practice them too. Then we can go forward together to peace, seeking justice and freedom for all men.

Mr. Speaker, Her Majesty has asked us to pursue the great principles of responsible government. I sometimes say that cheers, like tears, disappear, and if the cheers on Coronation Day were only an expression of a moment of emotion, then the Coronation was but a spectacle, soon to be a fading memory.

Opportunities will present themselves to us now, and in the future, when our integrity and loyalty to the Crown will demand of us that we stand up and be counted in the part we play, openly and bravely, or step aside as cowards, and evade the responsibilities which have fallen on our shoulders.

The people of this province, Mr. Speaker, were indescribably proud when we learned with satisfaction that the wife of our leader, the hon. Prime Minister had accompanied him to the Coronation in London. I am sure, every hon. member of this House was delighted to know this vivacious and dignified lady had accompanied her husband, representing the people of Ontario at the Coronation.

Let me say, Mr. Speaker, knowing, as I do, the hon. Prime Minister, that he came back from that great historic event with a keener and deeper sense of the responsibilities of our parliamentary institution, than he had when he left the shores of this country for that great event.

While speaking of the Coronation, I am reminded of Westminster Abbey, and I would like to tell this House that the choir of St. George's Cathedral at Kingston, has accepted an invitation this summer to go to Westminster Abbey and sing in the great cathedral, and that the Bishop of Ontario, who lives in my riding, has been invited to preach a sermon in Westminster Abbey. I thought the House should know of those two great historic occasions.

I read, not long ago, an article in a newspaper with reference to a speech made by Dr. J. A. Corry, vice-principal of Queen's University, and head of the Department of Political Science.

In that article, Doctor Corry stated it was his opinion that the civil servants in Ontario were beginning to play a far too important part in relation to government policy. He made the observation that a great number of these civil servants, in their own right, were experts, and he expressed the view that if the elected representatives of the people were going to have any knowledge of, and respect for government, then the hon. Prime Minister of the Legislature of this Province—and, indeed, the Rt. hon. Prime Minister of this great Dominion—would have to set up a number of standing parliamentary committees. The reason for these committees, in the opinion of this great author—who has written an outstanding book on political science—was this: The more committees of this House which are established, the more the elected representatives of the people become experts within the four corners of the knowledge they gain, having regard to the committees on which they serve.

I say, Mr. Speaker, without reservation, that the hon. Prime Minister of this Province must be congratulated on his vision in establishing the policy he has put into effect, at least since I have been in this House, of establishing a large number of committees, some of them Standing Committees of the House, others Select Committees. As a result, those of us who have had the opportunity of serving on committees have gained a vast and greater experience. It has taught us to assume our responsibilities in relation to government, rather than having it dictated to us by the civil servants, who are in the employ of this province.

Another thing I would like to say is this, and in this regard I direct my remarks to the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar).

As every hon. member of this House knows when property is sold at a tax sale, it must be for the amount of taxes owing plus any penalties, and if the owner of the property wishes to redeem it, he must pay to the purchaser what he paid for the property plus 10 per cent. of the total amount as represented by the tax and the penalties.

It has been brought to my attention, and I use this expression advisedly, that

"financial vultures" have begun to adopt a practice of trying to buy in good farm lands, and good lands within the urban centres, at a high price, hoping that if the owner wishes to redeem, he can get his 10 per cent. of what this "vulture" paid in to the treasurer of the municipality in question.

I say with some competence to the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs that no man should be allowed, either in an urban or a rural corporation to receive more than 10 per cent. in relation to what he pays for it at a tax sale on the arrears of the taxes, plus the penalties.

I, therefore, suggest that at this session of the Legislature an amendment should be made to the Assessment Act to stop this practice, which, I am sorry to say, is beginning to take root in the part of the country from which I come.

Another thing I would like to say is this: Down in Kingston, we have what is called, "The Sunnyside Children's Centre." This is a sort of hospital, a home for the observation and treatment of young children with severe behaviour problems, children who are in an extreme need of specialized help, and who, if measures are not taken while there is still time, will become permanent social burdens on the province.

Before I came to the opening of this House, I met some outstanding women of the City of Kingston representing the Board of Management of this fine organization, Mrs. O. A. Carson, Mrs. J. H. C. Gowland, and Mrs. W. S. Arthey. These people told me that The Sunnyside Children's Centre is incorporated under the Charitable Institutions Act, and they get 5 cents per day per child resident in this institution. While this session is still young, I think the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) should bring in an amendment to the Charitable Institutions Act to make it possible to grant to such institutions as this, substantial amounts of money, so they may carry on their very magnificent work, and I say that with some competence.

I would like to say a word in connection with an address, made not long ago, by Colonel W. H. J. Peck, at Vancouver, in which he was quoted as saying that the Canadian Army was almost non-existent as a defensive fighting force, and that the reserve army was not much better.

I want to say here, at this time, that in my riding I have three excellent reserve units, the Prince of Wales' Own Regiment, the First Field Ambulance, and No. 105 Manning Depot. Kingston is also the base for any orders for Eastern Ontario. We have in Barriefield Camp the Royal Canadian Electrical and Mechanical Engineers. We have the headquarters of the Signals Unit of Canada. We have the Royal Military College. If Colonel Peck wants to be sure that recruits are on the "up-and-up" and the units to which I refer are on full strength, I invite him to come to Kingston and see for himself what the situation is, and not make remarks which, having got into the press, are just ready to wreck everything for which democracy stands. He can see, if he comes to Kingston, that we have soldiers there who are just as good as we had in the two world wars, and who, if necessary, will be there when the call comes again. When Colonel Peck made that statement, he did not know what he was talking about, and I am denying that statement in this House, as an old soldier with some knowledge of military affairs.

While speaking of Kingston and its military achievements, it brings to my mind the 50th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals, which took place last November. At that time, a tremendous number of men who served in the Signals Corps came back to attend that great organization, and one does not like to hear remarks to the effect we have not an army that is fit and capable of fighting. It is fit and capable of carrying on a defensive, or an offensive campaign, as the need might arise. And, speaking for the army, it has gained much prestige, as the result of the part it played in two world wars.

However, I was apprehensive when I read in the newspapers some time ago of an RCAF twin-jet CF-100 fighter plane which crashed in Quebec. Some press photographers went to take some pictures, and they were rather roughly handled by an RCAF guard, who thrust the muzzle of his gun into the back of the press photographer and gave orders that if the photographer tried to get away, he would be fired upon.

I want to say, as an old soldier and now a civilian, that the army must never be superior to the civil authority in this Province of Ontario. The members of the press give us the news, and the press must not be hampered. The press photographer must be allowed to take his pictures and, unless there is some good reason, such as danger of the press photographer giving information to a potential enemy, I say that the day of the army using the rifle against the press must come to an end and there should never be a re-occurrence of such an event.

Last September, we were honoured in Kingston by a visit from Sir Archibald Nye, the United Kingdom's High Commissioner to Canada, who came to visit old Fort Henry. I would like to say in relation to old Fort Henry, it was built after the War of 1812, when the people of this country thought the United States of America was a potential enemy. In 1948, we had 78,000 tourists visit old Fort Henry. In 1953, it had 152,000 visitors and the great majority of those tourists were citizens of the United States of America—the potential enemy of a century ago, and a firm and fast friend in these days when we need them so much.

One of the reasons old Fort Henry has done so well is by reason of the vision and foresight which made it an attractive place, having regard to the principle and policy put forward in connection with this fine institution by Mr. Ronald Way, the Commandant.

A moment ago, I made some observation about the Military College at Kingston, which is an important military centre, being in my riding. The Royal Military College in Kingston has an excellent course in both science and arts. I know just as well as I stand here the question of conferring the degree rests, primarily, with the Department of Education for the Province of Ontario, but, after all, the Royal Military College was fashioned after West Point, and came into existence in 1876.

When a man graduates from West Point, he receives a degree. I have given some thought to the engineering and arts course, which is a 4-year course, in the Military College, and I say to the hon. Prime Minister of this province and the hon. Minister of Education that I hope the day is not far distant when they will meet with the Rt. hon. Prime Minister of this country, and the hon. Minister of National Defence, with the view of giving to the cadets who graduate from the Royal Military College the opportunity of receiving degrees, having regard to the fact it is a 4-year course.

While I am on this subject, let me say something else. I think if the Royal Military College could give degrees to the students, then it seems to me to follow, as day follows the night, that they will have the right to give an honorary degree. The 50th anniversary celebration of the Royal Canadian Signal Corps, last November, was attended by many men who are prominent in civil life today, and who were in active service in either the First or Second World Wars. If the Royal Military College had the right to grant degrees then, they would have had the privilege of conferring honorary degrees; and how fine it would have been on this occasion if an honorary degree from the Royal Military College could have been given to His Excellency, the Governor-General, and 2 or 3 outstanding ex-signalmen who were at the reunion. It seems to me the time has now come when this fine institution, its supervisors and lecturers, should be recognized in the academic world, and I believe there should be given to the students who have completed their courses, some sort of a degree, having regard to the course of study they followed while within the 4 walls of that College.

I would like to say a few words with respect to the 50th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals. The great success it was, was made possible as a result of the efforts of Colonel Elroy Ford who, as a very young man, took an interest in signals, and established the firm foundations of this organization. I regret to say, Colonel Ford died shortly after the 50th anniversary of this great organization which he helped to bring into existence.

I read the other day about the resignation of a friend of mine, who served in the 22nd Infantry Battalion in the 5th Brigade. He is well-known by the hon. Prime Minister and equally well-known to me because we were each in the 4th Brigade, and that man was Major General George P. Vanier, who served his country faithfully and well in the First World War. After the loss of a leg while fighting for his country, he entered the diplomatic service and was appointed Canadian ambassador to France in 1939. He retired December 31st last year, and it is my view, Mr. Speaker, that this fine soldier, this great ambassador, has not yet finally served his day with relation to public duty to his country, and it is my guess he will be the next Governor-General of Canada.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened with some interest to remarks made in this House during this session by the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren). He does not seem to have anything good to say about the hon. members on this side of the House. As a matter of fact, he seems to be at loggerheads with his political parents—the Ontario Liberal Party, in that he made a speech in St. Catharines in which he stated that there is a hand-picked committee of the Liberal Party who are going to the country and through the urban centres looking for a Liberal leader to succeed Mr. Walter Thompson.

The hon. member says that with a good leader, 25 or 30 members should be elected behind the panel of Liberalism at the next provincial general election. I say to the hon. Prime Minister, we on this side of the House take courage from that observation, because it seems to me most of us will be back.

Another thing I want to say is that in my part of the country, the Ontario Liberals are taking a great interest in who their leader should be, and although I do not want to discourage the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), I do say he would run a poor second because the hon. member for Grey South (Mr. Oliver) would have him well outdistanced in the part of the country from which I come.

The other day, the question of campaign funds was brought up by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) and he made some observations to the effect that hon. members of the Conservative Party had money donated to its campaign fund, by those who thought their principles and policies were sound.

He made the observation that campaign funds probably went into the exchequer of the Ontario Liberal Party from those who thought their principles and policies were sound. I see nothing wrong with that, but I do ask, Mr. Speaker, if the campaign funds for the member for St. Andrew come from the Kremlin in Communist Russia, and if that is so, I say everything that democracy stands for, as far as he is concerned, is now straight and fairly at the challenge, and I want to make my position clear on one thing, that is, in my opinion, Communists do not believe in parliamentary institutions with their free speech and their respect for the rights of minorities. If this Party ever took over the reins of office, that would be the end of democracy, and everything which is worth-while, and for which men in two wars have fought and died. As far as I am concerned, without reservation, I am absolutely against their policies. What is more, the Communist Party play in a rough league. Not long ago I read in the London Times the following report—this is Communist politics, and people might just as well know of the principles for which they stand. Listen to this article from the London Times:

What happens to Communists: 9 out of 11 Russian Cabinet Ministers holding office since 1936 have been shot; 5 out of 7 of the last Central Executive Committee met the same fate; 43 of the 53 secretaries of the Communist Party organization have been shot; 15 of the 17 top Communists who drafted the 1936 constitution faced the firing squad; 70 of the 80 members of the Soviet war council have been executed.

Since 1937, 3 of every 5 marshals of the Soviet Army have been shot as spies or traitors. All members of Lenin's first post-revolution inner cabinet were finally shot except Stalin.

In a word, I would like to say to the Province of Ontario that the day the Communist Party takes control in this country, the shooting will begin—and I should not be surprised, if I am alive at the time, if I am the first to be shot for making this observation.

I had not intended to make any observations in connection with the case referred to by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay), who sits behind me, the Cachia case, but then I changed my mind and thought I would say a few words with relation to what he said the other day.

Ever since I graduated from Law School, and before I entered this House, I nearly always acted for the defence. I have never acted for the Crown in my life, either as a Crown prosecutor or in any other capacity. I have spent my life in the courts. My experience is limited, I admit, from Oshawa to the Quebec border, but in all my days at the bar never once did I ever defend a man who complained that a statement was obtained from him by force, torture, fear or threat.

I know the best men at the bar in this country who take nothing, generally speaking, but criminal cases, and I have never heard them complain that any statement was ever obtained from any accused person whom they defended, by fear, threat or torture. In all my time at the bar, I have never known the Crown prosecutor to go behind the back of defence counsel and try to get the ear of the trial judge, whether it be in an Assize Court, the County Court or the Magistrate's Court.

I want to make it as clear as I can that with my little experience, I am satisfied that generally speaking, in relation to the criminal law of this province over which the hon. Attorney-General has power and control in relation to administration, I say without reservations, I have stacked my wits against the best Crown prosecutors he can secure, and they do their very best to conduct the trials on a high level, and, as people will know, "irrespective of your class, colour, or creed, as long as the British flag is at the top of the court house, you will get a fair trial." That has been my experience and that is the way it ought to be.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word about the Department of Highways and the apparent irregularities which have taken place with relation to this department. I want the people of Kingston and the Islands to know that on the 7th day of October, a very serious statement was released in relation to the Highway irregularities. I want them also to know that the information was known to them on the 26th day of the month when the people of Niagara Falls went to the polls. Likewise, I would like the people of Kingston to know that on the 20th day of January, another serious statement was made by the government before the election in Simcoe East, before the people went to the polls.

And in each case, "Old Man Ontario" renewed his confidence in the leader of the majority of the hon. members in this House, the Prime Minister of the Province of Ontario.

Mr. Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) says the Provincial Treasurer and the Prime Minister of this province has collected $58 million more than he needed out of the pocket-books of the people of the province. I think it is well that the people in my part of the province should know that, of that amount of money, $40 million was received as a result of some transactions between the Province of Ontario and the Federal Government, and quite properly that money was used to "pay off the mortgage on the farm belonging to Old Man Ontario."

I want to put myself on record in relation to the hon. Prime Minister of this province regarding the Department of Highways. He went into Simcoe East and never applied the whitewash brush. He took a brave, courageous stand. He preferred honourable defeat, rather than a mean victory. That was his attitude, and he is to be congratulated on it, and commended for it.

Since that time there have been many and varying charges levelled against the government in relation to the Highways Department. Some hon. members of this House, who are lawyers, may take the point of view that because an individual is going to be prosecuted, the matter is sub judice. I do not "go along" with that theory at all. I take the position that Parliament is supreme. We are the people. Hon. members will see the viciousness which might follow, if any other point of view is taken. The hon. member for Ottawa (Mr. Chartrand) is a good lawyer and will follow me when I say supposing an imaginary person—call him Jones—is prosecuted. He goes before a learned magistrate, where he asks to be tried by a jury. There may be no jury court for months as in most small places, unlike cities the size of Toronto, there are only 4 jury courts a year. Supposing there are only 4, and he elects to be tried by a judge and jury. He has the option of being tried by a County Court judge, or a Sessions Court, or he may be tried in the Supreme Court by judge and jury. At his trial there may be a conviction. Then he will have the opportunity of launching an appeal, on the ground that the judge improperly charged the jury on a point of law, or in relation to a portion of the evidence. The case then goes to the Court of Appeal for Ontario. Then he may appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada. In the meantime no information in connection with what has happened may be discussed in Parliament.

I say, without reservation, Parliament is supreme. We are the people. No "smoke screen" should interfere with our course of duty, with our doing our level best to see if any man has been found guilty of a crime, he is brought to the bar of justice and made to pay his penalty. That is my attitude. By that I stand or fall.

But I go a step further, and so does my hon. leader. He has said, with characteristic fearlessness that this matter is going to be referred to the Committee on Public Accounts. If that is so, then may I say the sooner the Committee on Public Accounts meets, the better for us, in order that we should know what is happening. There are lawyers in this House and my hon. leader was, in his day, a good lawyer, who will subscribe to this observation. If there is any evidence given at a preliminary inquiry before a magistrate, we have the right to get a transcript of that evidence, to learn what is happening. That may give some information which is worthwhile. It may not do so, but it is worth trying. I say if the information we desire cannot be made available between now and the time this House prorogues, there should be a committee appointed so it will be able to meet, and find out, by the calling of witnesses, and the adducing of evidence, what is going on. In that way, nobody can say that we are afraid.

The attitude of my hon. leader is this: be you rich or be you poor, be you influential or humble, let the chips fall where they may, the honour and integrity of the Frost Government will be maintained.

It may be, Mr. Speaker, that in relation to the Department of Highways, the administration has not kept pace with the times. There may be some departmental procedures, shall I say, that require to be changed. My attitude on that score, and let there be no doubt about it, is this: if there is inefficiency, get rid of the inefficient people and replace them with efficient help. In my opinion, that is the way to approach this problem.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition has suggested that a Royal Commission should be appointed to look into the problem. I do not question his sincerity in that observation any more than I expect him to question my sincerity this afternoon when I say that I do not go along with him on that score. As a matter of fact, I, as a rule listen with care and attention to the words that fall from the lips of the hon. Leader of the Opposition. But, Mr. Speaker, I recently read with interest his observation on Royal Commissions as recorded in the Debates of this House under date of February 16th, 1949. The hon. Leader of the Opposition is reported to have said:

Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to deal with one more subject, and that is, to do with Royal Commissions. We almost had another one today. If we had said yes, we would have had it. I am saying this because to me, the Royal Commissions are a pain in the neck for all we get out of them.

I do not wish to cause the hon. Leader of the Opposition to suffer pain; therefore, I suggest to him that in his wisdom and foresight expressed in 1949, he was on sound ground, and I think he had better stay there.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I say that to judge a man you sometimes have to look into his record. It may interest the House and the province to know that during the First World War, in October, 1918, the British army broke, and the German armies came through. One of the men who had to stand up against the onslaught is now the hon. Prime Minister of this province. As a result of that action he was badly wounded, and he will take with him to his grave the scars of action and the disability that he suffers. Those scars have taught him that responsible government means a government of the people, for the people and by the people.

I want to say this about my leader: he and I have been friends for more than a quarter of a century, and I think I understand him. He is honest and sincere, and I know that the highway irregularities will, by his government, and on his directions, be completely and thoroughly investigated to the absolute satisfaction of the people of Ontario; the wrongdoer, whether he is influential or otherwise, shall be brought to the bar of justice and, if found guilty, shall pay the penalty imposed by the court for his dishonesty. It will be the attitude of the hon. Prime Minister, if I judge him aright, and I think I do, that he will let the chips fall where they may. I know that in this highways matter, the hon. Prime Minister will have the strength of heart, the sincerity of purpose and the purity of aim to do the right thing. In a word, when the highway matter is finalized, the people of Ontario will say, "We always thought the Prime Minister was honest; now he has proven it, because he has had the courage to see to it that no stone was left unturned in clearing up completely the highway situation." And, indeed, Old Man Ontario will say that my leader took that course of action in fairness and frankness because he was honest enough to be bold, and bold enough to be honest.

The Acting Speaker in the Chair.

MR. WILLIAM H. COLLINGS (Beaches): Mr. Acting Speaker, I wish to join with the hon. members of this House in congratulating you on being chosen Acting Speaker for this session; and also may I offer my congratulations to the mover, the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) and the seconder, the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) of an address in reply to the Speech from the Throne, both of whom gave excellent speeches to this House.

Speaking, Mr. Acting Speaker, of my own riding, that of Toronto Beaches, I may say that when I travel through my riding, I meet many people who remark on what a wonderful job "Les" Frost is doing for this province. In this observation they are quite right, for this administration is giving good government to the Province of Ontario.

The hon. member for Woodbine (Mr. Fishleigh) told us the other day of the termites which had invaded his riding. Unfortunately, somehow or other, the queen of the termites slipped away the other night and came across the boundary of Beaches. So we now have in the western section of my riding the problem of termites, and I agree that they do a good deal of damage.

Speaking again for my riding, Mr. Acting Speaker, I have received complaints from the residents of Kingston Road, who have urged me to impress upon the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) the need to amend the Highway Traffic Act to provide that trucks and tractor-trailers be examined for faulty equipment before being given licences. I am told that on that portion of highway, between the hour of seven in the evening and the early morning, the noise from defective mufflers is terrific. I voice that complaint, Mr. Acting Speaker, on behalf of the people of my riding.

I have had at least half-a-dozen of my constituents say to me, "Well, we see you got your indemnity raised to $10,000. You ought to be able to get by on that." Of course, I hasten to remind them that I am a member of the Legislature, not of the House of Commons. However, I see the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) in his seat, and I suggest to him that when he is looking into the question of pensions for the members of this House, that he also make some enquiries about an increase in indemnities.

Mr. Acting Speaker, I believe the time has come when our government should negotiate with the Federal Government in a Dominion-Provincial conference. I realize the need for such a conference has not been apparent in the past year by reason of the fact that we have an agreement with Ottawa in reference to the rental taxation field. But I would point out that that agreement will come to an end and, as we all know, it takes time to work out a new agreement. I believe we should now be sitting in with the authorities at Ottawa to make arrangements for the time when the present agreement will expire. I believe the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) gave a solid reason for convening such a conference when, in speaking on the Throne debate, he suggested that criticism is due the government for what he calls flagrant behaviour in respect of municipal finances. He asked the question, "What fields would you take over?", and he suggested that the municipal taxpayer should be relieved of certain fields. To my mind, that is a solid argument for getting together with the Federal Government in order that we may designate what taxing fields we think should be allotted to the municipality, the province and the Dominion.

I have already said that it takes time before we can appreciate the results of a Dominion-Provincial conference. I understand that in the 1951 conference the Prime Minister and the Minister of Welfare proposed the legislation that is now on the Statute Books of this province, namely pensions to disabled persons. Now, after 2 years' time, we hear the Federal Government saying that it is good legislation and it will become federal law.

I have a further argument, Mr. Acting Speaker, in support of a Dominion-Provincial conference. I read the other evening that the Commissioner of Public Welfare in Toronto, reporting to the Committee of Public Welfare, stated that unemployment in this city was double that of a year ago. It is my belief that the hon. Minister of Public Works for the province should be in constant touch with the Federal Minister of Public Works, so that in the event of any recession which might take place, they would have on the drafting boards all of the projects which might be considered to alleviate a situation of unemployment which might develop. I believe that when the building trades are kept active, the whole economy is equally buoyant. In proof of that statement, I would remind hon. members of the raw materials which go into buildings, and of the allied trades and services which are stimulated by building projects.

In the last provincial election of 1951 the Conservative Party went to the people of this province with one promise, namely, to give them good government. I say we are doing just that. For example, let us look at the Department of Education: the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) has brought forward to the House in this session, three Acts which will consolidate 13 Acts governing the Department of Education. That is evidence of good government.

With respect to the Department of Lands and Forests, we have had the White Paper presented to the House, which is the basis for action to preserve the forest wealth of this province.

The hon. Minister for the Department of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) has presented to the House a consolidation of the Welfare Acts that govern the welfare of children in the province. It contains new and far-reaching benefits to child welfare, the finest in the country. I was pleased to read in the press that experts in the field of child welfare are impressed with the benefits which will flow from this legislation.

Then, speaking in the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne, the hon. Prime Minister gave notice that he will introduce shortly a new finance bill, to provide for the appointment of a Deputy-Treasurer, a Comptroller of Finance, a Comptroller of Revenue and of Accounts, who with their assistants can go from department to department to make sure things are being properly done. To me, Mr. Speaker, this is sound and sensible business practice.

I believe the action of the hon. Prime Minister in taking advantage of the talents of private members, and appointing them to Select Committees, has given great satisfaction. Several reports by such committees have been presented to this House, and in no case has there been a minority report. I would suggest to the hon. Prime Minister and also to the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Hon. Mr. Dunbar) that they give consideration to the setting up of a Select Committee for the revision of the Municipal Act, the Assessment Act and the Local Improvement Act. The reference today by a previous speaker concerning the practice of selling lands which have been seized for taxes is, I suggest, one indication of the desirability of some revision of the Municipal Act. I believe that the revision of the Act by a Select Committee, which could meet during the recess and hold the public hearings which would be required in connection with a revision of such magnitude, would be in the best interests of the Department of Municipal Affairs.

To the Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Warrender), let me say that we have heard and read that the government is sponsoring a development near Malton for the building of homes with government aid. But, regarding a development so far afield, and considering that the people who will live in these subdivisions will work in the City of Toronto, I think the Minister of Planning and Development should spearhead a movement to bring the railroads, the Toronto Transit Commission, and the Metropolitan Council into a conference looking to the electrification of the railways within a radius of 25 miles of this city. We have had the opportunity of inspecting the subway here which will soon be opened; we have seen the type of cars and trains that will be operated. I can see no reason why, through the combined efforts of the Toronto Transit Commission and the railways, some service of that type could not be provided for commuters within the area I have mentioned. Already pool trains have proved their worth and benefit.

I hope that the Minister of Highways (Hon. Mr. Doucett) will not relax his efforts to eliminate all dangerous level crossings in the province. There is room in this field for the provincial and federal authorities to work together.

The leader of Her Majesty's Opposition (Mr. Oliver) recently delivered in this Chamber one of the best speeches I have heard since I have had the pleasure of sitting here. There are reports that he is to speak in my riding of Beaches this evening. If I were not then engaged at meetings of the Private Bills Committee and of the Toronto and Lake Shore Labour Council, I would enjoy the opportunity of going down and introducing the Leader of the Opposition to this Liberal meeting in my riding.

We read in the press last Friday that the hon. member for Grey South (Mr. Oliver) is allowing his name to go before the convention which will meet in the early part of April. May I say to him that he has my best wishes for success at that convention. I do not think he has anything to fear from the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), for I believe that hon. gentleman killed his goose when, speaking in this House, he advocated the open sale of beer in grocery stores in this province. So, I repeat, the hon. member for Grey South (Mr. Oliver) need not worry about opposition from that source.

MR. OLIVER: Thanks very much.

MR. COLLINGS: I want to reaffirm my belief in the value of the two-Party system of government in this province. I have never taken the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) seriously. He is in a fairly good position, in that he sits there as a one-man Party, the only one-man Party, I suppose, in the Dominion. I do not recall that there is any other.

AN HON. MEMBER: Or in North America.

MR. SALSBERG: You are quite wrong. But continue.

MR. COLLINGS: I know he is happy in that position. But, as I have said, I do not take him seriously. He was born a Conservative; his early education was as a Conservative; and probably, if there were an easy way out of his present position, he would slip over here and return to his early affiliations. I say, if he could. But, as I have said, I believe in the two-Party system. I notice, in reading the speech of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) he remarked that other speeches from the Throne were, so to put it, "whistling in the dark." I am sorry he is not in his seat.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): I will tell him.

MR. COLLINGS: But all through his speech he had nothing but commendation for the government. So, as we are considering the Speech from the Throne, I would like to include the House leader of the CCF group (Mr. Grummett) and the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) in my appeal to get back to the two-Party system of government. And I would suggest to the hon. member for Ontario, "Come on, cross the floor and sit with us, so that you can give active support to good government in this province. I am sure that if you come to sit here temporarily, his honour, the Speaker, will arrange for you to sit here permanently. As from tomorrow you can say 'Just as I am, I come'."

MR. THOMAS: I would rather sing it.

MR. COLLINGS: I have only one other remark to make. I hope that, probably not in the far distant future, we shall hear from the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Hon. Mr. Frost) that the finances of this province are such that we can grant a monthly increase of $5 to the old-age pension, for the benefit of the elderly people of this province. There is nothing I enjoy more, if I happen to be in the bank at the end of the month, than to see one of our older citizens stepping up to the window and passing through his old-age pension cheque. It serves to remind us that our older citizens are receiving from the resources of this province some recompense for the energies and the efforts which they have put forth in the building of this great province.

MR. P. MANLEY (Stormont): Mr. Speaker, in rising to make my contribution to the Speech from the Throne Debate, I want to express my appreciation for the gracious and considerate manner in which you perform the duties of your high office, sir, and compliment you on the fairness and patience you exercise. As one who faces speaking assignments with some degree of trepidation, I can assure you, sir, it is a comforting thought to speak before one as indulgent and fair-minded as you have been on so many occasions in this House.

I also add my voice to those who extended greetings and congratulations to the two new hon. members for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) and Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby). I agree, the hon. member for Niagara Falls made an excellent address in moving the reply to the Speech from the Throne, as did the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) who seconded it.

I wish, also, sir, to express my sympathy to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas) because illness has prevented him from attending this session. I wish him a speedy recovery, and an early return to his duties as Minister. As a fellow farmer, I know how deeply interested he is in the agricultural pursuits of this province. There are not too many farmers here to occupy these benches and the absent Minister's contributions to the work of this government have been so conscientious and energetic that I, for one, feel a deep sense of loss at his inability to be present here, especially at a time when important matters pertaining to agriculture are coming up for discussion.

The Department of Agriculture is one of the most important branches of this government, in my opinion. For a great many years, agriculture has been the basic industry of this fine country. Despite the rapid expansion of other industries, farming is still the key industry in our national economy, and I feel confident it will continue to remain so. The great American statesman, Daniel Webster, said "farmers are the founders of civilization." And Emerson, the great essayist, said "the first farmer was the first man, and all historic nobility rests on possession and use of land."

These are truths I bring to the attention of this House, because I feel the farming community is so tightly woven into the fabric of Canada's greatness, that in it lies the strength to hold us together. Farming has weathered many a depression storm in the past because of its strong, basic qualities. I venture to say that nothing will destroy our national economy more quickly or more completely than the agriculture industry being allowed to languish through faulty legislation and failure to realize and recognize its great potentialities in Canada's contribution to world production.

Mr. Speaker, I want now to deal with a serious situation which developed in this province last spring and summer in which this government plainly demonstrated its inability to serve the best interests of the dairy industry. Instead, it adopted a policy of "playing Party politics," at the expense of the cheese producers of this province. A situation developed which would have had embarrassing repercussions in this House at this session, had it not been for the timely aid afforded by the Liberal Government at Ottawa.

You may recall, sir, that when I spoke nearly a year ago in this House, I drew the government's attention to the crisis which was developing in cheese production. My constituency of Stormont, as you know, is one of the best cheese-producing sections of Ontario, and we are naturally sensitive to anything pertaining to the marketing of this product. And we are not alone in that respect, as practically all the farming sections of the province are interested in cheese production and marketing.

In 1952, Ontario carried a fairly heavy inventory of cheese, even with the diversion of milk from the cheese factories, which began early in the season. The main reason, of course, was that the export market in Britain had been cut off due to exchange difficulties and competition from other countries.

The price of cheese, which had been well above 30 cents per pound through 1951, dropped to as low as 24 cents per pound by May, 1952, which is the supporting price under the Federal Government's Agricultural Products Co-operative Marketing Act, designed to guarantee payment of initial prices up to a maximum of 80 per cent. of the average prices in the 3 previous years. But producing costs have mounted so substantially that cheese in this day and age could not be produced and sold profitably at that price. So sales were few.

Cheese prices improved slightly during the summer months of 1952, due to domestic requirements, and the offer of the Ontario Government of a 6c. a pound guarantee to the end of that year, to bring the guaranteed price to the producer up to 30c. The price rose again to slightly above the 30c. level, and remained there for the balance of the year, with a brief fluctuation upward late in the year, when Britain provided some measure of relief by agreeing to take about 5½ million pounds. This cheese was sold for export at 28⅞ cents per pound, f.s.s. seaboard. It had to be shipped to the coast and the producers had to bear the high freight charges. But they had been guaranteed 30c., through the price-support agreements. This was the only sale, I believe, in which the Ontario Government had to make up the difference, representing a fairly small amount.

Despite all the efforts of the Marketing Boards, more than 15 million pounds of cheese had to be carried over into 1953, from the 1952 production. Consequently, by May of last year, the price again dropped to 24c., and might have gone still lower, had not the Ottawa Government assured producers it was prepared to continue the assistance under the Co-operative Marketing Act. But no such assurance was forthcoming from the Ontario Government. Although it was aware of the crisis developing, and the wide-spread effect it would have on farming generally, and the dairy industry in particular, it refused to renew the 6c. guarantee it had made the previous year. Obviously there was only one reason for this refusal. A federal election was pending and this government was evidently prepared to sacrifice the cheese industry in the province, in an effort to embarrass the Liberal administration at Ottawa.

The situation was grim, indeed, until the Ottawa government came to the rescue on May 26th, when the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Gardiner) announced the government at Ottawa had agreed to buy 5 million pounds of cheese from Ontario producers at 30c. a pound, and take over the 1952 stocks held by the producers, and offer the cheese for sale at cost. I don't think we need ask ourselves, Mr. Speaker, which government had the real interest of the people of this province at heart. I am sure that was reflected in the voting in the federal election last August. I often wonder what the hon. Leader of the Opposition at Ottawa (Mr. Drew) thought about the action of his Ontario Government friends, particularly on the morning after the election. I have also wondered what the situation in the dairy industry would be today in this province, had it not been for the assistance given it by the Dominion Liberal Government.

Fortunately for the dairy industry, the situation last year was further helped by Britain's improved dollar situation, and the Old Country was able to "come through" again in the late fall with another contract, this time for 10 million pounds of cheese. This sale was not made without some sacrifice on the part of the individual producer, however, for in making the financial arrangements the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association found it necessary to raise its licence fee from 5c. to $2 per 100 pounds. The additional $1.95 came, of course, out of the dairy farmers' pockets.

In concluding this particular part of my address, I am happy to report, Mr. Speaker, that while 1953 was the most critical year in the history of the Producers' Association, the outlook for 1954 is a little more hopeful and we anticipate more prosperous days ahead. I note producer groups will be brought under one Act, by a bill now before the House. I think it is apparent that when one group of milk producers is in difficulty, it affects all other groups. Surplus is thus the responsibility of everyone, for all are affected by it.

At the risk of repeating some things I mentioned when last I addressed this House, Mr. Speaker, I wish to deal briefly with a few matters which I think should again be brought to the attention of the government, because they merit consideration. If this government is interested in creating better labour relations in this province, I do not see why something is not done about the request of the fire fighters to shorten their work-week hours and bring them more in line with those in other and less hazardous occupations.

This matter was brought up last year not only by myself, but by the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Child) who preceded me in the debate. We are in agreement, as I am sure are many other hon. members, that the 56-hour week of the fire fighters is extreme in comparison with the 44-hour and 48-hour work weeks now regarded as standard in practically every line of industry. It is understandable that resentment is aroused and the fire fighters feel they are being discriminated against.

I also raise again, sir, the question of a more representative exhibit of this province's prize cattle at the annual Royal Winter Fair. I know we have many fine Holstein and Ayrshire herds in Stormont County which are not represented at the fair because their breeders cannot afford freight transportation and other costs involved in bringing them to Toronto. I believe this is true of a number of the smaller breeders in other parts of the province. Why cannot the Department of Agriculture extend the same inducement to them as is done to breeders outside the province, by defraying 50 per cent. of the costs of transportation? The additional amount involved would not be substantial and I am sure the expenditure would be justified, in making for keener competition and a better representation of provincial prize cattle at this Toronto showing.

I want to deal now with a subject, not only of tremendous interest and concern in my constituency, but to this whole province—and the nation as well—the St. Lawrence Seaway and power development project. We in Stormont, as well as people in other counties along the St. Lawrence River, where this development occurs, are going to be vitally affected in the progress of this project. For many of us it means the uprooting of our homes, the loss of our land and a severing of sentimental ties which go back to the days of the early settlers. Some 7,000 people will have to move to new homes, and be re-located on land strange to them, and often not of their own choosing. From Prescott to Cornwall, a distance of 49 miles, all riverside homes and all land under the 248-foot elevation will be condemned. Whole towns, Iroquois, Aultsville, Mille Roches, and the present business district of Morrisburg will be flooded. To many of these people, particularly the older generation, this is a real tragedy. I can see plenty of trouble ahead and, undoubtedly, some costly complications will arise, if high-handed methods are adopted in clearing this area. This is a terribly serious matter and it has to be handled with tact and diplomacy and the utmost consideration for the people affected.

At the last session of this House, Mr. Speaker, I appealed to the government to give considerable thought and study to this matter, and formulate a comprehensive plan well in advance of any work undertaken. Such a plan must be publicized and freely discussed with the people concerned and made as flexible as possible so as to cause the least hardship and inconvenience. No matter how perfect a plan is devised, it is not going to please everyone, and probably the best we can hope for is that it will satisfy a majority of them. But the longer this plan is delayed, the greater the difficulty encountered in putting it into effect. If the government has such a plan, it should be brought to the attention of the House at this session. So far, I am not aware that anything definite has been done along this line, and I know the people who will be affected by it are still anxiously waiting word of definite proposals.

Over a year ago, the Hydro Commission announced the establishment of an Advisory Committee which included representatives of the various departments of government concerned with this work. This committee was to submit recommendations to Mr. H. D. Rothwell, a hydro engineer, who apparently has authority to accept or reject them as he saw fit. Now that the United States House of Representatives has given the "go-ahead" signal for the power development and seaway project, probably only a short time remains before a start will be made. If the Advisory Committee launched by the Hydro Commission has submitted its recommendations, then this House should be informed of that fact. If it has not, then the government should inform the hon. members when the report will be ready, and if it will be presented at this session. Delays are costly, and I am afraid they will become increasingly so in this important matter which involves so many people, unless great care is taken to avert them.

In connection with seaway and power development on the St. Lawrence, there is another matter I want to bring to the government's attention at this time. When power is available from this source, I submit, Mr. Speaker, a block of it should be provided for the eastern Ontario counties at an attractive price, to induce industry to establish there. I know the Ontario Planning and Development Board has been studying the question of decentralizing industry, a necessary procedure in time of war, especially in atomic war, and no less desirable under existing conditions of industrial expansion. What more favourable area can industry be offered than that within the eastern counties adjacent to the seaway? It is one of the best farming districts in the province and one that is intersected by main lines of the railways and chief highways.

The United States is pursuing a policy of spreading its industry over a wide area to make it less vulnerable in case of attack. In Ontario, our industry is concentrated in a relatively small area, and industrial expansion is adding to this concentration, which is already too pronounced. In days of peace, it is obvious that a balanced economy must be built around a spreading-out of industry. From Eastern and Northern Ontario, there is constant movement of men and wealth toward the congested areas to feed the huge industrial machine. Establishing industries in these parts of Ontario would hold the population, provide markets locally, and build up a sustaining community less subject to recessions, than large centres of population would be. We should not, I submit, make the large centres larger, but distribute our strength for the good of all. In this way, too, we would be better able to meet the challenge of the housing situation, and relieve the heavy burden placed on some municipalities in the existing congested areas. I trust the government will see the wisdom of this suggestion, for now is the time to do something about it and not wait until it has to be done under emergency conditions.

I was glad to hear the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. MacOdrum) bring up the matter the other day, and stress the point that a start should be made this year on building a new No. 2 Highway between Brockville and Cornwall. I certainly support everything he said about the condition of the present highway between these two points. I brought this question up a year ago, and said at that time this stretch of road never was intended to handle the amount of vehicular traffic required of it today. I also pointed out that it was in a deplorable condition and in need of repair and resurfacing, and the accident toll on this particular part of No. 2 Highway is very heavy.

I think traffic accident figures for Ontario last year bear out what I said then. One accident on this stretch of road took 20 lives and seriously injured a number of other people. There have been several accidents where the casualty toll has not been so great. The fact remains, however, that nothing has been done to relieve this situation, and we are facing another summer during which the traffic on this highway will be heavier than ever before.

I know that most of this particular stretch of road will be wiped out when the seaway project and power development is completed and it is not to be expected under the circumstances, to have it widened or rebuilt. But a new road has to be built through this area sooner or later, and why cannot it be started now? There is no more important or serious highway problem in the province than this. The newspapers in the eastern counties, as the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. MacOdrum) said, have been pointing out the seriousness of the situation in editorials and through their reports of frequent accidents. It is time something was done, and I urge the Highways Department to delay it no longer.

There are other matters pertaining to conditions in the eastern counties in general, and my constituency in particular, which I desire to put before this House, Mr. Speaker, but I realize that I have already spoken at length, and I do not want to tax your patience and trespass on the time of other hon. members unduly, so I will leave them, until another opportunity offers.

However, there is one important matter that I think is worthy of the attention of the hon. members at this time and which I feel I should "get off my chest." From my own observation and from what has been brought to my attention, I feel the morality standards of the Ontario film censors have been lowered in recent months.

I say this in all seriousness, because recently I visited what is regarded as one of the better theatres in Toronto, and witnessed a picture that I can only describe as "obscene," obviously catering to low moral standards. I probably should have been forewarned about it, as I noticed the sign in front of the theatre which said nobody under 18 years of age would be admitted. But being slightly over that age and fairly broadminded about these things, I did not let that stop me.

After seeing the picture, I can only say that the sign should have said that nobody under 80 years would be admitted. I will give the name of the film and the theatre that showed it—for 4 successive weeks, I believe—to any hon. member interested, but I do not want to mention it publicly in this House, because I fear it might prove too strong a temptation for other hon. members. This picture extolled immorality on the part of a mother and her young daughter as a means of obtaining expensive clothing and an easy way of life. The husband and father shot himself when the true state of affairs was suddenly and dramatically revealed to him. There was not one redeeming feature in the whole picture. It left little to the imagination and there was no attempt at a moral ending. I was the most sordid picture I have ever witnessed, and I cannot understand how it ever passed the Ontario Board of Film Censorship.

I doubt if such a picture would be offered in any theatre outside of Toronto. I know that any self-respecting theatre manager in our smaller cities and towns would never dream of showing such a picture to his patrons. If he did, I am sure he would have to get out of town the next day. It would seem, sir, that the film censors have adopted a lower moral standard for theatres in the Metropolitan area—or is it that the motion picture industry is leaning toward this type of thing to meet competition from television, the beverage room, and other attractions?

I think if there have been any changes in film-censorship policy, this House should be informed of it. From what I have been told, other pictures of a similar nature have been booked into Toronto movie theatres. Such films can only have an evil influence and I shudder to think of what the moral tone of the people of this province will be in the years ahead if our theatres are allowed to show them. I think the circumstances under which these films are given approval should be fully investigated, and some statement on film-censorship policy should be forthcoming from the department responsible for the censors.

MR. J. N. ALLAN (Haldimand-Norfolk): Mr. Speaker, it is a great pleasure to be able to compliment you upon your continuing to occupy your present position and the delightful way in which you administer the duties of your office. We hope your health will be maintained and that you will be there for a long time.

I have been most encouraged, as one interested in highway safety, to note the keen and sincere interest in this problem by hon. members of this House. I would like to commend the hon. members who spoke upon this subject, because I am convinced that recognition of the problem is the first step in reducing highway accidents.

The Ontario Goods Roads Association, an organization of municipal officers and officials, representative of the entire province, has chosen the task of reducing highway accidents as their No. 1 project. This effort was undertaken about one year ago in co-operation with the Department of Highways of this province and established safety promoting groups; they are progressing and it is hoped contributing to the overall effort to reduce highway accidents.

I consider that I was fortunate as a member of this safety committee to be privileged with Mr. T. J. Mahony, the secretary of the association to be delegated by the Ontario Good Roads Association to attend the President's Safety Conference at Washington, held February 17, 18th and 19th last, and I would like at this time to acquaint hon. members of this House with the thinking of that conference.

I should perhaps say at first that President Eisenhower called the conference for the purpose of developing public support at the community level for proven methods of improving street and highway traffic. Mention was made also that knowledge possessed by most drivers and the public could cut down accidents if they so willed.

The President asked the Governors of all states to participate and to designate outstanding citizens as delegates including representatives of agriculture, business, labour, women, public officials, media of public information and organizations (service, fraternal, religious, veterans, etc.) President Eisenhower pointed out the necessity of action by stating the number of persons killed, the number injured and the money loss in the United States—a stupendous figure—38,000 killed, 1,350,000 injured and property loss of nearly $4 billion in 1952; no figures are available for suffering or for those maimed and made inactive for life.

It was agreed at this conference that safety organizations and officials have long since learned how to reduce accidents. The conference's purpose was to translate this knowledge into results by means of vigorous continuing public support.

This conference of 2,500 selected delegates representing every state in the union was unanimous in the conclusion that accidents occur at the local level and that they will be prevented at the local level and that the greatest influence in such prevention will be the decision of the individual driver and the individual pedestrian to exercise care.

The highway accident problem in Ontario is similar to the highway accident problem in the United States. Our roads are similar as our people and also our highway accident experience. It would seem reasonable therefore that we in Ontario might profit from the experience of the large population of the United States and their 54 million drivers of motor vehicles. Certainly it would seem wise for us to consider their conclusions in an attempt to improve highway safety on the roads and streets of our province.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that I came away from this conference convinced that the problem of safety on our highways will never be solved by legislation or enforcement alone or by engineering alone in the form of safer highways. These are helpful and important but as has been demonstrated with laws governing personal action and decision in years past, essence of the law must be supported by public opinion. The men who enforce the law must have public support—real backing. Lip service must give way to an earnest effort on the part of everyone, especially those persons with influence at the community level, to create a desire within the individual to drive or to walk safely.

Highway safety was the theme of this large convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association and addresses were delivered by many experts. I would like to quote briefly from the address of Mr. A. H. Rowan, of the Ontario Department of Highways, in charge of inventorying motor accidents for many years. It is his duty to record the accidents and the cause of same as reported by the police. I may add in this connection that the records compiled by this department are considered up-to-date and adequate by other jurisdictions in Canada and in the United States.

Mr. Rowan stated, and I quote:

There were 65,866 accidents reported to the Motor Vehicles Branch during 1953—in which 1,082 persons were killed and 24,353 persons were injured, in addition to a property damage loss amounting to over $24 million. It is estimated that loss of time, medical and hospital costs would increase this amount to more than $90 million. A careful study was made of these fatal accidents and the study revealed that 96.7 per cent of these accidents were caused by human error, alone, or in combination with inattention, poor judgment or discourtesy. What were the drivers doing? Of the actions or violations of drivers contributing to the 920 fatal accidents, the greatest number involved driving at unsafe speeds; failure to give right of way; failure to keep to the right; improper passing; disregard of traffic controls; following too closely and improper turns.

And there is not an hon. member in this House who does not feel that these motorists knew how to drive.

Mr. Rowan summed up his remarks by saying: "We know that driving a motor car is a full-time job. It calls for a high degree of law observance. We need good attitudes and obedience to regulations designed for the protection of all citizens. These are points which must be driven home to all citizens." I repeat that sentence. "We need good attitudes and obedience to regulations designed for the protection of all citizens."

The convention referred to was impressed and many so stated from the convention floor—indeed they pledged themselves to exert their influence as best they can in their own community for highway safety. I would like to suggest that each and every hon. member of this House can be an ambassador for highway safety at the community level; that every support and assistance be given to the Minister of Highways, and especially to those of his department engaged in highway safety promotion, and likewise to those officers engaged in traffic regulation and control.

I would like to suggest a type of driver education to the hon. Minister of Highways which I think is new and untried, and for this reason would suggest that it be used in a small area at first as an experiment.

My suggestion is the appointment of a number of men who would be courtesy officers on our highways. They could observe the traffic and if drivers were noticed doing anything not considered good driving practice, the courtesy officer could stop the driver and explain his misdemeanour, and at the same time administer tactfully a safety lesson. Much publicity for safety would result and the driver would be more likely to co-operate in future. It is doubtful if the giving of a ticket for a traffic violation increases the desire of the driver to be a good driver. It might have rather the effect of impressing upon the driver to watch more carefully for policemen, or "traffic officers," which seems a better word. If such courtesy officers were appointed, they could create a fine spirit of helpfulness and friendliness among the many tourists who visit our province each year.

It has been my hope to suggest a plan of highway safety promotion that can be proceeded with at once. I am not wanting to disagree with any recommendations or suggestions made by other hon. members who have spoken on highway safety. However, I am of the opinion that because there are so many suggestions for safety improvement and they vary so much that we might be in the position of the donkey between 2 bales of hay. It is supposed that he starved to death because he could not make up his mind which bale to eat.

And so, Mr. Speaker, I state again my conviction that safe driving will be brought about by the decision of the individual to drive safely. I watched Vice-President Nixon sign a pledge that he would drive safely and consider the rights of others on the road. That was the basis of what that conference endeavoured to impress on those who attended.

I wish to compliment the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) upon his continual interest in and encouragement of highway safety. We see the sign on the road: "Accident Is a Word Until You Have One." I think that has been splendid publicity, and has no doubt prevented many accidents and here I should like to point out to hon. members of the House—each hon. member will find on his desk a small chart—certain facts with regard to our highway accident experience. It is true there have been more accidents per 100 million miles of driving as time has gone along, but I think perhaps the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett), when he suggested this afternoon the limit above which accidents need to be reported should be raised from $50 to $100, explained why the number of accidents has increased.

But at the same time, since 1943, you will notice that fatalities for each 100 million miles of vehicle operation in the province are only half what they were in 1942.

I could not help being reminded, as I was preparing these few remarks, of the great work which has been done by the Department of Welfare in influencing workmen to be careful along the lines of "Safety First," and I am sure the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) would be a disciple for this sort of gospel which should be taken to the individual driver and pedestrian.

To point out how difficult it is to recommend a technique of which you can always be sure is the correct one—and I mention this because in the past our record in 1953 was 8.8 fatalities for each 100 million miles of driving, the same figure which the United States has—the State of Rhode Island, which leads the United States in its accident record, had only 2.4 accidents per 100 million miles, without having in force a definite speed limit.

They have a recommended speed limit, which is posted, but the individual driver is relied on to know how fast he feels it is safe to drive. The director of safety for that state told me that if a driver was driving at 70 miles an hour and was in good condition, and his car was in good condition, and if the road was clear, he could not be convicted of speeding. But, if, on the other hand, the road was slippery and he was driving at 50 miles an hour, he could be convicted of speeding. And they have a wonderful record in the State of Rhode Island.

These figures are really not definite and, of course, there are many details which enter them. The State of New York has a better figure than we have, but that is largely accounted for by the fact that fewer persons drive to work. The drivers in that state own cars similar to those driven in Ontario, and have attained a splendid record over the same kind of roads. In that connection, I would again like to compliment the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) upon the condition of our provincial roads in the winter time. The Province of Ontario has a reputation in the United States and the other provinces of Canada for keeping its roads in a safer condition in winter than any other state or province, and that is achieved under the most difficult conditions.

But I do think we must improve our record, and we can by supporting the government agencies in their regulation and enforcement effort, and by the creating of a public opinion that will influence a larger and larger percentage of drivers of motor vehicles to decide to drive safely and to carry the gospel to other drivers.

Mr. Speaker, in conclusion, I want to say from my observations at Washington, that the Department of Highways has a safety organization comparable to the better state organizations in the United States, an admirable achievement when one considers that many states became safety conscious years before the hon. Minister of Highways founded a continuous safety campaign in 1947. We have the foundation for real progress in highway safety in this province. Our highways are good and are being continually improved. The drivers of our motor vehicles know how to drive. The pedestrians know how to walk—success depends upon public opinion influencing drivers to think and drive safely and pedestrians to walk with care. If we do this well our accident experience will continue to improve as it has done since 1943—when the death rates were approximately double our present death rate when related to miles driven.

Mr. Speaker, in concluding, may I seek the co-operation of every hon. member in this House in regard to our safety efforts, which we have heard pointed out by other hon. members, and they have done that wonderfully well. This House can wield a great deal of influence toward greater safety, and I am sure that if we all co-operate, we will achieve wonderful success.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario) moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Before moving the adjournment of the House, Mr. Speaker, may I say it is the intention to go on tomorrow with the addresses on the amendment to the motion to adopt the Speech from the Throne. Should there be any time available, we will consider certain bills.

I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.55 of the clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 10, 1954.

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I have the honour to inform the House that the Clerk has received from the Commissioners of Estate Bills their reports in the following matters:

Bill No. 17, An Act respecting The Ross Memorial Hospital.

Bill No. 23, An Act respecting The City of Peterborough (No. 2).

PRIVATE BILL No. 17

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: The following letter has been received from the Commissioners of Estate Bills:

THE SUPREME COURT OF ONTARIO
THE HONOURABLE MR. JUSTICE JUDSON
THE HONOURABLE MR. JUSTICE AYLESWORTH

Re: Private Bill No. 17, An Act respecting The Ross Memorial Hospital

DEAR SIR:

The undersigned as Commissioners of Estate Bills as provided by the Legislative Assembly Act, R.S.O. 1950, chapter 202, section 57, now report upon the above mentioned bill which has been referred to us.

We have considered representations made to us by counsel for the petitioners and by Messrs. S. A. Flavelle, a member of the Board of Governors of the Hospital, and Jasper Forman, Chairman of the Associates of the Hospital. In clause number 6 of subsection 1 of section 1 of the bill, and in subsection 2 of section 1, reference is made to "the Ross Memorial Trust." We are informed that there is no such legal entity and that reference to the provisions of paragraph numbered 3 of the schedule to chapter 132 of the Statutes of Ontario, 1903, was intended thereby. We recommend that the bill be amended in the two subsections mentioned by substituting therein for the words "the Ross Memorial Trust" the words "the descendant of the donor James Ross, deceased, as described in paragraph 3 of the indenture forming the schedule to an Act respecting The Ross Memorial Hospital, being chapter 132 of the Statutes of Ontario, 1903."

Subject to the suggested amendment, we are of the opinion that it is reasonable that the bill do pass into a law and that the provisions thereof are proper for carrying its purposes into effect.

According, we have signed the bill and return it and the petition therefor herewith.

Yours faithfully,

*Re: Private Bill No. 23, An Act respecting
The City of Peterborough (No. 2)*

DEAR SIR:

The undersigned as Commissioners of Estate Bills as provided by the Legislative Assembly Act, R.S.O. 1950, chapter 202, section 57, have had the above mentioned bill before us for consideration as such commissioners and now report thereon.

The applicants and their solicitors attended before us and after hearing their representations, we are of the opinion that to remove any possible doubt concerning the position of the trustees of the R. A. Morrow Memorial Park in the event such trustees convey part of the trust property to the Corporation of the City of Peterborough as contemplated by the bill, the said bill should contain a provision to the effect that upon such conveyance the trustees are absolved from any claims alleging breach of trust by reason of such conveyance.

Subject to this comment we are of the opinion that it is reasonable that the bill do pass into a law and that the provisions thereof are proper for carrying its purposes into effect. Accordingly, we have signed the bill and the same, together with the petition, are returned herewith.

Yours faithfully,

(signed) JOHN B. AYLESWORTH

(signed) WILFRED JUDSON

Commissioners of Estate Bills.

MR. SPEAKER: We are pleased today to welcome 250 students from the Toronto Teachers' College, whom we hope, before too long, are going to be entrusted with the training and education of our children. We appreciate very much their coming to our Assembly this afternoon, and hope that they will be enlightened and, we trust, become more enthused with the free system of government which we all enjoy.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. H. E. BECKETT (York East): Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Nickle, I beg leave to present the fourth report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Nickle from the Standing Committee on Private Bills begs leave to present the following as its fourth report:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 3, An Act respecting The Sudbury Community Young Men's, Young Women's Christian Association.

Bill No. 21, An Act respecting the Township of Scarborough.

Your committee begs leave to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 5, An Act respecting the City of Hamilton.

Your committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 3, An Act respecting The Sudbury Community Young Men's, Young Women's Christian Association.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION ACT, 1954

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Financial Administration Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, as I intimated at the opening of the debate on the Speech from the Throne the bill which I am now introducing sets out in particular, the financial administration and methods of procedure in the Treasury Department.

As will be apparent tomorrow, when I deliver the budget, the finances of this province have grown considerably in magnitude. Indeed, what is happening here is common to the rest of Canada. I have read some of the budgets from other provinces, and note that they too are very substantial. In particular, I noticed one province, having one-fifth of our population, with a budget double that of the amount contained in the one I delivered 10 years ago this month.

We have been quite aware of the financial growth of our province, and over a period of 5 years have developed a type of treasury control based upon studies elsewhere, in part upon the Ottawa system, but particularly upon our own experience. This Act translates that experience into fact. I have before me, a statement which I shall read to the House.

This bill is being introduced to accomplish the following objects:

1. To consolidate and bring up to date The Consolidated Revenue Fund Act, The Public Revenue Act, The Provincial Loans Act, and certain sections of The Audit Act that provide for duties of the Treasury Department rather than the Provincial Auditor. This will make possible the integration of the essential financial processes of Ontario.

2. To reorganize the Treasury Department so that there will be a group of senior officials in the Treasury Department to delineate fiscal policies and generally to supervise departmental operations. This will have the effect of establishing modern fiscal procedure and controls throughout all departments of government and of producing financial facts and reports essential to the management of the government and necessary for the information of the Legislative Assembly and the public.

3. To designate the senior officials who will head up the organization of the various services that will be performed by the Treasury Department as follows:

(a) the Deputy Provincial Treasurer who will supervise and manage, under the direction of the Treasurer of Ontario, all matters relating to the responsibilities of the Treasury Department.

Sir, that gentleman is Mr. Hugh E. Brown, formerly the Chief Accountant, who last summer was appointed Deputy Treasurer.

(b) a Comptroller of Finances who will advise upon all matters relating to the public debt and sinking funds of Ontario.

That will be combined with paragraph (e), which I shall now read:

(e) a Provincial Economist who shall study and report upon economic and social trends and their effects on the policies of governments, on economic and social conditions, on the relations between federal, provincial and municipal governments and on any other matters that the Treasurer may assign to him.

That, of course, refers to the work now being done by Doctor Chester S. Walters, as Comptroller of Finances and Mr. George Gathercole, as Assistant Comptroller of Finances and Provincial Economist.

(c) A Comptroller of Revenue who will continually examine the methods of administration and control applied in any department of government in connection with collection and accounting of public money and on the basis of his approved recommendations, either supervise in all departments of government such methods of administration and control as he deems proper or he may provide in any such department accounting and other services in connection with the administration and control of the collection and accounting of public money. The Comptroller of Revenue will also make studies as to the sources and rates of any tax, fee, revenue or receipt being collected in any department so that consideration may be given either to the abandonment of any such source or the adjustment of the rates thereof or the introduction and use of new sources of revenue;

That refers to Mr. Philip T. Clark, who has been the very able Comptroller of Revenue for a number of years. This provision regarding the Comptroller of Revenue is not an exact pattern of the Department of National Revenue at Ottawa. You will recollect that some years ago the Department in Ottawa was divided into the Department of Finance and the Department of National Revenue. In other words, one was to some extent the policy-making department, and the other the collection department. This Act will introduce into our system a phase of that arrangement. I would say, that the duties of the Comptroller of Finances and the Provincial Economist are to keep in view the fiscal and economic trends of the country. We in Ontario have to be interested in trends taking place, for instance, in Newfoundland, as well as in our own province, because they affect our economy. In the operations of the Comptroller of Revenue and the Comptroller of Finances, you have to some extent the pattern which at Ottawa stems from a Department of Finance and a Department of National Revenue. The duty of the Deputy Treasurer is to tie those two together. There will also be a Comptroller of Accounts, formerly called the Chief Accountant, and the person named to that position is Mr. Harold Walker. He assumed the office of Chief Accountant about a year ago, having come from the Department of Education. I give you this explanation of his duties:

(d) A Comptroller of Accounts who will examine continually the methods of administration and control applied in any department in connection with the accounting of the disbursement of public money and, on the basis of the approved recommendations he may make, he may require adjustments of such methods of administration and supervise their operation in any department or he may provide in any department accounting and other services in connection with the administration and control of the disbursement of public money;

My fourth and next point is in regard to a Budget Committee. This is a very useful instrument of activity which we have been using for many years, and which, indeed, goes back to the administration which preceded us.

This Act recognizes the status attained by the Budget Committee and confers upon it the sanction or approval of statute rather than leaving it in the position of an informal committee.

4. To set up a Budget Committee composed of the Senior Treasury Department officials referred to and any other officials that from time to time are deemed necessary to be placed on the Budget Committee.

The officials, at the present time are the gentlemen whom I have named and Mr. Harold Chater, the Provincial Statistician and the secretary of the committee is Mr. Malcolm McIntyre who is the Secretary of the Cabinet Council. I think that is correct as of the present time, but we are not precluded from enlarging the committee if it should be deemed necessary.

This committee will supervise the budgeting service of the government relating to the affairs of every department. It will examine, advise upon and compile the annual and supplementary estimates of revenue, receipts, expenditure and payments; it will examine and advise upon the expenditures, the commitments, the prospective expenditures, the revenues and the prospective revenues of every department; it will make suggestions generally with a view to promoting efficiency and economy in every department.

Aside from these organizational changes and the wider powers given to Treasury Department officials over the administration of the accounting of the receipts of public money and the disbursements thereof, the bill contains no major change of policy. It brings up to date in one Act all the present provisions respecting budgeting, revenue, expenditure, accounting and control in all respects in every department.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I would like to present to the House the following:

(1) The Annual Report of the Inspector of Legal Offices for the year ended December 31st, 1953.

(2) The Third Report of the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario, for the year 1953.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, may I tell the House that next Wednesday, the 17th of March, is the day of the press dinner. I do not want the gentlemen of the press to become excited, but I intend to suggest the House adjourn at about five o'clock, in order not to oppress the press with more troubles than they presently have.

On that afternoon, however, immediately following the adjournment of the House, I would like to unveil a plaque to Robert Baldwin, whose picture you may have noticed at the entrance to the Chamber.

There are a number of the Baldwin family in Ontario, and I am asking specific ones to be here at that time.

The plaque is in commemoration of Robert Baldwin, who was one of the champions of responsible government in this province. May I say to the hon. members that directly across the rotunda is a picture of a great contemporary of Mr. Baldwin, from Lower Canada, LaFontaine. The Baldwin-LaFontaine government was really the genesis of responsible government in the province. I would like to have the unveiling next Wednesday afternoon, immediately following the adjournment of the House. I think, if the hon. Leader of the Opposition will agree, we might have some references in the Chamber to this matter, before we adjourn to the corridor to unveil the plaque, which will not take very long.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to table the answer to question number 17.

May I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, who yesterday referred to a motion for the tabling of the Trans-Canada agreements and correspondence, that we have no objection to that. Indeed, it would have been tabled before now, but it is customary when correspondence of that nature is tabled, to inform the other governments concerned, and that is in the process of being done at the present time. I will be very glad to give the hon. Leader of the Opposition the information as soon as possible.

MR. H. E. BECKETT (York East): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I would like to mention the adverse criticism appearing in the press of the hockey team coming from my riding, which while overseas won all its games but one. I think some mention should be made of that criticism, which I believe is totally unjustified.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, in connection with the hockey team, may I say a word?

MR. SPEAKER: The matter is not open for discussion. Is there a question the hon. member (Mr. Wren) would like to ask?

MR. WREN: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I will put it in the form of a question. Would the hon. member who raised this question (Mr. Beckett) object to a request being forwarded to His Worship the Mayor of Toronto, to contribute the $5,000 to the Kenora hockey team, the Western Canadian Champions, which is now on its way to Japan? If His Worship the Mayor of Toronto would like to redeem the honour of Canada, and of this province, I am sure the Kenora hockey team would like in the near future to slip over to Russia, and show them, some afternoon, just what they can do.

MR. ARTHUR CHILD (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, may I speak on the adverse publicity mentioned by the hon. member for York East (Mr. Beckett)?

MR. SPEAKER: I am sorry, but I think I must cut short the debate. It seems to me I have been very lenient this year, insofar as permitting members to speak before the Orders of the day, without a request having been made to my office.

I have already requested if any hon. member has a matter he considers of public interest, which he wishes to present to the House prior to the Orders of the day, he abide by the rules, and afford Mr. Speaker the opportunity of looking over the subject matter. This would curtail a great deal of discussion.

Matters before the Orders of the day are not open to discussion or debate. I think we shall have to proceed with the Orders.

ON AMENDMENT TO THE MOTION TO REPLY TO THE
SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, I am sure it was a very great shock to all hon. members of this Assembly, to hear of the sudden passing of the late hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey), and I would like to join other speakers who have preceded me in this debate, in extending my sincere sympathy to his family in the loss of a very dear father and beloved husband.

I would like to congratulate the mover and seconder of the motion, the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley), and the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden). Both spoke clearly and distinctly, and both were most fulsome in their praise of the government. I am sure that praise has been expressed by all the hon. members who have spoken, in fact, they have said all the good things about the government which can be said, and I am sorry I cannot find anything more to say, so I must be a little critical.

The Speech from the Throne, as presented by His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor, in the Legislature on February 11th, was, in my opinion, about the shortest on record, and I regret it did not contain one word of Canada's number one social problem, which is housing. Could it be that the government was ashamed of its own conduct in seceding from the field of rent control, and wished to soft-pedal the critical housing situation in Ontario?

We very often hear people say the 3 most important things in life are the "school," the "church," and the "home." With that I think we all agree. But what is the good of giving our youth of today spiritual guidance in the church, providing the finest educational facilities in the school, and then sending some of them back into sub-standard homes and slums, where a great deal of this splendid training can be wasted? If we take the normal day, the child is only in the school at most only 5½ hours per day. This does not seem to be of much concern to the government, for housing did not receive an honourable mention.

The housing shortage of today is closely connected with the increasing cost of our social services.

Last November, the Ontario County Canadian Club held a dinner meeting in Whithy. Mr. J. Alec Edmison, a director of the John Howard Society and past president of the Canadian Penal Association, now assistant Principal of Queen's University, was the guest speaker. This gentleman has given a great deal of time and thought to our social problems of today. During the course of his remarks he said:

It will be found that the average lawbreaker comes from a slum or depressed area, for this is the source of 9 out of 10 criminals. Many come from unsatisfactory homes, homes which are broken by separation or divorce, where there is no sense of inward security for the child.

and concluded with these words:

Magnificently unprepared for life.

What a damning indictment of our present housing situation.

I must compliment the Chairman of the Select Committee on Reform Institutions. I am sure that he, and the members of his committee, devoted a great deal of time to this volume which was presented to the hon. members the other day, but I wonder if they have given any consideration to the housing situation in Ontario? I think they should have, because the housing situation is closely connected with the increasing costs of our public and social services today.

Reading our daily papers, one can read of the hardships of some poor people. The Daily Star in the appeal for funds for Christmas Cheer last December, cites the case of a man and wife and 11 children, 7 of them under 12, living in one average size room on the second floor of a Jarvis Street rooming house, and believe it or not, they were paying $150 per month for that one room. The father was able, out of his meagre earnings, to pay $75 per month, and the remaining $75 per month was paid by a special arrangement with the City Welfare Department. I discovered a case in my own riding where a lady on Mothers' Allowance was asked to pay $80 per month for a house one could have bought before the war for less than $1,000 and yet the lady, with her 3 children, was only receiving from the department $90 per month. I am sure many more cases of extreme hardship could be cited, and yet the Speech from the Throne did not even mention housing.

Although the government, in co-operation with the Federal Government, is servicing land for housing developments, the truth is we are not even scratching the surface of the housing problem. Only last week the Co-operative Union of Canada presented a brief to the House of Commons Banking Committee, and said it doubted if the housing legislation will be of much help to low income groups, a group which needs more protection than any. A Canadian wishing to build an $11,000 home under the new legislation would require a down payment of $2,400, and an annual income of $3,860, or $74.25 per week. Some 50 per cent. of our working population are earning less than $2,500 per year, and modest homes must be built for those people in the low income groups. Ways and means must be found to provide decent homes for these people, and if we do, I sincerely believe the cost of our social services would decrease. The only answer, I think, Mr. Speaker, is a low rental housing project, one in which interest rates are low and the amortization period is extended.

It is estimated at the present time there are 500,000 housing units needed. Since the average family consists of about 3.5 persons, this means housing is needed in Canada for close to a million people. The Federal Government's new mortgage insurance plan will, no doubt, help by reducing the size of down payments and extending payments over a longer period, but this will not greatly assist those who lack even the smaller cash down payment. It is families in this category who are hardest hit by the housing shortage. Yet, Mr. Speaker, no large central housing schemes have been devised which will help them acquire much-needed homes. Interest rates of up to 6 per cent. under the new regulations are far too high. The only way to reduce interest rates is for the government to assume a greater portion of the loan. Lower interest rates will help many people to buy new homes. Low cost housing will have to come—either that or thousands of Canadian families will go on indefinitely living in slum conditions.

A Conservative member of the Federal Parliament, Mr. George Hees, stated in the House of Commons:

The National Housing Act is nothing but a gigantic bluff designed to "kid" the people of Canada that something is being done.

I agree with that statement. Yet the Conservative Government at Queen's Park is supporting the federal housing regulations.

Now, I would like to say a word about unemployment. Various speakers have mentioned the increasing unemployment which exists throughout the country. Let me explain how some men and women at present unemployed could be put to work, not in building tanks and bombs and airplanes and things like that, but in building houses. It is estimated the building of 100,000 new homes would provide employment for 250,000 persons. This year, there will be an increase of 50,000 pupils in our schools. This will require additional accommodation to the extent of 1,500 class rooms to house the beginners at a cost of some $30 million. Here we can give employment to people who are now out of a job. We need homes, we need schools, we need hospitals and yet we have approximately 500,000 men and women who are unemployed in the richest country in the world.

I was interested to read in the paper the other day, Mr. Speaker,—the paper was the Toronto Star—a headline which said: "Frost Is Serious About Jobless."

Well, Mr. Speaker, I do not think the Prime Minister was very apprehensive when this was brought to his attention a few days ago by the hon. member for

St. Andrew. He was mentioned, as reported in Hansard on page 49, February the 16th, as having said:

It was only 4 years ago at this time that I stood in this House in connection with a similar problem. In 1950—at this time of the year—we had some recession and some levelling off. At that time there was a demand from the hon. members opposite that there should be the issuance of cash relief and for us to go into various things for which our province is neither constitutionally responsible, nor are the municipalities in this province fiscally capable of doing. At that time the same answer was given by this government and by the Ottawa government.

Mr. Speaker, I remember quite well on that occasion the answer given by the Prime Minister, and I think it was this: That unemployment would correct itself in the course of time. Well, Mr. Speaker, he was right. The Federal Government was right, too. But they would have guessed wrong had it not been for the war in Korea.

Next, I would refer to hospitalization. With the increase in the rates of Blue Cross and other private hospital organizations, it is interesting and encouraging to see the support the CCF is getting for a provincial or national hospital plan. I was interested in the remarks of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) who is prepared to support that idea. At the present time there are 1.7 million persons in the Province of Ontario covered by Blue Cross. The population of the province is roughly about 5 million. If we consider other private organizations, I think it would be safe to assume that about 2.5 million people in Ontario are covered by private insurance plans. Personally, I cannot see any reason why this government should not introduce a plan for hospitalization as the Province of Saskatchewan has done, and make it available to our people who need this service.

Some of the opponents of a government hospitalization plan always say that there is a deficit. That is quite true.

There is a deficit on government schemes, but there would be in the Blue Cross scheme, too, but for circumstances which I hope to make clear.

I was interested in a little publication called "Hospital Highlights" and particularly in an article on the editorial page written by Mr. A. J. Swanson who is, I think, the superintendent of one of the Toronto hospitals. He is talking about the 90-days' notice that the Blue Cross has to give to the hospitals. He then says:

Do you remember the early days of the plan? Only 21 days were provided initially and extra services were limited. To get the plan a number of our hospitals accepted their Blue Cross patients at per diem rate allowances which, for many hospitals, were less than cost.

So, Mr. Speaker, Blue Cross in the initial stages was subsidized by the hospitals of Ontario. Obviously, a government plan if put into operation by the Province of Ontario would have a deficit for some time. The plan introduced in Great Britain had a large deficit for the first two years, and when the Labour Party was questioned, the Minister of Health in the British Parliament of that day put it very aptly, I think, when he said that the deficit was really a reflection of the great need of such a service by the people of Britain.

It was introduced some 3 or 4 years ago, and even the great Conservative Party in the last election never mentioned during the campaign that they had any intention of interfering with that plan, because such a plan has come to stay.

The scheme operating in Saskatchewan has had a deficit every year since it began. But it should be remembered that the hospitalization scheme there provides for hospital treatment for the aged pensioner, to the cancer victim, to those stricken with polio, to the blind, to those on mothers' allowance, and to people unable to pay the premiums on a means test basis. In fact, last year, if I remember rightly, over 2,500 persons were apprehended by the government for refusing to pay their premiums to the hospital plan and only 250, I think, were compelled to pay. The rest were excused because they could not afford to pay the premiums. The total cost for hospitalization for the people in that province is paid by the government. Yet in Ontario only persons destitute are given hospitalization, and then on an indigent-patient basis, where the government only pays $2 or $3 a day, and the remainder must be borne by the hospital or the local municipality. This is one of the reasons, I think, why hospital rates are so high in Ontario today, because hospital authorities have to adjust their rates so that the cost of indigent patients is borne by those who are able to pay—a charge, in my opinion, which should be assumed by the Provincial Government.

Some hon. members of the government have spoken from time to time in favour of a provincial hospitalization plan. Some were opposed to it and I do hope that during this debate the hon. Minister of Health, or some responsible Minister of the government will give us clearly and precisely the intention of the government in respect to this great social need.

I wish to say a word about supplementary pensions. We in the CCF have advocated from time to time that supplementary pensions be paid to aged pensioners in Ontario. At last the Provincial Government has come forward and is doing something along those lines. I am sure the aged pensioners appreciate this invoice, and not only the pensioners aged between 65 and 69, but those who are disabled and those who are in receipt of national security pensions. But, although this is a concession, 50 per cent. of the pension being borne by the provincial government, the other 50 per cent. must be paid by the local municipality. This, I suggest, is indirectly a cost-of-living bonus.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the already overburdened municipalities should not be expected to carry this additional increase in expenditures. Surely, with the record surplus that the government has indicated during this last few weeks, we could assume that burden ourselves or ask the Federal Government to pay some portion of it. The concession, I think, is given quite grudgingly and will leave the responsibility upon the local councils whose tax revenue sources are already overstrained.

While on the matter of pensions I would like to bring to the attention of the government—and I am sorry the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is not in his place—a case which has come to my notice from my own riding.

Last spring, I was interested in the application of a lady who had applied for the pension on a means test basis. Her age was 68 years and 8 months. The lady had liquid assets of $1,945. She was told she could not qualify because she had too much money.

Now, in the brochure issued by the Department of Welfare, it is clearly stated the applicant can have up to $2,200 in liquid assets and still qualify for the pension. This seemed to be explicit and definite and I was quite confident the pension would be granted. I was surprised when the Chairman of the Pension Board advised that the claim had been disallowed.

It appears the sum of only $1,000 is allowed in liquid assets, and any amount over that is apportioned over the remaining months before the applicant qualifies for national security pensions. The pension on a means test basis is paid in this manner. In bringing this to the attention of the government, I do hope this restrictive clause will be amended, or this section on the back page of the brochure deleted.

Mr. Speaker, I want to mention the Local Improvement District of Ajax. The hon. Prime Minister was there the other day and created quite an impression at the official opening of the hospital.

Up to 3 years ago, the affairs of the community were administered by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. I might say the Administration did a very fine job, a good job of planning and designing for the future, for the industrial growth of that area has been most marked. At the present time there are 29 industries located there with a population of 3,500. During the war, Central Mortgage built 600 war-time homes north of the new highway. Up to the present 593 of those 600 have been sold, either outright or on a time-payment basis, to the occupants.

Three years ago, the Improvement District was set up and three trustees, appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor, have been administering the affairs of the community since that time. They, too, have done a very fine job. In fact, the interests of the community and the industrial growth have been well taken care of.

However, I do think the people in this area should consider the question of an elected council. Some weeks ago the Pickering Co-operative, which is a producer co-operative shipping milk to Toronto, applied to the Ontario Milk Control Board for a licence to operate a producer dairy in Ajax. This application was refused. The reason given was this: That in the opinion of the board the area was adequately served.

Now, Mr. Speaker, these are the facts: there are 5 dairies operating in Ajax, 4 Toronto firms and 1 Oshawa firm. The delivery days are, of course, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Now, there is no milk dairy located in Ajax. The producers have promised they will erect a building where the people may obtain milk on any day of the week, and they will sell milk at the same price as the Oshawa firm.

This application received the support of the trustees and a large number of residents. Yet the Milk Control Board refused the application. Of course, the contention of the dairies operating there was that the area was adequately served, but, in this age of free enterprise, Mr. Speaker, I cannot understand why it should be, because the applicant company is a producer co-operative, and I am sure the hon. Prime Minister and the government have given their blessing to co-operatives for some time.

The application of the co-operative has received the approval of the trustees of the Improvement District. Surely the local council is in a much better position to assess the needs of the community than the Milk Control Board sitting in Toronto.

I would like to ask the Acting hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Goodfellow) to give some consideration to this, and if he requires any further information respecting it, I will be happy to give it to him.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to move that the amendment to the motion for an address in reply to the Speech of the Honourable, the Lieutenant-Governor, now before the House, be further amended by adding thereto the following:

(a) And this House further regrets that the Throne Speech makes no reference to the critical housing situation.

(b) That no effective measures are indicated to alleviate increasing unemployment, leaving this burden to the municipalities.

MR. HOLLIS E. BECKETT (York East): Mr. Speaker, it gives me much pleasure to take part in this debate. I want to congratulate the two new hon. members for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) and Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby). I contend that their victory holds proof that the administration of the affairs of this province is in good hands, and that this government is a government of the people and for all the people.

Mr. Speaker, I want to pay my respects to you for the able way in which you conduct the affairs of this assembly.

It is just about a year since Bill No. 80 was passed in this House, in Chapter 73 of the Statutes of Ontario, and there have been great strides made by the Metropolitan Council, the Metropolitan Planning Board, and the Transit Commission, to make that bill workable. So far as I know, it is the first federation which has been put into operation in Canada, and, I think, in the United States. Many of the large cities in this country and in the United States are interested and are watching how it works.

Since I first entered municipal politics in 1923, I have been constantly studying the formation of a metropolitan area. Last year was the first time anything concrete was put on the Statute Book. We know it will work, and I think it will set the pattern for other cities in this province, and it should do away with large annexation orders.

I am highly honoured to represent the riding of York East, which, today has a population of over 230,000 people. According to our records, it is growing at the rate of over 1,500 people a month. Mr. Speaker, people, in my mind, are the important factor in any riding. There is, of course, the material growth, the industries, and everything else, but, in the long run, it is the people who make a great country. The large growth in York East has necessitated providing all the essential services, including schools. The people in my riding have come from all parts of the country and are taking part in the greatest development this province has seen.

Our population of over 230,000 represents almost one-twentieth of the entire population of the Province of Ontario. One municipality in the riding has over 90,000 people, namely, the municipality of Scarborough, which is the largest municipality in the Toronto Metropolitan Area.

I want to compliment the councils of the various municipalities and their planning boards for the way they have handled the many hundreds of subdivisions for housing. The hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) spoke about housing, and I want to mention the fact that the Townships of Scarborough, East York, North York and Markham have done considerable to relieve the housing situation in this province. These municipalities started out 3 or 4 years ago on a planned programme that before a subdivision is approved by the Council and the Planning Board, the subdivider must agree to subdivide properly, according to certain regulations. One of the main regulations is, he must put in all the essential services at his own expense. At the same time, he signs an agreement that a by-law will be passed restricting the use of the land, the volume and type of houses. That is approved by the Ontario Municipal Board and registered in their office.

The subdivider is called upon to pay up to $3 per foot—that amounts to $150 on a 50-foot lot—towards the cost of providing for water and sewage disposal plants. In cases where industry is coming into these municipalities, it contributes $200 toward those costs.

It might be interesting to note how these municipalities have lived together. Last year, the Township of Scarborough supplied the Township of East York with 5 million gallons of water a day, and the Township of North York with 1 million gallons of water a day, which meant that these municipalities were able to develop the townships for housing and industry.

That brings me, Mr. Speaker, to the point that it is not necessary to have annexation if the municipalities will live together and provide each other with essential services. Since the war, there has been a tremendous expansion of industries throughout this province, and Scarborough Township is an example of a municipality able to obtain industries without annexation by the City of Toronto.

During the last 4 years there have been over 400 industries locate in the Township of Scarborough. Mr. Speaker, I say that shows what can be done by municipalities, outside of the big cities, to get industries.

Industry today is a little different than it was a few years ago when it depended upon municipal forms of transportation, street cars and buses, to get people to work. Today, the industry is no farther away than the automobile. The majority of people working in our industries in Scarborough come to work by automobile, and the industries have sufficient land for parking. I contend, Mr. Speaker, that the decentralization of industry in this province is an important matter for the well-being of the entire province. I do not think any large centre has any right to say that it should have all the industry, and it should say to other municipalities, "We want you to give up some land so that we can have industry." Let us keep the industry spread throughout the province.

In 1932, and 1933, when all the municipalities around Toronto suffered from the paying of debentures, with the exception of Swansea and Forest Hill, it was because we had no industrial assessment to fall back on. In the township of Scarborough, back in the thirties, there were 5,000 people on relief. These people worked in the City of Toronto and helped that city build up its big industries. But when they were thrown out of work they had to come back to the Township of Scarborough. The obligation of looking after the unemployed rested on the people of the township, and the increased taxes on the various municipalities caused them to default. Of course, Mr. Speaker, that condition cannot occur now in the Metropolitan area, and it will not recur where there are the resources of an industrial section to fall back upon. Today, in the Province of Ontario, there are many towns whose industrial assessment is as high as 40 per cent.; indeed, some are higher; and such towns as these, in my opinion, can never default. There is no more healthy condition to be found in any part of the country.

I suggest, the real reason why cities want to take over some areas to industrialize them is, they realize these municipalities of themselves are no longer profitable, but the people of those municipalities want to live there. I say it is not fair or equitable to require by legislation that John Brown shall be forced to agree to live in another municipality. The people of the townships and smaller municipalities of this province want to live in their own communities; they are satisfied with the services they have. If any section of their populations wish to be included in another municipality, let the people of the municipality as a whole vote on the question. This matter was considered in 1939 by the government then in power. I had the opportunity of sitting in on the drafting of the legislation which was passed at that time. The hon.

Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member of the government which took away from the people of a municipality the right to say whether they should live in the City of Toronto or in the Township of Scarborough. Prior to that date, all annexations to the City of Toronto were made as a result of negotiation. I could mention, for instance, East Toronto and Parkdale. The councils of the towns and villages concerned negotiated with Toronto regarding annexation, and most of us favoured legislation which prevented annexation without a vote of the people concerned. But, as I have said, that right was removed by the legislation of 1939. It was provided by the Municipal Act that any municipality could apply for an order to annex another municipality or part of it. Although provision was made for a vote of the applicant municipality, there was no such requirement in the case of the municipality that it was proposed to annex. I contend therefore, Mr. Speaker, that the legislation should be amended to provide that where a municipality makes application to the Municipal Board for annexation, the board shall require an affirmative vote both by the electors of the municipality applying, and the electors of the municipality it is proposed to annex. Let us trust the people; let the people vote on an important matter of that kind. When you cease to trust people, the people will soon cease to trust you. We all know what that means. We have always felt that it is not fair for the large municipalities to take land from the smaller ones, any more than we approve of taking money from the little man to give to the big man. Let us all live together; let us all enjoy the benefits of the great industrial expansion of this province. I say that you will then have a much happier situation than can be expected if all your industries are centralized in your big cities.

Let us all work towards that end—the spreading of industries through all parts of the province. I am sorry that the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Hon. Mr. Dunbar) is not in his seat, because I want to pay tribute to him.

We, who live in East York, are much indebted to him for the aid he provided under The Municipal Act, whereby municipalities are able to buy industrial lots and sell them to industry. I want also to compliment his Deputy, Mr. Orr, and the Chief Supervisor, Mr. Carter. These gentlemen, to my mind, are characteristic of the civil servants of this province. They are always ready and willing to help in matters pertaining to the municipalities.

In connection with housing developments in my riding, I want to mention that in 1953, North York issued building permits for 3,300 houses of the value of $31 million, and Scarborough issued 3,725 permits for housing costing $38 million. This is evidence, I submit, that these municipalities are doing their fair share of providing houses in the Toronto area. Today Scarborough Township has 9,700 serviced lots available for houses; another 3,000 lots have been laid out on a plan under which sewer and water facilities should be ready this fall. That makes a total of 12,700 lots in one municipality alone. North York, too, is keeping up the pace in supplying sewer and water.

It gives me great pleasure to have said these few words on behalf of the great riding I represent and in explanation of what we are doing for the people of the province.

MR. R. CONNELL (Hamilton-Wentworth): Mr. Speaker. I find in my notes the statement that it is going to be a pleasure to speak on this Throne Speech debate, but now that the moment has arrived I am not as sure as I was that I shall derive so much pleasure from it.

I would like to congratulate the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) and the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) on their speeches. Their congratulations have been several times repeated, and I have no doubt they voice the sincere feelings of all of us.

I would also like to compliment the hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. Letherby), and the hon. member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Jolley) upon their election to this House.

I might also mention the death during this past year of 2 of our fellow members. I do not know what is the effect of such happenings on other hon. members, but it tends to slow me up and suggests the wisdom of adjusting one's sights a bit on the pace one is living. I think this is a moral we all could take to heart.

It has not been my habit to belabour this House with my speeches, and I do not intend to take too long at this time. Modesty prevents me from speaking of my riding in quite the terms, which, possibly, some hon. members feel they are free to use. However, I feel that I come from a very good riding.

I have a few requests to make, and, possibly, a few compliments to pay the government.

First, I would like to speak on the matter of education. The hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) is doing, in my opinion, a good job. It was my fortune to come into the Chamber a few minutes early today, and to hear him speaking to a number of Teachers' College students, and he was certainly giving them a lot of encouragement. Along with some other members, I have had a great many representations from the Teachers' Federation requesting the reduction of the period of computation for pension from 15 to 10 years. I am pleased to see that the hon. Minister of Education has included a provision to this effect in the bill which he introduced yesterday. The hon. Minister has often remarked that this pension fund would not stand the extra expense which this concession would require. But we did have a suggestion the other day from the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) that a pension fund for members of the Legislature should be set up. Possibly in a few years, if the teachers' pension fund runs out, we could borrow from the members' pension fund; or perhaps the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), in his concern for the rural way of life, may have a farmers' pension fund set up from which we can borrow.

A little over a year ago, the Normal School in Hamilton was burned down. Last year we were promised a new Teachers' College. I have not seen too many signs of this college materializing. I have heard no complaints from the Zion Church people, who are looking after the accommodation of the pupils and their teachers, but I think, in fairness to the church itself and to the pupils, we should get on with the construction of this college.

To deal briefly with the subject of Workmen's Compensation, many of us were at the opening last summer of the new building to house this department and we were pleased at what we saw. It looks as though, with this equipment, they will be able to look after the interests of the workers for many years to come. I will not enlarge on their activities, for many of you are much better acquainted with the matter than I am.

Another interesting development in the last couple of years has to do with the compensation coverage for farmers. We all know that farming is becoming an increasingly dangerous occupation because of the advent of so much power machinery. Farmers have found it difficult to get adequate insurance to cover them for all the injuries they might incur. There have been cases in which the farmer has been almost ruined through a suit for damages brought by some hired man, as he is often spoken of, injured while in the farmer's employ.

Today, for 75c. per $100 of wages paid, a farmer can secure coverage for his employees and himself. Under such a plan, the Board would treat him the same as anyone hurt in an industrial accident, and there is no chance of a farmer being sued by those whom we call "the hired man."

I turn next to the question of highways. The Department of Highways' programme in my area, in my estimation and that of many others, has been very successful. No. 5 Highway, as many hon. members know, is a heavily-travelled route carrying through traffic from Windsor to Toronto. A short span of that road within my riding has not had much work done on it, but I understand contracts have been called for this summer, and we are looking for an early completion of the work on a 10-mile stretch.

The divisional engineer in our district has been using a grading mulch service on some of the secondary highways; this is very satisfactory and has received a great deal of commendation from people using the roads. As I say, these are secondary roads, and do not carry as much traffic as do some of the other highways.

Speaking for the county and township officials in and around the Hamilton area, they are very anxious to receive more by way of grants than they have in previous years. As you know, our area is heavily travelled, with a great deal of traffic going in and out of the City of Hamilton, which rapidly wears down the county and township roads. However, the county officials are very pleased with the way they have been treated from Toronto in the past.

I do, however, have one real problem, that having to do with Aldershot. I was pleased to hear the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) introduce some amendments to the Act which may possibly be of some help, but I do not think they completely take care of our problem in Aldershot. This portion of No. 2 Highway carries the traffic from Queen Elizabeth Highway into Hamilton. This area, I would point out, over the past 3 or 4 years, has built up from a population of 1,000 to that of 6,000. They are not interested in Aldershot becoming a police village or being incorporated in any way; nevertheless, under the present Act, they are unable to enforce the 30-mile-an-hour speed limit. As you may know, this is a 4-lane highway, and in a short stretch of the road, there are 4 schools. Anyone who has raised a family on or near such a highway knows the hazards of motor traffic. In this section, there have already been several serious accidents.

Under the present Act, the 30-mile speed limit cannot be enforced unless the area is at least 50 per cent. built up.

In this particular section, most of the lots are at least 100 feet long, and it naturally takes a very large house to cover 50 per cent. of such a lot, and there is little chance that this area will ever become a 50 per cent. built-up area. I have a few suggestions which may be regarded as immature, but which would offer some help to these people.

First, may I suggest an early completion of the cut-off which was promised us here last year, by which we would be relieved of the Queen Elizabeth traffic from what we call "Campbell's Corners" to what is known as the "Neilson sign."

Another suggestion I have is to revise the Act to include built-up areas to a distance of 1,000 feet off the highways. In the Aldershot area, for every house on the highway, there are possibly 10 on the highway whose owners must come on to that road. This is not a controlled-access highway, where people can come in wherever they wish.

A further suggestion I have is that the Act should be revised to provide for the enforcement of the 30-mile an hour speed limit within 500 feet of a school, but only within what are known as "school hours." We hear a good deal of objection to such a proposal, but I think there is considerable merit in it, and the residents of this area have asked to see what could be done to bring about such a change.

"Safety" seems to be a word which has become quite popular in the House these days. I have a suggestion to offer to the House, which may have the effect of turning back the pages of time, but which I believe would contribute to general safety. I think we should adopt the method of other days when we had sheriffs—and we still see them in the moving pictures—who pinned badges on deputy sheriffs. Someone said, if we had a police cruiser following us, we would be better drivers. My suggestion is—and it is not unlike that which the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) put forward yesterday—that we delegate a limited number of people to perform this type of duty. I am thinking along the line of policemen who are off duty. I would not suggest we delegate hon. members of Parliament to do the job. There are, however, many capable people who could assume the authority to check on persons who exceed the speed limit, or drive in a dangerous manner.

Under the method I propose, it might not be possible to prevent them from driving dangerously, but at least a letter could be sent to the authorities and possibly, if such person got into an accident later on, the earlier reports of careless driving could be used as evidence against him. Of course, I am not in favour of Gestapo methods, by which every person checks on somebody else, but I do believe that authority, properly delegated to a limited number of people, would have the effect of controlling traffic on our roads.

Again, I should like to say on behalf of my constituents, how grateful we are for the over-all job the Department of Highways has done and is doing.

I turn now to the Department of Planning and Development, and extend my congratulations to the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) upon the excellent job he is doing. We, in the Hamilton area, are very pleased to have one of our hon. members in the Cabinet. We are all well aware of the amount of work which can be put into the programme of this department. One point I should like to raise is the tendency on the part of some of the Planning Boards to infringe on the rights of the individual. These rights have always been held in high regard in this province, and I trust that they will always be.

My next subject is hydro. Since becoming a member of this House, I have been very surprised to hear the criticism by hon. members of the opposition of the costs of hydro. I maintain hydro is, without a doubt, the cheapest commodity we have in the Province of Ontario: we receive more value for a dollar spent on hydro than for anything else.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, I should like to make a personal reference. The hydro costs on my farm amount to approximately 75c. a day—possibly a little more in the winter, and a little less in the summer. For that small expenditure, we get a few of the comforts we find around a home; and in addition to those, hydro pumps 1,200 gallons of water for me, moves 3,000 pounds of feed which I do not have to touch by hand, and also supplies light and a number of other odd services around the farm. And I get all this for 75c. a day.

It is my conservative estimate that if I hired help to do the work which hydro is doing, at $1 an hour, it would cost me $20 a day. According to my computation, that amounts to $7,300 a year, as compared with the $300 a year I now spend for hydro. I know this differential may not mean much to some of my lawyer friends in Toronto, but if I had to spend $7,000 a year, it would put me out of business. Therefore, I say that hydro is the cheapest commodity we have on the farm.

As a further personal reference, may I say that my farm, with the help of hydro, produces one pound of poultry meat every 90 seconds. I calculate it would take 6 minutes to produce a pound of poultry meat, without the use of hydro.

Mr. Speaker, if there is anything from which we get more value in this province than hydro, it is the value of the services of our own hon. Prime Minister.

Anyone who has served on the local councils realizes that the most important thing to the taxpayer is the figure on the lower corner of his tax bill. I was pleased to hear legislation introduced the other day providing that the clerks of our municipalities put on the tax bills, the amount of the government contribution by way of grants towards the taxpayers' costs. Many of our people do not realize how great the contribution is. Referring again to my own experience; my taxes last year, on an ordinary farm, were $474. A calculation of what my taxes would have been without government grants such as 40 per cent. on education, and 55 per cent. on secondary education, our road subsidies and so on, would have increased my taxes to $811.

True, modesty is a virtue, but I think this is one instance when the government should not hide what it is doing for the people of this province.

I turn now to the subject of the hon. Attorney-General's Department. In this connection, I should like to say that we have a new Provincial Police Inspector in the Dundas Division, and a new detachment in Waterdown. This addition helps to serve the busy area more adequately. In driving to Toronto, at times I may see only one police cruiser, on every 6 trips. That suggests to me that we are not making the best use of the men and the cruisers. Almost any morning as I go down to Dundas, I see perhaps 6 cruisers parked in front of the courthouse. I know these officers have to prosecute their cases, but I do not feel that they should be so occupied in that way. My suggestion to the hon. Attorney-General's Department is that possibly a certain day could be set aside for the hearing of traffic cases, and in that way, these officers would not have to sit in court all morning, listening to cases in which they were not interested.

The City of Hamilton and the County of Wentworth are badly in need of a new courthouse. We have far outgrown our old one. Representations were made to the hon. Attorney-General during the summer by county and civic officials, with a view to seeing if something could be done by way of assistance by the government. We are aware of the fact that assistance has been granted to cities and municipalities in the northern part of the province, and we feel some amendment should be made to the Act which could provide assistance for us. As has been pointed out, real estate is bearing the costs of the higher courts, and it apparently is not very satisfactory. The Registry Office supplies a great deal of revenue to the province, and we feel that the Act should be amended to the extent that the revenue from the Registry Office could go towards assisting us in the building of a new courthouse.

I turn now to a somewhat different subject. As you know, McMaster University is in my riding, and Hamilton, like many cities, is quite a football centre. As recently as last Saturday, McMaster was turned out of a 5-team league, which was reduced to 4 teams.

There is a great deal of football tradition around the City of Hamilton, and even though I am not a college graduate myself, I do believe we have there a good case of discrimination. A bill was passed in this House legislating against discrimination, and, in my opinion, this is a form of discrimination in its worst form, the fact that McMaster has been thrown out of this league, and it must have a very degrading effect on the pupils attending that university.

I am sorry—I do not know whether I should be sorry—but I am surprised that the only team which supported McMaster was McGill University of Montreal, and I am not very flattered by the fact that our own teams in Ontario have “let them down.”

McMaster has been in a somewhat unusual situation, as far as finances are concerned. I heard that up until recently it has not been able to secure outside grants, but that the province has been doing very well toward it, this past year or two.

Mr. Speaker, I do not like to use the words “Hog Town,” but apparently it has become very evident that Varsity in Toronto was the prime mover in getting them out. It has been said that McMaster was not up to par last year. I have gone through the records of its football team, and I find that it has lost 2 or 3 games by only 1 point, and with a few “breaks,” they could very easily have won some of those games.

The question of money arose, and was given as being the real reason. It has also been mentioned that a 5-team league will not operate successfully. I believe that greater difficulties than that have been overcome, and I am satisfied if an effort were made, they could succeed in operating with a 5-team league, without any difficulty.

I would like to point out I think the real reason behind the whole thing is because there are a number of good Rugby players in Hamilton, and Queen's, Western, and Varsity, would like to have first call on their services, and as long as they are considered top-flight teams, I presume the players feel they would prefer playing with those teams.

A great deal has been said at different times in this House about Select Committees. I suggest that consideration be given to the appointment of a Select Committee to check the manufacturing of farm equipment which is produced, and to endeavour to find a means whereby better material may be used in the manufacture of this machinery. I do not think this is something which perhaps should be on a provincial level, and I suppose the chances of my ever being in the Federal House are slim—I do not know that I even want to be there—but I think that is where this protection should be afforded.

As you know, there is protection afforded labour, protection afforded to farmers, and protection afforded by the courts. We are also protected by the fact that if we buy a quart of milk, we are certain of getting a quart; if we buy a gallon of gasoline, we are certain of getting a gallon, and if we buy a pound of sugar, we are certain of getting a full pound, and, in my opinion, there is not enough attention given to the inspections to see that we get good farm machinery.

The farm machinery in this day and age consists of high-powered equipment, and according to the price we are forced to pay for it, it seems to me we are very sadly “shorted” when it comes to getting value for our money in regard to the purchase of farm machinery.

I might add to that list also electric bulbs. I purchase many of these in my business, and a great many of them do not last even overnight. Children's toys do not last until you get them home, and radios and cars are other things which I do not think are providing full value for what they are costing the purchaser.

One of the more recent things which has come to my attention, has to do with dairying. Under a new system of collecting milk, the farmers were forced to install stainless steel tank coolers. It is just over a year ago that these vats had to be put in, and at that time, depending on the size, the cost was anywhere from $1,600 to $2,500.

Some of the milk men were here the other day, and from what they said, I understand that some of the farmers have already been forced to change these vats, because they have become worn out, and all that in just over a year. That is another thing in connection with which I think we are not getting full value. With the modern engineering facilities, and the high costs of everything, I feel there should be some enquiries made in regard to this important matter.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that I appreciate being able to sit in this House, and taking part in this debate. I would like to stress the untiring efforts made by the Hon. Prime Minister and his Cabinet on our behalf. It is said that for an individual to become great, he must be honest with his people and with himself, and that may be truly said of our Hon. Prime Minister. May he be spared to look after us for many years to come.

MR. G. T. GORDON (Brantford): Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for Beaches (Mr. Collings) spoke the other day, he complimented the government upon bringing in a pension for disabled persons. Now, Mr. Speaker, there is no pension for disabled persons, nor is there a pension for persons partially disabled. One has to be totally disabled in order to secure a pension—totally disabled. The Act is very narrow in its scope, and very few can qualify under it.

No doubt many of the hon. members have had cases brought to their attention, as have I. I will mention but one.

In Brantford, a young lady is totally disabled, and she qualifies for the pension, but because her father is getting $10 a month as a veteran's pension, for which he fought, this young lady cannot receive the pension provided for persons who are disabled. I think it is a disgrace. Even if the amount received was only $5, which is by way of compensation, one could not qualify for the pension provided for a totally disabled person. I think that is something which should be corrected.

Mr. Speaker, I think I can truthfully say, like my hon. leader said earlier in the debate, that I am a man of peace. But I must admit there are times when I get somewhat ruffled, when certain matters of injustice through legislation are brought to my attention.

I know it is practically impossible to enact laws and administer them to everyone's satisfaction. I am sure that the hon. members opposite, in all their wild and effervescent boasts of good government, will not go so far as to claim they have reached perfection in that respect. But I think that legislation, sir, should be administered wisely and with common sense. When injustices creep in, as they seem to do at times, I think some effort should be made to review the particular case and, for humanitarian reasons, if no other, seek to ameliorate the hardship inflicted.

I am referring to injustice, sir, in a particular case under the Workmen's Compensation Act occurring in my own riding of Brantford. There may be others, but this one I know of first hand. In 1947 a workman in the Cockshutt plant at Brantford was seriously injured when struck in the head by a piece of metal from a travelling crane. He survived, but his brain was so badly injured he had to be cared for in a mental institution. During the period he spent there and underwent several operations, his wife, through Workmen's Compensation, was drawing 66 2/3 per cent. of his salary.

This workman, after great suffering, died last September from complications following the accident. His death, of course, ended compensation arrangement of a percentage of his salary and made his widow eligible under the pension plan. She was advised by company officials that she would receive $75 and I believe that amount is what she is really entitled to, but when her application for it was sent in, the Workmen's Compensation Board replied that the pension would be only $50 per month.

Now, sir, I am well aware, as are all other hon. members of this House, that the pension rate under Workmen's Compensation was amended at the 1953 session of this legislature and raised to $75 a month. And let me add, sir, before any hon. member jumps up to interrupt me, that I am well aware of the wording of the amended act. I was in this Chamber at the previous session when the hon. Minister of Labour explained the amendment. I accept his explanation of why the increased pension rate applies only when the accident happens on or after the day the amendment act comes into force, which was April 2nd of last year.

At the same time, sir, I submit, that the pension in this particular case I am dealing with, should be $75 a month under the meaning of the Act, if not under the wording. I know that some of the board feel this amendment should be changed and I declare an injustice is being done to this woman, who is elderly and unable to support herself, by refusing her the increased amount. The word "accident" in section 4 of the Workmen's Compensation Amendment Act, 1953, is ambiguous in its relation to the clauses in section 3 dealing with the pension rate. In these clauses the word "widow" is specifically used. I maintain, sir, that only death can make a wife a widow in the real meaning of the term. Widows are not necessarily made by accident.

It seems incredible to me that officials of the Workmen's Compensation Board would make such a doubtful interpretation of the Act to deprive a poor widow of $25 a month, as has been done in this case. The wording is faulty, but the intent of the amended Act is clear. The amount of pension was made $75 after a certain date and applied only to those becoming eligible for it after that date. That is quite plain. The woman in Brantford was widowed nearly 6 months after this Act went into force. In refusing her the full amount of the pension specified under the Act, the Workmen's Compensation Board, is, in effect, telling her that she became a widow some years before, which is certainly not the case. I submit, sir, that under legislation of this government, no board has any right to make such a presumption and immediate steps should be taken to correct false interpretation such as this before more injustices are committed.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, will the hon. member (Mr. Gordon) permit me to say, that if I have heard him correctly, I am inclined to think he has a point, and if the hon. member will acquaint me with the name and the details of this case, I will be very happy to look into it.

MR. GORDON: Thank you very much, Mr. Minister. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say something about another form of injustice for which this government is responsible. It is in remarkable contrast to the one I have just been dealing with, because it concerns lack of law enforcement whereas the other shows over-zealous enforcement.

In the last session of this House, sir, I raised my voice in protest against the increasing pollution of the waters of the Grand River. I have been requested by many citizens of Brantford to bring this to the attention of the government again. Pollution of this river is constantly getting worse. Despite the efforts of a highly competent chemist at the Brantford waterworks filtration plant, we are finding various flavours in the water. Incidentally, I heard a discussion by three ladies at a banquet recently. They were talking about the many tastes in the water. Two of them said they had given up drinking tea because of the objectionable flavour caused by the water, and had turned to coffee because it was less objectionable that way. Well, sir, I think we all appreciate what a hardship this is imposing on the people of Brantford at present coffee prices.

Just recently, a Brantford doctor informed me he detected a strong DDT flavour in the water, evidently a result of upstream industrial plants polluting the river. The hon. Minister of Lands and Forests, in presenting his White Paper, said that the City of Los Angeles in California, because of water shortage, may have to turn to using the water from its sewers. Well, sir, that will be nothing new, because the people of Brantford have been doing that for some time. Our Grand River is, and has been referred to quite frequently as an open sewer, which, because of lack of enforcement of our pollution legislation, is what it really is.

On August 12th last, an inspection of the Grand River was made by some 120 representatives from the municipalities in the Grand River Valley. Starting at the Shand Dam, it was found the water was clear and unpolluted. But as we travelled down stream and were shown samples of water taken from the river at some 12 check points, the water got more and more cloudy and smelly. As the tour progressed, it became quite evident that the Grand River, once one of the finest streams in this province, had become, as I said before, nothing but an open sewer.

At a meeting held in Preston at the conclusion of this inspection tour, the hon. Minister of Health, who was present, said he realized the seriousness of the situation and that the province was willing to do its share in financing pollution control methods and the Provincial Government would match the Federal Government, dollar for dollar, in assisting the municipalities. Here we have another excellent example of this government's frequent attempts to pass along its responsibility to federal and municipal authorities.

Well, that isn't good enough for me, nor for the large number of people who live in the municipalities affected by the pollution of this river. The province has a definite responsibility and must recognize it. There are laws on our statute books concerning pollution; very definite laws, indeed. This government is evading its responsibility by failing to enforce them. This is the least it could do, and I am confident if that were done, there would be a general improvement all along the river. The very failure to enforce the existing legislation is aggravating a situation that should never have been allowed to exist in the first place. If the existing legislation cannot be enforced, then it is time it was taken out of the Statute Books.

I'm sure the hon. Minister of Health will recall that at the meeting in Preston, a number of mayors and reeves of the municipalities concerned stated their views in no uncertain terms. The Reeve of Waterloo Township, he will recall, stated that townships are frequently compelled by medical health officers to prosecute individual owners of improperly working septic tanks, but towns and cities and industries can use the river for a sewer and nothing is done about it. It is a glaring infringement of people's rights and certainly the time has come when definite action must be taken to clean up the dirtiest river in Ontario. There is no more acute situation in this province today than that one.

Dr. A. E. Berry, Chairman of the Ontario Pollution Control Authority, has estimated the cost for pollution control at $7 million. This covers the expenditure for a sufficient number of sewage treatment plants which the municipalities are required to build. But the question naturally arises, what of the other sources of pollution, from industry, etc.? Can they be controlled through the municipal sewage treatment plant? Some of them can, no doubt, but I don't think all of them can. Those that cannot must be regulated under the existing legislation concerning pollution. That legislation must be enforced, for it is the starting point in any effort made to deal with this problem in a satisfactory manner. And so long as it isn't enforced, the Grand River will remain a dirty, polluted stream, a likely source of epidemic and plague and a disgrace to the province.

In the second annual report of the Grand River Anti-Pollution Committee, covering the period from March, 1953, to February, 1954, there appears a copy of a letter received from the Hon. Ontario Minister of Health under date of December 1st, 1953. That letter reads as follows:

I have your letters in reference to the action taken by you and other groups in an endeavour to clean up the pollution in the Grand River.

I have delayed in giving you anything specific on this matter since our investigations are continuing, and we are endeavouring to find a solution to this difficult problem. I can assure you that it is not easy to see a solution that will be satisfactory to all when the expenditures are so high. You may rest assured that we will do everything in our power to bring about a distinct improvement in the quality of the water in this stream.

I hope I can write you further at a later date, and give you something more specific.

Yours very truly,

(signed) M. PHILLIPS,

Minister of Health.

There is nothing about enforcing legislation in that letter or any hint that such a course is intended. There is only mention that investigation is continuing and a specific solution is being sought. Surely, the Hon. Minister of Health saw enough convincing evidence on the tour of inspection last August, and heard enough about the pollution that is constantly going on to satisfy him and his Health Department officials that the legislation is being ignored.

I am afraid, Mr. Speaker, that I shall have to await until I see that some of the offending polluters of this stream are brought into court under the provisions of the Act, before I am convinced the Department of Health is showing any real concern about the situation and treating it seriously.

On past occasions in this House, Mr. Speaker, I have had a little to say about fluoridation of drinking water which has met with such success in Brantford during the past eight years. It is not my intention at this time to deal with this subject at any length. I merely want to make reference briefly to a couple of figures issued by the Fluorine Committee in Brantford at its annual meeting on February 17th last. In the pre-fluoridation year of 1944, out of 2,741 Brantford school children, only 142 had perfect teeth. Today, in our ninth year of fluoridating the domestic water supply in Brantford, out of 3,385 school children, 693 have perfect teeth. This is an increase of 20.47 per cent. in 8 years. There has been a continual improvement every year. There is an over-all increase in the dental health of our children of 44 per cent.

Incidentally, Brantford is the first city or community in the commonwealth to fluoridate its water supply. Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Newburgh, N.Y., preceded Brantford by a few months in this fluoridation experiment. Like Brantford, they have kept careful check by regular examinations and have found similar results. These results have been checked, analyzed, confirmed and approved by innumerable scientific bodies. It is now accepted in scientific circles that fluoridation will prevent more than half the dental caries, which invariably occur in communities where the public water supply lacks fluorine, and it will do this without any detectable injury to health.

I note that Dr. A. J. Coughlan, of St. John, N.B., president of the Canadian Dental Association, has announced that the association gives full backing to fluoridation. He terms the treatment of communal waters with fluorine as an effective preventative of tooth decay and declares it one of the most important health measures.

Mr. Speaker, just recently in a Toronto morning newspaper an article appeared, headed: "Fluorination—Boon or Blunder?" They thought they were so good that they put them in pamphlet form. Copies could be obtained by writing for them.

Just as the bell rang for the House to assemble, I received a long distance telephone message containing some very important information in connection with this pamphlet.

One of the doctors whom they quoted is described in the pamphlet as a "Scottish dentist." But this gentleman is a native of Jamaica. He was educated in the United States, and has never been heard of in the city in which, they claim, he made his investigations in England.

"Boon or Blunder"? I think that before this House adjourns, Mr. Speaker, I will have some statements to make.

In regard to the case I just mentioned, in my opinion, the statement is just so much "bunk."

Before I take my seat, Mr. Speaker, I want to say that I heartily support the suggestion made in this House recently by the hon. member for Riverdale, that all tenders the government asks for should be dealt with and opened in public and all information concerning them be available to the public. I believe that when a contractor or an industry submits a tender and goes to the expense of preparing costly samples and other specimens of work the job requires, all those tendering should be given a statement showing at least the figures of the tender accepted.

This is not being done by the departments of this government and I have often received complaints from manufacturers protesting that they have never heard another word after submitting the tender, nor are the samples ever returned to them. When I was on the Brantford City Council and the Public Utilities, it was the usual procedure to inform all contractors about the tenders, listing the winner and those who were unsuccessful together with the total amount of each tender. There was no attempt at secrecy. I think the province should act in a similar manner. It should have nothing to hide. As it is, no information is available on large numbers of bids, or if it is, it only appears in public accounts long after the contract has been completed and paid for.

I was somewhat amused, Mr. Speaker, when the hon. member for Woodbine said in his speech on Friday that he found Canadian bacon to be foul smelling and not very appetizing. I find just the opposite. I think our bacon is equal to any from other countries and better than most. American tourists take large quantities of our bacon back home with them and many have told me Canadian bacon is far superior to any in the U.S. I am wondering if the termites in his riding, which the hon. member from Woodbine referred to, are having some effect on the bacon.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to extend to you my felicitations on your position in this House and the able and understanding manner in which you perform your duties. I also thank you for the help and indulgence you have given me, not only today, but on numerous occasions in the past.

MR. E. P. MORNINGSTAR (Welland): Mr. Speaker, since the last session of this House I am sorry to say unemployment has become serious in many parts of Ontario, indeed in the country as a whole.

My own constituency of Welland is suffering. About 4,000 men and women in the City of Welland and the neighbouring Townships of Crowland and Thorold are out of work.

It is now time for the Federal Government Departments to abide by their promises.

A White Paper issued by the Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, in 1952, stated the Federal Government's objective in the post-war period was, and I quote, "useful employment for all who are willing to work." The Prime Minister of Canada has himself stated on many occasions that a back-log of useful public works would be started at the first signs of a recession to prevent mass unemployment. The huge surpluses piled up by the Federal Government in previous years should be used now for needed public work—with provincial participation where applicable.

In this regard, two important considerations affecting Welland riding are:

1. The elimination of level crossings.
2. The construction of high level bridges across the Welland Canal.

In a time of national emergency the Niagara Peninsula is a most vital section of the country with a vast electrical power development and heavy industry. These two public works projects I have mentioned must come eventually—in fact could be considered in the light of national defence—and should be given consideration. Surely the depression two decades ago taught us that needed public works cost less in every way than men on relief.

However it will soon be impossible for our local municipalities to tackle the problem when unemployment insurance benefits are exhausted.

I believe the Federal Government should bring unemployment insurance legislation up to present needs. The period should be increased. The Act is unfair in that it makes no distinction between a young married couple with perhaps the wife not working, and an older married man thrown out of work with wife and children at home.

With the backing, I am sure, of an organization of unemployed workers in my riding, and the municipal councils, I urge this government to approach the federal authorities and co-operate with them in every way possible to encourage public works, hospital additions, home construction, to stimulate trade with other countries, and to patronize home industries in order to stop the threat of a depression.

I can assure you that the unemployed in the Welland riding are not looking for handouts, but simply a chance to work and make a decent living with some government assistance to help the less fortunate during a very hard time.

I have the very great honour to represent a riding whose communities and citizens do things in a big way, whether the community be large or small.

Just look at the lovely village of Fonthill, where from a population of 2,000 has sprung our greatest name in golf. And the name is carried by a tiny young woman who has electrified all Canada by sweeping and repeating as Canadian champion in the 3 years in which she came into her sensational form.

That young woman, Marlene Stewart, I need not remind you became the first Canadian to ever win the British women's open championship, a feat she accomplished to world-wide acclaim in Wales last year.

Another great woman golfer from Fonthill, Anne Sharp, kept the fame of that village intact while Marlene was overseas by winning many provincial tournaments and capping a fine season's play by capturing the Ontario women's open. But then Anne Sharp has been in the forefront of Canadian women golfers for nearly a decade and has been one of the greatest all-round sports-women our district has produced.

Just a few miles from Fonthill, in neighbouring Pelham Township, is another young woman of whom we are justly proud. I refer to Mrs. Dorothy Rungeling, who last year was one of two persons in Canada selected for the aviation writing award presented by the air transport and air industry association.

Mrs. Rungeling is aviation columnist for the Welland-Port Colborne Tribune. Through her efforts, Welland was the terminal and starting point in the past two years in the All Women's Air Race between Canada and Florida.

One of our most experienced and enthusiastic airwomen, Mrs. Rungeling exhibited her flying prowess in these races by finishing fourth and second.

You'll forgive me if I return for a moment to Fonthill. That splendid village was the setting last year for an inspiring Scouts' Own Parade in which more than 2,000 boys and girls from all over the Niagara District took part.

I had the great honour of being asked to invite His Excellency, the Lieutenant-Governor, to take the salute on that occasion. Although he was busied with plans for his attendance at the Coronation, he readily assented; and the Scouts, Guides, Cubs and Brownies showed their appreciation by turning out in record numbers.

I am most grateful to His Excellency for responding to this appeal in what is undoubtedly one of our worthiest movements.

There have been at least 7 new fire halls constructed throughout the Welland riding last year. These halls were mostly built by the volunteer firemen themselves.

Being a volunteer fireman myself for some years, I do realize the very good work these firemen do, in saving lives and property, and also they are a great asset in our civil defence set-up.

At the present time, grants are paid by this government for fire prevention programmes only to province-wide associations.

I would strongly recommend grants for District Volunteer Firemen's Associations also. I believe there are today 7 in the province; they meet each year for 2 or 3 days to study newer methods in fire prevention and the prevention of loss of life from fires in our province.

This great province as part of the civil defence and national preparedness programme has instituted systems of county fire department mutual aid and has entered into an agreement with the Federal Government whereby all 2½ inch fire hose threads on couplings and allied fittings would be standardized to the Canadian Standards Association thread at an estimated cost of $900,000, with the Federal Government paying 1/3 of the cost and the Province of Ontario paying the balance, with no cost to the municipalities.

Before the hose thread standardization programme in Ontario was started, there was a total of 81 different threads on 2½ inch fire hose used by 493 municipal fire departments throughout the province. These threads ran all the way from 4 threads per inch to 16 threads per inch and in the second most important measurement, the outside diameter of the male coupling, this ran all the way from 2¾ inches to 3 7/16 inches o.d. On the hydrants throughout the province there were 26 different shapes and sizes of the operating nuts for which a special wrench is needed before the firefighters can open the hydrants. This all meant that the well equipped fire pumper which wanted to be able to work in all parts of the province, had to carry 80 sets of adaptors for fire hose in addition to carry 26 different hydrant wrenches. All hydrant operating nuts are being standardized on the one size of 1¼ inches a square throughout all municipalities and industry.

The Provincial Government now has converted throughout the province a total of some 22 counties whose populations number more than two-thirds of the population of the entire province. Broadly speaking the area converted extends from Port Hope on the East, westerly along Lake Ontario and Lake Erie to Windsor and Sarnia excluding the County of Wentworth which conversion crews are presently working in. Within a matter of weeks this conversion will extend northward to the line of Georgian Bay and Lake Simcoe.

The people of the Welland riding are very grateful to hon. Minister of Highways and the Federal Government for making it possible for a road to be constructed on the west side of the Welland Ship Canal from Port Colborne to the City of Welland, a distance of approximately 5 miles. When this road is built, it will certainly go a long way in relieving the congestion of traffic at the Town of Port Colborne and the City of Welland.

I also would like to commend Mayor Armour McCrae and his City Council of Welland and Warden Charles Daly and his County Council of Welland County for negotiating this deal with the two governments.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, in closing this debate on behalf of those who sit on this side of the House, I want to assure the hon. members that I am not going to take a great deal of time inasmuch as I have already spoken in the debate.

It is not my intention to speak on any new subjects, because when the Estimates come down—and they will not be very much longer delayed—there will be the opportunity, as each hon. Minister presents his Estimates to the House, for us to make all the remarks we care to, in connection with that particular department.
